The houſe of correction is chiefly for the puniſhing of idle and diſorderly perſons; parents of baſtard children, beggars, ſervants running away; treſpaſſers, rogues, vagabonds, &c. Poor perſons refuſing to work are to be there whipped, and ſet to work and labour: and any perſon who lives extravagantly, having no viſible eſtate to ſupport himſelf, may be ſent to the houſe of correction, and ſet at work there, and may be continued there until he gives the juſtices ſatisfaction in reſpect to his living; but not be whipped. 2 Bulſt. 351. Sid. 281. A perſon ought to be convicted of vagrancy, &c. before he is ordered to be whipped. Ibid.

Bridewell is a priſon for correction in London, and one may be ſent thither. Style 57. By the 14 Geo. 2. c. 33. and 17 Geo. 2. c. 5. upon preſentment of the grand jury, the juſtices at ſeſſions may build, or purchaſe land for building, or enlarge, buy or hire fit houſes of correction. And the juſtices are to take care that the houſes of correction be provided with proper materials for relieving, employing and correcting perſons ſent to the ſame: And two juſtices ſhall viſit the ſame twice or oftner in a year, and examine into the eſtate and management thereof, and report the ſame at the ſeſſions. The governor or maſter of a houſe of correction miſbehaving himſelf, may be fined or turned out, at the diſcretion of the juſtices. Offenders liable to be ſent to the houſe of correction, where the time and manner of their puniſhment is not expreſsly limited by law, may be committed until the next ſeſſions, or until diſcharged by due courſe of law. See County Rates.

Houſholder, (Pater-familias) Is the occupier of a houſe, a houſe-keeper or maſter of a family.

Hue and cry, Huteſium & clamor, Is derived from two French words huer and crier, both ſignifying to ſhout or cry aloud. Manwood in his Foreſt Law, cap. 19. num. 11. ſaith, that hue in Latin, eſt vox dolentis, as ſignifying the complaint of the party, and cry is the purſuit of the felon upon the highway upon that complaint; for if the party robbed, or any in the company of one robbed or murdered, come to the conſtable of the next town, and deſire him to raiſe the hue and cry, that is, make the complaint known, and follow the purſuit after the offender, deſcribing the party, and ſhewing as near as he can which way he went; the conſtable ought forthwith to call upon the pariſh for aid in ſeeking the felon, and if he be not found there, then to give the next conſtable notice, and the next, until the offender be apprehended, or at leaſt until he be thus purſued unto the ſea ſide. Of this Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 5. Smith de Rep. Anglor. lib. 2. cap. 20. and the ſtat. 13 Edw. 1. of Wincheſter. cap. 3. 28 Ed. 3. 11. 27 Eliz. 13.

The Normans had ſuch purſuit with a cry after offenders, which they called Clamour de baro, whereof you may read in the Grand Cuſtomary, cap. 54. And it may probably be derived from harrior, flagitare. Hue is uſed alone in the ſtat. 4 Ed. 1. ſt. 2. In the ancient records this is called Huteſium & clamor. See Coke's 2 Inſt. fol. 172.

But the clamor de baro was not a purſuit after offenders, but a challenge of any thing to be his own after this manner, viz. He who demanded the thing did with a loud voice, before many witneſſes, affirm it to be his proper goods, and demanded reſtitution. This the Scots call huteſium; and Skene de verb. Huteſium, ſaith, it is reduced from the French oyer, i. e. audire, (or rather oyez,) being a cry uſed before a proclamation; the manner of their hue and cry he thus deſcribeth; If a robbery be done, a horn is blown, and an out-cry made, after which, if the party flee away, and doth not yield himſelf to the King's bailiff, he may lawfully be ſlain, and hanged upon the next gallows.

Of this hue and cry, ſee Cromp. Juſt. of Peace, fol. 160. and in Rot. Clauſ. 30 H. 3. m. 5. we find a command to the King's treaſurer, to take the city of London into the King's hands, becauſe the citizens did not, ſecundum legem & conſuetudinem Regni, raiſe the hue and cry for the death of Guido de Aretto and others who were ſlain. Cowell. See Vociferatia.

Hue and cry, is alſo defined the purſuit of an offender from town to town till he be taken, which all that are preſent when a felony is committed, or a dangerous wound given, are by the Common law, as well as by the ſtatute, bound to raiſe againſt the offenders who eſcape, on pain of fine and impriſonment. 3 Inſt. 116, 117. 2 Inſt. 172. Dalt. Juſtice, cap. 28, 109. Fitz. Coron. 395. Cro. Eliz, 654.

The raiſing of hue and cry is enjoined by the Common law, which may be called a raiſing of it at the ſuit of the King, as well as by ſeveral acts of parliament, which may be called a raiſing of it at the ſuit of a private perſon, inaſmuch as thoſe ſtatutes make the hundred anſwerable to the party robbed, if they neglect to purſue the hue and cry, and apprehend the robbers. 3 New Abr. 61.

As to hue and cry at Common law, it ſeems to be clearly agreed, that a private perſon who hath been robbed, or who knows that a felony hath been committed, is not only authorized to levy hue and cry, but is alſo bound to do it under pain of fine and impriſonment. 2 Inſt. 172. 3 Inſt. 116. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 464.

From hence it follows, that although it is a good courſe, as Lord Hale ſays, to have a precept or warrant from a juſtice of peace for raiſing hue and cry, yet it is neither of abſolute neceſſity, nor ſometimes convenient, for the felons may eſcape before the juſtice can be found; alſo hue and cry was part of the law before the ſtate of 1 Ed. 3. cap. 16. which firſt inſtituted juſtices of the peace. 2 Hal. H. P. C. 99.

It is incumbent upon conſtables to purſue hue and cry when called upon, and they are ſeverely puniſhable if they neglect it: and it prevents many inconveniencies if they be there; for it gives a greater authority to their purſuit, and enables the purſuants, in his aſſiſtance, to plead the general iſſue upon the ſtatutes 7 Jac. 1. cap. 5. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 12. without being driven to ſpecial pleading: therefore, to prevent inconveniencies which may happen by unrulineſs, it is moſt adviſable that the conſtable be called: yet upon a robbery, or other felony committed, hue and cry may be raiſed by the country in the abſence of the conſtable; and in this there is no inconveniency, for if hue and cry be raiſed without cauſe, they that raiſe it are puniſhable by fine and impriſonment. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 99, 100.

The regular method of levying hue and cry, is for the party to go to the conſtable of the next town, and declare the fact, and deſcribe the offender, and the way he is gone; whereupon the conſtable ought immediately, whether it be night or day, to raiſe his own town, and make ſearch for the offender; and upon the not finding him, to ſend the like notice, with the utmoſt expedition to the conſtables of all the neighbouring towns, who ought in like manner to ſearch for the offender, and alſo to give notice to their neighbouring conſtables, and they to the next, till the offender be found. 3 Inſt. 116. Dalt. Juſtice. cap. 28. Cromp. 178. 2 Hawk. P. C. 75.

The conſtable is not only to make ſearch in his own vill, but alſo to raiſe all the neighbouring vills, who are all to purſue the hue and cry with horſemen as well as footmen until the offender be taken. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 101. In caſe of hue and cry once raiſed and levied upon ſuppoſal of a felony committed, tho' in truth there was no felony committed; yet thoſe who purſue hue and cry may arreſt, and proceed as if a felony had been really commited. 2 Hal Hiſt. P. C. 101. 5 H. 5. a. 21 H. 7 28. a. per Rede. 2 Ed. 4. 8 & 9. 29 Ed. 3. 39. 2 Inſt. 173. 2 Hal Hiſt. P, C. 102.

If hue and cry be raiſed againſt a perſon certain for felony, tho' poſſibly he is innocent, yet the conſtables, and thoſe that follow the hue and cry, may arreſt and impriſon him in the common gaol, or carry him to a juſtice of the peace. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 102.

If the perſon purſued by hue and cry be in a houſe and the doors are ſhut, and refuſed to be opened upon demand of the conſtable, and notice given of his buſineſs, he may break open the doors; and this he may do in any caſe where he may arreſt, tho' it be only a ſuſpicion of felony, for it is for the King and Commonwealth, and therefore a virtual non omittas is in the caſe; and the ſame law is upon a dangerous wound given, and a hue and cry levied upon the offender. 7 Ed. 3. 16. b. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 102.

It ſeems in this caſe, that if he cannot be otherwiſe taken, he may be killed, and the neceſſity excuſeth the conſtable. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 102.

Upon hue and cry levied againſt any perſon, or where any hue and cry comes to a conſtable, whether the perſon be certain or uncertain, the conſtable may ſearch in ſuſpected places within his vill, for the apprehending of the felons. Dalt. cap. 28. 2 Ed. 4. 8. b. Cromp. de Pace 178. 2 Hal Hiſt. P. C 103.

But though he may ſearch ſuſpected places or houſes, yet his entry muſt be per oſtia apert', for he cannot break open doors barely to ſearch, unleſs the perſon againſt whom the hue and cry is levied be there, and then it is true he may; therefore, in caſe of ſuch a ſearch, the breaking open the door is at his peril, viz. juſtifiable if he be there; but it muſt be always remembered, that in caſe of breaking open a door, there muſt be firſt a notice given to them within of his buſineſs, and a demand of entrance, and a refuſal, before doors can be broken. 2 Hal Hiſt. P. C. 103.

If the hue and cry be not againſt a perſon certain, but by deſcription of his ſtatue, perſon, clothes, horſe, &c. the hue and cry doth juſtify the conſtable, or other perſon, following it, in apprehending the perſon ſo deſcribed, whether innocent or guilty, for that is his warrant; it is a kind of proceſs that the law allows, (not uſual in other caſes) viz. to arreſt a perſon by deſcription. Ibid.

But if the hue and cry be upon a robbery, burglary, manſlaughter or other felony committed, but the perſon that did the fact is neither known nor deſcribed by perſon, clothes or the like; yet ſuch a hue and cry is good as hath been ſaid, and muſt be purſued, tho' no perſon certain be named or deſcribed. Ibid.

And therefore in this caſe, all that can be done is, for thoſe who purſue the hue and cry, to take ſuch perſons as they have probable cauſe to ſuſpect; as for inſtance, Such perſons as are vagrants, that cannot give an account where they live, whence they are, or ſuch ſuſpicious perſons as come late into their inn or lodgings, and give no reaſonable account where they had been, and the like. 2 Ed. 4. 8. b. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 103.

There can be no doubt but that both by the Common law, as alſo by the ſeveral ſtatutes which injoin the levying of hue and cry, they who neglect to levy one, (whether officers of juſtice or others) or who neglect to purſue it when rightly levied, are puniſhable by indictment, and may be fined and impriſoned for ſuch neglect. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 104.

By the ſtat. 8 Geo. 2. 16. Every conſtable to whom notice is given or left at his houſe of a robbery, &c. and every conſtable of the hundred, or conſtable, &c. in any town, pariſh, &c. within the hundred, on notice from the party robbed or otherwiſe, ſhall with all expedition make hue and cry after the felon, &c. on pain of 5 l. for neglect, a moiety to the King, a moiety to him that ſues in ſix months, to be recovered with full coſts.

If there be judgment againſt the hundred, it may be levied againſt the inhabitants of the ſame hundred by fieri facias. So it may be levied upon any one, who has lands in his poſſeſſion within the hundred, tho' he has no houſe nor lodging there; for he is an inhabitant. R. 2 Saund. 423. Upon a leſſee, or purchaſer after the robbery committed. R. Noy 155. So it may be levied upon one or two of the inhabitants. But if a man come to inhabit in an hundred after a robbery done, he ſhall not be charged. R. Hutt. 125. Cont. per Barckley, Mar. pl. 28. So, if the whole debt be levied upon one or two of the hundred, by the ſtat. 27 El. 13. on complaint to two juſtices of peace of the county (quorum unus) in or near the hundred, they may aſſeſs rateably all the towns, &c. within the ſame hundred, or in the liberties within the ſame, for the relief of him againſt whom the plaintiff took execution; and the conſtable of each town, &c. may rateably aſſeſs the ſaid ſum on every inhabitant, and if he refuſe to pay, levy it by diſtreſs and ſale, &c.

And by the ſame ſtatute, The hundred, where default of freſh ſuit on hue and cry was made, ſhall anſwer half the damages recovered againſt the hundred in which the robbery was committed, to be recovered by action of debt, &c. at the ſuit of the clerk of the peace.

By the ſtat. 8 Geo. 2 16. After judgment againſt the hundred, no proceſs ſhall be ſerved on the high conſtable or any inhabitant, but the ſheriff on receipt of the writ of execution ſhall ſhew it gratis to two juſtices of the peace in or near the hundred, who ſhall ſpeedily cauſe an aſſeſſment to be levied purſuant to the ſtat. 27 El. 13. and alſo for the neceſſary expences of the high conſtable above the coſts and damages recovered, of which, on notice from the two juſtices, he ſhall give an account and proof on oath to their ſatisfaction, having firſt cauſed his attorney's bill to be taxed.

The ſheriff ſhall pay the money levied to the parties without fee, and indorſe the day of receiving the writ of execution, and not to be called upon for a return till ſixty days after. And v. 22 Geo. 2. c. 46.

And the like aſſeſſment ſhall be in caſe the plaintiff be nonſuit, diſcontinue, or have a verdict or judgment on demurrer againſt him, if by inſolvency of the plaintiff or his ſureties, he cannot be reimburſed on the bond of 100*l.* penalty; and the money levied ſhall be paid to the juſtices for the high conſtable in ten days after it is levied.

And the juſtices may limit a time not exceeding thirty days for levying ſuch aſſeſſment; and the officer appointed ed refuſing or neglecting to levy and pay the money, &c. in ſuch time forfeits double the ſum.

See the ſtatutes 27 Eliz. c. 13. 8 Geo. 2. c. 16. And 22 Geo. 2. c. 24. Alſo vide 30 Geo. 2. c. 3. ſ. 116. No receiver general of the land-tax, or his agents, can ſue the hundred for a robbery, unleſs the perſons carrying the money be three in company.

And ſee the law under this title of hue and cry, well and largely treated of in the New Abr. 3 V. 61, &c.

The general doctrine as to actions is as follows. Where a robbery is done on the highway, in the day-time, of any day except Sunday, the hundred where committed is anſwerable for it: but notice is to be given of it, with convenient ſpeed, to ſome of the inhabitants of the next village, to the intent that they may make hue and cry for the apprehending of the robbers, or no action will lie againſt the hundred: and if any of the robbers are taken within forty days, and convicted, the hundred ſhall be excuſed.

By a late ſtatute, no proceſs is to be ſerved againſt the hundred, &c. for a robbery committed, but on the high conſtable, who ſhall give notice of it in one of the principal market-towns, &c. and then enter an appearance, and defend the action, v. 8 Geo. 2. c. 16. By the ſtat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 24. No perſon ſhall recover on any of the ſtatutes of hue and cry, above 200 l. unleſs the perſon or perſons ſo robbed ſhall at the time of ſuch robbery be together in company, and be in number two at the leaſt, to atteſt the truth of his or their being ſo robbed. If he that is robbed, after hue and cry, makes no further purſuit after the robbers, action lies againſt the hundred. 4 Leon. 180. The party robbed is not bound to purſue the robbers himſelf, or to lend his horſe for that purpoſe; but ſtill has his remedy againſt the hundred, if they are not taken: tho' if any of them are taken, either within forty days after the robbery, or before the plaintiff recovers, the hundred is diſcharged. Sid. 11. It has been held, that an action lies againſt the hundred for a robbery in the day-time, although not in the King's highway, but in a private way. Hill. 1 Ann. 1 Mod. 221. But not for a robbery in the morning, before it is light; and yet where it is before ſun-riſing, or after ſun-ſet, if it be ſo light that a man's face may be known, it well lies. 7 Rep. 6. Cro. Jac. 106. If a party be robbed in the night time, when perſons are at reſt, the hundred is not chargeable. 3 Leon. 350. Where robbers forced a coach out of the way, in the day-time, and afterwards robbed it in the night, this was held a robbery in the day, and that action lay againſt the hundred. 1 Sid. 263. When a man is robbed on a Sunday, on which day perſons are ſuppoſed to be at church, and none ought to travel, the hundred is not liable. 27 Eliz. c. 13. But where a robbery is done on a Sunday, tho' the hundred is not chargeable, hue and cry ſhall be made by ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. And if a perſon be robbed going to church in a country town or village, on a Sunday, which is a religious duty required by law, it has been lately held an action lies againſt the hundred; but not if one be robbed on that day in other travelling for pleaſure, &c. which is prohibited by ſtatute. 6 Geo. 1. C. B. per King, chief juſtice.

And it was formerly ruled by three judges on the ſtatute of Winton, where a man was robbed on a Sunday, in time of divine ſervice, and made hue and cry, that the hundred ſhould be charged; for many perſons are neceſſitated to travel on this day; as phyſicians, &c. 2 Cro. 496. 2 Rol. 59. Godb. 280. See 2 Nelſ. Abr. 937, 938. If a perſon be robbed in a houſe, where he is preſumed to be at ſafety by his own care, the hundred is not chargeable: A robbery muſt be an open robbery, that the country may take notice of it, to make the hundred anſwerable. 7 Rep. 6.

A man is ſet upon and aſſaulted by robbers in one hundred, and carried into a wood, &c. in another hundred, near the highway, and there robbed, the action ſhall be brought againſt the hundred where the robbery was done, as particularly expreſſed in the ſtatute, and not the hundred where the man was taken or aſſaulted; becauſe the aſſault is not the efficient cauſe of the robbery, as a ſtroke is in caſe of murder. Hill. 1 Ann. B. R. 2 Salk. 614.

But where goods are taken from a man in one hundred, and opened in another, where they are firſt taken or ſeized, they are ſtolen and the robbery is committed. 2 Lill. Abr. 27. If a ſervant is robbed of his maſter's money, he may ſue the hundred on the ſtatute of Winton of hue and cry; or the maſter may bring the action, and the man making oath of the robbery, and that he knew none of the robbers, is ſufficient without the oath of the maſter. Goldſ. 24. Cro. Car. 26, 37, 336. Where a ſervant is robbed, he muſt be examined and ſworn; but if the maſter be preſent, it is a robbery of him. Show. 241. 1 Leon. 323. If a quaker be robbed, or a man's ſervant being a quaker, and either refuſe to take an oath of the robbery, and that he did not know any of the robbers, the hundred is not anſwerable; for the ſtatute of 27 Eliz. c. 13. was made to prevent combination between perſons robbed and the robbers. 2 Salk. 613.

But the maſter's oath where the ſervant is a quaker, or otherwiſe, and being robbed in his preſence, will maintain the action in his own name. Carth. 146. And a plaintiff had judgment on his oath, though his ſervant that was robbed with him knew one of the robbers. When a carrier is robbed of another man's goods, he or the owner may ſue the hundred; but the carrier is to give notice, and make oath, &c. though the owner of the goods brings the action. 2 Saund. 380.

If an action againſt the hundred be diſcontinued, on a new action brought, there muſt be a new oath taken within forty days before the laſt action brought. Sid 139. In action upon the ſtatute of hue and cry, the declaration is good, though the plaintiff doth not ſay, that the juſtice of peace who took the oath lived prope locum where the robbery was committed, Mich. 6 W. 3. And oath was made before a juſtice of peace of the county where the robbery was done, in a place of another neighbouring county; and it was held good. Cro. Car. 211.

If a juſtice of peace refuſe to examine a perſon robbed, and to take his oath, action on the ſtatute lies againſt the juſtice. 1 Leon. 323. It is ſafe to ſay the plaintiff gave notice at ſuch a place, near the place where the robbery was done; and though that place where notice is given be in another hundred or county, yet it is good enough; for a ſtranger may not know the confines of the hundred or county. Cro. Car. 41, 379. 3 Salk. 184.

If there be a miſtake of the pariſh in the declaration where the robbery was, if it be laid in the right hundred, it is well enough. 2 Leon. 212. And though the party puts more in his declaration than he can prove, for ſo much as he can prove it ſhall be good. Cro. Jac. 348.

Upon a trial in theſe caſes, the party muſt file his original, and be ſure to have a true copy thereof, and witneſſes to prove it; and he muſt alſo have the affidavit or oath, and a witneſs to prove the taking it. 2 Lill. Abr. 25.

In theſe actions, poor perſons in a hundred, and ſervants, are good witneſſes for the hundred; but not thoſe houſholders who are worth any thing. 1 Mod. 73. And as proof cannot be otherwiſe for the plaintiff, he is allowed to be a witneſs in his own cauſe.

For further ſatisfaction when the action lies againſt the hundred, and when not. Vide Com. Dig. 3 V. 481, &c. Alſo ſee 3 V. 160. 4 V. 244, 290.

Hundred, (hundredum centuria) Is a part of a ſhire ſo called, either becauſe of old each hundred found 100 fidejuſſors of the King's peace, or a hundred able men for his wars. But more probably it is ſo called, becauſe it was compoſed of an hundred families. It is true, Brompton tells us, that an hundred contains centum villas; and Giraldus Cambrenſis writes, that the Iſle of Man hath 343 villas. But in theſe places the word villa muſt be taken for a country family; for it cannot mean a village, becauſe there are not above 40 villages in that iſland. So where Mr. Lambard tells us, that an hundred is ſo called, à numero centum hominum, it muſt be underſtood of an hundred men, who are heads or chiefs of ſo many families.

Theſe were firſt ordained by King Alfred, the 29th King of the Weſt Saxons: Aluredus Rex, (ſays Lambard, verbo Centuria,) ubi cum Guthruno Daw fœdus inierat, prudentiſſimum illud olim a Jethrone Moiſi datum ſecutus conſilium, Angliam primus in ſatrapias, centurias, & decurias, partitus eſt. Satrapiam, ſhyre, a ſcyrian, (quod partiri ſignificat,) nominavit centuriam, hundred, & decuriam, toothing ſive tienmantale, i. e. Decemvirale collegium appellavit; atque iiſdem nominibus vel hodie vocantur, &c. This dividing counties into hundreds, for better government, King Alfred brought from Germany: For there centa, or centena, is a juriſdiction over an hundred towns. See Black. Com. 1 V. 115, &c.

This is the original of hundreds, which ſtill retain the name, but the juriſdiction is devolved to the county-court, ſome few excepted, which have been by privilege annexed to the crown, or granted to ſome great ſubject, and ſo remain ſtill in the nature of a franchiſe. This has been ever ſince the Stat. 14 Ed. 3. ſt. 1. cap. 9. whereby theſe hundred-courts, formerly farmed out by the ſheriff to other men, were all, or the moſt part, reduced to the county-court, and ſo remain at preſent.

But now, by hundred-courts, we underſtand ſeveral franchiſes, wherein the ſheriff has nothing to do by his ordinary authority, except they of the hundred refuſe to do their office. See Weſt. part 1. Symbol, lib. 2. ſect. 228. Ad hundredum poſt Paſcha, & ad proximum hundredum poſt feſtum St. Mich. Mon. Angl. 2 par. f. 293. a.

An hundred is to have juriſdiction or power to adminiſter juſtice in 100 vills, or of 100 men, or of 100 pariſhes. Br. Court Baron, pl. 8. cites 8 H. 7. 3. per Rede.

Every ward in London is an hundred in a county, and every pariſh in London is a vill in an hundred. 9 Rep. 66. b.

Hundreds were either parcel of the counties, and there the ſheriffs did conſtitute bailiffs, (viz. thoſe hundreds which were anciently parcel of the farm of the ſheriffs, that the ſtatute 2 Ed. 3. cap. 12. ſpeaks of); or elſe they were ſuch as were granted out, which the lord of the hundred ſometimes held at farm, and ſometimes in fee, called hundreds in fee, liberties of hundreds, franchiſes of hundreds. Per Hale Ch. B. Vent. 405. Hill. 22 & 23 Car. 2. in the caſe of Atkins v. Clare.

In the time of King Alfred the kingdom was in groſs, and then divided into counties and hundreds, and all perſons then came within one hundred or other; and then the King's relations had the government of them, and therefore they were called Conſanguinei; and ſo are the Earls, Lord-lieutenants, &c. at this day; but when the office became troubleſome, there were ordained Vicecomites, which name remains to this day, and the others continue to be called Conſanguinei, but have no power in the county, having only the honorary name of Earls or Comites of ſuch or ſuch a county, &c. For the better government of theſe counties, the Vicecomites had two courts; but out of thoſe the King granted petty leets and courts-baron; but the tourn of the ſheriff had yet a ſuperintendant power, they being derived out of the ſheriff's tourn; as in Dyer 13.

The King afterwards granted away ſome hundreds in fee-ſimple, and ſome franchiſes, and the laſt excluded the King utterly, but the hundreds granted in fee were no wholly exempt. On this aroſe ſome confuſion, and the parliament hereon took notice, that the execution of juſtice was by this much interrupted, and therefore came the ſtatute of Linc. 9 Ed. 2. ſt. 2. That ſheriffs ſhould be ſufficient perſons, and have lands in the county, and ſo be able to anſwer both the King and country, and that bailiffs and farmers of hundreds ſhould be ſufficient men. And at this time hundreds were grantable for years.

Then came the ſtatute of 2 Ed. 3. cap. 4 & 5. That ſheriffs ſhould continue but for one year. But this took not away the whole inconvenience; for the crown ſtill granted away bailiwicks and hundreds, for lives, at rents at ſuch exceſſive dear rates, that made them endeavour to make up their money by unlawful means; and therefore came the ſtatute of 2 Ed. 3. cap. 12. and 14 Ed. 3. cap. 9. By the firſt it was enacted, That all hundreds and wapentakes granted by the King ſhall be annexed to the county, and not ſevered. And by the other ſtatute, that all ſhould be annexed, and the ſheriff ſhould have power to put in bailiffs, for which he will anſwer, and no more ſhould be granted for the future; and one reaſon of this was, becauſe the King granted away hundreds, and abated not the ſheriff's farm. Arg. 2 Show. 98, 99. Paſch. 32 Car. 2. B. R.

Hundreds are liable to penalty on exportation of wool, 7 & 8 Will. 3. c. 28. ſ. 8. Liable to damages ſuſtained by pulling down buildings, 1 Geo. 1. c. 5. ſect. 6. Or by deſtroying woods, &c. 29 Geo. 2. c. 36. ſ. 9.

Inhabitants within the hundred may be witneſſes for the hundred, 8 Geo. 2. c. 16.

The word hundredum is ſometimes taken for an immunity or privilege, whereby a man is quit of money or cuſtoms due to the hundreds. Cowel. See Turn. Hundred chargeable for robberies, vide Hue and Cry.

Hundred-Court, Is only a larger court-baron, being held for all the inhabitants of a particular hundred inſtead of a manor. The free ſuitors are here the judges, and the ſteward the regiſter, as in the caſe of a court-baron. It is not a court of record, and it reſembles a court-baron in all points, except that in point of territory it is of a greater juriſdiction.

According to Blackſtone, its inſtitution was probably co-eval with that of hundreds themſelves, introduced, though not invented, by Alfred, being derived from the polity of the ancient Germans. See Black. Com. V. 1. Introd. ſ. 4. and 3 V. 34. 4 V. 408.

Hundredors, (hundredarii) Are perſons ſerving on juries, or fit to be impanelled thereon for trials, dwelling within the hundred where the land in queſtion lies. Stat. 35 H. 8. c. 6. And default of hundredors was a challenge or exception to panels of ſheriffs, by our law, till the Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16. ordained, that to prevent delays by reaſon of challenges to panels of jurors for default of hundredors, &c. Writs of venire facias for trial of any action in the courts at Weſtminſter, ſhall be awarded of the body of the proper county where the iſſue is triable.

Hundredor alſo ſignifies him that hath the juriſdiction of the hundred, and is in ſome places applied to the bailiff of an hundred. 13 Ed. 1. c. 38. 9 Ed. 2. 2 Ed. 3. Horn's Mirror, lib. 1.

Hunger. According to the preſent doctrine, hunger will not juſtify ſtealing food, to relieve a preſent neceſſity. 1 Hal. P. C. 54. Black. Com. 4 V. 31. And the doctrine ſeems juſt, as (on conviction) a judge may reſpite, and a merciful King pardon. The ancient doctrine, (that it would juſtify) if now in force, might open a door to many villanies. And, in this commercial ſtate, thoſe who can labour need not fear ſtarving. Thoſe that cannot, and who are poor, the laws have made a proviſion for.

The 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23. gives full coſts againſt an inferior tradeſman, apprentice, or other diſſolute perſon convicted of a treſpaſs in hawking, hunting, fiſhing or fowling in another's land. Upon this ſtatute it hath been adjudged, that if a perſon be an inferior tradeſman, as a clothier for inſtance, it matters not what qualification he may have in point of eſtate; but, if he be guilty of ſuch treſpaſs, he ſhall be liable to pay full coſts. *L. Hypotheca, In the Civil law, was where the poſſeſſion of the thing pledged remained with the debtor. Inſt. l. 4. c. 6. ſ. 7. Black. Com. 2 V. 159.

To Hypothecate, A ſhip, (from the Lat. hypotheca, a pledge) Is to pawn the ſame for neceſſaries; and a maſter may hypothecate either ſhip or goods for relief when in diſtreſs at ſea; for he repreſents the traders as well as owners: and in whoſe hands ſoever a ſhip or goods hypothecated come, they are liable. 1 Salk. 34. 2 Lil. Abr. 195.

By the Common law, (by which property is to be tried) the maſter of the ſhip could not impawn the ſhip; for he has no property either general or ſpecial; nor is ſuch power given to him by the conſtituting him maſter; but the defendant's counſel ſaid, that by the Civil law the maſter may in caſe of neceſſity, and when he has no other means to provide neceſſaries for her. And Hobart J. held clearly, that the admiralty law is, that if the ſhip be in danger at ſea, or want neceſſaries, ſo as the voyage may be defeated, the maſter, in ſuch caſe of neceſſity, may impawn for money, &c. to relieve ſuch extremities by imploying the money ſo; for he is truſted with the ſhip and voyage, and ſo may reaſonably be thought to to have the power implicitly given him, rather than ſee the whole loſt. Hob. 11, 12. Bridgman's caſe.

A. being in a ſhip on the ſea, B. who was in it, and was reputed an agent and factor, borrows 100 l. of A. upon bottomage (that is, when the money is paid on the keel of the ſhip, and the ſhip obliged to payment of it, and if it be paid not at the time, &c. that he who lends the money ſhall have the ſhip); and it was allowed to be a good and neceſſary cuſtom by all; and it was agreed, that if the maſter, factor, purſer, or he that is reputed owner of the ſhip, borrows money in ſuch a manner for the neceſſaries of a ſhip, that binds the owner of the ſhip, although the money be not ſo imployed, and the owner has his remedy againſt him whom he put in truſt. And it is not a good allegation to have a prohibition, to ſay that the property was not in him that took ſuch bottomage. Noy 95. Scarborow v. Lyrius.

Jactitation of Marriage, Is one of the firſt and principal matrimonial cauſes; as, when one of the parties boaſts or gives out that he or ſhe is married to the other, whereby a common reputation of their marriage may enſue. On this ground the party injured may libel the other in the Spiritual Court; and, unleſs the defendant undertakes and makes out a proof of the actual marriage, he or ſhe is enjoined perpetual ſilence upon that head: which is the only remedy the Eccleſiaſtical Court can give for this injury. Black. Com. 3 V. 93.

But if two perſons are not married, and the one ſays with reſpect to the other, that he or ſhe is her or his huſband or wife, or any thing implying a marriage, whereby the other loſes his or her marriage with a third perſon, or is otherwiſe actually damnified, we conceive an action will lie for the ſpecial damage; as in other caſes of words, not actionable in themſelves, but rendered actionable, by the damage which enſues.

I. What perſons are eſteemed ideots and lunaticks, ſo as to come within the protection of the law.

Ideot is a Greek word properly ſignifying a private man, who has no public office. Among the Latins it is take for illiteratus, imperitus, and in our law for non compos mentis, or a natural fool. The words of the ſtatute 17 Ed. 2. c. 9. are Rex habebit cuſtodiam terrarum fatuorum naturalium, whereby it appears he muſt be a natural fool, that is, a fool a nativitate: for if he was once wiſe, or become a fool by chance or misfortune, the king ſhall not have the cuſtody of him. Staundf. Prærog. cap. 9. F. N. B. 232. If one have underſtanding to meaſure a yard of cloth, number twenty, rightly name the days of the week, or to beget a child, he ſhall not be counted an ideot or natural fool, by the laws of the realm. See 4 Rep. Beverley's caſe. Cowell.

The more general deſcription of a perſon, who, from his want of reaſon and underſtanding, comes within the protection of the law, is that of non compos mentis. Co. Lit. 246. 4 Co. 124. Skin. 177.

There are (ſays my Lord Coke) four kinds of men who may be ſaid to be non compos: 1. An ideot who is non compos from his nativity. 2. One made ſuch by ſickneſs. 3. Lunatick, qui aliquando gaudet lucidis intervallis, who is non compos only for the time that he wants underſtanding. 4. One that is drunk; which laſt is ſo far from coming within the protection of the law, that his drunkenneſs is an aggravation of whatever he does amiſs. Co. Lit. 247. 4 Co. 124. See 1 Hale Hiſt. P. C. 30 to 37. and Peer Williams, 3 V. 130. and tit. Drunkenneſs.

1. An ideot is a fool or madman from his nativity, and one who never has any lucid intervals; therefore the King has the protection of him and his eſtate, during his life without rendering any account; becauſe it cannot be preſumed that he will be ever capable of taking care of himſelf or his affairs: And ſuch a one is deſcribed a perſon that cannot number twenty, tell the days of the week, does not know his father or mother, his own age, &c. But theſe are mentioned as inſtances only; for ideot, or not, being a queſtion of fact, muſt be tried by jury or inſpection. Dyer 25. Moor 4. pl. 11. Bro. Ideots. F. N. B. 233.

But though an ideot muſt be ſo a nativitate, yet, if by inquiſition it be found, that A. is an ideot not having any lucid intervals per ſpatium octo annorum, this is a ſufficient finding; for the inquiſition having found the party an ideot, the adding ſpatium octo annorum is ſurpluſage, and ſhall be rejected. 3 Mod. 43, 44. 2 Show. 171. Skin. 5, 177. S. C. Prodgers and Lady Frazier.

2. One made ſuch by ſickneſs, which my Lord Hale calls Dementia accidentalis vel adventitia, and which he again diſtinguiſhes into a total and a partial inſanity, from its being more or leſs violent, is ſuch a madneſs as excuſeth in criminal caſes; and though the party alſo in every thing elſe be intitled to the ſame protection with an ideot; and tho' his diſorder ſeems permanent and fixed, yet as he had once reaſon and underſtanding, and as the law ſees no impoſſibility but what he may be reſtored to them again, it makes the King only a truſtee for the benefit of ſuch a one, without giving him any profit or intereſt in his eſtate. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 30.

3. A lunatick; this is alſo Dementia accidentalis vel adventitia, and takes its name from the great influence which the moon has in all diſorders of the brain; and though ſuch a one hath intervals of reaſon, yet during his phrenzy he is intitled to the ſame indulgence as to his acts, and ſtands in the ſame degree with one whoſe diſſorder is fixed and permanent. 4 Co. 125. Co. Lit. 247. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 31.

4. One made mad by drunkenneſs, which is called Dementia effectata; and tho', as has been ſaid, ſuch a perſon be not intitled to the protection of the law, yet if a perſon by the unſkilfulneſs of his phyſician, or by the contrivance of his enemies, eat or drink ſuch a thing as cauſeth phrenzy, this puts him in the ſame condition with any other phrenzy, and equally excuſeth him; alſo if by one or more ſuch practices an habitual or fixed phrenzy be cauſed, tho' this madneſs was contracted by the vice and will of the party, yet this habitual and fixed phrenzy thereby cauſed puts the man in the ſame condition, as if the ſame was contracted involuntarily at firſt. Plowd. 19. a. Crom. Juſtice 29. a. Co. Lit. 247. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 32.

But though this ſubject of madneſs may be ſpun out to a greater length, and branched into ſeveral kinds and degrees, yet it appears that the prevailing diſtinction herein in law is between ideocy and lunacy; the firſt a fatuity a nativitate, vel dementia naturalis, which excuſeth the party as to his acts, and intitles the King to the receipt of the rents and profits of his eſtate during his life, without being obliged to render any account for the ſame; the other accidental or adventitious madneſs, which, whether permanent and fixed, or with lucid intervals, goes under the general name of lunacy, and equally excuſeth with ideocy, as to acts done during the phrenzy; but herein they differ, that in the latter caſe the King, as has been ſaid, is only a truſtee for the lunatick, and accountable to him, if he happens to be reſtored to his underſtanding, or to his repreſentatives if it happen otherwiſe. 3 New Abr. 80. 4 Co. 125. a.

II. How ideots and lunaticks are to be found ſuch.

Every perſon of the age of diſcretion is in law preſumed to be of ſound mind and memory, unleſs the contrary appear; and this rule holds as well in civil as criminal caſes. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 33.

The trial of ideocy, madneſs or lunacy in civil caſes, and in order to the commitment or cuſtody of the perſon and his eſtate, which belongs to the King, as mentioned above, is by writ or commiſſion to the ſheriff or eſcheator, or particular commiſſioners both by their own inſpection and by inquiſition to inquire, and return their inquiſition into the Chancery; and thereupon a grant or commitment of the party and his eſtate enſues: And in caſe the party or his friends find themſelves injured by the finding him a lunatick or ideot, a ſpecial writ may iſſue to bring the party before the Chancellor, or before the King, to be inſpected; and if, on examination, it appear the party is no ideot, the whole commiſſion and office ſhall be diſcharged without any traverſe or monſtrans de droit. 4 Co. 126. 9 Co. 31. a. And for this writ of idiota inquirendo, ſee Fitz. N. B. 232, 3.

Alſo the party found an ideot or lunatick may traverſe the inquiſition, as may any other perſon having a title to the land, and therefore it is ſaid, that by the ſtatute 18

Hen. 6. c. 6. there ought to be a month's time between the return of the inquiſition and the grant of the cuſtody and lands, in order for the parties to come in and tender ſuch traverſe. Skin. 178.

If by inquiſition a perſon be found a lunatick, and the cuſtody granted to J. S. and the party thus found bring a ſcire facias to ſet aſide the inquiſition, the committee of the lunatick cannot plead nor join iſſue in ſuch ſcire facias; for he can have no intereſt in the eſtate of the lunatick, being only in the nature of a bailiff to the King, and therefore his duty is to inform the King's Attorney General of the nature of the affair, who is the proper perſon to conteſt the matter in behalf of the King. 2 Sid. 124. Suſan Thorn v. Cowards.

III. Who hath an intereſt in, and juriſdiction over them, of appointing proper curators and committees, and their power and duty.

It ſeems to be agreed at this day, that the King as parens patriæ hath the protection of all his ſubjects, and that in a more peculiar manner he is to take care of all thoſe who, by reaſon of their imbecillity and want of underſtanding, are incapable of taking care of themſelves; this, in ſome books, is called a prerogative in the crown, and in others a regium munus, or duty which the King owes to his ſubjects in return to their ſubjection and allegiance to him. Staund. Prærog. cap. 9. fol. 33. 2 Inſt. 14. 4 Co. 126. a. Dyer 25.

Lord Coke, in 4 Co. Beverley's caſe, ſays, that this prerogative was by the Common law, and that the ſtatute de prærogativa Regis, 17 Ed. 1. c. 9. is only declarative thereof. 2 Inſt. 14. 4 Co. 126.

But however that may be, now, by the ſtatute de prærogativa Regis, or 17 Ed. 2. cap. 9. it is enacted, that the King ſhall have the cuſtody of the lands of natural fools, taking the profits of them, without waſte or deſtruction, and ſhall find them their neceſſaries, of whoſe fees ſoever the lands be holden; and after the death of ſuch ideots, he ſhall render it to the right heirs, ſo that ſuch ideots ſhall not alien, nor their heirs be diſinherited.

And by cap. 10. of the ſaid ſtatute, "The King ſhall provide when any (that before time hath had his wit and memory) happen to fail of his wit, and there are many per lucida intervalla, that their lands and tenements ſhall be ſafely kept without waſte and deſtruction, and that they and their houſhold ſhould live and be maintained competently with the profits of the ſame, and the reſidue, beſides their ſuſtentation, ſhall be kept to their uſe, to be delivered unto them when they come to right mind; ſo that ſuch lands and tenements ſhall in no wiſe be aliened, and the King ſhall take nothing to his own uſe; and if the party die in ſuch eſtate, then the reſidue ſhall be diſtributed for his ſoul, by the advice of the ordinary."

This diſtinction, eſtabliſhed by this ſtatute, between the King's intereſt in the lands of an ideot and lunatick, is laid down and admitted in all the books which ſpeak of this matter; and on this foundation it hath been reſolved, that the King may grant the cuſtody of an ideot and his lands to a perſon, his heirs and executors, and that he had the ſame intereſt ſuch a one as he had in his ward by the Common law. Bro. Ideot, 4, 5. Dyer 25. Moor 4. pl. 12. 1 And. 23. 4 Co. 127. Co. Lit. 247.

But though a lunatick is by commiſſion to be under the care of the public, and ſuch committee is to be appointed for him by the Lord Chancellor, whoſe acts are ſubject to the controul and correction of the court of Chancery; yet ſuch a one, whether ſo appointed, or whether he of his own head take upon him the care and management of the eſtate of a lunatick, is but in nature of a bailiff or truſtee for him, and accountable to him, his executors or adminiſtrators. 4 Co. 127. 2 Chan. Ca. 239.

And as the committees of a lunatick have no intereſt, but an eſtate during pleaſure, it has been ruled, that they cannot make leaſes, nor any ways incumber the lunatick's eſtate, without a ſpecial order from the court of Chancery, where the profits are not ſufficient to maintain the lunatick. 1 Vern. 262. Foſter v. Merchant.

Alſo where a lunatick, before he became ſuch, made a mortgage of good part of his eſtate for 50*l.* and the committee transferred this mortgage, and took up 3 or 400*l.* more upon it; and it was held by my Lord Keeper, that the mortgage ſhould ſtand but a ſecurity for the 50*l.* only. 1 Vern. 262, 263.

And, though the King, as has been ſaid, has the ſole direction and management of ideots, &c. yet a private perſon may confine a friend who is mad, and bind and beat him, &c. in ſuch a manner as is proper in ſuch circumſtances. 2 Rol. Abr. 546.

And alſo by the 12 Ann. cap. 23. reciting, that whereas there are ſometimes in pariſhes, towns and places, perſons of little or no eſtate, who, by lunacy, or otherwiſe, are furiouſly mad, and dangerous to be permitted to go abroad, and by the laws in being the juſtices of peace and officers have not authority to reſtrain and confine them, it is enacted, "That it ſhall and may be lawful for any two juſtices of the peace, where ſuch lunatick or mad perſon ſhall be found, by warrant under their hands and ſeals, directed to the conſtables, church-wardens and overſeers of the poor of ſuch pariſh, town or place, or ſome of them, to cauſe ſuch perſon to be apprehended and kept ſafely locked up in ſuch place within the county where ſuch pariſh or town ſhall lie, as ſuch juſtices ſhall, under their hands and ſeals, direct and appoint; and (if ſuch juſtices find it neceſſary) to be there chained, if the laſt legal ſettlement of ſuch perſon ſhall be in any pariſh, town or place within ſuch county; and if ſuch ſettlement ſhall not be there, then ſuch perſon ſhall be ſent to the place of his or her laſt legal ſettlement, as vagrants by this act are directed to be ſent, (whipping excepted) and ſhall be kept ſafely locked up or chained, as aforeſaid; and the charges of keeping and maintaining ſuch perſon, during ſuch reſtraint, (which ſhall be for and during ſuch time only as ſuch lunacy or madneſs ſhall continue) ſhall be ſatisfied and paid by order of two or more juſtices of the peace for the county, town or place where ſuch ſettlement ſhall lie, out of the eſtate of ſuch perſon, if ſuch perſon hath an eſtate to pay and ſatisfy the ſame, over and above what ſhall be ſufficient to maintain his wife and children if he hath any; and if he hath not ſuch an eſtate, then the charges of the keeping and maintaining ſuch perſon, during ſuch reſtraint, ſhall be ſatisfied and paid by ſuch ways and means as the poor of ſuch pariſh, town or place, are by the laws in being to be provided for."

"Provided, that this act, or any thing contained therein, ſhall not extend, or be conſtrued to extend, to reſtrain or abridge the prerogative of the Queen, or the power or authority of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Commiſſioners of the Great Seal for the time being, or of the Chancellor, or Vice-Chancellor of the County Palatine of Lancaſter for the time being, or of the Chamberlain, or Vice-Chamberlain of the County Palatine of Cheſter for the time being, touching or concerning the premiſſes."

IV. How far their want of underſtanding ſhall or ſhall not be ſaid to be prejudicial to them in civil reſpects.

An ideot, or perſon non compos, may inherit, becauſe the law, in compaſſion of their natural infirmities, preſumes them capable of property. Co. Lit. 2, 8.

Alſo an ideot, or perſon of non ſane memory, may purchaſe, becauſe it is intended for their benefit; and if after recovery of their memory they agree thereto, they cannot avoid it; but if they die during their lunacy, their heirs may avoid it, for they ſhall not be ſubject to the contracts of perſons who want capacity to contract; ſo if after their memory recovered, the lunatick, or perſon non compos, die without agreement to the purchaſe, their heirs may avoid it. Co. Lit. 2. 2 Vent. 203.

If an ideot or lunatick marry, and die, his wife ſhall be endowed; for this works no forfeiture at all, and the King has only the cuſtody of the inheritance in one caſe, and the power of providing for him and his family in the other; but in both caſes the freehold and inheritance is in the ideot or lunatick; and therefore if lands deſcend to an ideot or lunatick after marriage, and the King, on office found, takes thoſe lands into his cuſtody, or grants them over to another, as comittee, in the uſual manner; yet this ſeems no reaſon why the huſband ſhould not be tenant by the curteſy, or the wiſe endowed, ſince their title does not begin to any purpoſe till the death of the huſband or wife, when the King's title is at an end. Co. Lit. 31. a. 4 Co. 124, 125. Yet ſee Plow. 263. b. 1 Vern. 10.

A lunatick ſhall be tenant by the curteſy, and ſhall have dower; ſo tho' a woman, being a lunatick, kill her huſband, or any other, yet ſhe ſhall be endowed, becauſe this cannot be felony in her, who was deprived of her underſtanding by the act of God. Perk. 365.

If a perſon non compos be diſſeiſſed, and a deſcent caſt, this, it is ſaid, takes away his entry, but not the entry of the heir; for regularly the non compos in this caſe cannot alledge the diſability in himſelf, becauſe he cannot be ſuppoſed conſcious of it, nor is he allowed ever, at any time, to alledge it, for when he is once non compos, there is no certain time when he can be adjudged to recover that diſability, unleſs where he is legally committed, and then the acts during his lunacy will be ſet aſide and diſcharged, and afterwards the commiſſion ſuperſeded; for in no other way can the non compos be legally reſtored to his right, and to his capacity of acting. Lit. Sect. 405. Co. Lit. 247.

A perſon non compos, being lord of a copyhold manor, may make grants of copyhold eſtates, for ſuch eſtates do not take their perfection from any power or intereſt in the lord, but from the cuſtom of the manor, by which they have been demiſed and demiſeable time out of mind. 4 Co. 23. b. Co. Copyholder, 79, 107.

Ideots and lunaticks are, both by the Civil law and likewiſe by the Common law, incapable of being executors or adminiſtrators; for theſe diſabilities render them not only incapable of executing the truſt repoſed in them, but alſo by their inſanity, and want of underſtanding, they are incapable of determining whether they will take upon them the execution of the truſt or not. Godolph. Orph. Leg. 86.

Therefore it hath been agreed, that if an executor become non compos, that the ſpiritual court may (on account of this natural diſability) commit adminiſtration to another. 1 Salk. 36.

An ideot or perſon non compos, being robbed, ſhall be bound by a ſale of his goods in a market overt. 2 Inſt. 713. Vide laſt clauſe, in Div. V.

V. How far the want of underſtanding will excuſe in criminal caſes.

It is laid down as a general rule, that ideots and lunaticks, being by reaſon of their natural diſabilities incapable of judging between good and evil, are puniſhable by no criminal proſecution whatſoever. 1 Hawk. P. C. 2.

And therefore a perſon who loſes his memory by ſickneſs, infirmity, or accident, and kills himſelf, is no felo de ſe. 3 Inſt. 54.

So if a man give himſelf a mortal ſtroke while he is non compos, and recovers his underſtanding, and then dies, he is not felo de ſe; for tho' the death compleat the homicide, the act muſt be that which makes the offence. 1 Hale Hiſt. P. C. 412.

But it is not every melancholy or hypochondriacal diſtemper that denominates a man non compos, for there are few who commit this offence, but are under ſuch infirmities; but it muſt be ſuch an alienation of mind that renders them to be madmen, or frantick, or deſtitute of the uſe of reaſon. ibid.

And as a perſon non compos cannot be a felo de ſe by killing himſelf; ſo neither can he be guilty of homicide in killing another, nor of petit treaſon; alſo if one who is committed for a capital offence become non compos before conviction, he ſhall not be arraigned; and if after conviction, he ſhall not be executed. Ibid. 30. 1 Hawk. P. C. 2.

It ſeems to have been anciently holden, (in reſpect of that high regard which the law has for the ſafety of the King's perſon,) that a madman might be puniſhed as a traitor for killing, or offering to kill the King; but this is now contradicted by better and later opinions. Fitz. Coron. 351. Regiſt. 309. 4 Co. 124. b. 1 Roll. Rep. 324.

The great difficulty in theſe caſes is, to determine where a perſon ſhall be ſaid to be ſo far deprived of his ſenſe and memory, as not to have any of his actions imputed to him; or where, notwithſtanding ſome defects of this kind, he ſtill appears to have ſo much reaſon and underſtanding as will make him accountable for his actions, which Lord Hale diſtinguiſhes between, and calls by the name of Total and partial Inſanity; and tho' it be difficult to define the indiviſible line that divides perfect and partial inſanity, yet, ſays he, it muſt reſt upon circumſtances, duly to be weighed and conſidered both by the judge and jury, leſt on the one ſide there be a kind of inhumanity towards the defects of human nature, or on the other ſide too great an indulgence given to great crimes; and the beſt meaſure he can think of is this: Such a perſon, as, labouring under melancholy diſtempers, hath yet ordinarily as great underſtanding as a child of fourteen years commonly hath, is ſuch a perſon as may be guilty of treaſon or felony. 1 Hale Hiſt. P. C. 30.

It hath been already obſerved, that he who is guilty of any crime whatſoever thro' his voluntary drunkenneſs, ſhall be puniſhed for it as much as if he had been ſober. Vide ſupra.

Alſo he who incites a madman to do a murder, or other crime, is a principal offender, and as much puniſhable as if he had done it himſelf. Keilw. 53. Dalt. cap. 95. 1 Hawk. P. C. 2.

And here we muſt obſerve a difference the law makes between civil ſuits that are terminated in compenſationem damni illatæ, and criminal ſuits or proſecutions, that are ad pænam & in vindictam criminis commiſſi; and therefore it is clearly agreed, that if one who wants diſcretion commits a treſpaſs againſt the perſon or poſſeſſion of another, he ſhall be compelled in a civil action to give ſatisfaction for the damage. 2 Roll. Abr. 547. Hob. 134. Co. Lit. 247. 1 Hawk. P. C. 2. 1 Hal. Hiſt. 15, 16, 38.

As to ideocy, lunacy or madneſs, which excuſes in capital caſes, it is not neceſſary that it was found by inquiſition that the party was a madman, ideot, or lunatick, previous to the commitment of the fact; for if he was actually mad at the time of the fact committed, this ſhall excuſe; and this regularly is to be tried by an inqueſt of office to be returned by the ſheriff of the county wherein the court ſits for the trial of the offence; and if it be found that he was actually mad, he ſhall be diſcharged without any other trial; but if they find that the party only feigns himſelf mad, and he refuſes to anſwer or plead, he ſhall be dealt with as one who ſtands mute. 26 Aſſ. pl. 27. Bro. Cor. 101. 1 And. 107, 154. Sav. 50, 57. 1 Hawk. P. C. 2. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 35.

Alſo in caſe a man in a frenzy happen by ſome overſight, or by means of the gaoler, to plead to his indictment, and is put upon his trial, and it appears to the court upon his trial that he is mad, the judge in diſcretion may diſcharge the jury of him, and remit him to gaol to be tried after the recovery of his underſtanding, eſpecially in caſe any doubt appear upon the evidence touching the guilt of the fact, and this in favorem vitæ; and if there be no colour of evidence to prove him guilty, or if there be a pregnant evidence to prove his inſanity at the time of the fact committed, then, upon the ſame favour of life and liberty, it is fit it ſhould be proceeded in the trial, in order to his acquittal and enlargement. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 33, 36.

So if a perſon during his inſanity commits a capital offence, and recovers his underſtanding, and being indicted and arraigned for the ſame, pleads Not guilty, he ought to be acquitted; for, by reaſon of his incapacity, he cannot act felleo animo. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 36.

VI. How far their acts are good, void, or voidable.

We muſt firſt diſtinguiſh between acts done by ideots and lunaticks in pais, and in a court of record; that as to thoſe ſolemnly acknowledged in a court of record, as fines and recoveries, and the uſes declared on them, they are good, and can neither be avoided by themſelves nor their repreſentatives; for it is to be preſumed, that had they been under theſe diſabilities, the judges would not have admitted them to make theſe acknowledgments. 4 Co. 124. 2 And. 145. Co. Lit. 247.

Therefore if a perſon non compos acknowledges a fine, it ſhall ſtand againſt him and his heirs, for tho' the judges ought not to admit of a fine from a madman under that diſability, yet when it is once received, it ſhall never be reverſed, becauſe the record and judgment of the court being the higheſt evidence that can be, the law preſumes the conuzor at that time capable of contracting; and therefore the credit of it is not to be conteſted, nor the record avoided by any averment againſt the truth of it, tho' an office find him an ideot a nativitate. 4 Co. 124. 2 Inſt. 483. Bro. tit. Fines 75. Co. Lit. 247. 2 And. 193. 4 Co. 124.

As to acts done by them in pais, they are diſtinguiſhed into void and voidable, tho' as to themſelves, they are regularly unavoidable, becauſe no man is allowed to diſable himſelf, for the inſecurity that may ariſe in contracts from conterfeited madneſs and folly; beſides, if the excuſe were real, it would be repugnant that the party ſhould know or remember what he did; but their heirs and executors may avoid ſuch acts in pais, by pleading the diſability; becauſe, if they can prove it, it muſt be preſumed real, ſince nobody can be thought to counterfeit it, when he can expect no benefit from it himſelf. 4 Co. 124-5. Beverley's caſe. Bro. tit. Fait 62. F. N. B. 202. Cro. Eliz. 398.

If an ideot or lunatick enter into recognizance, or acknowledge a ſtatute, neither they themſelves, nor their heirs nor executors can avoid them; for theſe are ſecurities of a higher nature than ſpecialties and obligations, which yet they themſelves cannot avoid, and being matters of record, and equivalent to judgments of the ſuperior courts, neither they themſelves, their heirs nor executors, can avoid them. 4 Co. 124. a. 10 Co. 42. b. 2 Inſt. 483. Bro. Fait Inrol. 14.

If parceners of non-ſane memory make partition, unleſs it be equal, it ſhall only bind the parties themſelves, but not their iſſue: And the reaſon it binds the parties themſelves is the ſame that all other contracts bind them, viz. becauſe no man is admitted to ſtultify himſelf: And the reaſon their iſſue may avoid ſuch partition is the ſame likewiſe for which they may avoid all other contracts made by ſuch anceſtors during their inſanity, viz. becauſe they may be admitted to ſhew the incapacity of their anceſtors, and ſo avoid all acts done by them during that time. Co. Lit. 166. a.

Altho', as hath been obſerved, according to the ſtrict rules of law no perſon is allowed to ſtultify himſelf, yet it ſeems that, even at law, the contracts of ideots and lunaticks, after office found, and the party legally committed, are void, and it muſt be at the peril of him who deals with ſuch a one; and that if afterwards the commiſſion of lunacy be superſeded or diſcharged, the non compos ſhall be reſtored to his legal right: But this, it ſeems, muſt be at the ſuit and application of his committee. 4 Co. 125.

Alſo there are frequent inſtances in equity, where not only ideots and lunaticks, who come within the protection of the law, but alſo perſons of weak underſtandings have been relieved, when they appeared to have been impoſed upon in their dealings and unreaſonable purchaſes, and ſecurities obtained from them ſet aſide in their favour. But for this ſee 1 Chan. Ca. 113, 153. 1 Vern. 155. 2 Vern. 189, 414, 678. and ſee tit. Agreements, alſo vide Abr. Eq. 279 Ridler v. Ridler.

Ideots and lunaticks, during their lunacy, are incapable of making any will or teſtament; as are alſo perſons grown childiſh by reaſon of extreme old age; ſo one actually drunk, if he be ſo drunk as to have loſt the uſe of his reaſon: But tho' a perſon who wants underſtanding cannot make a will, yet the rule herein is not to be taken from his not being able to meaſure an ell of cloth, tell twenty, or the like; but whether he has ſenſe enough to diſpoſe of his eſtate with underſtanding. Swinb. 71. Godolph. Orph. Leg. 25.

But every perſon making a will is preſumed to be of ſound underſtanding, until the contrary be proved; ſo that the onus probandi lies on the other ſide: If the teſtator uſed to have fits and lucid intervals, and it cannot appear whether the will be made in the lucid intervals, if there be no argument of folly in the will; nay, tho' the teſtator had no lucid intervals, even if it can be proved that he was mad at the time of making the will, if the will be a ſenſible, orderly will, it ſhall ſtand; (ſed qu. if written by any other perſon, and conteſted) but the leaſt word of folly in ſuch a will, overthrows it: on the other hand, if one be a very ideot and make a good ſenſible will, yet the will ſhall not ſtand good. Swinb. 72. Godolph. 25. Dyer 203. 8 Co. 147.

If a perſon of ſound memory makes his will, and afterwards becomes non compos, this is no revocation of the will; yet a bill will not lie in the life-time of the non compos, to eſtabliſh the teſtimony of the witneſs in perpetuam rei memoriam to ſuch a will. Godolph. 26. 4 Co. 126. 1 Vern. 105.

By the ſtat. 4 Geo. 2. cap. 10. it is enacted, "That it ſhall be lawful for any perſon being ideot, lunatick or non compos mentis, or for the committee of ſuch perſon in his, her, or their name, by direction of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Commiſſioners of the Great Seal, ſignified by an order made upon hearing all parties concerned, on the petition of the perſon for whom ſuch perſon being ideot, lunatick or non compos mentis, ſhall be ſeiſed or poſſeſſed in truſt, or of the mortgagor, or of the perſon intitled to the monies ſecured by or upon any lands, &c. whereof any ſuch perſon being ideot, lunatick or non compos mentis, is or are, or ſhall be, ſeiſed or poſſeſſed by way of mortgage, or of the perſon intitled to the redemption, to convey and aſſure any ſuch lands, tenements or hereditaments in ſuch manner as the Lord Chancellor, &c. ſhall by ſuch order direct, to any other perſon, ſuch conveyance to be good and effectual in law."

They are by this act impowered and compelled, by ſuch order, to make ſuch conveyance or aſſurance as aforeſaid, in like manner as truſtees or mortgagees of ſane memory are compellable to convey, ſurrender or aſſign their truſt-eſtate or mortgages.

Ideota inquirendo vel examinando, Is a writ to examine whether a perſon be an ideot. The King having the protection of his ſubjects, and the government of their lands who are naturally defective in their underſtanding; for this purpoſe the writ de ideota inquirendo, &c. is iſſued, directed to the ſheriff to call before him the party ſuſpected of ideocy, and to examine him and inquire by a jury of twelve men, who are to be on their oaths, whether the party is an ideot, or not, viz. If he be of ſufficient underſtanding and diſcretion to manage his eſtate, or not ſo; and if from his birth he hath been a perfect ideot, by reaſon whereof the cuſtody of his lands and tenements ought to belong to the King; or if by any misfortune he hath fallen into ſuch infirmity, &c. and by what, &c. and of his age, and lands, and who holds them, &c. and when the inquiſition is taken, the ſheriff is to certify it into the Chancery: And the party may be afterwards examined by the Lord Chancellor, &c. Ides, (Idus) With the ancient Romans, were eight days in every month, ſo called: being the eight days immediately after the Nones. In the months of March, May, July and October, theſe eight days begin at the eighth day of the month, and continue to the fifteenth day: In other months they begin at the ſixth day, and laſt to the thirteenth. But it is obſervable, that only the laſt day is called Ides, the firſt of theſe days is the eighth Ides, the ſecond day the ſeventh, the third the ſixth, i. e. the eighth, ſeventh, or ſixth day before the Ides; and ſo it is of the reſt of the days; wherefore when we ſpeak of the Ides of any month in general, it is to be taken for the fifteenth or thirteenth of the month mentioned. Jeman, Sometimes uſed for yeomen. Cowell.

Jeofaile, Is compounded of the Fr. J'ay faillè, i. e. Ego lapſus ſum, and ſignifies an overſight in pleading or other law proceedings. It is when the parties to any ſuit have gone ſo far that they have joined iſſue, which ſhall be tried, or is tried by a jury or inqueſt, and this pleading or iſſue is ſo badly pleaded or joined, that it will be error if they proceed; then ſome of the parties may by their counſel ſhew it to the court, as well after verdict given and before judgment, as before the jury are charged; the ſhewing of which defects by the counſel was often, when the jury came into court to try the iſſue, by ſaying, This inqueſt ye ought not to take; and if after verdict, by ſaying, To judgment you ought not to go, &c. Therefore, for avoiding the frequent delays in ſuits by ſuch ſuggeſtions, ſeveral ſtatutes have been made. Terms de Ley.

In an aſſumpſit, the defendant pleads Not guilty, and thereupon iſſue is joined, and found for the plaintiff; he ſhall have judgment, tho' it is an improper iſſue in this action; for as there is a deceit alledged, Not guilty is an anſwer thereto, and it is but an iſſue miſjoined, which is aided by ſtatute. Cro. Eliz. 407. If in debt upon a ſingle bill, the defendant pleads payment, without an acquittance, and iſſue is joined and found for the plaintiff; tho' the payment without acquittance is no plea to a ſingle bill, he ſhall have judgment, becauſe the iſſue was joined upon an affirmative and a negative, and a verdict for the plaintiff. Mich. 37 & 38 Eliz. 5 Rep. 43.

Of the ſtatutes of jeofails.

An ill plea and iſſue may be aided by the ſtatute of jeofails, after a verdict: and if an iſſue joined be uncertain and confuſed, a verdict will help it. Cro. Car. 316. Hob. 113. The ſtatutes likewiſe help when there is no original; and where there is no bill upon the file, it is aided after verdict by ſtatute: but when there is an original, which is ill, that is not aided. Cro. Jac. 185, 480. Cro. Car, 282. The ſtatute of jeofails, 16 & 17 Car. 2. helps a miſ-trial in a proper county; but not where the county is miſtaken. 1 Mod. 24.

And theſe are the ſtatutes of jeofails, which help errors and defects by miſ-pleading in records, proceſs, miſpriſions of clerks, &c. By 32 H. 8. c. 30. it is enacted, "That if the jury have once paſſed upon the iſſue, though afterwards there be found a jeofaile in the proceedings, yet judgment ſhall be given according to the verdict." The 18 Eliz. c. 14. ordains, that after verdict given in any court of record, there ſhall be no ſtay of judgment, or reverſal for want of form in a writ, count, plaint, &c. or for want of any writ original or judicial; or by reaſon of inſufficient returns of ſheriffs, &c. But this is not to extend to appeals of felony, indictments, &c. By the 21 Jac. 1. c. 13. "if a verdict ſhall be given in any court of record, the judgment ſhall not be ſtayed or reverſed for variance in form between the original writ or bill and the declaration, &c. or for want of averment of the party's being living, ſo as the perſon is proved to be in life; or for that the venire facias is in part miſ-awarded; for miſ-nomer of jurors, if proved to be the perſons returned; want of returns of writs, ſo as a panel of jurors be returned and annexed to the writs; or for that the return officer's name is not ſet to the return, if proof can be made that the writ was returned by ſuch officer, &c."

The ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 8. enacts, that judgment ſhall not be ſtayed or reverſed after verdict in the courts of record at Weſtminſter, &c. for default in form; or for that there are not pledges to proſecute upon the return of the original writ, or becauſe the name of the ſheriff is not returned upon it; for default of alledging the bringing into court of any bond, bill or deed, or of alledging or bringing in letters teſtamentary, or of adminiſtration; or for the omiſſion of vi & armis, or contra pacem; miſtaking the Chriſtian name or ſurname of either party, or the ſum of money, day, month or year, &c. in any declaration or pleading, being rightly named in any record, &c. preceding; nor for want of the averment of hoc paratus eſt verificare, or for not alledging prout patet per recordum; for that there is no right venire, if the cauſe was tried by a jury of the proper county or place; nor any judgment after verdict, by confeſſion, cognovit actionem, &c. ſhall be reverſed for want of miſericordia or capiatur, or by reaſon that either of them are entered, the one for the other, &c. But all ſuch defects, not being againſt the right of the matter of the ſuit, or whereby the iſſue or trial are altered, ſhall be amended by the judges: though not in ſuits of appeal of felony, indictments, informations on penal ſtatutes, which are excepted out of the act. The 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 4. made this act perpetual.

By 4 Ann. c. 16. all the ſtatutes of jeofails ſhall extend to judgments entered by confeſſion, nil dicit, or non ſum informatus in any court of record; and no ſuch judgment ſhall be reverſed, nor any judgment or writ of inquiry of damages thereon ſhall be ſtayed for any defect which would have been aided by thoſe ſtatutes, if a verdict had been given; ſo as there be an original writ filed, &c. The 5 Geo. 1. c. 13. ordains, that, after verdict given, judgment ſhall not be ſtayed or reverſed for defect in form or ſubſtance, in any bill or writ, or for variance therein, from the declaration or any other proceedings.

Jews, (Judæi) In former times the Jews and all their goods were at the diſpoſal of the chief lord where they lived; who had an abſolute property in them; and they might not remove to another lord without his leave: and we read that King Henry 3. ſold the Jews for a certain term of years to Earl Richard his brother. They were diſtinguiſhed from the Chriſtians in their lives, and at their deaths; for they wore a badge on their outward garments, in the ſhape of a table, and were fined if they went abroad without ſuch badges, and they were never buried within the walls of any city, but without the ſame, and anciently not permitted to burial in the country. Matt. Paris. 521, 606, &c. They are nearly under the ſame circumſtances now, in ſome foreign countries, particularly in Venice, where they have a particular quarter aſſigned them for habitation, are locked up at an early hour, and ſubject to many other hardſhips.

There were particular judges and laws by which their cauſes and contracts were decided here, and there was a court of juſtice aſſigned for the Jews. 4 Inſt. 254. A Jew may be witneſs by our laws, being ſworn on the Old Teſtament. But by our ancient books, Jews, Hereticks, &c. are adjudged out of the ſtatutes allowing benefit of clergy. 2 *Hawk. P. Ignoramus, (i. e. We are ignorant) Is uſed by the grand jury impanelled on the inquiſition of criminal cauſes, when they reject the evidence as too weak or defective to make good the preſentment againſt a perſon ſo as to put him on the trial, in which caſe they write this word on the bill of indictment; the effect whereof is, that all farther inquiry and proceedings againſt that party, for that fault wherewith he is charged, is thereby ſtopped, and he is delivered without further anſwer. 3 Inſt. 30. i. e. for that time. Ignorance, (Ignorantia) Which is want of knowledge of the law, ſhall not excuſe any man from the penalty of it. Every perſon is bound at his peril to take notice what the law of the realm is; and ignorance of it, though it be invincible, where a man affirms that he hath done all that in him lies to know the law, will not excuſe him. Doct. & Stud. 1. 46.

Though ignorance of the law excuſeth not, ignorance of the fact doth: as if a perſon buy a horſe or other thing in open market, of one that had no property therein, and not knowing but he had right; in that caſe he hath good title, and the ignorance ſhall excuſe him. Doct. & Stud. 309. But if the party bought the horſe out of the market; or knew the ſeller had no right, the buying in open market, would not have excuſed. Ibid. 5 Rep. 83. or Special.

A general imparlance is ſet down and entered in general terms, without any ſpecial clauſe, thus; and now at this day to wit, on Thurſday next after the Octave of St. Hillary, in the ſame time, until which day the aforeſaid C. D. the defendant had licence to imparle to the bill aforeſaid, and then to anſwer, &c.

Special imparlance, is where the party deſires a farther day to anſwer, adding alſo theſe words; Saving all advantages, as well to the juriſdiction of the court, as to the writ and declaration, &c. Kitch. 200. This imparlance is had on the declaration of the plaintiff; and ſpecial imparlance is of uſe where the defendant is to plead ſome matters which cannot be pleaded after a general imparlance. 5 Rep. 75.

Imparlance is generally to the next term; and if the plaintiff amend his declaration after delivered or filed, the defendant may imparl to the next term, if the plaintiff do not pay coſts; but if he pay coſts, which are accepted, the defendant cannot imparl. 2 Lil. Abr. 35. Alſo if the plaintiff declares againſt the defendant, but doth not proceed in three terms after; the defendant may imparl to the next term. Ibid.

Cauſes of imparlance, &c.

The not delivering a declaration in time is ſometimes the cauſe of imparlance of courſe: and where the defendant's caſe requires a ſpecial plea, and the matter which is to be pleaded is difficult; the court will, upon motion, grant the defendant an imparlance, and longer time to put in his plea, than otherwiſe by the rules of the court he ought to have: if the plaintiff keeps any deed, or other thing from the defendant, whereby he is to make his defence, imparlance may be granted till the plaintiff delivers it to him, or brings it into court, and a convenient time after to plead. Hil. 22 Car. 1 B. R.

In criminal proceedings.

An imparlance being prayed on a defendant's appearing to anſwer an information, it was ſaid imparlance was formerly from day to day, but now from one term to another, on the crown ſide; and it was ruled that the defendant ſhould have the ſame time to imparl that the proceſs would have taken up, if he had ſtood out till the attachment or capias; for when he comes in upon that, he muſt plead inſtanter. 1 Salk. 367. Mod. Caſes 243. And if proceſs had been continued, he might have been brought in the ſame term upon an attachment; and then there could be no imparlance, but he ought to plead inſtanter. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 947.

Where imparlances are not allowed.

There are many caſes wherein imparlances are not allowed; no imparlance is granted in an homine replegiando; or in an aſſiſe, unleſs on good cauſe ſhewn: nor ſhall there be an imparlance in an action of ſpecial clauſum fregit; though it is allowed in general actions of treſpaſs. Hil. 9 W. 3. 3 Salk. 186. Where an attorney, or other privileged perſon of the court, ſues another, the defendant cannot imparl, but muſt plead preſently: if the plaintiff ſues out a ſpecial original, wherein the cauſe of action is expreſſed, and the defendant is taken on a ſpecial capias, he ſhall not have an imparlance, but ſhall plead as ſoon as the rules are out. 2 Lil. 35, 36.

Of pleadings afterwards.

As to pleadings on imparlances; a plea to the juriſdiction, may not be pleaded after general imparlance. Raym. 34. After imparlance, the defendant cannot plead in abatement; if he doth, and the plaintiff tenders an iſſue, whereupon the defendant demurs, and the plaintiff joins in demurrer, ſuch plea is not peremptory; becauſe the plaintiff ought not to have joined in demurrer, but to have moved the court, that the defendant might be compelled to plead in chief. Allen 65. Though a defendant may not plead in abatement after a general imparlance; yet, if it appear by the record that the plaintiff hath brought his action before he had any cauſe, the court ex officio will abate the writ. 2 Lev. 197.

What may not be done after imparlance, and where the want of it is error, &c.

The defendant cannot have oyer of a deed in a common caſe, after imparlance: and a tender after imparlance, is naught. 2 Lev. 190. Lutw. 238. If it appears upon the record, that an imparlance was due, and denied, it is error; but then ſuch error muſt appear on the record. 3 Salk. 168. It has been held, that if the defendant doth not appear on a dies datus, the plaintiff ſhall not have judgement by default, as he may on imparlance, becauſe the dies datus is not ſo ſtrong againſt him as an imparlance; and therefore the plaintiff muſt take proceſs againſt the defendant for not appearing at the time. Moor 79. 2 Nelſ. 947.

Modern practice as to imparlances, &c.

By late orders of court, where a defendant is arreſted by proceſs out of B. R. in which the cauſe of action is ſpecially expreſſed; or a copy of proceſs is delivered, and the plaintiff hath declared; the defendant ſhall not have liberty of imparlance, without leave firſt granted, but ſhall plead within the time allowed a defendant proſecuted by original writ. Ord. Hil. 2 Geo. 2. And upon all proceſſes, returnable the firſt or ſecond return of any term, the declaration ſhall be delivered with notice to plead in eight days after delivery, where the defendant lives above twenty miles from London, &c. without any imparlance; and, on default of pleading, the plaintiff may ſign judgment. Ord. Cur. Trin. 5 & 6 Geo. 2. Vide New Abr. tit. Pleading, and 14 Vin. Abr. tit. Imparlance. Where time is really wanting to plead, the method of obtaining it is by a judges order, on ſummons, but then the defendant is uſually tied down to terms, ſuch as pleading iſſuably, rejoining gratis, (i. e. without rule to rejoin) and taking ſhort notice of trial. This is, as to cauſes in London or Middleſex. In country cauſes time is uſually obtained without terms, if the aſſizes are at a ſufficient diſtance, ſo that the plaintiff can make up his record, and give notice of trial in due time.

Imparſonee, A parſon imparſonee, perſona imparſonata, is he that is inducted, and in poſſeſſion of a benefice, Dyer, fol. 40. num. 72. ſays a dean and chapter are parſons imparſonees of a benefice appropriate unto them. Cowell.

Impeachment, (from the Lat. impetere) Is the accuſation and proſecution of a perſon for treaſon, or other crimes and miſdemeanors. Any member of the Houſe of Commons may not only impeach any one of their own body, but alſo any Lord of parliament, &c. And thereupon articles are exhibited on behalf of the Commons, and managers appointed to make good their charge and accuſation; which being done in the proper judicature, ſentence is paſſed, &c. And it is obſerved, that the ſame evidence is required in an impeachment in parliament, as in the ordinary courts of juſtice: but not in bills of attainder. See index to State Trial, Vol. 6. tit. Evidence.

An impeachment before the Lords by the Commons of Great Britain, in parliament, is a proſecution of the known and eſtabliſhed law, and hath been frequently put in practice; being a preſentment to the moſt high and ſupreme court of criminal juriſdiction, by the moſt ſolemn grand inqueſt of the whole kingdom. (1 Hal. P. C. 150.) A commoner cannot however be impeached before the Lords for any capital offence, but only for high miſdemeanors: (Rot. Parl. 4 Ed. 3. n. 2 & 6. 2 Brad. Hiſt. 190. Selden Judic. in Parl. ch. 1.

A Peer may be impeached for any crime. The articles of impeachment are a kind of bills of indictment, found by the Houſe of Commons, and afterwards tried by the Lords; who are in caſes of miſdemeanors conſidered not only as their own peers, but as the peers of the whole nation. This is a cuſtom derived to us from the conſtitution of the ancient Germans; who in their great councils ſometimes tried capital accuſations relating to the public: "Licet apud concilium accuſare quoque et diſ- "crimen capitis intendare." Tacit de mor. Germ. 12,

See on this ſubject. Black. Com. 4 V. 256, 257, 258. And Monteſquieu's L'Eſprit des Loix. l. 11. c. 6. vol. 1. of the quarto edition, 208, 210. particularly fol. 217, 218.

No pardon under the Great Seal, can be pleaded to an impeachment by the Commons in parliament. Stat. 12 & 13 W. 3. c. 2.

Impeachment of Waſte, (Impetitio vaſti, from the Fr. empeſchement, i. e. impedimentum) Signifies a reſtraint from committing of waſte upon lands or tenements; or a demand of recompence for waſte done by a tenant who hath but a particular eſtate in the land granted: but he that hath a leaſe to hold without impeachment of waſte, hath by that ſuch an intereſt given him in the land, &c. that he may make waſte without being impeached for it; that is, without being queſtioned, or any demand of recompence for the waſte done. 11 Rep. 82. b. Bills in equity are often filed, as a preventive remedy, to obtain injunctions to ſtay waſte, which are readily granted where proper caſes are made out, for courts of equity to ground their injunctions on. See Waſte.

Impechiare, (French empecher, Latin impetere) To impeach, to accuſe and proſecute, for felony, or treaſon, —Et promiſit Regi Navarræ quod nunquam eum impechiaret pro morte dicti Caroli de Hiſpania. Hen. de Knighton ſub anno 1256. Spelman and Somner tell us, that it is derived from the Lat. impetere, which is to accuſe, or in jus vocare, from whence impetitio ſignifies an accuſation, viz. ſine impetitione vaſti, is without impeaching or accuſing him of waſte. See Impeachment.

Impediatus, Expeditatus, impediati canes, Dogs lawed and diſabled from doing miſchief in the foreſts, and purlieus of them.——Omnes canes infra foreſtam ſolebant eſſe impediati aut amputati ſiniſtro ortello. Cowell. See Expeditate.

Impediens, A defendant, or deforciant. Cowell.

Impediments in Law. Perſons under impediments are thoſe within age, under coverture, non compos mentis, in priſon, beyond ſea, &c. who, by a ſaving in our laws, have time to claim, and proſecute their rights, after the impediments removed, in caſe of fines levied, &c. 1 R. 3. c. 7. 4 H. 7. c. 24. See ſtat. Limitations, 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. And 4 Ann. c. 16. ſ. 19.

Imperiale, A ſort of very fine cloth. Cowell.

Impeſcatus, Impeached, or accuſed. Pat. 18. Edw. 1.

Impetitio, Accuſation or impeachment: As, ſine impetitione vaſti, or, ſine impedimento vaſti, i. e. without impeachment of waſte, the party ſhall not be queſtioned or accuſed for any waſte. Cowell.

Impetration, (Impetratio) Signifies an obtaining any thing by requeſt and prayer: And in our ſtatutes it is a pre-obtaining of church benefices in England from the court of Rome, which belonged to the gift and diſpoſition of the King, and other lay patrons of this realm; the penalty whereof was the ſame with proviſors. 25 Ed. 3. 38 Ed. 4. c. 1.

Impierment, Is uſed for impairing or prejudicing; as to the impierment and diminution of their good names, &c. 23 Hen. 8. c. 9.

Implead, To ſue or proſecute by courſe of law; from the Fr. Plaider.

Implements, (from the Lat. impleo, to fill up) Things neceſſary in any trade or myſtery, without which the work cannot be performed; alſo the furniture of an houſe, as all houſhold goods, implements, &c. And implements of houſhold are tables, preſſes, cupboards, bedſteads, wainſcot, and the like: In this ſenſe, we find this word often in gifts and conveyances of moveables. Terms de Ley.

Implication, Is where the law doth imply ſomething that is not declared between parties in their deeds and agreement: And when our law giveth any thing to a man, it giveth implicitly, whatſoever is neceſſary for the enjoying the ſame.

Of omiſſions helped by implication, &c.

The want of words in ſome caſes may be helped by implication; and ſo one word or thing, or one eſtate given, ſhall be implied by another: There is an implication in wills and deviſes of lands, whereby eſtates are gained; as if a huſband deviſes the goods in his houſe to his wife, and that after her deceaſe his ſon ſhall have them, and his houſe; though the houſe be not deviſed to the wife by expreſs words, yet it has been held, that ſhe hath an eſtate for life in it by implication, becauſe no other perſon could then have it, the ſon and heir being excluded, who was to have nothing till after her deceaſe. 1 Ventr. 223.

But where it may be reaſonably intended, that the deviſor meant as well the one as the other, in ſuch caſe his intention ſhall never be conſtrued in prejudice to the heir at law: For inſtance; A man deviſed part of his lands to his wife for life, and that the ſame and all the reſt of his lands ſhould remain to his youngeſt ſon, and the heirs of his body, after the death of the wife; here was no expreſs deviſe of the reſt of the lands to his wife, and ſhe ſhall not have them by implication, becauſe the eldeſt ſon and heir at law was not excluded, who ſhall have them during the life of the wife, till the deviſe to the youngeſt ſon takes effect, for they ſhall deſcend to the heir in the mean time. Moor 123. Though Croke, (who reports the ſame caſe) ſays, it was adjudged the wife ſhould have the whole. Cro. Eliz. 15.

Of eſtates raiſed by implication.

Eſtates for life, and eſtates-tail, may be raiſed by implication in wills; a teſtator had three ſons, the eldeſt ſon dying, leaving his wife with child, to whom the father deviſed an annuity in ventre ſa mere, and if his middle ſon died before he had any iſſue of his body, remainder over, &c. And it was reſolved, that ſuch ſon had an eſtate-tail by implication. Moor 127. It is ſaid a fee-ſimple eſtate ſhall not ariſe by implication in a will; tho' there is a perpetual charge impoſed by the deviſor, on the deviſee, &c. Bridgm. 103. Alſo it hath been adjudged, that where a particular eſtate is deviſed by will expreſly, a contrary intent ſhall not be implied by any ſubſequent clauſe. And implication is either neceſſary or poſſible, and wherever an eſtate is raiſed by that means in a will, it muſt be by a neceſſary implication; for the deviſee muſt neceſſarily have the thing deviſed, and no other perſon can have it. 1 Salk. 236. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 494.

No implication ſhall be allowed againſt an expreſs eſtate, limited by expreſs words, to drown the ſame. Salk. 266. There are conditions and covenants, implied by law, in deed and grants: And implication will ſometimes help law proceedings, and ſupply defects. See Intendment and Uſe. And Black. Com. 2 V. 381.

Rules, &c. concerning implication.

It is a general rule, that where an eſtate is to be raiſed by implication, it muſt be a neceſſary and inevitable implication, and ſuch as that the words can have no other conſtruction whatſoever. Arg. Caſes in Chan. in Lord Talbot's time, in 9 Mich. 1733. in the caſe of Lord Glenorchy v. Boſville.

An implication cannot be intended by deed, unleſs there are apt words, but otherwiſe in a will. Brownl. 153. Mich. 15 Jac. Nevil v. Nevil.

An implied intent muſt not, without clear expreſſion, alter the equitable general law. Arg. Hil. 28 & 29 Car. 2. 1 Chan. Caſes 297. in the caſe of Ford Lord Grey v. Lady Grey & al'.

An eſtate by implication was never thought of in a deed, nor in a will but in caſe of neceſſity. 4 Mod. 156. Mich. 4 W. & M. B. R. Davis v. Speed.

No implication ſhall be allowed againſt an expreſs eſtate limited by expreſs words. 1 Salk. 226. Hil. 5 W. & M. B. R. Goodright v. Corniſh.

An expreſs eſtate for life cannot be enlarged by implication, but by expreſs words it may; per Wright K. and 2 Ch. J. and 1 J. Mich. 1703. 2 Vern. 449. Bumfield v. Popham. See Tail, Will.

Importation, (Importatio) Is where goods and merchandize are brought into this kingdom from other nations. 12 Car. c. 4.

Impoſſibility. A thing which is impoſſible in law, is all one with a thing impoſſible in nature: And if any thing in a bond or deed is impoſſible to be done, ſuch deed, &c. is void. 21 Car. 1. B. R. Yet where the condition of a bond becomes impoſſible by the act of God, in ſuch caſe, it is held the obligor ought to do all in his power towards a performance: As when a man is bound to enfeoff the obligee and his heirs, and the obligee dies, the obligor muſt enfeoff his heir. 2 Co. Rep. 74. See Black. Com. 2 V. 156.

Impoſt, (from the Lat. impono) Signifieth the tax received by the Prince, for ſuch merchandiſe as are brought into any haven within his dominions from foreign nations. 31 Eliz. 5. It may in ſome ſort be diſtinguiſhed from cuſtom, becauſe cuſtom is rather that profit the prince maketh of wares ſhipped out; yet they are frequently confounded. Cowell.

Impoſtors, (Religious) Thoſe who falſely pretend an extraordinary commiſſion from heaven; or terrify and abuſe the people with falſe denunciations of judgments. They are puniſhable by the Temporal courts with fine, impriſonment, and infamous corporal puniſhment. 1 Hawk. P. C. 7.

Impotency, Is a canonical diſability to avoid marriage in the Spiritual Court. The marriage is not void ab initio, but voidable only by ſentence of ſeparation, but to be actually made during the life of the parties. See Black. Com. 1 V. 434, 435.

Impotentiæ, property ratione. A qualified property may ſubſiſt with relation to animals feræ naturæ, ratione impotentiæ, on account of their own inability. As when hawks, herons, or other birds build in my trees, or conies or other creatures make their neſts or burrows in my land, and have young ones there; I have a qualified property in thoſe young ones, till ſuch time as they can fly or run away, and then my property expires, Carta de foreſt. (9 Hen. 3. c. 13.) but, till then, it is in ſome caſes treſpaſs, and in others felony, for a ſtranger to take them away. 7 Rep. 17. Lamb. Eiren. 274. Black. Com. 2 V. 394.

Impreſſing Seamen. As this is a ſubject of great conſequence, and the power much diſputed, we ſhall give the ſentiments of an eminent author thereon, without a comment.

The power of impreſſing men for the ſea ſervice by the King's commiſſion, has been a matter of ſome diſpute, and ſubmitted to with great reluctance; though it hath very clearly and learnedly been ſhewn by Sir Michael Foſter, (Rep. 154. Broadfoot's caſe) that the practice of impreſſing, and granting powers to the Admiralty for that purpoſe, is of very ancient date, and hath been uniformly continued by a regular ſeries of precedents to the preſent time: Whence he concludes it to be part of the Common law. The difficulty ariſes from hence, that no ſtatute has expreſly declared this power to be in the crown, though many of them very ſtrongly imply it. The ſtat. 2 Ric. 2. c. 4. ſpeaks of mariners being arreſted and retained for the King's ſervice, as of a thing well known, and practiſed without diſpute; and provides a remedy againſt their running away. By a later ſtatute, (2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 16.) if any waterman, who uſes the river Thames, ſhall hide himſelf during the execution of any commiſſion of preſſing for the King's ſervice, he is liable to heavy penalties. By another, (5 Eliz. c. 5.) no fiſherman ſhall be taken by the Queen's commiſſion to ſerve as a mariner; but the commiſſion ſhall be firſt brought to two juſtices of the peace, inhabiting near the ſea-coaſt where the mariners are to be taken, to the intent, that the juſtices may chuſe out, and return ſuch a number of able bodied men, as in the commiſſion are contained, to ſerve her Majeſty. And, by others, (7 & 8 W. 3. c. 21. 2 Ann. c. 6. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 19. 13 Geo. 2. c. 17, &c.) eſpecial protections are allowed to ſeamen in particular circumſtances, to prevent them from being impreſſed. All which do moſt evidently imply a power of impreſſing to reſide ſomewhere; and, if any where, it muſt from the ſpirit of our conſtitution, as well as from the frequent mention of the King's commiſſion, reſide in the crown alone. Black. Com. 1 V. 418, 419.

The ſame author obſerves, that this method of impreſſing is only defenſible from public neceſſity, to which all private conſiderations muſt give way. 1 V. 419. For further ſatisfaction on this important ſubject, we refer the reader to Comberbach's Rep. 245, and to Foſt. Rep. 154, &c. Where the ſubject is very fully and learnedly treated.

Impriſonment, (impriſonamentum) Is the reſtraint of a man's liberty under the cuſtody of another; and extends not only to a gaol, but to a houſe, ſtocks, or where a man is held in the ſtreet, &c. for in all theſe caſes the party ſo reſtrained is ſaid to be a priſoner, ſo long as he hath not his liberty freely to go about his buſineſs, as at other times. *Co. At Common law, a man could not be impriſoned in any caſe, unleſs he were guilty of ſome force or violence; for which his body was ſubject to impriſonment, as one of the higheſt executions of the law: but impriſonment is inflicted by ſtatute in many caſes. 3 Rep. 11. Tho' (ſee Magna Chart. 9 H. 3. c. 29.) whenever the Common law, or any ſtatute, gives power to impriſon, there it is lawful and juſtifiable; but he who doth it in purſuance of a ſtatute, muſt be ſure exactly to follow the ſtatute in the order and manner of doing thereof. Dyer 204. 13 E. 1.

In all actions, quare vi & armis, if judgment be given againſt the defendant, he ſhall be fined and impriſoned, becauſe to every fine, impriſonment is incident: and therefore, where the defendant is fined for a contempt to any court of record, he may be impriſoned till the fine is paid. 8 Rep. 60. But with reſpect to impriſoning for the fine, in actions of treſpaſs, the capiatur pro fine is taken away, and other proviſions in lieu thereof made, (viz. by plaintiff paying it, and being allowed in coſts.) per 5 W. & M. c. 12.

Incendiaries. Burning of houſes maliciouſly, to extort ſums of money from thoſe whom the malefactors ſhould ſpare, was made treaſon the firſt year of King H. 6. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 270. The like offences of firing houſes and ſending letters demanding money of perſons, &c. is felony, by Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 22. Vide Arſon and Waltham Blacks.

Inception. The ſame perſon is patron and incumbent, and he deviſes the next avoidance; it was objected, that by his death the church is void, and then the preſentation is a choſe en action, and not grantable, and the deviſe takes not effect till after the death of deviſor, and therefore void; but held a good deviſe, becauſe it has inception in his life. Rol. Rep. 214. 13 Jac. B. R. in caſe of Harris v. Auſtin. 3 Bulſt. 42. S. P.

Leaſe to A. for life, remainder to the right heir of A. this is a good remainder to veſt upon the death of A. for the inception in his life. Rol. Rep. 215. cites 7 H. 4.

Inſtitution gives inception to a lay fee, ſo that if a caveat be entered after to prevent induction, a prohibition ſhall be granted. 2 Rol. 294. Prohibition (M) pl. 14.

Incertainty, Is that which oppoſeth certainty, where a thing is ſo ambiguouſly ſet down, that one cannot tell how to underſtand it: and this is ſaid to be the mother of contention. The queſtions of incertainty ariſe ſometimes on matter of record; as writs, counts, pleas, verdicts, &c. and ſometimes on deeds or writings, or upon contracts, &c. 5 Rep. 121. Plowd. 25.

In law proceedings, incertainty will make them void; for all proceedings at law are to be certain and affirmative, that the defendant may be at a certainty as to what he ſhould anſwer, &c. Plowd. 84. If the count and verdict in an appeal be incertain, there can be no judgment given thereon; and it is the ſame on an indictment. 3 Mod. 121.

Incertainty in deeds renders them void; but ſometimes a term for years granted by leaſe, may be made certain by reference to a certainty; and incertainty may be reduced to certainty; by matter ex poſt facto, implication, &c. Plowd. 6. 273. 6 Rep. 20. If there are two men of one name, and a deviſe of lands, &c. is to one of that name, without any diſtinction, it will be void for incertainty; tho' perhaps an averment may make it good. 2 Bulſt. 180. Incertainty in declarations of uſes of fines of lands, &c. is rejected in law; for otherwiſe there would be no certain inheritances. 9 Rep.

Inceſt. In the year 1650, when the ruling powers found it for their intereſt to put on the ſemblance of a very extraordinary ſtrictneſs and purity of morals, inceſt and wilful adultery were made capital crimes. But at the reſtoration, when men, from an abhorrence of the hypocriſy of the late times, fell into a contrary extreme, of licentiouſneſs, it was not thought proper to renew a law of ſuch unfaſhionable rigour. And theſe offences have been ever ſince left to the feeble coercion of the Spiritual Court, according to the rules of the Canon law. Black. Com. 4 V. 64. See Lewdneſs.

Inchantment. There were formerly two ſevere ſtatutes againſt this imaginary offence, viz. 33 Hen. 8. c. 8. & 1 Jac. 1. c. 12. But now, in wiſer times, a ſtatute hath been made, viz. (9 Geo. 2. c. 5.) on more rational grounds, viz. that no proſecution ſhall, for the future, be carried on againſt any perſon for conjuration, witchcraft, ſorcery, or inchantment. But, the miſdemeanor of perſons pretending to uſe witchcraft, tell fortunes, or diſcover ſtolen goods by ſkill in the occult ſciences, is ſtill deſervedly puniſhed with a year's impriſonment, and ſtanding four times in the pillory.

Inchanter, (incantator) Is he who by charms conjures the devil; qui carminibus vel cantiunculis dæmonem adjurat: and they were antiently called carmina, by reaſon in thoſe days their charms were in verſe. 3 Inſt. 44.

Inchantreſs, (incantatrix) A woman who uſes charms and incantations. See Conjuration.

Inchartare, Signifies to give, or grant any thing by an inſtrument in writing: conceſſit ipſi comiti terram ipſam & inchartavit, ut poſſeſſio ſua, &c. Matt. Pariſ. anno 1252.

Inch of Candle, Is the manner of ſelling goods by merchants; which is done thus: Firſt, Notice is to be given upon the Exchange, or other public place, of the time of ſale; and, in the mean time, the goods to be ſold are divided into lots, printed papers of which, and the conditions of ſale, are alſo forthwith publiſhed; and when the goods are expoſed to ſale, a ſmall piece of wax-candle, about an inch long, is burning, and the laſt bidder when the candle goes out, is intitled to the lot or parcel ſo expoſed. If any difference happens in adjuſting to whom a lot belongs, where ſeveral bid together, the lot is to be put up again; and the laſt bidder is bound to ſtand to the bargain, and take the lot, whether good or bad. In theſe caſes, the goods are ſet up at ſuch a price; and none ſhall bid leſs than a certain ſum, more than another hath before, &c. Merch. Dict.

Incident, (incidens) Is a thing neceſſarily depending upon, appertaining to, or following another that is more worthy or principal. A court-baron is inſeparably incident to a manor; and a court of piepowder to a fair: theſe are ſo inherent to their principals, that by the grant of one the other is granted; and they cannot be extinct by releaſe, or ſaved by exception, but in ſpecial caſes. Kitch. 36. *Co. Incopolitus, Is made uſe of for a proctor, or vicar, Leg. Hen. 1.

Incorporation, (power of.) The King's conſent is abſolutely neceſſary to the erection of any corporation, either implied or expreſly given. The King's implied conſent is to be found in corporations which exiſt by force of the Common law, to which our former Kings are ſuppoſed to have given their concurrence; Common law being nothing elſe but cuſtom, ariſing from the univerſal agreement of the whole community. The King's conſent is alſo preſumed as to all corporations by preſcription, ſuch as the city of London, and many others, which have exiſted time out of memory; and therefore are looked upon in law to be well created. The methods by which the King's conſent is expreſly given, are either by act of parliament or by charter. But the immediate creative act is uſually performed by the King alone, in virtue of his royal prerogative, i. e. by charter. See 2 Inſt. 330. 10 Rep. 29, 30. 1 Rol. Abr. 512, 513. 8 Rep. 114. Black Com. 1 V. 472, 3.

Incorporeal Hereditaments. An incorporeal hereditament is a right iſſuing out of a thing corporate, (whether real or perſonal) or concerning, or annexed to, or exerciſable within the ſame. Co. Lit. 19, 20. It is not the thing corporate itſelf, but ſomething collateral thereto, as a rent iſſuing out of lands, &c. or an office belonging to jewel, &c. Or, according to the logicians, corporeal hereditaments are the ſubſtance, which may be always ſeen, always handled: incorporeal hereditaments are but a ſort of accidents, which inhere in and are ſupported by that ſubſtance; and may belong or not belong to it, without any viſible alteration therein. Their exiſtence is meerly in idea and abſtracted contemplation: tho' their effects and profits may be frequently objects of our bodily ſenſes. N. B. The profits produced and the thing or hereditament which produces them. are very different. Black. Com 2 V. 20.

Incrementum, Increaſe or improvement; to which was oppoſed decrementum or abatement ——Reddendo antiquam firmam & de incremento xi s. Paroch Antiq. 164. And we read dedi A. B. quoddam incrementum terræ meæ apud, &c. where it is meant a parcel of ground incloſed out of a common, or improved.

Incroachment (Fr. accrochment, i. e. a graſping of a thing) Signifies an unlawful gaining upon the right or poſſeſſion of another man. As where a man ſets his hedge or wall too far into the ground of his neighbour, that lies next to him, he is ſaid to make incroachment upon him: and a rent is ſaid to be incroached, when the lord by diſtreſs or otherwiſe compels his tenant to pay more than he owes; and ſo of ſervices, &c. 9 Rep. 33. And ſometimes this word is applied to power; for the Spencers, father and ſon, it is ſaid incroached unto them royal power and authority, anno 1 Ed. 3. And the Admirals and their deputies did incroach to themſelves divers juriſdictions, &c. 15 R. 2. c. 3.

Incumbent, (from the Lat, incumbo, to mind diligently) Is a clerk who is reſident on his benefice with cure; and is ſo called, becauſe he does or ought to bend all his ſtudy to the diſcharge of the cure of the church to which he belongs. Co. Lit. 119. Where an incumbent is put out without due proceſs, he ſhall be at large to ſue for his remedy at what time he pleaſeth, &c. Stat. 4 Hen. 4. cap. 22. See *Black. Indebitatus Aſſumpſit, Is uſed in declarations and law proceedings, where one is indebted unto another in any certain ſum; and the law creates it: it is alſo an action thereupon. And it has been held, that action upon an indebitatus aſſumpſit lies in no caſe, but where debt will lie for the ſame thing. 1 Salk. 23. See Aſſumpſit.

Indecimable, (indecimabilis) That is not tithable, or by law ought not to pay tithe. 2 Inſt. 490.

Indefeiſible, or Indefeaſible, Is what cannot be defeated or made void: as a good and indefeaſible eſtate, &c.

Indefeaſible Right to the Throne. The doctrine of hereditary right does by no means imply an indefeaſible right to the throne. It is unqueſtionably in the breaſt of the ſupreme legiſlative authority of this kingdom, the King and both Houſes of Parliament, to defeat this hereditary right; and, by particular entails, limitations and proviſions, to exclude the immediate heir, and veſt the inheritance in any one elſe. This is ſtrictly conſonant to our laws and conſtitution; as may be gathered from the expreſſion ſo frequently uſed in our Statute Book, of "The King's Majeſty, his heirs, and ſucceſſors." In which we may obſerve, that as the word, "heirs," neceſſarily implies an inheritance or hereditary right, generally ſubſiſting in the royal perſon; ſo the word "ſucceſſors," diſtinctly taken, muſt imply that this inheritance may ſometimes be broken through; or, that there may be a ſucceſſor, without being the heir of the King. Black. Com. 1 V. 195. It is a doctrine founded in reaſon and the nature of things, which doth not requre a comment.

Indefenſus, A word ſignifying one that is impleaded, and refuſeth to make anſwer: Et prædictus J. nihil ſciſcit dicere contra ſectam dict. Richardi, nec voluit ponere ſe in inquiſitionem aliquam; conſideratum eſt quod tanquam indefenſus ſit in miſericordia, &c. Mich. 50 H. 3. Rot. 4.

Indemnity. On the appropriation of a church to any college, &c. when the archdeacon loſes for ever his induction money, the recompence he receives yearly out of the church ſo appropriate, as 12 d. or 2 s. more or leſs, as a penſion agreed at the time of the appropriating, is called indemnity. MS. in Bibl. Cotton. p. 84. There is an indemnity from penalties, of perſons who have neglected to read the morning and evening prayers, according to the Book of Common Prayer, and to ſubſcribe the declaration, &c. See Stat. 9 Geo. 2. c. 6. and other indemnities by various acts.

Indenture, (indentura) Is a writing containing ſome contract, agreement or conveyance between two or more perſons, being indented in the top anſwerable to another part, which hath the ſame contents. Co. Lit. 229, A deed of bargain and ſale of freehold lands, &c. muſt be by indenture, inrolled, &c. Stat. 27 Hen. 8. c. 16. Words in indentures, though of one party only, are binding to both parties. Cro. Eliz. 202, 657, But the indenting is now conſidered as of no conſequence. It is a general name given to a variety of deeds, beginning with the words, This indenture, &c. See Deed.

Indicavit, Is a writ or prohibition that lies for a patron of a church, whoſe clerk is ſued in the Spiritual Court by another clerk for tithes, which amount to a fourth part of tbe profits of the advowſon; then the ſuit belongs to the King's courts, by the *Stat. Indicted, (Indictatus) When any one is accuſed by bill preferred to jurors at the King's ſuit, for ſome offence, either criminal or penal, he is ſaid to be indicted thereof. Cowell.

Indictio, The ſame with indictment. Nonnunquam enim fiunt accuſationes de foreſta, & indictiones vulgariter ſic appellatæ. Du Freſne.

Indiction, (indictio, ab indicendo) Was the ſpace of fifteen years, by which computation charters and public writings were dated at Rome; likewiſe anciently in England, which we find not only in the charters of King Edgar, but of King Hen. 3. And by this account of time, which began at the diſmiſſion of the Nicene Council, every year ſtill increaſed one till it came to fifteen; and then returned again, making firſt, ſecond indiction, &c. dat. apud Chippenham, 18 die Aprilis, indictione nona, anno Dom 1266.

Indictment, (indictamentum, from the Fr. enditer, i. e. deferre nomen alicujus indicare) Is a bill or declaration of complaint drawn up in form of law, exhibited for ſome offence criminal or penal, and preferred to a grand jury; upon whoſe oath it is found to be true, before a judge or others, having power to puniſh or certify the offence. Terms de Ley. Lambard ſays, An indictment is an accuſation, at the ſuit of the King, by the oaths of twelve men of the ſame county wherein the offence was committed, returned to inquire of all offences in general in the county, determinable by the court into which they are returned, and their finding a bill brought beſore them to be true: but when ſuch accuſation is found by a grand jury, without any bill brought before them, and aſterwards reduced to a formed indictment, it is called a preſentment; and when it is found by jurors returned to inquire of that particular offence only, which is indicted, it is properly called an inquiſition. Lamb. lib. 4. cap. 5.

By Pulton, an indictment is an inquiſition taken and made by twelve men, at the leaſt, thereunto ſworn, whereby they find and preſent, that ſuch a perſon, of ſuch a place, in ſuch a county, and of ſuch a degree, hath committed ſuch a treaſon, felony, treſpaſs, or other offence, againſt the peace of the King, his crown and dignity, Pult 169. An indictment, by Lord Chief Juſtice Hale, is only a plain, brief, and certain narrative of an offence, committed by any perſon, and of thoſe neceſſary circumſtances, that concur, to aſcertain the fact and its nature; there is great ſtrictneſs required in indictments, where life is in queſtion; therefore very nice exceptions are allowed. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 168, 169.

Why called a bill of indictment.

A bill of indictment is ſaid to be an accuſation for this reaſon; becauſe the jury that enquire of the offence, doth not receive it, until the party that offers the bill, appearing, ſubſcribes his name, and offers his oath for the truth of it. Standf. P. C. lib. 2. cap. 23.

But if any one prefer an indictment to the grand jury for any criminal offence, without probable cauſe, and the bill is not found, or the party is acquitted, action lies for a malicious proſecution.

Although a bill of indictment may be preferred to a grand jury upon oath, they are not bound to find the bill, if they find cauſe to the contrary; and tho' a bill of indictment be brought unto them without oath made, they may find the bill if they ſee cauſe, but it is not uſual to prefer a bill unto them before oath be firſt made in court, that the evidence they are to give unto the grand inqueſt to prove the bill is true. Paſch 23 Car. B. R. 2 Lill. Abr. 44. The grand jury are to find the whole in a bill, or reject it, and not find ſpecially for part, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 210. According to the Common law, every indictment muſt be found by twelve men at the leaſt, every one of whom ought to be of the ſame county, and returned by the ſheriff, or other proper officer, without the nomination of any other, and to be freemen, not under any attainder of felony, nor outlaws, &c.

Any one under proſecution for a crime, before he is indicted, may except againſt or challenge any of the perſons returned on the grand jury; as being outlawed, returned at the inſtance of the proſecutor, or not returned by the proper officer, etc. 2 Hawk. 215. By ſtatute, no indictment ſhall be made but by inqueſt of lawful men returned by ſheriffs, etc. 11 H. 4. cap. 2. And if a perſon not returned by the ſheriff on a grand jury, procures his name to be read among thoſe of others who were actually returned, whereupon he is ſworn of the jury; he may be indicted for it and fined, and the indictmnnt found by ſuch a jury ſhall be void. Stat 11 Hen. 4. c. 9. 12 Rep. 98. 3 Inſt. 33.

Of the power of ſheriffs, juſtices of the peace, &c.

Sheriffs had formerly power to take indictments; which they did by roll indented, one part whereof remained with the indictors. 13 Ed. 1. and 1 Ed. 3. Juſtices of peace have no power relating to indictments for crimes, but what is given them by act of parliament: And it is ſaid juſtices of peace in ſeſſions cannot, on an indictment, try and determine the offence in one and the ſame ſeſſions in which the offenders are indicted. Hill. 11 Car. Cro. Car. 430, 448. And indictments before juſtices of peace, &c. may be removed into the court of B. R. by certiorari. But an indictment removed by certiorari into B. R. may be ſent back again into the county or place whence removed, if there be cauſe to do it.

Of appeals, &c.

Before the ſtatute 3 H. 7. c. 1. it was the common practice not to try any man upon an indictment of murder, before the year and day were paſſed, to bring an appeal, leſt that ſuit ſhould be prevented: And appeals are to be generally preferred to indictments. 3 H. 7. 2 Hawk. 214. As an appeal is ever the ſuit of the party; ſo an indictment is always at the ſuit of the King. Co. Lit. 126. And till the ſtatute 1 Ed. 6. c. 7. if a man had been indicted and convicted of felony, &c. and the King had died before judgment, no judgment could be given, becauſe it was at the ſuit of the King; and the authority of the judges who ſhould give the judgment was determined by his death: but by that ſtatute judgment may be given in the time of another King. 7 Rep. 29.

An indictment is not at the ſuit of the party, nor is he intereſted.

An indictment is the King's ſuit; for which reaſon the party who proſecutes, is a good witneſs to prove it: And no damages can be given to the party grieved upon an indictment, or other criminal proſecution, unleſs particularly grounded on ſome ſtatute; but the court of B. R. by the King's Privy Seal may give to the proſecutor a third part of the fine aſſeſſed for any offence; and the fine to the King may be mitigated, in regard to the defendant's making ſatisfaction to a proſecutor for coſts of proſecution, and damages ſuſtained by the injury received. 2 Hawk. 210.

Of proceeding by indictment.

No man may be put upon his trial for a capital offence, except on an appeal or indictment, or ſomething equivalent thereto. H. P. C. 210. And all indictments ought to be brought for offences committed againſt the Common law, or againſt ſome ſtatute; and not for every ſlight miſdemeanor. Trin. 23 Car. B. R. 2 Lill. 44. Where a ſtatute appoints a penalty to be recovered by bill, plaint or information, it cannot be by indictment, but as directed to be recovered: An indictment will not lie where another remedy is provided by ſtatute. Cro. Jac. 643. 3 Salk. 187. Unleſs the ſtatute directs it by indictment.

Where an indictment will lie, and for what offence, &c. and where not.

Indictments are for the benefit of the Commonwealth, and the public good; and to be preferred for criminal not civil matters: they may be of high treaſon, petit treaſon, felony, treſpaſs, and in all ſorts of pleas of the crown; but not of injuries of a private nature, which do not concern the King, and the public. Co. Lit. 126, 303. 4 Rep. 44. An indictment lies againſt one for aſſaulting and ſtopping another on the highway, being a breach of the peace. Hill. 22 Car. It lies for cheating a perſon at play, with falſe dice, or any other cheating: but it is not indictable for one man to make a fool of another, in the caſe of cheats getting money, &c. tho' action may be brought. 2 Lill 44. 1 Salk. 479. Except in the caſes ſpecified in the act of 30 Geo. 2. c. 24. commonly called the ſtatute of Falſe Pretences.

Indictment will not lie for a private nuſance, wherein action on the caſe only lies; and where a perſon is indicted for treſpaſs, which is not indictable at law, but for which action ſhould be had; or if a man be indicted for ſcandalous words, as calling another rogue, &c. ſuch indictments are not good; for private injuries are to be redreſſed by private actions. 2 Lill. Abr. 42. But where a perſon is beaten, he may proceed for this treſpaſs by indictment, or information, as well as action. Paſch. 24 Car. B. R. With reſpect to information for an aſſault, it is a very uncommon mode of proceeding. It cannot, in the caſe of a ſubject, be filed without leave of the court, and the court would ſcarce grant leave, unleſs in a very extraordinary caſe.

Where, in an action on the caſe, a defendant juſtifies for words, as calling the plaintiff thief, &c. if on the trial it be found for the defendant, indictment may be brought forthwith to try the plaintiff for the felony. Mich. 22 Car. B. R. 2 Lill. 44. By Holt Chief Juſtice: If a civil action of trover be brought for goods taken, after recovery the party may be indicted for treſpaſs or felony, for the ſame taking: But if the firſt proſecution had been criminal, as an indictment for treſpaſs, &c. and the crime appears to be felony; there you cannot have verdict or judgment on the indictment for treſpaſs till the felony is tried, it being the inferior offence. Med. Caſ. 77.

It is ſaid that trover lies not for goods ſtolen, until the offender is convicted, &c. on indictment of felony. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 546. A parſon may be indicted for preaching againſt the government of the church, the civil and eccleſiaſtical government being ſo incorporated together, that one cannot ſubſiſt without the other; and both center in the King; wherefore to ſpeak againſt the church, is within the ſtatute 13 Car. 2. Sid. 69. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 959. And a parſon was indicted for pronouncing abſolution to perſons condemned for treaſon, at the place of execution, without ſhewing any repentance. 5 Mod. 363. Alſo a parſon hath been indicted, and fined, &c. for drinking healths to the memory of traitors. 3 Mod. Rep. 52.

Of the certainty required in indictments.

Indictments ought to be more certain than common pleadings in law, becauſe they are more penal, and to be anſwered with more preciſion. Hill. 23 Car. B. R. They muſt be preciſe and certain in every point, and charge ſome offence in particular, and not a perſon as an offender in general, or ſet down goods, &c. ſtolen, without expreſſing what goods; and it ought to be laid poſitively, not by way of recital, &c. or be ſupplied by implication. Cro. Jac. 19. 2 Hawk. P. C. 225, 226.

Indictments muſt ſet forth the Chriſtian name, ſurname, and addition of the place of reſidence of the offender; the certainty of the time when the offence was done, as the day, year, &c. and the town or place where; the nature of the offence, whether treaſon, felony, &c. and the value of the thing by which it is committed, &c. And in indictment of murder, the length and depth of the wound is to be expreſſed: the value of things ſtolen is to be ſpecified, that it may appear whether grand or petit larceny; and of the thing that does the felony (as in caſe of murder) which is forfeited to the King; and the dimenſions of a wound muſt be expreſſed, that it may be judged whether mortal. 1 Hen. cap. 5. 2 Inſt. 318. H. P. C. 264. Weſt's Symb. Sect. 70.

In treaſon, according to our old books. the indictment muſt ſay proditorie, and conclude contra ligeantiæ ſuæ debitum; in murder, it is to ſay murdravit; and if the killing was by ſhooting, or with the hand, &c. it muſt ſay percuſſit; in burglary, burglariter, or burgalariter; in rape, rapuit; in felony, felonice; in larceny, felonice cepit; maihem, mayhemavit, &c. And in all theſe caſes, and in treſpaſſes, the indictment ought to be vi et armis, and conclude contra pacem, which are words to ſhew an offence generally: and if the offence is created by ſtatute, it muſt conclude contra formam ſtatuti, &c. 4 Rep. 39, 48. 5 Rep. 121. H. P. C. 206. Theſe words the law hath appropriated for the deſcription of offences, and none other will ſupply them. [Now law proceedings are in Engliſh, ſimilar words in that tongue, muſt be uſed.]

Of faults in indictments, what ſhall be fatal, and what not.

The omiſſion of vi & armis & contra pacem, is helped by ſtatute 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. Falſe Latin, in the former courſe of proceedings, did not hurt an indictment, if by any intendment it could be made good; but if any word was not Latin, or allowed by law as a word of art; or if it had been inſenſible in a material point, the indictment was inſufficient. 5 Rep. 121. 2 Cro. 108. 3 Cro. 465. An indictment ſhould not be ſet aſide for a falſe concord between the ſubſtantive and adjective, &c. the expreſſions being ſignificant to make the ſenſe appear. 5 Co. Rep. 121.

But an indictment againſt two or more, laying the fact in the ſingular number, as if againſt one, hath been held inſufficient for the incertainty. 2 Hawk. 238. A miſnomer of the defendant's ſurname, will not abate the indictment, as it will in caſe of the name of baptiſm; and if there be a miſtake in ſpelling, if it ſounds like the true name, it is good. 1 Hen. 5. A perſon may be indicted for felony againſt an unknown perſon; and when the name of one killed is unknown, or goods are ſtolen from a perſon that cannot be known, it is ſufficient to ſay in the indictment that one unknown was killed by the perſon indicted, or that he ſtole the goods of one unknown. Wood's Inſt. 624. But though an indictment may be good for ſtealing the goods cujuſdam ignoti, of a perſon unknown, yet a property muſt be proved in ſome body at the trial; otherwiſe it ſhall be preſumed to be in the priſoner by his pleading Not guilty. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 249. Where a perſon injured is known, his name ought to be put into the indictment. 2 Hawk. 232.

Of the day or time.

If an indictment be generally of offences at ſeveral times, without laying any one of them on a certain day; as if it be laid between ſuch a day and ſuch a day, it hath been adjudged, that the indictment is void: But a miſtake in not laying an offence on the very ſame day, on which it is afterwards proved upon the trial, is not material upon evidence. 2 Hawk. 236. And it is ſaid, the crown is not bound to ſet forth the very day, when treaſon, &c. was committed: Evidence may be given of a treaſonable conſpiracy, &c. at any time before or after the time alledged in the indictment; where it is laid on ſuch a day and divers other days as well before as after, becauſe the time is only a circumſtance, and of form ſome day muſt be alledged; but it is not material. 1 Salk. 188.

Of the venue or place.

If no town or place be named where the fact was done, the indictment ſhall be void; tho' a miſtake of the place in laying the offence, is of no ſignification on the evidence, if the fact is proved at ſome other place in the ſame county. H. P. C. 264. 1 Hen. 5. cap. 5. Indictments for facts committed, ought to be laid in the county where done; and the town or pariſh in which committed to be ſet forth, &c. And if, upon Not guilty pleaded, to an indictment, it ſhall appear that the offence was done in a county different from that in which the indictment was found, the defendant ſhall be acquitted. H. P. C. 203. Kel. 15.

At Common law, if a man had died in one county, of a wound received in another, he could not regularly be indicted in either county, the offence not being compleat in either; and no jury could inquire of what happened out of the limits of their own county: but by the ſtatute 3 Ed. 6. cap. 24. the offence is to be indicted and tried by jurors of the county where the death happens. 2 Hawk. 220. It has been held, if a perſon ſteals goods in one county, and carries them into another, he may be indicted in the other county: And if a perſon ſteals my goods from another, who had ſtolen them before, he may be indicted as having ſtolen them from me, becauſe, in judgment of law, the poſſeſſion as well as property always continued in me. 2 Hawk. 90. If there be an acceſſary in one county, to a felony committed in another, the acceſſary may be indicted and tried in the ſame county wherein he was acceſſary. Stat. 2 & 3 Ed 6. c. 24.

Of joint and ſeveral offences, &c.

Huſband and wife may commit a treſpaſs, felony, &c. and be indicted together; ſo for keeping a bawdy-houſe, tho' the houſe be the huſband's. Hob. 65. 1 Salk. 382. Tho' as to felony, it is ſaid the wife cannot be guilty of it, in company with her huſband, the law preſuming her to be under his coercion.

If an offence wholly ariſes from any joint act that is criminal of ſeveral defendants, they may be all charged in one indictment, jointly and ſeverally, or jointly only; and ſome of the defendants may be convicted, and others acquitted; for the law looks on the charge as ſeveral againſt each, though the words of it purport a joint charge againſt all: In other caſes, the offences of ſeveral perſons muſt be laid ſeveral, becauſe the offence of one cannot be the offence of another; and every man ought to anſwer ſeverally for his own crime. 2 Hawk. 240. A perſon cannot be indicted barely of ſuſpicion of felony; but of the crime itſelf: And three offences may be joined in an indictment, and the party convicted of one offence, though he is found Not guilty of the others. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 561, 610. On penal ſtatutes. ſeveral things ſhall not be joined in the indictment, &c. except it be in reſpect of ſome one thing, to which all of them have relation. 2 Hawk. 241.

Of indictments upon ſtatutes, purſuing, and reciting of the ſame, &c.

When an indictment is drawn upon a ſtatute, it ought to purſue the words of it, if a private act; but it is otherwiſe on a general ſtatute: It is beſt not to recite a public ſtatute; the recital is not neceſſary, for the judges are bound ex officio to take notice of all public ſtatutes, and miſrecitals are fatal; ſo that it is the ſureſt way only to conclude generally Contra formam ſtatuti, &c. 4 Rep. 48. Though there be no neceſſity to recite a public ſtatute in an indictment, yet if the proſecutor take upon him to do it, and materially vary from the ſubſtantial part of the purview of the ſtatute, and conclude Contra formam ſtatut. prædict. he vitiates the indictment. Plowd. 79, 83. Cro. Eliz. 236. But many miſ-recitals may be ſaved by a general concluſion Contra formam ſtatuti, without adding prædict', &c. And miſtakes may be helped by the conſtant courſe of precedents upon ſuch ſtatutes. 2 Hawk. 247.

An indictment is to bring the fact making an offence, within all the material words of the ſtatute, or the words, Contra formam ſtatuti, will not make it good. Ibid. 249. If a word of ſubſtance be omitted in the indictment, the whole indictment is bad; but it is otherwiſe where a word of form is omitted, or there is an omiſſion of a ſynonymous word, where the ſenſe is the ſame, &c. Ibid. 246. Judgment ſhall not be given by ſtatute, upon an indictment which doth not include Contra formam ſtatuti: And judgment by ſtatute ſhall never be given on an indictment at Common law, as every indictment which doth not thus conclude ſhall be taken to be. Ibid. But where perſons are indicted on the ſtatute of ſtabbing, and the evidence is not ſufficient to bring them within the ſtatute; they may be found guilty of general manſlaughter at Common law, and the words Contra formam ſtatut. be rejected as uſeleſs: In other caſes the ſame has been alſo adjudged; though formerly it was held, that an indictment grounded on a ſtatute, which would not maintain it, could not in any caſe be maintained as an indictment at Common law. Ibid.

Indictments may be amended the ſame term wherein brought into court, and not after: But criminal proſecutions are not within the benefit of the ſtatutes of amendments; ſo that no amendment can be made to an indictment, &c. but ſuch only as is allowed by the Common law. 2 Lil. 45. 2 Hawk. 244. The body of a bill of indictment removed into B. R. may not be amended, except from London where a tenor only of the record is removed; though the caption of an indictment from any place may, on motion, be amended by the clerk of the aſſiſes, &c. ſo as to make it agree with the original record. Ibid. And captions of indictments ought to ſet forth the court in which, and the jurors by whom, and alſo the time and place at which, the indictment was found; and that the jurors were of the county, city, &c. Alſo they muſt ſhew that the indictment was taken before ſuch a court as had juriſdiction over the offence indicted. 2 Hawk. 253. While the jury who found a bill of indictment is before the court, it may be amended by their conſent in matter of form, the name, or addition of the party, &c. Kel. 37. Clerks of the aſſiſe and of the peace, &c. drawing defective bills of indictment, ſhall draw new bills without fee, and take but 2 s. for drawing any indictment againſt a felon, &c. on pain of forfeiting 5 l. Stat. 10 & 11 W. 3. cap. 23.

If one material part of an indictment is repugnant to or inconſiſtent with another, the whole is void; but, where the ſenſe is plain, the court will diſpenſe with a ſmall impropriety in the expreſſion. Ibid. 228, 229.

And many objections to indictments, are over-ruled. 5 Rep. 120. Where an indictment is void for inſufficiency; or if the trial is in a wrong county; another indictment may be drawn for the ſame offence, whereby the inſufficiency may be cured; and the indictment may be laid in another county, (it is ſaid) though judgment be given. See 4 Rep. 45. a. Sed qu. If the judgment ſhould not be reverſed for error, before the party be arraigned, upon a ſecond indictment? By the Common law, the court may quaſh any indictment for inſufficiency, as will make the judgment thereon erroneous: But the court may refuſe to quaſh an indictment preferred for the public good, tho' it be not a good indictment, and put the party to traverſe, or plead to it. Mich. 22 Car. B. R. Alſo the court will grant time for the King's counſel to maintain an indictment, if they deſire it.

Judges are not bound ex debito juſtitiæ to quaſh an indictment; but may oblige the defendant either to plead or demur to it; and where indictments are not good, the parties indicted may avoid them by pleading. 2 Lil. 42. 2 Hawk. 258. The court doth not uſually quaſh indictments for forgery, perjury, and nuſances, notwithſtanding the indictments are faulty; and it is againſt the courſe of the court to quaſh an indictment for extortion. 2 Lil. 41. 5 Mod. 31.

If an indictment be good in part, though the other part of it is bad, the court will not quaſh it; for if an offence ſufficient to maintain the indictment be well laid, it is good enough, although other facts are ill laid. Latch. 173. Poph. 208. 1 Salk. 384. One that is convicted upon an erroneous indictment, cannot after the conviction move to have the indictment quaſhed; but muſt bring his writ of error to reverſe the judgment given againſt him upon the indictment. Mich. 22 Car. B. R. An indictment is quaſhed for the inſufficiencyof it; or becauſe no good judgment can be given upon it: But if judgment be given upon an erroneous indictment, it is good againſt the party till reverſed by writ of error. 2 Lil. 43.

If the party indicted is outlawed upon the indictment, the court will not quaſh the indictment, though erroneous; but will force the party outlawed to bring his writ of error to reverſe the outlawry. Mich. 24 Car. B. R.

The Stat. 7 W. 3. cap. 3. ordains, That no indictment for treaſon, &c. or any proceſs thereon, ſhall be quaſhed, on motion of the priſoner, or his counſel, for miſ-writing, falſe Latin, &c. unleſs exception be made before evidence given in court; nor ſhall any ſuch defects, &c. after conviction, be cauſed to arreſt judgment; though any judgment given upon ſuch indictment may be reverſed on a writ of error, &c.

By the ſtatute of Hen. 5. indictments ſhall abate for omiſſions, by the exception of the party; and if no advantage be taken by exception, but he appears and pleads, he loſes the benefit of the law. 2 Inſt. 670.

Counts in an indictment, cannot be ſtruck out; (but may in an information:) for the court cannot ſtrike out that, which the grand jury have found. Vide Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly 203.

Of pleading, and of proceſs againſt a perſon indicted.

A perſon indicted of felony, &c. may plead generally miſnomer, or wrongful addition; a formal acquittal or conviction; a pardon, or other ſpecial plea; or the general iſſue; or may plead any plea in abatement of the indictment, &c. 2 Hawk. 259. One indicted for felony may have counſel aſſigned him to ſpeak for him in matter of law only. 2 Hil. 44. And all perſons indicted for high treaſon, ſhall have a copy of the indictment before trial, to adviſe with counſel, &c. And ſuch indictments are to be found in three years after the offence committed, except it be againſt the King's perſon. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 3. which is extended to trials on impeachments by 20 Geo. 2. c. 30. Perſons indicted of treaſon muſt be by the oaths of two witneſſes; but in other caſes one witneſs is enough.

After a perſon is indicted for felony, the ſheriff is commanded to attach his body by a capias; and on return of a non eſt inventus, a ſecond capias ſhall be granted, and the ſheriff is to ſeize the offender's chattels, &c. And if on that writ a non eſt inventus is returned, an exigent ſhall be awarded, and the chattels be forfeited, &c. 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 5. c. 2.

Of not ſurrendring.

If an innocent perſon be indicted of felony, and will not ſuffer himſelf to be arreſted by the officer who has a warrant for it, he may be killed by the officer, if he cannot otherwiſe be taken; for there is a charge againſt him upon record, to which at his peril he is bound to anſwer. Fitz. Coron. 179, 261.

Of being twice indicted.

A perſon may be indicted twice at the ſame time, where he hath committed two felonies, and if he hath his clergy for one, he may be hanged for the other. And if there is an indictment and inquiſition againſt one for the ſame offence, one found by the coroner's inqueſt, and another by the grand jury, he may be tried on both at the ſame time: But if he be tried and acquitted upon the one it may be pleaded in bar on trial for the other. "Kel. 30, 108. 1 Salk. 382.

Of trial in another county.

An indictment being found in the proper county, may (in ſome caſes) be heard and determined in any other county, by ſpecial commiſſion. 3 Inſt. 27.

Of appearance after conviction.

When a perſon is convicted upon an indictment for treſpaſs or miſdemeanor, he is to appear in court, on judgment pronounced; and the court having ſet a fine upon him, will commit him in execution, &c. 2 *Lil. Inducement, Is what is alledged as a motive or incitement to a thing; and in law is uſed ſpecially in ſeveral caſes, viz. there is inducement to actions, to a traverſe in pleadings, a fact or offence committed, &c. Inducements to actions need not have ſo much certainty as in other caſes: A general indebitatus is not ſufficient, where it is the ground of the action; but where it is but the inducement to the action, as in conſideration of forbearing a debt till ſuch a day, (for that the parties are agreed upon the debt) this being but a collateral promiſe, is good without ſhewing how due. Cro. Jac. 548. 2 Mod. 70.

A man ought to induce his traverſe when he denies the title of another, becauſe he ſhould not deny it till he ſhew ſome colourable title in himſelf; for if the title traverſed be ſound naught, and no colour of right appears for him who traverſed, there can be no judgment given: but an inducement cannot be traverſed, becauſe that would be a traverſe after a traverſe, and quitting a man's own pretence of title, and falling upon another. Cro. 265, 266. 3 Salk. 357. An inducement to a traverſe muſt be ſuch matter as is good and juſtifiable in law. Cro. Eliz. 829. There is an inducement to a juſtification, when what is alledged againſt it is not the ſubſtance of the plea, &c. Cro. Jac. 138. Moor 847. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 986.

Induction, (Inductio, i. e. a leading into) Is the giving a parſon poſſeſſion of his church: And after the Biſhop hath granted inſtitution, he iſſues out his mandate to the Archdeacon to induct the clerk, who thereupon either does it perſonally, or uſually commiſſions ſome neighbouring clergyman for that purpoſe; which is compared to livery and ſeiſin, as it is a putting the miniſter in actual poſſeſſion of the church, and of the glebe lands, which are the temporalities of it. This induction is done in the following manner: One of the clergymen commiſſioned takes the parſon to be inducted by the hand, lays it on the key of the church, and pronounces theſe words: By virtue of this commiſſion, I induct you into the real and actual poſſeſſion of the rectory of, &c. with all its appurtenances. Then he opens the church door, and puts the parſon into poſſeſſion thereof, who commonly tolls a bell, &c. and thereby ſhews and gives notice to the people that he hath taken corporal poſſeſſion of the ſaid church: If the key of the church door cannot be had, the clerk to be inducted may lay his hand on the ring of the door, the latch of the church-gate, on the church-wall, &c. and either of theſe are ſufficient: Alſo induction may be made by delivery of a clod, or turf of the glebe, &c. Countr. Parſ. Compan. 21, 22. Ordinarily the Biſhop is to direct his mandate to the Archdeacon, as being the perſon who ought to induct or give poſſeſſion unto the clerks inſtituted to any churches within his Archdeaconry: But it is ſaid, the Biſhop may direct his mandate to any other clergyman to make induction. 38 Ed. 3. cap. 3. And by preſcription, others as well as Archdeacons may make inductions. Parſ. Counſel. 8.

An induction made by the patron of the church, is void; but Biſhops and Archdeacons may induct a clerk to the benefices of which they are patrons, by preſcription, &c. 11 H. 4. 7. The Dean and Chapter of Cathedral Churches are to induct prebends; though it hath been held, if the Biſhop doth induct a prebend, it may be good at the Common law. 11 Hen. 4. 7. 11 Hen. 6. In ſome places a prebend ſhall be in poſſeſſion, without any induction; as at Weſtminſter, where the King makes collation by his letters patent. If the King grants one of his free chapels, the grantee ſhall be put in poſſeſſion by the ſheriff of the county, and not by the biſhop.

But no induction is neceſſary to a donative, where the patron by donation in writing puts the clerk into poſſeſſion, without preſentation, &c. 11 Hen. 4. 7. If the authority of the perſon who made the mandate for induction, determines by death or removal, before the clerk is inducted, the induction afterwards will be void; as where, before it is executed, a new biſhop is conſecrated, &c. But if the archbiſhop, during the vacancy of a ſee, as guardian of the ſpiritualities, iſſue a mandate to induct a clerk to a church, it is good though not executed before there is a new biſhop. 2 Lev. 299. 1 Ventr. 309.

Induction is a temporal act; and if the archdeacon refuſe to induct a parſon, or to grant a commiſſion to others to do it, action on the caſe lies againſt him, on which damages ſhall be recovered; he may likewiſe be compelled, by ſentence in the eccleſiaſtical court, to induct the clerk, and ſhall anſwer the contempt. 12 Rep. 128.

It is induction makes the parſon compleat incumbent, and fixes the freehold in him; and a church is full by induction, which cannot be avoided but by quare impedit at Common law. 4 Rep. 79. Plowd. 529. Hob. 15. A biſhop ſued in the court of audience, to repeal an inſtitution, after induction had, and a prohibition was granted; becauſe an inſtitution is not examinable in the Spiritual Court after induction, but then a quare impedit lies. Moor 860. It is not the admiſſion and inſtitution, but induction to a ſecond benefice, which makes the firſt void, in caſe of pluralities, &c. Moor 12. See Black. Com. 1 V. 391. 2 V. 312. 4 V. 106.

Indulgences. According to the doctrine of the Romiſh church, all the good works of the Saints, over and above thoſe which were neceſſary towards their own juſtification, together with the infinite merits of Jeſus Chriſt, are depoſited in one inexhauſtible treaſury. The keys of this were committed to St. Peter, and to his ſucceſſors the Popes, who may open it at pleaſure, and by transferring a portion of this ſuperabnndant merit to any particular perſon, for a ſum of money, may convey to him either the pardon of his own ſins, or a releaſe for any one in whom he is intereſted, from the pains of purgatory. Such indulgences were firſt invented in the eleventh century by Urban II. Robertſon's Hiſt. Emp. Char. V. 2 V. 79, &c. which vide. Alſo ſee the ſtat. 25 H. 8. c. 21. ſect. 27. In eſſe, Is any thing in being; and the learned make this diſtinction between things in eſſe and in poſſe; as, a thing that is not, but may be, they ſay is in poſſe, or in potentia; but what is apparent and viſible, they alledge is in eſſe, viz. that it has a real being, whereas the other is caſual, and but a poſſibility. A child, before he is born, is a thing in poſſe; after he is born, he is ſaid to be in eſſe, or actual being. The words in eſſe are mentioned in the ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. cap. 2. And where there muſt be perſons in eſſe, to take by grants, &c. See Grants and wills.

Infaliſtatus. This word occurs only in Ralph de Hengham, Summa parva, cap. 3. Vir commiſit feloniam ob quam fuit ſuſpenſus, utlagatus, vel alio modo morti damnatus, vel demembratus, vel apud Dovere infaliſtatus, vel apud Southampton ſubmerſus, vel apud Winton demembratus, vel decapitatus, ut apud Northampton; vel in mari ſuperundatus, ſicut in aliis partibus portuum.—Mr. Selden, in his notes on that author, ſays, "It appears that ſeveral cuſtoms of places made in thoſe days capital puniſhments ſeveral. But what is infaliſtatus? In regard of its being a cuſtom uſed in a port-town, I ſuppoſe it was made out of the French word falize, which is fine ſand by the water ſide, or a bank of the ſea. In this ſand or bank it ſeems their execution at Dover was." The elaborate Du Freſne condemns this derivation and this ſenſe of the word, but yet gives no better. Therefore, (till we have more authority) we may conclude that infaliſtatus did imply ſome capital puniſhment inflicted on the ſands or ſea-ſhore: perhaps infaliſtatio was expoſing the malefactor to be laid bound upon the ſands, till the next full tide carried him away.

of which cuſtom, there is ſome dark tradition. The penalty took name from the Norman faleſe, faleſia, which ſignified not only the ſands, but rather the rocks and cliffs adjoining or impending on the ſea-ſhore. Cowell. See the like uſe of feleſia in Mon. Angl. tom. 2. p. 165. b

Infamy, Which extends to forgery, perjury, groſs cheats, &c. diſables a man to be a witneſs, or juror; but a pardon of crimes reſtores a perſon's credit to make him a good evidence. 2 Hawk. P. C. 432, 433. Judgment of the pillory makes infamy by the Common law: but, by the Civil and Canon law, if the cauſe for which the perſon was convicted was not infamous, it infers no infamy. 3 Lev. 426.

Infangthef, Infangenetheof, (From the Saxon Fang or Fangen, i. e. capere, and Theof, Fur) Signifies a privilege or liberty granted unto lords of certain manors, to judge any thief taken within their fee. Bract. lib. 3. c. 35. In ſome ancient charters, it appears that the thief ſhould be taken in the lordſhip, and with the goods ſtolen, otherwiſe the lord had not juriſdiction to try him in his court; tho' by the laws of King Edward the Confeſſor, he was not reſtrained to his own people or tenants, but might try any man who was thus taken in his manor: 'tis true afterwards, the word infangthef ſignified Latro captus in terra alicujus ſeiſitus de aliquo Latrocinio de ſuis propriis hominibus. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 15. The franchiſes of infangthef and outfangthef, to be heard and determined in court-barons, are antiquated, and long ſince gone. 2 Inſt. 31. The word is ſometimes preceeded by an H.

Infant, (Infans) In our law is a perſon under twenty-one years of age, whoſe acts are in many caſes either void, or voidable. Co. Lit. lib. 1. cap. 21. and lib. 2. cap. 28. An infant of eight years of age or above, may commit homicide, and be hanged for it, viz if it may appear by hiding the perſon, by excuſing, or by any other act, that he had knowledge of good and evil, and of the danger of the offence, for here malitia ſupplebit ætatem. 1 Hal. Hiſt. 27. Yet Co. Lit. ſect. 405. ſaith, That an infant ſhall not be puniſhed till the age of fourteen, which, ſays he, is the age of diſcretion. Cowell. But in fact, whether an infant under the age of fourteen, ſhall or ſhall not be anſwerable for criminal acts, depends on the degree of judgment he poſſeſſeth. See the End of Div. I.

We ſhall conſider this ſubject under the following diviſions:

I. The ſeveral ages diſtinguiſhed by law for various purpoſes.

II. Who are minors, and how far the law regards infants in ventre ſa mere.

III. Of the trial of infancy.

IV. Of what offices and truſts an infant is capable.

V. What things he is capable of doing for his own advantage, and of his acts as good, void, or voidable, &c.

I. The ſeveral ages diſtinguiſhed by law for various purpoſes.

From the obſervations made on the daily actions of infants, as to their arriving at diſcretion, the laws and cuſtoms of every country, have fixed upon particular periods, on which they are preſumed capable of acting, with reaſon and diſcretion; in our law the full age of man or woman is twenty-one years. 3 New Abr. 118.

Therefore, if one under the age of twenty-one years makes his will, and thereby deviſes his lands, and after attains the age of twenty-one years, and dies, without making a new publication thereof, this deviſe is void. Dyer 143. Raym. 84. 1 Sid. 162.

But tho' a perſon under the age of twenty-one, cannot diſpoſe of his lands, yet it is ſaid, that one under that age may (purſuant to the ſtatute of 12 Car. 2. cap. 24.) diſpoſe of the cuſtody of his infant child, and that ſuch diſpoſition draws after it the land, &c. as incident to the cuſtody. Vaugh. 178.

Alſo it ſeems agreed, that an infant male at fourteen, and female at twelve, may diſpoſe of their perſonal eſtate at thoſe ages: For herein the Common law has appointed no time, being a matter cognizable in the Spiritual Court, which herein proceeds according to the Civil law, by which law infants at thoſe ages are preſumed to have ſufficient diſcretion to make ſuch diſpoſition; therefore their teſtaments in theſe caſes are not to be ſet aſide, or controlled in Chancery, or the temporal courts. 2 Mod. 315. 2 Jones 210. Comb. 50. 1 Vern. 469. Preced. Chan. 316.

The age of conſent to a marriage in an infant male is fourteen, and in a female twelve; but they may marry before, and if they agree thereto when they attain theſe ages, the marriage is good; but they cannot diſagree before then; and if one of them be above the age of conſent, and the other under ſuch age, the party ſo above the age may as well diſagree as the other; for both muſt be bound, or neither. Co. Lit. 33, 78, 79. 2 Inſt. 434. 3 Inſt. 88, 89. 6 Co. 22. 7 Co. 43. 1 Rol. Abr. 340, 341.

But though the party above age, may as well diſagree as the other, yet it is ſaid that the party cannot do it before the other arrives at the proper age: Alſo it is ſaid to have been adjudged, that if a man marries a woman that is within the age of twelve years, and after the woman at eleven years of age diſagrees to the marriage, and after the huſband takes another wife, and hath iſſue by her, that this is a baſtard; for the firſt marriage continues notwithſtanding the diſagreement of the woman; for ſhe cannot diſagree within the age of twelve years, and ſo her diſagreement is void. Co. Lit. 79. 1 Rol. Abr. 341.

If a man marries a woman who is within the age of twelve years, and after the feme covert within the age of conſent diſagrees to the marriage, and after the age of twelve years marries another, the firſt marriage is abſolutely diſſolved, ſo that he may take another wife; for tho' the diſagreement within the age of conſent was not ſufficient, yet her taking another huſband after the age of conſent affirms the diſagreement, and ſo the marriage avoided ab initio. 1 Rol. Abr. 341.

Vide the caſe of Mr. Fitzgerrard, Lord Decius, and Mr. Villers, 3 New Abr. 119, 120. Vide alſo, 1 Inſt. 33. 1 Rol. Abr. 340. Dyer 369. Moor 575. 1 Rol. Abr. 341. 1 Inſt. 79. 7 Co. Keen's caſe. 6 Co. Ambroſia George's caſe. 7 H. 6. 11. 6 Co. 22.

As the age of fourteen, is the age of conſent to a marriage in an infant male; ſo by law he hath ſeveral other ages aſſigned him, for ſeveral purpoſes, viz. at the age of twelve, to take the oath of allegiance in the tourn or leet; at fourteen, to be out of ward of guardian in ſocage, to chuſe a guardian, and this is alſo accounted his age of diſcretion; fifteen to have had aid pur fair Fitz Chevalier. Co. Lit. 98. b. Hob. 225.

The authority of a guardian in ſocage, ceaſes at the age of fourteen, at which age the infant may call his guardian to an account, and may chuſe a new guardian. Lit. ſect. 103. Co. Lit. 75. 2 Inſt. 135.

One within the age of twenty-one years may do homage, but not fealty; becauſe, in doing of fealty he ought to be ſworn, which an infant cannot be. Co. Lit. 65. b. 2 Inſt. 11.

An infant at the age of ſeventeen, may be a procurator or executor; and in this both the Civil and Common law agree. 5 Co. 29. b. Off. Ex. 307. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 17.

Infancy is a good cauſe of refuſal of a clerk; alſo by the ſtatutes 13 Eliz. cap. 12. and 13 & 14 Car. 2. none is to be admitted a deacon, unleſs he be twenty-three at leaſt, nor a prieſt, unleſs he be twenty-four. Comp. Incomb. 142, 214. Gibſ. Cod. 168. 3 Mod. 67.

By the cuſtom of gavel-kind, an infant at the age of fifteen, is reckoned at full age to ſell his lands; and this ſeems to have been taken from the Civil law, which reckons fourteen the ætas pubertatis; for they reckoned that though the infant had ended his years of gnardianſhip at fourteen, yet he might not have completed his account with his guardian till the age of fifteen, and that was eſteemed to be the age when he was completely out of guardianſhip; therefore at this age he was allowed to ſell the lands deſcended to him: But in this the cuſtoms of England land differ from the Civil law; for the Civil law does not allow of his diſpoſitions till the age of twenty-five; therefore this muſt have been allowed by the old Saxon law, becauſe they thought that much time was loſt, if the infant could only uſe his own eſtate without being able to diſpoſe of it in a way of traffick, or in marriage, till twenty-five; therefore they allowed the infant to ſell, (but under great limitations and reſtrictions,) that he might not be defrauded; and by this means they thought there was ſufficient proviſion made for the neceſſity of commerce. Lamb. 624, 625. and ſee Gavelkind.

Alſo by cuſtom in ſome places, an infant ſeiſed of lands in ſocage, may, at the age of fifteen years, make a leaſe for years, which ſhall bind him after he comes of age; for the cuſtom makes fifteen his full age to that purpoſe. Co. Lit. 45. b.

Alſo by the cuſtom of London, an infant unmarried, and above the age of fourteen, tho' under twenty-one, may bind himſelf apprentice to a freeman of London by indenture, with proper covenants; which covenants, by the cuſtom of London, ſhall be as binding as if he were of full age. Moor. 134. 2 Bulſ. 192. 2 Rol. Rep. 305. Palm. 361. 1 Mod. 271.

As to capital offences, in which the law is the ſame with regard to the male and female ſex, the age of fourteen is the common ſtandard, at which both males and females are, by our law, obnoxious to capital puniſhments; for this being the ætas pubertatis, or age of diſcretion, the law preſumes them at thoſe years to be doli capaces, and capable of diſcerning between good and evil; therefore ſubjects them to capital puniſhments as much as if they were of full age. F. N. B. 202. Co. Lit. 247. b. Dalt. cap. 95. and 104. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 25. 1 Hawk. P C. 2. Sed vide Poſt this Diviſion.

But tho' the age of fourteen, be the ætas pubertatis, before which our laws do not preſume the party to be doli capax, and therefore that a party indicted for a capital offence committed before theſe years is to be found Not guilty, yet this general rule hath the following temperaments.

1. That if the party be above twelve, tho' under 14, and appears to be doli capax, and could diſcern between good and evil at the time of the offence committed, he may be convicted, and undergo judgment and execution of death, tho' he hath not attained the age of fourteen; but herein, according to the nature of the offence and circumſtances of the caſe, the judge may, or may not, in diſcretion reprieve him, before or after judgment, in order to obtain the King's pardon. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 26.

2. If an infant be above ſeven, and under twelve years, and commit a capital offence, prima facie he is to be judged Not guilty, and to be found ſo; becauſe he is ſuppoſed not of diſcretion to judge between good and evil: Yet if it appear, by ſtrong and pregnant evidence and circumſtances, that he had diſcretion to judge between good and evil, judgment of death may be given againſt him; for malitia ſupplet ætatem; but herein the circumſtances muſt be inquired of by the jury, and the infant is not to be convict upon his confeſſion: Alſo herein, my Lord Hale ſays, that it is prudent after conviction to reſpite judgment or at leaſt execution; but that if he be convicted the judge cannot diſcharge, but only reprieve him from judgment, and leave him in cuſtody till the King's pleaſure be known. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 27. See Poſt this Div.

3. If an infant within age be infra annos infantiæ, viz. ſeven years old, he cannot be guilty of felony, whatever circumſtances proving diſcretion may appear; for ex præſumptione juris he cannot have diſcretion, and no averment ſhall be received againſt that preſumption. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 27, 28. Plow. 19.

Vide the caſe of William York a boy of ten years of age, convicted of murder at the Summer aſſizes for Bury, in 1748. before Willes Ch. J. Foſter's Crown Law, fol. 70, &c. In this caſe, it appeared from all the circumſtances, that the party was doli capax, and the evidence of the fact, being his own repeated confeſſions, &c. he was very juſtly convicted.

II. Who are minors, and how far the law regards infants in ventre ſa mere.

The privilege of infancy does not extend to the King; for the political rules of government have thought it neceſſary, that he who is to govern the whole kingdom, ſhould never be conſidered as a minor, incapable of governing himſelf and his affairs. Co. Lit. 43. Dyer 209. b.

Therefore if the King within age, make any leaſe or grant, he is bound preſently, and cannot avoid them, either during his minority, or when he comes of full age. Plow. 213. a. 5 Co. 27. 7 Co. 12. So, if the King aliens land which he had by deſcent from his mother, he ſhall not defeat it, by reaſon that he was within age at the time of the alienation; for his body politic, which is annexed to his body natural, takes away the imbecility of the natural body, and draws it, and all the effects thereof, to itſelf; quia magis dignum trahit ad ſe minus dignum, v. Plowd. 213, 14.

So if the King conſent to an act of parliament during his minority, yet he cannot after avoid this act; becauſe the King, as King, cannot be a minor; for as King he is a body politic. Co. Litt. 43. 1 Roll. Abr. 728.

Alſo the acts of a mayor and commonalty, ſhall not be avoided, by reaſon of the nonage of the mayor. Cro. Car. 557. 5 Co. 27.

Altho' a Duke, Earl, or the like, be but a minor, or not above ten years of age, in the cuſtody and in the family of another nobleman, who may and doth retain chaplains, yet he may qualify chaplains to hold two benefices with cure, as if he was of full age. 4 Co. 119. Comp. Incumb. 22.

An infant in gavelkind ſhall have his age, and all other privileges of the infant at Common low; becauſe tho' he hath the privilege of alienation at fifteen, yet that doth not take from him any privilege he had before at Common law. 1 Rol. Abr. 144.

A baſtard being impleaded ſhall have his age: for the dilatory plea muſt be determined before the pleas in chief can come on; ſo that the plea of infancy will ſtay the ſuit, before it can be inquired, whether he is or is not a baſtard. Co. Litt. 244. b.

An infant in ventre ſa mere, or in the mother's womb, is ſuppoſed in law, to be born for many purpoſes. It is capable of having a legacy, or, a ſurrender of a copyhold eſtate made to it. (See Poſt this diviſion.) It may have a guardian aſſigned to it; and it is enabled to have an eſtate limited to its uſe, and to take afterwards by ſuch limitation, as if it were then actually born; and in this point the Civil law agrees with ours, v. Black. Com. 1 V. 130.

A child in ventre ſa mere, may be appointed executor; alſo if there are two or more at a birth, they ſhall be joint executors, or joint legatees of the thing bequeathed; for the Civil law, for the benefit of the infant, reputes a child in his mother's womb in the ſame condition as if it were born. Godolph. Orph. Leg. 102.

If there be baſtard eigne and mulier puiſne, and the baſtard enters, and dies ſeiſed, his iſſue ſhall inherit the lands, and exclude the mulier for ever; but in this caſe if the baſtard had died leaving iſſue in ventre ſa mere, and the mulier had entered, and then a ſon is born, yet he cannot enter upon the mulier: Herein our law differs from the Civil law; for our law requires an immediate deſcent, which cannot be before the perſon is in eſſe; alſo by our law the freehold cannot be in abeyance. Co. Lit. 244.

A deviſe of lands to an infant in ventre ſa mere is good, and the freehold ſhall not be in abeyance, but ſhall deſcend to the heir at law in the mean time. Tho' formerly it was doubted. vide, 11 Hen. 6. 13. Bro. Deviſe 32. Moor 177, 637. 2 Bulſ. 273. Cro. Eliz. 423. 1 Lev. 135. 1 Sid. 153. Raym. 163. 1 Keb. 85. 1 Salk. 231. 2 Mod. 9.

However all the books agree, that a deviſe to an infant when he ſhall be born, or when God ſhall give him birth, is good, as an executory deviſe, and that the freehold ſhall deſcend to the heir at law in the mean time. 1

Sid. 153. 1 Lev. 135. Raym. 163. S. C. Snow and Cutler. It may be deviſed to truſtees.

So it is clear, that if land be deviſed for life, the remainder to a poſthumous child, that this is a good contingent remainder; becauſe there is a perſon in being to take the particular eſtate; and if the contingent remainder veſts during the continuance of the particular eſtate, or eo inſtante that it determines, it is ſufficient. Moor 637. Church and Wiat. 3 Lev. 408. 4 Mod. 359. 1 Salk. 227. Carth. 309. Reeve and Long; and ſee 10 & 11 W. 3. cap. 16. and Remainders.

Alſo it ſeems agreed, that a man may ſurrender copyhold lands immediately to the uſe of an infant in ventre ſa mere; for a ſurrender is a thing executory, and nothing veſts before admittance; and therefore if there be a perſon to take at the time of the admittance, it is ſufficient, and not like a grant at Common law, which putting the eſtate out of the grantor muſt be void, if there be no-body to take. 1 Roll. Rep. 109, 138. 2 Bulſt. 273. Co. Copyb. 9. and ſee Moor 637.

If an uſurpation be had on one in ventre ſa mere; at the next turn after his birth, he ſhall be relieved on the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 5. Hob. 240.

III. Of the trial of infancy.

Infancy is to be tried by inſpection of the court, or by jury: And herein it is laid down as a rule in ſome books, that whereſoever it is alledged upon the pleading, that the party was and yet is under age, there it ſhall be tried by inſpection; but where the infant is of full age at the time of the plea, there it ſhall be tried per pais. 1 Lev. 142. 1 Sid. 321. 1 Keb. 796. Cro. Jac. 59, 581.

But as to judicial acts, or acts done by an infant in a court of record, and which he is allowed to avoid, the trial thereof muſt be by inſpection; therefore if an infant levies a fine, he muſt reverſe it by writ of error; and this muſt be brought during his minority, that the court may by inſpection determine the age of the infant; but the judges. as by adjuncta, may in ſuch caſes inform themſelves by witneſſes, church books, &c. Co. Lit. 380. Moor 76. 2 Rol. Abr. 15. 2 Inſt. 483. 2 Bulſ. 320. 12 Co. 122.

If an infant brings a writ of error to reverſe a fine for his non-age, and, after inſpection and proof of infancy by witneſſes, dies before the fine is reverſed, his heir may reverſe it; becauſe the court having recorded the non-age of the conuſor, ought to vacate his contract when he appeared to be under a diſability at the time he entered into it. Co. Lit. 380. Moor 884. Keckwick's caſe.

An infant acknowledged a fine, and the conuzees omitting to have the fine ingroſſed till he came of age, in order to prevent the infant from bringing a writ of error; yet the court upon view of the conuzance produced by the infant, and upon his prayer to be inſpected and his age examined, recorded his non-age, to give him the benefit of his writ of error, which he muſt otherwiſe loſe, his non-age determining before the next term. Moor 189. & vide Cro. Jac. 230, 1.

So if an infant ſuffer a common recovery by appearing in perſon, this muſt be reverſed during his minority by inſpection of judges.

But is is ſaid, that if an infant ſuffers a recovery, in which he appears by attorney, he may reverſe it after his full age, as it may be diſcovered whether he was within age when the recovery was ſuffered; becauſe it may be tried per pais whether the warrrant of attorney was made by him when he was an infant. 1 Sid. 321. 1 Lev. 142

It is ſaid, that in all caſes where the party pleads that he was within age at B. and alledges a place, that there the trial may be well enough where it is alledged; where no place is alledged, there in perſonal actions where the writ is brought, and in real actions where the right of the land depends upon infancy, there the trial is to be where the land lies, and if not, where the action is brought. Skin. 10, 11. Cro. Eliz. 818. S. P.

IV. Of what offices and truſts an infant is capable.

As to what offices and truſts an infant is capable; he ſeems capable of ſuch offices as do not concern the adminiſtration of juſtice, but only require ſkill and diligence; and there it ſeems he may either exerciſe them himſelf when of the age of diſcretion, or they may be exerciſed by deputy; ſuch as the offices of park-keeper, foreſter, gaoler, &c. Plow. 379, 381. 9 Co. 48, 97. See Offices.

But it is ſaid, that an infant is not capable of the ſtewardſhip of a manor, or of the ſtewardſhip of the courts of a biſhop; becauſe by intendment of law he hath not ſufficient knowledge, experience and judgment to uſe the office, and alſo becauſe he cannot make a deputy. *Co. An infant cannot be an attorney, bailiff, factor or receiver. F. N. B. 118. 1 Rol. Abr. 117. Co. Lit. 172. Cro. Eliz. 637. An infant cannot exerciſe an office in a corporation. Rep Temp. Hard. per Annaly, 8, 9.

If an infant, being maſter of a ſhip at St. Chriſtopher's beyond ſea, by contract with another, undertakes to carry certain goods from St. Chriſtopher's to England, and there to deliver them; but does not afterwards deliver them according to agreement, but waſtes and conſumes them, he may be ſued for the goods in the court of Admiralty, though he be an infant; for this ſuit is but in nature of a detinue, or trover and converſion at the Common law. 1 Rol. Abr. 530. Furnes and Smith, and a prohibition denied to the court of Admiralty.

If an infant keeps a common inn, an action on the caſe upon the cuſtom of inns will not lie againſt him. 1 Rol. Abr. 2. Carth. 161. cited.

So if an infant draws a bill of exchange, yet he ſhall not be liable on the cuſtom of merchants, but he may plead infancy in the ſame manner that he may to any other contract of his. Carth. 160. Williams v. Harriſon. Adjudged on demurrer. Or, he may give it in evidence on the general iſſue, but the faireſt way is to plead it. An infant cannot be a juror. Hob. 325.

An infant or one under the age of twenty-one years, cannot be elected a member of the Houſe of Commons; nor can any Lord of parliament ſit there until he be of the full age of twenty-one years. 2 Inſt. 47.

V. What things an infant is capable of doing for his own advantage, and of his acts as good, void, or voidable.

An infant is capable of inheriting, for the law preſumes him capable of property; alſo an infant may purchaſe, becauſe it is intended for his benefit, and the freehold is in him till he diſagree thereto, becauſe an agreement is preſumed, it being for his benefit, and becauſe the freehold cannot be in the grantor contrary to his own act, nor can be in abeyance, for then a ſtranger would not know againſt whom to demand his right; and if at his full age the infant agrees to the purchaſe, he cannot afterwards avoid it; but if he dies during his minority, his heirs may avoid it; for they ſhall not be bound by the contracts of a perſon who wanted capacity to contract. Co. Lit. 2, 8. 2 Inſt. 203.

If an infant take a leaſe for years rendering rent; if he enter upon the land he ſhall be charged with an action during his minority, becauſe the purchaſe is intended for his benefit; but he may waive the term, and not enter, and if more rent be reſerved upon the leaſe than the land is worth, he may avoid it. 2 Bulſt. 69. If an infant make a leaſe for years with remainder over, rendring rent, and, at full age, accepts the rent of the tenant for years, this ſhall be an aſſent to him in remainder, ſo that he ſhall not ouſt him after. Plowd. 546.

If an infant be lord of a manor, he may grant copyholds notwithſtanding his non-age; for theſe eſtates do not take their perfection from the intereſt or ability of the lord to grant, but from the cuſtom of the manor, by which they have been demiſed, and are demiſable time out of mind. 4 Co. 23. b. Co. Copyholder 79, 107. Noy 41. 8 Co. 65.

An infant may preſent to a church; and here it is ſaid, that this muſt be done by himſelf, of whatſoever age he be, and cannot be done by his guardian, for the guardian can make no advantage thereof, conſequently has nothing therein whereby he can give an account, therefore the infant himſelf ſhall preſent. Co. Lit. 17. b. 89. a. 29 Ed. 3. 5. 3 Inſt. 156.

An infant leſſor in ejectment, muſt give ſecurity for coſts; becauſe the infant himſelf is not liable. Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. p. 130.

Contracts for neceſſaries.

Here we muſt obſerve, that (ſtrictly ſpeaking) all contracts made by infants, are either void or voidable, becauſe a contract is the act of the underſtanding, which during their ſtate of infancy they are preſumed to want; yet civil ſocieties have ſo far ſupplied that defect, and taken care of them, as to allow them to contract for their benefit and advantage, with power, in moſt caſes, to recede from and vacate it, when it may prove prejudicial to them; but in this contract for neceſſaries they are abſolutely bound, and this likewiſe is in benignity to infants, for if they were not allowed to bind themſelves for neceſſaries nobody would truſt them, in which caſe they would be in worſe circumſtances. than perſons of full age. 10 H. 6. 14. 18 Ed. 4. 2. 1 Rol. Abr. 729

Therefore it is clearly agreed, that an infant may bind himſelf to pay for his neceſſary meat, drink, apparel, phyſick, and ſuch other neceſſaries, and likewiſe for his good teaching and inſtruction, whereby he may profit himſelf afterwards. Co. Lit. 172. a. &c. This binding muſt mean by parol, in fact, for neceſſaries, if there is not an actual promiſe the law implies a promiſe, but the infant will not be bound by any bond, note, or bill, which he gives, tho' for neceſſaries, therefore a tradeſman's beſt ſecurity, will be the actual or implied promiſe. Vide poſt, next head. With reſpect to ſchooling, &c. it muſt be in caſes, where the credit was given, bonâ fide, to the infant. Vide infra.

As to neceſſaries, &c.

It muſt appear that the things were actually neceſſary, and of reaſonable prices, and ſuitable to the infant's degree and eſtate, which regularly muſt be left to the jury; but if the jury find that the things were neceſſaries, and of reaſonable price, it ſhall be preſumed they had evidence for what they thus find; and they need not find particularly what the neceſſaries were, nor of what price each thing was; alſo if the plaintiff declares for other things, as well as neceſſaries, or alledges too high a price for thoſe things that are neceſſary, the jury may conſider of thoſe things that were really neceſſaries, and of their intrinſick value, and proportion their damages accordingly. Cro. Jac. 360. 2 Rol. Rep. 144. Poph. 151. Palm. 361. Goulſ. 168. Godb. 219. 1 Leon. 114.

If an infant promiſes another, that if he will find him meat, drink and waſhing, and pay for his ſchooling, that he will pay 7 l. yearly; an action upon the caſe lies upon this promiſe; for learning is as neceſſary as other things, and though it is not mentioned what learning this was, yet it ſhall be intended what was fit for him, till it be ſhewn to the contrary on the other part; and though he to whom the promiſe was made does not inſtruct him, but pays another for it, the promiſe of re-payment thereof is good; if it appears that the learning, meat, drink and waſhing, could not be afforded for a leſs ſum than 7 l. 1 Rol. Abr. 729. Palm. 528. 1 Jon. 182. S. C. Pickering v. Guning, adjudged on motion in arreſt of judgment.

Aſſumpſit, for labour and medicines in curing the defendant of a diſtemper, &c. who pleaded infra ætatem viginti & unius annorum; the plaintiff replied, it was for neceſſaries generally; and upon a demurrer to this replication it was objected, that the plaintiff had not aſſigned in certain how, or in what manner, the medicines were neceſſary: but it was adjudged, that the replication in this general form was good. Carth. 110. Huggins and Wiſemen.

If an infant be a mercer, and hath a ſhop in a town, and there buys and ſells, and contracts to pay a certain ſum to J. S. for ware ſold to him by J. S. to re-ſell, yet he is not chargeable upon this contract, for this trading is not immediately neceſſary ad victum & veſtitum; and if this were allowed, infants might be infinitely prejudiced, and buy and ſell, and live by the loſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 729. Cro. Jac. 494. 2 Rol. Rep. 45. S. C. adjudged between Hill and Whittingham.

And as the contract of an infant for wares, for the neceſſary carrying on his trade, whereby he ſubſiſts, ſhall not bind him; ſo neither ſhall he be liable for money which he borrows to lay out for neceſſaries; therefore the lender muſt, at his peril, lay it out for him, or, ſee that it is laid out in neceſſaries. 5 Mod. 368. 1 Salk. 386-7.

As in debt upon a ſingle bill, the defendant pleaded that he was within age; the plaintiff replied, that it was for neceſſaries, viz. 10 l. for cloaths, and 15 l. money lent pro & erga his neceſſary ſupport at the univerſity; the defendant rejoined, that the money was lent him to ſpend at pleaſure; abſque hoc, that it was lent him for neceſſaries; and iſſue hereupon was found for the plaintiff, who had judgment in C. B. but was reverſed in B. R. on a writ of error for the iſſue only being, whether this money was lent the infant for neceſſaries, not whether it was laid out in neceſſaries, it cannot bind the infant which ever way it is found; for it might have been borrowed for neceſſaries, and laid out in a tavern; and the law will not intruſt the infant with application and laying of it out. 1 Salk. 386. Earl v. Peale. See Contra as to a ſingle bill given for neceſſaries. 1 Lev. 86. 1 Keb. 382, 416, 423 S. C. Co. Lit. 172. S. P. Sed qu?

So if one lends money to an infant, who actually lays it out in neceſſaries, yet this will not bind the infant, nor ſubject him to an action; for it is upon the lending that the contract muſt ariſe, and after that time there could be no contract raiſed to bind the infant, becauſe after that he might waſte the money and the infant's applying it afterwards for neceſſaries, will not by matter ex poſt facto, intitle the plaintiff to an action. 1 Salk. 279.

Altho' an infant ſhall be liable for his neceſſaries, yet if he enters into an obligation with a penalty for payment thereof, this ſhall not bind him; for the entering into a penalty can be of no abvantage to the infant. Cro. It is alſo ſaid, that an infant cannot either by parol contract, or a deed, bind himſelf, even for neceſſaries, in a ſum certain, and that ſhould an infant promiſe to give an unreaſonable price for neceſſaries, that would not bind him; and that therefore it may be ſaid that the contract of an infant for neceſſaries, quatenus a contract, does not bind him any more than his bond would; but only ſince an infant muſt live as well as a man, the law gives a reaſonable price to thoſe who furniſh him with neceſſaries. Caſes in Law and Equity 85.

As to an infant binding himſelf in an aſſumpſit for payment of neceſſaries, ſee 1 Rol. Abr. 729. Noy 85. Latch 157, and ſee Bulſ. 188. 1 Roll. Rep. 382.

Alſo it ſeems clear, that if an infant becomes indebted for neceſſaries, and the party takes a bond from the infant, that this ſhall not drown the ſimple contract, becauſe the bond has no force. Cro Eliz. 920.

But it is agreed, that an inſimul computaſſet will not lie againſt an infant, tho' it be for neceſſaries: for he not having diſcretion, is not to be liable to falſe accounts. Co. Lit. 172. Lamb. 169. Noy 87.

If an infant comes to a ſtranger, who inſtructs him in learning, and boards him, there is an implied contract in law, that the party ſhould be paid as much as his board and ſchooling are worth; but if the infant at the time of his going thither was under the age of diſcretion, or if he were placed there upon a ſpecial agreement with ſome of the child's friends, the party that boards him has no remedy againſt the infant, but muſt reſort to them with whom he agreed for the infant's board, &c. Allen 94. Duncomb and Tickeridge.

Judicial acts, or acts done in a court of record.

As to judicial acts, and acts done by an infant in a court of record, they regularly bind the infant and his repreſentatives, with the following ſavings and exceptions; as if an infant levies a fine, though the judges ought not to admit the acknowledgment of one under that diſability; yet having once recorded his agreement as the judgment of the court, it ſhall for ever bind him and his repreſentatives, unleſs he reverſes it by writ of error, which muſt be brought by him during his minority, that the court by inſpection may determine his age. Co. Lit. 380. Moor 76. 2 Rol. Abr. 15. 2 Inſt. 483. 2 Bulſ. 320. 12 Co. 122. Yelv. 115. 3 Mod. 229.

So if an infant levies a fine, he is enabled by law to declare the uſes thereof, and if he reverſeth not the fine during his nonage, the declaration of uſes will ſtand good for ever, for though that be a matter in pais, and all ſuch acts an infant may avoid at any time after his full age, if he do not conſent; yet being made in purſuance of the fine levied, which fine muſt ſtand good for ever, (unleſs reverſed in the manner as has been mentioned,) ſo will the declaration of uſes too. 2 Co. 58. a. 10 Co. 42. Moor 22. Dalſ. 47. 2 Leon. 159. Goulſ. 13. 1 Jones 390. Winch. 103.

If there be tenant for life, the remainder to an infant in fee, and they two join in a fine, the infant may bring a writ of error, and reverſe the fine as to himſelf; but it ſhall ſtand good as to the tenant for life; for the diſability of the infant ſhall not render the contract of the tenant for life, who was of full age, ineffectual. 1 Leon. 115, 317. 2 Sid. 55. 2 Jones 182.

If an infant brings a writ of error to reverſe a fine for his nonage, and his nonage, after inſpection, is recorded by the court, but before the fine reverſed he levies another fine to another, the ſecond fine ſhall hinder him from reverſing the firſt; becauſe the ſecond having entirely barred him of any right to the land, muſt alſo deprive him of all remedies which would reſtore him to the land. 1 Rol. Abr. 788. See Moor 74.

As to recoveries ſuffered by infants, when theſe were improved into a common way of conveyance, it was thought reaſonable that thoſe whom the law had judged incapable to act for their own intereſt, ſhould not be bound by the judgment given in recoveries, though it was the ſolemn act of the court; for where the defendant gives way to the judgment, it is as much his voluntary act and conveyance, as if he had transferred the land by livery, or any other act in pais; therefore if an infant ſuffers a recovery, he may reverſe it, as he may a fine, by writ of error, during his minority: And this was formerly taken to be law, as well where the infant appeared by guardian, as by his attorney, or in perſon: But now the diſtinction turns upon this point, that if an infant ſuffers a recovery in perſon, it is erroneous, and he may reverſe it by writ of error; but even in this caſe the writ of error muſt be brought during his minority, that his infancy may be tried by the inſpection of the court; for at his full age it becomes obligatory and unavoidable: but in caſes of neceſſity the court has admitted the infant to appear by guardian, and to ſuffer a recovery, or come in as a vouchee; but this, too, is ſeldom allowed by the court, unleſs upon emergencies, when it tends to the improvement of the infant's affairs, or when lands of equal value have been ſettled on him, and when he has had the King's Privy Seal for that purpoſe; and thoſe recoveries have been allowed and ſupported by the judges, and the infant could not ſet them aſide; beſides, if ſuch recoveries be to the prejudice of the infant, he has his remedy for it againſt his guardian, and may reimburſe himſelf out of his pocket to whom the law had committed the care of him. 1 *Rol. Partition by writ De partione facienda binds infants, becauſe by judgment in a court of juſtice, to which no partiality can be imputed. Co. Lit. 171. b.

If an infant acknowledge a recognizance or ſtatute, it is only voidable; and the infant at his peril muſt avoid them by audita querela, as he muſt a fine or recovery by writ of error during his minority; for ſuch conveyances or other acts of record become obligatory and unavoidable, if they be not ſet aſide before the infant comes of age; the reaſon is, becauſe theſe contracts being entered into under the inſpection of the judge, (who is ſuppoſed to do right) the infant cannot againſt them aver his diſability, but muſt reverſe them by a judgment of a Superior Court, who, by inſpection, has the ſame means to determine whether the inferior juriſdiction has done right, that firſt received the contract. Moor pl. 206. 2 Inſt. 483, 673. Co. Lit. 380. Keilw. 10. Reg. 149. 10 Co. 43. a.

If an infant bargain and ſell his land by deed indented and inrolled, yet he may plead non-age; for notwithſtanding the ſtatute 27 Hen. 8. cap. 16. makes the inrolment in a court of record neceſſary to complete the conveyance; yet the bargainee claims by the deed as at Common law, which was, and therefore is, ſtill defeaſible by non-age. 2 Inſt. 673.

Acts in pais.

Infants are regularly allowed to reſcind and break through all contracts in pais made during minority, except only for ſchooling and neceſſaries, be they never ſo much to their advantage; and the reaſon hereof is, the indulgence the law has thought fit to give infants, who are ſuppoſed to want judgment and diſcretion in their contracts and tranſactions with others, and the care it takes of them in preventing their being impoſed upon, or over-reached by perſons of more years and experience. 39 Ed. 3. 20. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 729. Co. Lit. 172, 381.

And for the better ſecurity and protection of infants herein, the law has made ſome of their contracts abſolutely void; i. e. all ſuch in which there is no apparent benefit, or ſemblance of benefit, to the infant; but as to thoſe from which the infant may receive benefit, and which were entered into with more ſolemnity, they are only voidable; that is, the law allows them when they come of age, and are capable of conſidering over again what they have done, either to ratify and affirm ſuch contracts, or to break through and avoid them. Cro. Car. 502. 1 Jones 405. 3 Mod. 310.

Hence an infant may purchaſe, becauſe it is intended for his benefit, and at his full age he may either agree, or diſagree to the ſame. Co. Lit. 2, 8. 2 Vern. 203.

Alſo the feoffment of an infant is not void, but only voidable, not only becauſe he is allowed to contract for his benefit, but becauſe that there ought to be ſome act of notoriety to reſtore the poſſeſſion to him, equal to that which transferred it from him. Co. Lit. 380. Dyer 104. 2 Rol. Abr. 572. 4 Co. 125. a.

Therefore if an infant make a feoffment and livery in perſon, he ſhall have no aſſiſe, &c. but muſt avoid it by entry; for it is to be preſumed in favour of ſuch ſolemnity, that the aſſembly of the pais then preſent would have prevented it, if they had perceived his non-age, and therefore the feoffment ſhall continue till defeated by entry, which is an act of equal notoriety. 8 Co. 42. Bro. tit. Diſſeiſin. 63.

But if the infant had made a letter of attorney to deliver ſeiſin, he might have an aſſiſe, &c. becauſe the letter of attorney (like all other acts or agreements made by an infant to his prejudice) muſt be void; therefore whoever claims under it, or by virtue of its authority, rity, muſt be a wrong-doer. 2 Rol. Abr. 2. Noy 130. Palm. 237.

Alſo as to the acts of infants being void, or voidable, there is a diverſity between an actual delivery of the thing contracted for, and a bare agreement to deliver it only; that the firſt is voidable, but the laſt abſolutely void; as if an infant deliver a horſe, or a ſum of money, with his own hands, this is only voidable, and to be recovered back in an action of account. Perk. ſect. 12, 19. 1 Rol. Abr. 730. 2 Rol. Rep. 408. Latch. 10. Rol. 736. 3 Rep. 13. Hob. 96.

But if an infant agrees to give a horſe, and does not deliver the horſe with his hand, and the donee take the horſe by force of the gift, the infant ſhall have an action of treſpaſs; for the grant was merely void. Perk ſect. 12, 19. 1 Mod. 137.

In treſpaſs quare vi & armis inſultum fecit, & totum crinem capitis ipſius Annæ abſcindit, the defendant as to all the treſpaſs præter tonſuram crinis pleads Not guilty, and as to that, pleads that the plaintiff was of the age of ſixteen years, and for a certain ſum of money licentiavit the defendant duas uncias crinis dictæ Annæ detondere & abſcindere; and upon demurrer to this plea the court held, that the contract was abſolutely void, and conſequently the tonſure unlawful, and gave judgment accordingly for the plaintiff. Mich. 26 Car. 2. Anna Sechroghan per Guardianum v. Stuartſon. 3 Keb. 369. S. C.

And as an infant is not bound by his contract to deliver a thing; ſo if one deliver goods to an infant upon a contract, &c. knowing him to be an infant, he ſhall not be chargeable in trover and converſion, or any other action for them; for the infant is not capable of any contract, but for neceſſaries; therefore ſuch delivery is a gift to the infant: But if an infant without any contract wilfully takes away the goods of another, trover lies againſt him; alſo it is ſaid, that if he take the goods under pretence that he is of full age, trover lies; becauſe it is a wilful and fraudulent treſpaſs. 1 Sid. 129. 1 Lev. 169. 1 Keb. 905, 913.

Alſo it ſeems, that if an infant, being above the age of diſcretion, be guilty of any fraud in affirming himſelf to be of full age, or if, by combination with his guardian, &c. he make any contract or agreement with an intent afterwards to elude it, by reaſon of his privilege of infancy, that a court of equity will decree it good againſt him according to the circumſtances of the fraud; but in what caſes in particular a court of equity will thus exert itſelf is not eaſy to determine. Vide 1 Vern. 132. 2 Vern. 224-5.

Alſo, notwithſtanding the diſability of an infant to contract, by the 7 Ann. cap. 19. it is enacted, "That it ſhall be lawful for any perſon under the age of twenty years, by the direction of the High court of Chancery, or the court of Exchequer, ſignified by an order made upon hearing all parties concerned, to convey and aſſure any lands, &c. mortgaged in ſuch manner as ſhall by order be directed to any other perſon; and ſuch conveyance ſhall be good and effectual in law."

And, "That every ſuch infant being only truſtee or mortgagee as aforeſaid, ſhall be compellable, by ſuch order, to make ſuch conveyance."

How an infant is to bind himſelf by a contract to ſerve in the plantations. See 4 Geo. 1. c. 11. ſect. 5.

All gifts, grants, &c. of an infant, which do not take effect by delivery of his hand are void; and if made to take effect by delivery of his own hand, are voidable by himſelf, and his heirs, and thoſe which ſhall have his eſtate. And privies in blood (as the heir general or ſpecial) may avoid a conveyance made by their anceſtor during his infancy. But privies in eſtate, ſuch as the donor of an eſtate tail where the tenant in tail dies without iſſue; or privies in law, as the lord by eſcheat where there is no heir, ſhall not avoid a conveyance made by an infant.

If a man within age, ſeiſed in right of his wife, makes a feoffment and dies, his heir cannot enter and avoid it, becauſe no right deſcends to him; for the baron, if he had lived, could have entered only in right of his wife. And no perſon ſhall take advantage of the infancy of his anceſtor, but he who hath a right deſcending to him from that anceſtor; though the heir may take the benefit of a condition, notwithſtanding no right deſcended to him from his anceſtor. 8 Rep. 42, 3, 4. and ſee 3 Rep. 35.

If huſband and wife are both within age, and they by indenture join in a feoffment, and the huſband dies, the wife may enter and avoid the deed, or have a dum fuit infra ætatem. 1 Inſt. 337. Though if there be two jointenants within age, and one of them makes a feoffment in fee of the moiety during his infancy, and dies, the ſurvivor cannot enter; but the heir of the feoffor may enter into the moiety, &c. 8 Rep. 43. If an infant exchanges lands with another, and the other enters, the infant may have aſſiſe, 18 Ed. 4. 2. And where an infant leaſes for years, he may affirm the leaſe, or bring treſpaſs againſt the leſſee for the occupation. 18 Ed. 4. Bro. Treſpaſs 338. A leaſe made by an infant reſerving rent is voidable; but if there be no rendering rent, it is abſolutely void. Latch 199. If an infant make a leaſe paying rent, and after his coming of age he accepts the rent, the voidable leaſe is made good; and an infant's leaſe in ejectment is good. 2 Lil. Abr. 55. 3 Salk. 196. An infant cannot ſurrender a future intereſt, by taking a new leaſe; his ſurrender by deed and by acceptance of a ſecond leaſe, are void, except there be an increaſe of the term; or a decreaſe of the rent; for where no benefit comes to him, his acts are merely void. Cro. Car. 502. If an infant ſurrenders a leaſe for years to him in reverſion, this is void, and cannot be made good by any agreement at full age. Rol. Abr. 728. But as he may ſurrender de novo, of what uſe is the doctrine, ſuppoſing it law?

An infant confeſſed judgment in an action of debt brought againſt him; and it was held, audita querela did not lie upon this judgment, though it would on a ſtatute or recogniſance; but the party ought to bring a writ of error in the Exchequer Chamber, by virtue of the ſtatute 27 Eliz. Moor 460. He is not to appear by attorney in his own right; but if he be joint executor with others of age, they may make an attorney for him: reſolved where three executors brought an action by attorney, one being within age. 2 Saund. 212. Though it was adjudged, that an infant may neither ſue, nor be ſued, as executor, by attorney; for the infant's diſability is adherent to his perſon, and he has no power to make an attorney in any caſe, who would not be anſwerable to him. Fitzgib. 1, 2. Mich. 1 Geo. 2. And it hath been held, if an action be brought againſt three ſeveral defendants, and one of them is an infant, they may not all appear by attorney; but he within age muſt appear by guardian, or it will be error to reverſe the judgment. Style 400. 1 Lev. 294.

If baron and feme, where the feme is an infant, appear by attorney, it is error. 5 Mod. 209. When the defendant in an action is an infant the plaintiff ſhall have ſix years to bring his action in, after the defendant comes of age: and if the plaintiff be an infant, he hath ſix years likewiſe after his age, to ſue by the ſtatute of limitations. Lutw. 243. And infants are not bound by nonclaim, &c. on fines levied by others, within five years, by the Stat. 13 Ed. 1. Nonclaim ſhall not bind an infant, nor any negligence, &c. be imputed to him; except in ſome particular caſes, viz. in caſe of a fine where the time begins in the life of the anceſtor; or of an appeal of death of his anceſtor, where he brings not his appeal within a year and a day, &c. 1 Inſt. 246, 380. Wood's Inſt. 13. Though a ſtatute is not extendible againſt an infant, yet Chancery will give relief againſt infants. 1 Lev. 198.

An infant is much favoured by the law; therefore it gives him many privileges above others: if an infant make default in a real action, he ſhall not loſe his land as another man ſhall do; one who is an infant ſhall not be amerced, nor find pledges like one of full age; and if he be bail, he may be diſcharged by audita querela, &c. 1 Inſt. 272. 8 Rep. 61. On his default at the grand cape, the infant by writ of error may reverſe the judgment given againſt himſelf; unleſs it be in caſe of a judgment in dower. Dyer 104. Jenk. Cent. 47, 319. But an infant may be diſſeiſed of his lands. and a warranty that deſcendeth upon an infant, may bar him of his entry; ſo a remitter upon him; contra of a deſcent: and if an infant hath franchiſes or liberties, and do abuſe, or diſſuſe them, he ſhall forfeit them as a man of full age may. 1 Inſt. 3, 133. 1 And. 311. Bro. 48.

A promiſe of a perſon when at full age, for conſideration during infancy, ſhall be binding, and aſſumpſit lieth. 2 Lev. 144. 2 Leon 215. A perſon gave a note, a few days after he was of age, for things had during his infancy; on extraordinary circumſtances, equity ſet it aſide: tho' it is true, if an infant takes up goods, or borrows money, and, after he comes to age, gives his note or promiſe for the money, that is good at law: but to prevent the ruin of infants, it may be convenient to give relief. Barnardiſt. 4, 6. If an infant delivers money with his own hand, it is voidable, and to be recovered by action of account. The infant ſells goods to another; he may make the ſale void, or have debt, &c. for the money. Hob. 77. 18 Ed. 4. 2.

If a treſpaſs be done to an infant, and he ſubmits to an award, it is ſaid the award ſhall not be binding to him. 2 Danv. 770. An infant is not bound by his conſent not to bring a writ of error; for though the judgment binds him, yet it binds but as a judgment reverſable. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 104. Agreements, &c. made by an infant, although he be within a day of his full age, ſhall not bind him. Plowd. 364. but vide the next tit. Where an infant enters into bond, pretending to be of full age, though he may avoid it by pleading his infancy, yet he may be indicted for a cheat. Wood's Inſt. 585. Infants when of Age. An infant has been adjudged of age the day before his birth day, for the law will not make a fraction of a day; therefore where a perſon was born the third of September, and the ſecond of September 21 years after, he made his will, it was held good; and that he was then of age to deviſe his lands. 1 Ld Raym. 480. Information for the King, (informatio pro Rege). We ſhall treat of this ſubject under the following heads, viz.

I. Of informations generally, and the antiquity of the practice.
II. In what caſes an information will lie.
III. Of filing an information.
IV. How it is to be laid; the proceedings, and proviſions by ſtatute law, &c.

I. Of informations generally, and the antiquity of the practice.

An information is, in many reſpects, the ſame as what, for a common perſon, we call a declaration. It ought to be certain, that the party may perfectly know what he is to anſwer to, and the court what they are to give judgment on. Vide Plowd. 329.

It is not always exhibited directly by the King or his attorney, but ſometimes by another, qui ſequitur tam pro Domino Rege quam pro ſeipſo, upon the breach of ſome penal law or ſtatute, wherein a penalty is given to the party that will ſue for the ſame, and may be either by action of debt or information. Cowell.

An information may be defined, an accuſation or complaint exhibited againſt a perſon for ſome criminal offence, either immediately againſt the King, or againſt a private perſon, which from its enormity or dangerous tendency, the public good requires ſhould be reſtrained and puniſhed, and differs principally from an indictment in this, that an indictment is an accuſation found by the oath of twelve men, whereas an information is only the allegation of the officer who exhibits it. 3 New Abr. 164.

Informations are either at the ſuit of the King, or at the ſuit of the King and party, which is called an information qui tam, becauſe the informer proſecutes tam pro Domino Rege quam pro ſeipſo; but theſe informations will not lie on any ſtatute, which prohibits a thing, as being an immediate offence againſt the public good in general, under a certain penalty, unleſs the whole or part of ſuch penalty be expreſly given to him who will ſue for it, becauſe otherwiſe it goes to the King, and nothing can be demanded by the party. 2 Hawk. P. C. 265.

The King ſhall put no one to anſwer for a wrong done principally to another, without indictment or preſentment; though of common right, informations, or actions in the nature thereof, may be brought for offences againſt ſtatutes, whether mentioned or not in ſuch ſtatutes, where other methods of proceeding are not particularly appointed. Ibid. 260. And wherever a matter concerns the public government, and no particular perſon is entitled to an action, there an information will lie. 1 Salk. 374. Vide 5 Geo. 1. c. 4. Wood's Inſt. 630.

This difference between informations and indictments has made ſome men conceive, that this kind of proceeding was utterly unlawful, as being not only contrary to the original frame and nature of our laws, but alſo contrary to Magna Charta, and ſeveral other ſtatutes, which require that no man ſhall be put to anſwer, &c. but upon indictment or preſentment. 3 New Abr. 165. See Sir Francis Winnington's argument, 5 Mod. 456. and 1 Show. 106, &c.

But though, as my Lord Hale obſerves, in all criminal caſes the moſt regular and ſafe way, and moſt conſonant to the ſtatute of Magna Charta, &c. is by preſentment or indictment of twelve ſworn men, yet he admits that for crimes inferior to capital ones, the proceedings may be by information; and this, from the long and frequent practice is now ſaid to be eſtabliſhed as part of the law of the land; therefore, at this day the following kinds of informations may be exhibited, wherever the nature of the offence deſerves ſuch a proceeding. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. c. 8.

1ſt, For an offence principally, and more immediately againſt the King, an information may be exhibited in the name of the Attorney-General, and ſuch information may be filed without any application or leave of the court, and the party ſhall be obliged to anſwer the ſame; alſo the ſtatute. 4 & 5 W. 3. c. 18. (which requires a recognizance for payment of coſts from perſons exhibiting and proſecuting informations) does not extend to informations filed by the King's Attorney-General, and it is ſaid, that the court will not quaſh ſuch information on motion, but will oblige the party to demur or plead thereto. 2 Hawk. P. C. 260. and ſee Carth. 465-6. that no ſuch information can be brought on a penal ſtatute. 1 Salk. 372.

2dly, On application, and leave of the court, grounded on motion and affidavit of ſome miſdemeanor, which, if true, doth from its evil tendency merit ſuch proſecution, the court allows of the filing of an information in the name of the Maſter of the Crown-office; and of ſuch kind of informations there are numberleſs precedents in the Crown-office. 2 Hawk. P. C. 261. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. c. 20. But B. R. (generally ſpeaking) will not grant an information, where there is a civil ſuit depending, except the offence appears very clearly. Vide Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 241.

4thly, Informations in nature of a quo warranto may be, and frequently are exhibited, with leave of the court, for uſurping privileges, franchiſes, &c. which in ſome reſpect is a civil ſuit, as it is uſed as a proper means to try a right, though it puniſhes the miſdemeanor, ſuch as the uſurpation, &c. Yet the court of B. R. will not grant an information, on private uſurpation of franchiſes, but the proper remedy is to apply to the Attorney-General. Vide Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 261.

II. In what caſes an information will lie.

Here we ſhall lay down what hath been collected by Serjeant Hawkins, and is, as he ſays, every day's practice, agreeable to numberleſs precedents, viz. either in the name of the King's Attorney General, or of the Maſter of the Crown-office, to exhibit informations for batteries, cheats, ſeducing a young man or woman from their parents, in order to marry them againſt their conſent, or for any other wicked purpoſe, ſpiriting away a child to the plantations, reſcuing perſons from legal arreſts, perjuries, and ſubornations thereof, forgeries, conſpiracies, (whether to accuſe an innocent perſon, or to impoveriſh a certain ſet of lawful traders, &c. or to procure a verdict to be unlawfully given, by cauſing perſons bribed for that purpoſe to be ſworn on a tales), and other ſuch like crimes, done principally to a private perſon, as well as for offences done principally to the King; as for libels, ſeditious words, riots, falſe news, extortions, nuſances, (as in not repairing highways, or obſtructing them, or ſtopping a common river, &c.) contempts, as in departing from the parliament without the King's licence, diſobeying his writs, uttering money without his authority, eſcaping from legal impriſonment on a proſecution for contempt, neglecting to keep watch and ward, abuſing the King's commiſſion to the oppreſſion of the ſubject, making a return to a mandamus of matters known to be falſe, and in general any other offences againſt the public good, or againſt the firſt and obvious principles of juſtice and common honeſty. 3 New Abr. 166. 2 Hawk. P. C. 260. and ſeveral authorities there cited. Words reflecting on the public government are puniſhable at the ſuit of the King by information. Carth. 14, 15. The King. v. Darby.

An information was exhibited by the Attorney General for conſpiring to deſtroy the King's revenue of the exciſe; that the defendant's and others ignot', &c. illicite, factioſe, & ſeditioſe, conſultaverunt & conſpiraverunt ad deſtruend' & depauperand' fermarios exciſæ prædict', &c. and many other facts were laid in the information tending to deſtroying the exciſemen, depauperating them, deſtroying the King's revenue of exciſe, pulling down the exciſe-houſe, raiſing a tumult amongſt the poor people. &c. But the jury that were to try the iſſue were unwilling to find this matter, though expreſly proved, fearing it might be conſtrued no leſs than treaſon, and ſo would only find that ſuch and ſuch of the defendants illicite, factioſe, & ſeditioſe ſe aſſemblaverunt, & illicite, factioſe & ſeditioſe conſultaverunt, & conſpiraverunt ad depauperand' firmarios Dom' Regis exciſæ prædict', prout prædict' attornat' gen' Dom' Regis, &c. & quoad totam aliam materiam in informatione contentiam, find them Not guilty, and find J. S. Not guilty of the whole. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that here is no offence found. The court unanimouſly concurred, that judgment ought to be given for the King, though as to the offence found there was ſome variety of opinion: Twiſden held, that vi et armis was not neceſſary, and that they were found guilty of an unlawful aſſembly, and in that the Ld. Ch. Juſt. Hyde concurred; as alſo that the intention of defrauding and depriving the King of his ſaid rent is implicitly found within the modo et forma prout, &c. for ſo ſhall the machinantes, &c. be applied. Twiſden and Keeling concurred, that for a conſpiracy alone, without any proſecution, information lay; and they all agreed, that the King's revenue being concerned did highly aggravate the offence; 26 Aſſ. 44. was cited to prove, that whatever concerns the King's revenue is public; and for this reaſon (2 H. 4. 7. pl 26.) it is determined, that a monk by being farmer is made capable to ſue. The Lord Ch. Juſt. cited old Magna Charta, where there is an article, to enquire of ſuch as ſeek to diminiſh the King's revenue of wards and marriages, which (ſays the Ch. Juſt.) ſhews it is a public treaſure. So judgment was given for the King. 1 Lev. 125. 1 Sid. 174. 1 Keb. 650, 665, 675, 682. Hil. 15 & 16 Car. 2. *in B. R. So no rule was made. Stran. 1130. Eaſt. 13 Geo. 2. Rex v. Ford.

The court was moved for an information againſt one Groſvenor, for refuſing to ſerve the office of one of the ſheriffs of London.—It appearing that he was a proteſtant Diſſenter, the court ſaid, it was a doubtful queſtion, and a matter of very great conſequence; and they would not interpoſe to have that matter tried in a criminal way, when the city had another, and that a civil way of obliging perſons to ſerve that office. Vide Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. 18.

N. B. The doctrine is now ſettled, in the caſe of the Chamberlain of London and Allen Evans, Eſq. on error, in the Houſe of Lords, upon the opinion of the judges, eleven to one, that a diſſenter is not liable to ſerve.

An information may be brought for offences and miſdemeanors by the Common law; as for batteries, conſpiracies, ſeducing perſons, nuſances, contempts, libelling, ſeditious words, abuſing the King's commiſſion to the oppreſſion of the ſubject, &c. And in many caſes by ſtatute, wherein the offender is liable to a fine, or other penalty. Finch 340. Show. 109. For words ſpoken of a deceaſed King, which advance pernicious doctrine and evil tenets, and have an influence on the preſent government, &c. an information lies, on which the offender may be fined, and alſo corporally puniſhed. 2 Ld. Raym. 879. If the marſhal of B. R. miſdemeans himſelf in his office, he who is prejudiced by it may prefer an information againſt him in that court, where he ſhall be fined and ordered to make ſatisfaction. Hil. 23 Car. B. R.

If a perſon exhibits his information only for vexation, the defendant may bring information againſt the informer, upon the Stat. 18 Eliz. c. 5. 2 Bulſt. 18.

III. Of filing an information.

It ſeems to be an eſtabliſhed practice, not to admit the filing of an information, (except thoſe exhibited in the name of his Majeſty's Attorney General) without firſt making a rule on the perſons complained of, to ſhew cauſe to the contrary; which rule is never granted but upon motion made in open court, and grounded upon affidavit of ſome miſdemeanor, which, if true, doth either for its enormity or dangerous tendency, or other ſuch like circumſtances, ſeem proper for the moſt public proſecution; and if the perſon, on whom ſuch rule is made, having been perſonally ſerved with it, do not, at the day given him for that purpoſe, give the court good ſatisfaction by affidavit, that there is no reaſonable cauſe for the proſecution, the court generally grants the information; and ſometimes, upon ſpecial circumſtances, will grant it againſt thoſe who cannot be perſonally ſerved with ſuch rule; as if they purpoſely abſent themſelves, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 262. But qu. if in ſuch caſe the proſecutor ſhould not, on affidavit of the fact of abſence, move the court for a rule that leaving the ſame at the laſt place of abode ſhould be deemed good ſervice?

But if he ſhew good cauſe to the contrary, as that he has been indicted for the ſame cauſe, and acquitted, or that the intent is to try a civil right, which has not been yet determined, or that the complaint is trifling, or vexatious, &c. or where the motion is for an information in the nature of a quo warranto, if he can ſhew that his right hath been already determined on a mandamus, or that it hath been acquieſced in many years, or that it depends upon the right of his voters, which hath not been tried. or that it doth not concern the public, but is wholly of a private nature, the court will not grant the information without ſome particular circumſtances, the judgment whereof lies in diſcretion. Ibid.

IV. How it is to be laid, the proceedings, and proviſions by Statute law, &c.

Regularly, the ſame certainty that is required in an indictment, is required in an information; but it has been held not to be neceſſary, to repeat the words dat cur' hic intelligi & informari in the beginning of every diſtinct clauſe, if the want of them may be ſupplied by a natural, and eaſy conſtruction. See tit. Indictment. 1 Salk. 375. Raym. 34. 2 Hawk. P. C. 261.

In an information againſt Roberts the ferryman over the river Mercy, which parts Angleſey from Carnarvonſhire in Wales, it was laid generally, viz. That this was an antient ferry time out of mind, and that 1 d. was the uſual rate for the paſſage of a man and horſe, 7 d. for 20 cattle, 2 d. for 20 ſheep, &c. that Roberts being the common ferryman, between the 7th Septembris Anno 2. and the day of exhibiting this information, injuſte, oppreſſive, & deceptive cepit & extorſit de diverſis ligeis & ſubditis Domini Regis ignotis to the Attorney General, paſſing that way, diverſas denariorum ſummas exceden' antiquam ratam & pretium pro paſſagio & tranſportatione ſuis & averiorum ſuorum videlicet, pro paſſagio & tranſportatione cujuſlibet perſonæ cum equo ſuo 2 d. & pro quibuſlibet 20 catallis 2 s. & ſic ſecund' ratam prædict' pro majori vel minori numero averiorum, &c. The defendant was found guilty, and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the information was too general and uncertain, becauſe it did not alledge that any particular perſon, or any certain number of cattle, were ferried over within the time laid in the information; neither did it mention any particular perſon from whom the extorted rates were taken, which it ought to do, that the ſingle offence might certainly appear to the court; after great deliberation, the whole court was of that opinion; and per Holt Chief Juſtice, in every ſuch information a ſingle offence ought to be laid and aſcertained, becauſe every extortion from every particular perſon is a ſeparate and diſtinct offence; therefore they ought not to be accumulated under a general charge, as in this caſe, becauſe each offence requires a ſeparate and diſtinct puniſhment according to the quantity of the offence; and it is not poſſible for the court to proportion the fine or other puniſhment, unleſs it is ſingly and certainly laid. Carth. 226. The King. v. Roberts.

An information upon a penal ſtatute muſt be ſued in one of the ſuperior courts, and cannot be brought in any inferior court, becauſe the King's Attorney cannot be there to acknowledge or deny, as he can in a ſuperior court. Cro. Jac, 538. All informations on penal ſtatutes, brought by an informer, where a ſum certain is given to the proſecutor, muſt be brought in the proper county where the offence was committed; and within a year after the ſame t but a party grieved, who is not a common informer, is not obliged to bring his information in the proper county, but may inform in what county he pleaſes. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 3. Cro. Eliz. 645. And the King may exhibit an information in two, or three years, and be good; tho' it will be bad in an informer. Cro. Jac. 366.

Where an information is given by ſtatute, to be proſecuted at the aſſizes, &c the informer, on filing his information, muſt make oath before a judge, that the offence laid in the information was not committed in any other county than that mentioned in the information; and that he believes the offence was committed within a year next before the filing of the information. 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. And when an information is ordered to be filed, upon an affidavit made, the court will not ſuffer the proſecutor to put any more or other matter into the information than what only is in his affidavit. Mich. 9 W. 3. B. R.

It has been reſolved, that the Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. reſtrains the juriſdiction of B. R. in actions of debt by common informers, and that they cannot bring debt upon the ſtatute in that court, unleſs the cauſe of action ariſe in the county where the King's Bench ſits; but muſt in other caſes proſecute by information before juſtices of aſſiſe, &c. as the ſtatute directs. 1 Salk. 373. Sed qu. as to this doctrine, as the juriſdiction of the King's Bench extends over the greateſt part of the kingdom in all caſes where an action may be brought?

Offences created ſince the ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. cap. 4. are not within that ſtatute, to be proſecuted in the county where the fact was done; ſo that informations on ſubſequent penal ſtatutes are not reſtrained thereby. Ibid.

By the Stat. 18 Eliz. cap. 5. Informers are to exhibit their ſuits in proper perſon, by way of information, or original action; they are not to compound with the defendant without the conſent of the court, on pain of 10 l. penalty, pillory, &c. And if they diſcontinue, or are nonſuit, the court ſhall immediately aſſign coſts to the defendant: but this ſtatute, and the 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. do not extend to informations of officers, nor on the ſtatutes of maintenance, champerty, concerning concealments of cuſtoms, &c. and it extendeth not to parties grieved, and thoſe to whom any forfeiture is given in certain. Ibid.

An informer upon a popular ſtatute ſhall never have coſts, if not given by ſtatute; but the party grieved in action on the ſtatute ſhall, where a certain penalty is given. 2 Hawk. 273. Informations by the Attorney General remain as they were at Common law, notwithſtanding the ſtatute 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. And when the Attorney General exhibits an information, he does it ex officio; but when the Clerk of the Crown does it, it is generally by order of court. 5 Mod. 464. Where a penalty is divided by ſtatute between the King and the informer, if the King prefers his information before the informer, he ſhall have the whole penalty; but if the informer prefers his information firſt, the King cannot hinder him from his proportion. 2 Lill. Abr. 60 If an informer dies, the Attorney General may proceed in the information for the King: nonſuit of an informer, is no bar againſt the King; and if the King's Attorney enter a nolle proſequi, it is not any bar quoad the informer. Cro. El. 583. 1 Leon. 119. If two informations are had on the ſame day, they mutually abate one another; becauſe there is no priority to attach the right of the ſuit in one informer, more than in the other. Hob. 138.

If an information contain ſeveral offences againſt a ſtatute, and be well laid as to ſome of them, but defective as to the reſt, the informer may have judgment for ſuch as are well laid. Ibid. 266. After a plea pleaded to an information for any crime, the defendant by favour of the court may appear by attorney; alſo the court may diſpenſe with the perſonal appearance before plea pleaded, except in ſuch caſes where a perſonal appearance is required by ſome ſtatute: and it is the ſame of indictments for crimes under the degree of capital. Ibid. 273.

If a defendant plead nil debet to an information qui tam, &c. it is ſafeſt to ſay he owes nothing to the informer, nor the King, which is an anſwer to the whole. On breach of a ſtatute alledged from a matter in pais, the defendant may plead that he owes nothing, or Not guilty, &c. And if there be more than one defendant, they ought to plead ſeverally, and not jointly, Not guilty: but if it be alledged from a matter of record, the record not being triable by the country, but by itſelf, ſuch plea is not good. 2 Hawk. 276. Bro. Iſſues 23.

A replication to an information on a ſpecial plea in the courts at Weſtminſter, is to be made by the Attorney General, and before Juſtices of Aſſiſe, by the Clerk of the Aſſiſe: tho' the replication to a general iſſue in an information qui tam in the courts at Weſtminſter, may be made in the name of the Attorney General only; and in actions qui tam, moſt of the precedents are, that the replication is to be made by the plaintiff. 2 Hawk. 277.

A demurrer may be to an information qui tam, without the Attorney General. Ibid. Informations are not quaſhed for inſufficiency, like indictments; but the defendant muſt demur to them. Paſ. 1650. 2 Lill. 59. Fines aſſeſſed in court by judgment on an information, cannot afterwards be qualified or mitigated. Cro. Car. 251. The Stat. 9 Ann. c. 20. makes the proceedings upon informations in the nature of a quo warranto more ſpeedy and effectual. Vide the Statute, &c.

By the 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 18. The Clerk of the Crown in the court of King's Bench ſhall not, without expreſs order to be given by the court in open court, exhibit, receive, or file any information for any of the cauſes ſtated, or iſſue out any proceſs thereupon, before he ſhall have taken or ſhall have delivered to him a recognizance from the perſon or perſons procuring ſuch information to be exhibited, with the place of his, her, or their abode, title or profeſſion, to be entered, to the perſon or perſons againſt whom ſuch information is exhibited, in the penalty of twenty pounds, that he, ſhe, or they will effectually proſecute, &c. and if the proſecutor of ſuch information ſhall not, at his own coſts, within one year after iſſue joined therein, procure the ſame to be tried, or if upon ſuch trial a verdict paſs for the defendant, or in caſe the informer procure a nolle proſequi to be entered, then, in any of the ſaid caſes, the court of King's Bench is authoriſed to award the defendant coſts, unleſs the judge, before whom ſuch information ſhall be tried, ſhall at the trial in open court certify upon record, that there was reaſonable cauſe for exhibiting ſuch information; and in caſe the informer ſhall not, within three months after the coſts taxed, and demand made thereof, pay to the defendant the coſts, then the defendant ſhall have the benefit of the recognizance.

" Provided, That nothing in that act ſhall extend or be conſtrued to extend to any other information than ſuch as ſhall be exhibited in the name of their Majeſties coroner, or attorney, in the court of King's Bench for the time being, commonly called the Maſter of the Crown-office.

In the conſtruction hereof it hath been holden,

1. That if proceſs be iſſued on ſuch information before ſuch recognizance is given as the ſtatute directs, the ſame may be ſet aſide and diſcharged on motion. 2 Hawk. P. C. 263.

2. That this ſtatute extends to all informations, except thoſe exhibited in the name of his Majeſty's Attorney General, ſo that an information in nature of a quo warranto, tho' a proper remedy to try a right, in reſpect of which it may not in ſtrictneſs come within the words treſpaſſes, &c. yet being alſo intended to puniſh a miſdemeanor, and alſo as the proceedings therein may be as vexatious as in any other, the ſame is within the purview of the ſtatute, which, being a remedial law, ſhall receive as large a conſtruction as the words will bear. Carth. 503. The King v. The Town of Hertford. 1 Salk. 376. S. C. adjudged.

3. That no coſts can be had on this ſtatute on an acquittal by a trial at bar, not only becauſe the clauſe that gives coſts, unleſs the judge certify a reaſonable cauſe, ſeems only to have a view to trials at niſi prius, but alſo becauſe a cauſe, which is of ſuch conſequence as to be thought proper for a trial at bar, cannot well be thought within the purview of the ſtatute, which was chiefly deſigned againſt trifling and vexatious proſecutions. 2 Hawk. P. C. 263.

4. That if there be ſeveral defendants, and ſome of them acquitted, and others convicted, none of them can have coſts. 1 Salk. 194.

5. That wherever a defendant's caſe is ſuch as authorizes the court to award him coſts, he has a right to them ex debito juſtitiæ; for it ſeems a general rule, that where judges are impowered by ſtatute to do a matter of juſtice, they ought to do it of courſe. 2 Chan. Caſes 191. 2 Hawk. P. C. 263.

Informatus non ſum or more properly, non ſum informatus, Is a formal anſwer made of courſe by an attorney who is authoriſed by his client to let judgment paſs in that form againſt him. It is commonly uſed in warrants of attorney, given for the expreſs purpoſe of confeſſing judgment.

Informer, (informator) Is a perſon who informs againſt, or proſecutes in any of the King's courts, thoſe who offend againſt any law, or penal ſtatute;——no man may be an informer who is diſabled by any miſdemeanor. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 5.

Infortiatum, Is one part of the digeſts of the Civil law; according to Benedict, Abbot of the monaſtery of Peterborough, in the reign of K. Hen. 3.

Infugare, Signifies to put to flight. Leg. Canuti. c. 32.

Infula, Was antiently the garment of a prieſt, like that which we now call a caſſock; ſometimes it is taken for a coif.

Inge. This ſyllable, in the names of places, denotes meadow or paſture; and in the North, meadows are called the inges from the Sax. ing, i. e. pratum.

Ingenium, Is an inſtrument uſed in war, arte & ingenio confectum; from whence it is ſaid we derive the word engine.

Ingenuitas, Uſed for liberty given to a ſervant by mauumiſſion. Leg. H. 1. c. 89.

Ingenuitas Regni, Ingenui, liberi & legales homines; freeholders, and the commonalty of the kingdom; ſometimes this title was given to the barons and lords of the King's council. Eadmer. Hiſt. Nov. fol. 70.

Ingreſs, Egreſs, and Regreſs, Words in leaſes of land, to ſignify a free entry into, going forth of, and returning from ſome part of the lands let; as to get in a crop of corn, &c. after the term expired.

Ingreſſu, Is a writ of entry, whereby a man ſeeks entry into lands or tenements; and lies in many caſes, having many different forms: this writ is alſo called præcipe quod reddat, becauſe theſe are formal words inſerted in all writs of entry. See Entry.

Ingreſſus. The relief which the heir at full age paid to the head lord, for entering upon the fee, or lands fallen by the death or forfeiture of the tenant, &c. was ſometimes called ingreſſus. Blount.

Ingroſſator magni rotuli. See Clerk of the Pipe.

In groſs. Advowſon in groſs, Villain in groſs, &c. ſee Advowſon, Groſs, Villain.

Ingroſſer, (ingroſſator) Is one who buys and ſells any thing by wholeſale; and whoever ſhall get into his hands by buying, contract or promiſe, (other than by demiſe, grant or leaſe of lands,) any corn growing, or other corn or grain; butter, cheeſe, fiſh, or other dead victuals whatſoever, within the realm of England, to the intent to ſell the ſame again, ſhall be reputed an unlawful ingroſſer, by Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14. Such victual only as is neceſſary for the food of man, is within the purview of the ſtatute; therefore apples and fruits are not within the meaning of it. It has been holden that hops are not within the ſtatute. 3 Inſt. 195. H. P. C. 152. Cro. Car. 231.

The buying of corn to make ſtarch of it, and then to ſell it, is not within the intent of the ſtatute; becauſe it is not bought, to be ſold again, in the ſame nature it was bought, but to be firſt altered by a trade or art; by the like reaſon, the buying corn to make meal, and then to ſell it, is ſaid not to be within the act; and buying of barley, with intent to make it into malt, and after that to ſell it, had no need of the exception made for it in the ſtatute. 1 Hawk. P. C. 237. Sed qu. If buying large quantities of corn, to grind into meal, and keeping the corn unground, to enhance the price, tho' it is afterwards ground into flour, keeping the flour, to enhance the price, is not within the ſpirit of the law? Or, if not within the ſtatute, whether it is not an offence, indictable at Common law, it being highly prejudicial to the public? Foreign corn and victuals, except fiſh and ſalt, are exempted, and not within the penalty of the ſtatute 13 Eliz. cap. 25 And licenſed badgers are excepted; as are likewiſe fiſhmongers, butchers, poulterers, &c. buying any thing in their own faculties, otherwiſe than by foreſtalling and ſelling the ſame again at reaſonable prices by retail. 1 Hawk. 240.

Any merchant, whether a ſubject or foreigner, bringing victuals, or other merchandiſe into this kingdom, may ſell the ſame in groſs; but he who buys them of him cannot do ſo, becauſe by ſuch means the price will be enhanced, for the more hands any merchandiſe paſſeth thro' the dearer it muſt grow, as every one will make a profit: and if this were allowable, a rich man might ingroſs into his hands a whole commodity, and then ſell it at what price he ſhould think fit; which is of ſuch bad conſequence, that the bare ingroſſing of a whole commodity, with intent to ſell it at an unreaſonable price, is an offence indictable at Common law, whether any part thereof be ſold by the ingroſſer, or not. 3 Inſt. 196. Cro. Car. 231, 232.

The puniſhment of this offence by ſtatute, is forfeiture of the goods for the firſt offence, and two months impriſonment; double value and ſix months impriſonment for the ſecond offence; and loſs of all goods, and impriſonment at the King's pleaſure, &c. for the third offence. And any informer is intitled to half the forfeiture. See Foreſtaller.

Ingroſſer of Deeds, Is a clerk who writes records or inſtruments of law, in ſkins of parchment.

Ingroſſing of a Fine. The making of the indentures by the Chirographer, for delivery of them to the party to whom the fine is levied. F. N. B. 147.

Inhabitant, Is a dweller or houſholder in any place; as inhabitants in a vill, are the houſholders in the vill. 2 Inſt. 702.

The word (inhabitants) includes tenants in fee-ſimple, tenant for life, years, by elegit, &c. tenant at will, and he who has no intereſt but only his habitation and dwelling. 6 Rep. 60. a. Hill. 4 Jac. C. B. Gateward's caſe. He who hath a houſe in his hands in a town, may be ſaid to be an inhabitant. Tirrel. J. Carth. 119. Mich. 18 Car. 2. C. B. Inhabitants have not capacity to take an inheritance, as in 15 Ed. 4. to have common. 12 Rep. 120. Paſch. 12 Jac. in Dugannon's caſe. See Gateward' caſe, 5 Co. 60.

Inheritance, (hæreditas) is a perpetuity in lands or tenements, to a man and his heirs; and the word inheritance is not only intended where a man hath lands or tenements by diſcent of heritage; but alſo every fee-ſimple, or fee-tail, which a perſon hath by purchaſe, may be ſaid to be an inheritance, becauſe his heirs may inherit it. Lit. ſect. 9. And one may have inheritance by creation; as in caſe of the King's grant of peerage, by letters patent, &c.

Inheritances are Corporeal, or Incorporeal.

Corporeal inheritances relate to houſes, lands, &c. which may be touched or handled; and incorporeal inheritances are rights iſſuing out of, annexed to, or exerciſed with, corporeal inheritances, as advowſons, tithes, annuities, offices, commons, franchiſes, privileges, ſervices, &c. 1 Inſt. 9. 49.

There is alſo ſeveral inheritance, which is where two, or more, hold lands ſeverally; if two men have lands given to them and the heirs of their two bodies, theſe have a joint eſtate during their lives; but their heirs have ſeveral inheritances. Kitch. 155. Without blood none can inherit; therefore he who hath the whole and entire blood, ſhall have an inheritance before him who hath but part of the blood of his anceſtor. 3 Rep. 41. The law of inheritance prefers the firſt child before all others; the male before the female; and of males the firſt born, &c. And as to inheritances, if a man purchaſes land in fee, and dies without iſſue, thoſe of the blood of the father's ſide ſhall inherit, if there be any; and for want of ſuch, the land ſhall go to the heirs of the mother's ſide: But if it come to the ſon by deſcent from the father the heirs of the mother ſhall not inherit it. Plowd. 132. Lit. 4. 12. Goods and chattels cannot be turned into an inheritance. 3 Inſt. 19, 126. See Deſcent and Fee Eſtate. And Black. Com. 2 V. 11, &c.

Inhibition, (inhibitio) Is a writ to forbid a judge from further proceeding in a cauſe depending before him, being in nature of a prohibition. 9 Ed. 2. c. 1. 24 Hen. 8. c. 12. 15 Car. 2. c. 9. F. N. B. 39. An inhibition is moſt commonly iſſued out of a higher Court Chriſtian, to an inferior, upon an appeal: Inhibitions are likewiſe on the viſitations of archbiſhops and biſhops, &c. This inhibition is either hominis or juris; it is Ne viſitationem facias, vel aliquam juriſdictionem eccleſiaſticam vel contentionem voluntariam habeas: Thus when the archbiſhop viſits, he inhibits the biſhop; and when a biſhop viſits, he inhibits the archdeacon; this is to prevent confuſion, and continues till the laſt pariſh is viſited. Now after ſuch inhibition by an archbiſhop, if a lapſe happens, the biſhop cannot inſtitute, becauſe his power is ſuſpended; but the archbiſhop is to do it, &c. 2 Inſt. 601. Paſch. 13 Car. B. R. 3 Salk. 201.

Inhoc, or Inhoke, (from In, within, and hoke a corner or nook) Signifies any corner or part of a common field ploughed up and ſowed with oats, &c. and ſometimes fenced in with a dry hedge, in that year wherein the reſt of the ſame field lies fallow and common. It is called in the North of England an intock, and in Oxfordſhire a hitchin; and no ſuch inhoke is now made without the joint conſent of all the commoners, who in moſt places have their ſhare by lot in the benefit of it, except in ſome manors, where the lord has a ſpecial privilege of ſo doing. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. 297, &c. and his Gloſſary.

Initiate, Tenant by the curteſy. As ſoon as a child is born, the father begins to have a permanent intereſt in the land: and the child could not be in ward of the lord of the fee, during the life of his father: Who by the birth, became one of the pares curtis, and was called, "Tenant by the curteſy initiate." And this eſtate being once veſted in him by birth of the child, is not liable to be determined by the ſubſequent death or coming of age of the infant. Black. Com. 2 V. 127.

Injunction, (injunctio) Is a kind of prohibition granted in divers caſes; it is generally grounded upon an interlocutory order or decree out of the court of Chancery or Exchequer, on the equity ſide, to ſtay proceedings in courts at law; and ſometimes it is iſſued to the Spiritual courts, Weſt. Symb. ſect. 25. It is likewiſe ſometimes uſed to give poſſeſſion to a plaintiff; for want of the defendant's appearance, and may be granted by the Chancery, or Exchequer, to quiet poſſeſſion of lands;

alſo where a privileged perſon of the Chancery is ſued elſewhere; and to ſtay waſte, &c. injunction lies. If a defendant, by his anſwer in Chancery, ſwears a certain ſum of money is due to him, the court will often not grant an injunction, unleſs the money be brought into court.

Of obtaining an injunction.

An injunction is obtained by order, either upon matter confeſſed, or appearing of record, or by deed, writing, or other evidence ſhewn in court, from whence there is a probability that the party ought to be diſcharged in equity; ſometimes it is granted before anſwer, when it is uſually only until anſwer, and further order, &c.

Of diſſolving an injunction.

A delay of proceedings for a conſiderable time, is good cauſe for ſetting aſide and diſſolving an injunction to ſtay proceedings at law; but an injunction may be revived on cauſe ſhewn, and ſometimes the court will revive it, tho' diſſolved, where the plaintiff's caſe is hard, or equity is evidently on his ſide. Pract. Sol. 124, 125.

Of ſhewing cauſe why an injunction ſhould iſſue.

If an injunction be for ſtaying of waſte, there muſt be affidavit made of waſte committed in houſes, lands, &c. belonging to the complainant: And if it be to ſtay ſuits in other courts, it is granted on ſuggeſting ſome matter, by reaſon of which the complainant is not able to make his defence in the other court, as for want of witneſſes, &c. or, for that he is proſecuted at law, for what in equity, he ought not to pay; or that the other court acts erroneouſly, denies him ſome juſt advantage, and that, if the rigour of the law takes place, it is againſt equity and good conſcience, &c. Ibid.

Conſequence of proceeding at law after injunction granted.

If an attorney proceeds at law, after he is ſerved with an injunction to ſtay proceedings, on affidavit made thereof, interrogatories are to be exhibited againſt him, to which he muſt anſwer on oath; and if it appears that he was duly ſerved with the injunction, and hath proceeded afterwards contrary thereto, the court of Chancery will commit the attorney to the Fleet for the contempt. 2 Lill. Abr. 64. But if an injunction be granted by the court of Chancery in a criminal matter, the court of B. R. may break it, and protect any that proceed in contempt of it. Mich. Ann. Mod. Caſ. 16.

Of the proceeding to judgment with leave and of the form of an injunction.

If a cauſe at law be at iſſue, the injunction may give leave to go to trial, and ſtay execution, &c. The writ of injunction is directed to the party proceeding, ac omnibus & ſingulis Conſiliar. Attorn. Solicitat' ſuis quibuſcunque, &c. and concludes, injungen' præcipimus quod ab omni ulteriori proſecutione quacunque ad communem legem de. pro vel concernen. aliquib. materiis in querimon. content. &c. deſiſtatis & quilibet veſtrum deſiſtat, ſubpœn. &c.

Injury, (Injuria) Is a wrong or damage to a man's perſon or goods. The law puniſheth injuries; and ſo abhors them, that it grants writs of anticipation for their prevention, in caſes of combinations and confederacy, Stud. Comp. 93. But the law will ſuffer a private injury rather than a public evil; and the act of God, or of the law, doth injury to none. 4 Rep. 124. Co. Rep. 148.

Inlagare, To reſtore to the benefit of the law —— Edgarus puer veniens ad eum a Scotia, & Rex eum inlagavit & omnes homines ſuos. Annal. Waverl. ſub anno 1074.

Inlagation, (Inlagatio, from the Sax. In lagiam, i. e. Inlagare) Signifies a reſtitution of one outlawed to the protection of the law, and benefit of a ſubject. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 14. Leg. Canut. par. 1. c. 2.

Inlagh, (Inlagatus, vel homo ſub lege) Is he who is of ſome frank-pledge, and not outlawed. It ſeems to be the contrary to Utlagh. Bract. tract. 2. lib. 3. c. 11.

Inland, Is ſaid to be terra dominicalis, pars manerii dominica, terra interior vel incluſa; for that which was let to tenants was called Outland. In an ancient will there are theſe words; To Wulſee I give the inland or demeans, and to Elſey the utlands or tenancy. Teſtam. Britherico. This word was in great uſe among the Saxons, and often occurs in Domeſday.

Inland bills. See Bills of Exchange.

Inland Trade, A trade wholly managed at home, in one country. Merc. Dict. It is properly uſed in contradiſtinction to commerce, and ſo is the word trade, tho' the words trade and commerce are frequently confounded, eſpecially with reſpect to the former being uſed for the latter.

We conceive this the proper definition, and that the foreign is with propriety called Commerce, at leaſt that which we carry on with other ſtates.

Inlantal, Inlantale, Demeſne or inland, to which was oppoſed delantal, land tenanted or outlawed. Cowell.

Inleaſed, From the French enlaſs, intangled or inſnared; the word we may read in the Champion's oath. Co. Inſt. 2 par. fol 247.

Inlegiare. When a delinquent has ſatisfied the law, and is again rectus in curia, he is ſaid ſe inlegiare. *Sunt alia quædam placita Chriſtianitatis in quibus Rex partem habet hoc modo. Inmates, Are thoſe perſons who are admitted to dwell with, and in the houſe of another, and not able to maintain themſelves. Kitch. 45. Theſe inmates are generally idle perſons harboured in cottages; wherein it hath been common for ſeveral families to inhabit, by which the poor of pariſhes have been increaſed; but ſuffering it is an offence by ſtatute, liable to a forfeiture of 10*s.* a month, inquirable of in the court leet, &c. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 7. If one have a houſe wherein he dwells, and lets part of it, ſo that there are ſeveral doors into the ſtreet; it is as two houſes, and the under-tenant ſhall not be accounted an inmate: But it is otherwiſe if there be but one outer door for both families. 2 Co. Inſt. 378. A man keeps his daughter that is married, and her huſband, &c. by covenant, and they have ſome rooms in his houſe, they are not inmates; tho' if they live in one cottage, and part the houſe between them, and diet themſelves ſeverally, they will be inmates within the ſtatute. Kitch. 45. If a perſon take another to table with him; or let certain rooms to one to dwell in, if he be of ability, and not poor, he is no inmate. Ibid.

Innings, Lands recovered from the ſea in Romney Marſh, by draining: Ancient records mention the innings of Archbiſhop Becket, Boniface, and others; and at this day there is Elderton's Innings, &c. Where they are rendered profitable and termed Gainage lands. Vide Law of Sewers 31.

Innoteſcimus. This word and videmus are all one; it ſignifies letters patent, ſo called, which are always of a charter of feoffment, or ſome other inſtrument, not of record, concluding innoteſcimus per præſentes, &c.

Innovations, Are thought dangerous by our laws; and the ancient judges of the law have ever ſuppreſſed them, leſt the certainty of the Common law ſhould be diſturbed. Co. Lit. 379. In the reign of King Ed. 3. the judges ſaid, we will not change the law, which always hath been uſed; and in the time of King Hen. 4. they declared it would be better that it ſhould be turned to a default, than that the law ſhould be changed, or any INNOVATION made. Ibid. 303.

Many modern determinations have done honour to the judges of the preſent age, and though by ſome they may, for want of due conſideration, be thought innovations, they certainly are not, but are only a more liberal conſtruction of our Common law, which will give relief, if properly conſtrued, in moſt caſes.

Innoxiare, To purge one of a fault, and make him innocent. Leg. Ethelred, c. 10.

Inns and Innkeepers. Common inns are inſtituted for paſſengers; for the proper Latin word is diverſorium, becauſe he who lodgeth there is quaſi divertens ſe a via; therefore if a neighbour who is not a traveller, as a friend at the requeſt of the inn-keeper lodge them, and his goods are ſtolen, he ſhall not have an action, for the words of the writ are, Hoſpitandos homines per partes, ubi hujuſmodi hoſpitia exiſtunt tranſeuntes & in eiſdem hoſpitantes. Co. 8 Rep. Cayle's caſe. Neither ſhall the inn-keeper anſwer for any thing that is out of his inn, but only for things as are infra hoſpitium; the words are Eorum bona & catalla infra hoſpitia illa exiſtentia. Cowell.

Inns were inſtituted for lodging and relief for travellers; and at Common law any man might erect and keep an inn, or alehouſe, to receive travellers, but now they are to be licenſed and regulated by ſtatute, by juſtices of peace, who are to take recognizances for keeping good orders, &c. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 25.

Conduct of inn-keepers, and where inns ſhould not be ſet up.

If the keeper of an inn harbours thieves, or perſons of ſcandalous reputation, or ſuffers frequent diſorders in his houſe; or ſets up a new inn, in a place where there is no manner of need of one, to the hindrance of other ancient and well governed inns, or keep it in a ſituation wholly unfit for ſuch a purpoſe, he may by the Common law be indicted and fined. H. P. C. 146. Dalt. 33, 34.

Selling of proviſions, &c.

Inn-keepers not ſelling their hay, oats, beans, &c. and all kinds of victuals for man and beaſt, at reaſonable prices, having reſpect to the price ſold in the markets adjoining, without taking any thing for litter, they ſhall be fined for the firſt offence, and for the ſecond be impriſoned for a month; and for the third ſtand on the pillory, &c. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 21. Rates and prices may be ſet on all the commodities ſold by inn-keepers: and if they extort any unreaſonable rates, they may be indicted. 2 Cro. 609. Carthew 150.

Inn-keeper bound to receive gueſts, &c.

If one who keeps a common inn, refuſe to receive a traveller as gueſt into his houſe, or to find him victuals, or lodging, upon his tendering a reaſonable price for the ſame; the inn-keeper is liable to render damages, in an action at the ſuit of the party grieved, and may alſo be indicted and fined at the ſuit of the King: It is ſaid, he may be compelled by the conſtable of the town, to receive, and entertain ſuch a perſon as his gueſt; and that it is not material whether he have any ſign before his door or not, if he make it his common buſineſs to entertain travellers. 1 Hawk. P. C. 225.

Innkeeper's remedy againſt his gueſts.

Action on the caſe on an implied aſſumpſit will lie againſt the gueſts for things had, where the inn-keepor is obliged by law to furniſh him with meat, drink, &c. And when a gueſt calls for any thing at an inn the innkeeper may juſtify detaining a horſe, or other thing, till he is paid his juſt reckoning. Dyer 30. By the cuſtom of the realm, if a man lies in an inn one night, the inn-keeper may detain his horſe until he is paid for the expences; but if he gives the party credit for that time, and lets him depart without payment, he hath waived the benefit of the cuſtom, and muſt rely on his other agreement. Trin. 9 Geo. 1. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 172. i. e. As to that time, having now given credit to the perſon. A perſon brings his horſe to an inn, and leaves him in the ſtable there; the inn-keeper may keep him till the owner pay for the keeping: And if he eat out as much as he is worth, the maſter of the inn, after a reaſonable appraiſement, may ſell the horſe and pay himſelf. Yelv. 66. But if one bring ſeveral horſes to an inn. and afterwards takes them all away, but one; the inn-keeper may not ſell this horſe for payment of the debt for the others, but every horſe is to be ſold to ſatisfy what is due for his own meat. 1 Bulſt. 207, 217.

If an inn-keeper receives a ſtage coach, and from time to time ſuffers the coach and horſes to depart without payment, he gives credit to the owners, and cannot afterwards detain the coach and horſes for what was formerly due.

Remedy for the gueſt againſt the inn-keeper, and where he ſhall or ſhall not be liable.

If any theft be committed on a gueſt that lodgeth in an inn, by the ſervants of the inn, or by any other perſons, (not the gueſt's ſervant or companion) the inn-keeper is anſwerable in action on the caſe: But if the gueſt be not a traveller, but one of the ſame town, the maſter of the inn is not chargeable for his ſervant's theft; and if a man is robbed in a private tavern, the maſter is not chargeable. 8 Rep 32, 33. In this action, the inn-keeper ſhall not anſwer for any thing that is out of his inn, but only for ſuch things as are infra hoſpitium, the words of the writ being eorum bona & catalla infra hoſpitia illa exiſtentia, &c. But if the inn-keeper put the gueſt's horſe to graſs, without orders, and the horſe is ſtolen, he ſhall make it good. 8 Rep. 34. The inn-keeper ſhall not be charged, unleſs there ſhall be ſome default in him or his ſervant; for, if he that comes with the gueſt, or who deſires to lodge with him, ſteal his goods, the hoſt is not chargeable: Though if an inn keeper appoint one to lie with another, he ſhall anſwer for him. 2 Shep. Abr. 334. Although the gueſt deliver not his goods to the inn-keeper to keep, &c. if they be ſtolen, he ſhall be charged: Not where the hoſtler requires his gueſt to put them in ſuch a chamber under lock and key; if he ſuffers them to be in an outward court, &c. Ibid.

Of tipling, &c.

Any perſon found tipling in an inn, is adjudged within the ſtatutes againſt drunkenneſs. 21 Jac. 1. c. 7. 1 Car. 1. c. 14. And inn-keepers or alehouſe-keepers, permitting tipling in their houſes, are liable to the penalty of 10*s.* &c. by ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. c. 9. 1 Car. 1. c. 14. See Action on the Caſe and Gueſt. Alſo 3 New Abr. and 14 Vin. Abr. tit. Inns and Inn-keepers.

Inns of Court, (Hoſpitia Curiæ) Are ſo called, becauſe the ſtudents therein, do not only ſtudy the law to enable them to practice in the Courts in Weſtminſter, but alſo purſue ſuch other ſtudies, as may render them better qualified to ſerve the King in his court. Forteſcue, c. 49. Of theſe (ſays Sir Edward Coke) there are four well known, viz. The Inner Temple, Middle Temple, Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn; which, with the two Serjeant's Inns, and eight Inns of Chancery, viz. Clifford's Inn, Symond's Inn, Clement's Inn, Lyon's Inn, Furnival's Inn, Staple's Inn, Bernard's Inn, and Thavie's Inn, (to which is ſince added New Inn) make the moſt famous univerſity for profeſſion of the law, or of any one human ſcience in the world.

Our Inns of Court, or ſocieties of the law, which are famed for their production of learned men, are governed by maſters, principals, benchers, ſtewards, and other proper officers; and the chief of them have chapels for divine ſervice, and all of them public halls for exerciſes, readings and arguments, which the ſtudents are obliged to perform and attend for a competent number of years, before admitted to ſpeak at the bar, &c. Theſe ſocieties or colleges, nevertheleſs, are no corporation, nor have any judicial power over their members, but have certain orders among themſelves, which, by conſent, have the force of laws; for light offences, perſons are only excommoned, or put out of Commons; for greater, they loſe their chambers, and are expelled; and when expelled out of one ſociety, ſhall never be received by any of the others. All the leſſer Inns of Chancery, are moſtly inhabited by attornies, ſolicitors, and clerks, and belong to ſome or other of the principal Inns of Court, who have been uſed to ſend yearly ſome of their barriſters to read to them. Forteſcue.

Innuendo, (from innuo, to nod or beckon with the head to one) Is a word uſed in declarations, and law pleadings, to aſcertain a perſon or thing which was named before; as to ſay he (innuendo the plaintiff) did ſo and ſo, when there was mention before of another perſon. 4 Rep. 17. An innuendo is in effect no more than a prædict', and cannot make that certain, which was uncertain before; and the law will not allow words to be enlarged by an innuendo, ſo as to ſupport an action on the caſe for ſpeaking of them. Hob. 2, 6, 45. 5 Mod. 345. An innuendo may not enlarge the ſenſe of words, nor make ſupply, or alter the caſe where the words are defective. Hut. Rep. 44. In ſlander, both the perſon and ſcandalous words ought to be certain, and not want an innuendo to make them out: If a plaintiff declares that the defendant ſaid theſe words, Thou art a thief, and ſtoleſt a mare, &c. (innuendo the plaintiff) without an averment that the words were ſpoken eidem querenti, this is not good; becauſe it doth not certainly appear of whom they were ſpoken, and the innuendo doth not help it. Paſch. 11 Car. B. R. 1 Danv. Abr. 158. The uſual method of declaring is, if the words were ſpoken to the plaintiff, the defendant ſaid the words to, of, and concerning the plaintiff. If ſaid to a third perſon, the word to, is omitted. A man ſhall not be puniſhed for perjury, by the help of an innuendo. 5 Mod. 344. And an innuendo will not make an action for a libel good; if the matter precedent imports not ſcandal, &c. to the damage of the party. Mich. 5 Ann. Where action lies without any innuendo, an innuendo ſhall be repugnant and void. 1 Danv. 158.

Inoperatio, Is one of the legal excuſes to exempt a man from appearing in court: Cauſæ quæ ad excuſationem ſufficiunt, &c. hoc eſt, vel infirmitatis, vel domini neceſſitatis, vel contramandationis, vel regis implacitationis, vel inoperationis cauſa, viz. on the days in which all pleadings are to ceaſe, or in diebus non juridicis. Leg. H. 1. c. 61.

Inordinatus, Was anciently taken for one who died inteſtate; it is mentioned in Mat. Weſtm. 1246.

Inpeny and Outpeny, Money paid by the cuſtom of ſome manors, on the alienation of tenants, &c.——Inpeny and Outpeny conſuetudo talis eſt in villa de Eaſt Radham, de omnibus terris quæ infra burgagium tenentur, viz. Quod ipſe, qui vendiderit vel dederit dictam tenuram alicui dabit pro exitu ſuo de eadem tenurâ unum denarium, & ſimile pro ingreſſu alterius. & ſi prædicti denarii à retio fuerint, ballivus domini diſtringet pro eiſdem denariis in eadem tenura. Regiſt. Inpriſſi, Adherents or accomplices.——Sciatis quod recepimus in gratiam noſtram Gilbertum Mareſchallam, & omnes qui fuerunt impriſii Richardi Mareſchalli.——Clauſ. 18 H. 3. in Brady Hiſt. Engl. Append. p. 180.

Inqueſt, (inquiſitio) Is an inquiſition of jurors, in cauſes civil and criminal, on proof made of the fact on either ſide, when it is referred to their trial, being impanelled by the ſheriff for that purpoſe; and as they bring in their verdict, judgment paſſeth. Staundf. P. C. lib. 3. c. 12.

There is an inqueſt of office, as well on an iſſue or the miſe of the party, &c. as in caſes of appeals of robbery, the freſh ſuit to entitle reſtitution of goods, is to be enquired of by inqueſt of office, which inqueſt is chiefly for the ſatisfaction of the conſcience of the judges. 2 Hawk. P. C. 169.

Whether a criminal be a lunatick, or not, ſhall be tried by an inqueſt of office, returned by the ſheriff of the county; and if it be found by the jury that he only feigns himſelf lunatick, and he refuſes to plead, he ſhall be dealt with as one ſtanding mute. H. P. C. 226. 1 And. 107. Where a perſon ſtands mute without making any anſwer, the court may take an inqueſt of office, by the oath of any twelve perſons preſent, if he do ſo out of malice, &c. This ſignifies from a perverſe or obſtinate diſpoſition. But after the iſſue is joined, when the jury are in court, if there be any need for ſuch inquiry, it ſhall be made by them, and not by an inqueſt of office. 2 Hawk. P. C. 327. If a perſon attainted of felony eſcape, and being retaken, denies he is the ſame man, inqueſt is to be made of it by a jury before he is executed. Ibid. 463. See Burrow's Reports, 1 V. 18, 19. Inquiſition on an untimely death, may be taken by juſtices of gaol-delivery, oyer and terminer, or of the peace; if omitted by the coroner. But it muſt be done publicly and openly, otherwiſe it ſhall be quaſhed. By Magna Charta, nothing is to be taken for inqueſt of life or member. 9 H. 3. c. 26.

Inquirendo. An authority given in general to ſome perſon, or perſons, to enquire into ſomething for the King's advantage. Reg. 72.

Inquiſition. A manner of proceeding by way of ſearch or examination, and uſed in the King's behalf in temporal cauſes and proceſs, in which ſenſe it is confounded with office. Staundf. Prærog. 51. This inquiſition is upon an outlawry found: in caſes of treaſon and felony committed; upon a felo de ſe, &c. to entitle the King to forfeitures of lands and goods: And there is no ſuch nicety required in an inquiſition as in pleading; becauſe an inquiſition is only to inform the court how proceſs ſhall iſſue for the King, whoſe title accrues by the attainder, and not by the inquiſition; yet, in the caſes of the King and a common perſon, inquiſitions have been held void for incertainty. Lane 39. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1008.

It is ſaid, there are two ſorts of inquiſitions, one to inform the King, the other to veſt an intereſt in him; the one need not be certain, but the other muſt; and where an inquiſition finds ſome parts well, and nothing as to others, it may be helped by melius inquirendum. 2 Salk. 469.

There is alſo a judicial writ Ad inquirendum, to inquire by a jury into any thing touching a cauſe depending in court; and inquiſition is had upon extents of land, writs of elegit, where judgment is had by default, and damages and coſts are recovered, &c. Finch 484. 2 Lil. Abr. 65.

Inquiſition, Ex officio mero, Is one way of proceeding in Eccleſiaſtical Courts. Wood's Inſt. 596. And formerly the oath ex officio was a ſort of inquiſition.

Inquiſitors, (inquiſitores) Are ſheriffs, coroners ſuper viſum corporis, or the like, who have power to inquire in certain caſes; and by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. Inquirors or inquiſitors are included under the name of Miniſtri. 2 Inſt. 211.

Inrollment, (Irrotulatio) Is the regiſtring or entring in the rolls of the Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas or Exchequer, or by the clerk of the peace in the records of the quarter-ſeſſions, of any lawful act; as a ſtatute or recognizance acknowledged, a deed of bargain and ſale of lands, &c.

An inrollment of a deed, may be either by the Common law, or according to the ſtatute: And inrollment of deeds ought to be made in parchment, and recorded in court, for perpetuity's ſake. Trin. 23 Car. Paſch. 24 Car. 1. B. R. But the inrolling a deed doth not make it a record, though it thereby becomes a deed recorded; for there is a difference between matter of record, and a thing recorded to be kept in memory; a record being the entry in parchment of judicial matters controverted in a court of record, and whereof the court takes notice; whereas an inrollment of a deed is a private act of the parties concerned, of which the court takes no cogniſance at the time of doing it, although the court permits it. Mich. 21 Car. 1. 2 Lil. Abr. 69.

Every deed, before it is inrolled, is to be acknowledged to be the deed of the party before a maſter of the Court of Chancery, or a judge of the court, wherein inrolled; which is the officer's warrant for inrolling of the ſame: And the inrollment of a deed, if it be acknowledged by the grantor, will be good proof of the deed itſelf upon a trial. Ibid. A deed may be inrolled without the examination of the party himſelf; for it is ſufficient if oath is made of the execution. If two are parties, and the deed is acknowledged by one, the other is bound by it: And if a man lives in New York, &c. and would paſs land in England, a nominal perſon may be joined with him in the deed who may acknowledge it here, and it will be binding. 1 Salk. 389.

If the party dies before it is inrolled, it may be inrolled afterwards: And inrollments of deeds operate by virtue of the ſtatute of inrollments; but if livery and ſeiſin, &c. be had before the inrolling, it prevents the operation of the inrollment, and the party ſhall be in by that, as the more worthy ceremony to paſs eſtates. 1 Leon. 5. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1010. Although inrollment, or matter of record, ſhall not be tried per pais, yet the time when the inrolment of a deed was made, ſhall. 2 Lil. 68. See Bargain and Sale.

Inrollment, Is ordained in divers caſes by Statute; Of bargains and ſales by 27 H. 8. c. 16. Deeds in corporations, &c. 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 22. Of writings in the counties of Lancaſter and Cheſter, &c. 5 Eliz. c. 26. Grants from the crown of felons goods, &c. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 22. Inſpection. See Age, Infancy, Trial.

Trial by inſpection, or examination, is, when for the greater expedition of a cauſe, in ſome point or iſſue being either the principal queſtion, or ariſing collaterally out of it, but being evidently the object of ſenſe, the judges of the court, upon the teſtimony of their own ſenſes, ſhall decide the point in diſpute. In eccleſiaſtical promotions, where the freehold paſſes to the perſon promoted, corporal poſſeſſion is required, to veſt the property completely in the new proprietor, who, according to the diſtinction of the Canoniſts, acquires the Jus ad rem, or inchoate and imperfect right, by nomination and inſtitution; but not the jus in re, or complete and full right, unleſs by corporal poſſeſſion. Therefore in Dignities poſſeſſion is given by Inſtallment; in Rectories and Vicarages by Induction, without which no Temporal rights accrue to the miniſter, though every Eccleſiaſtical power is veſted in him by Inſtitution. See Black. Com. 2 V. 312.

Inſtallments, ſignify times appointed for payment of different portions of a ſum of money, which, by agreement of the parties, inſtead of being payable in the groſs, at one time, is to be paid in parts, at certain ſtated times, ſuch as are frequently ſpecified in conditions to bonds, &c. or defeaſances, or warrants of attorney to confeſs judgments.

Inſtant, (Lat. inſtans, inſtanter) Is defined by the Logicians to be, Unum indiviſibile in tempore, quod non eſt tempus, nec pars temporis, ad quod tamen partes temporis copulantur; and though it cannot be actually divided, yet in intendment of law it may, and be applied to ſeveral purpoſes: He who lays violent hands upon himſelf commits no felony till he is dead, and when dead he is not in being ſo as to be termed a felon; but he is ſo adjudged in law eo inſtante, at the very inſtant of this fact done. And there are many other like caſes where the inſtant time that is not diviſible in nature, in the conſideration of the mind is divided. Plowd. Hales v. Petit. fol. 258. b. And vide *Co. An inſtant is not to be conſidered in law, as in logick, as a point of time, and no parcel of time; but in our law, things which are to be done in an inſtant, have in conſideration of law a priority of time in them. Vide Co. Lit. and Plowd. as cited before. And in ſeveral caſes, a difference is allowed in our law in an inſtant, as per mortem & poſt mortem, &c. Arg. Show. 415. in caſe of The King v. Dr. Birch and the Biſhop of London.

Inſtitution, (Inſtitutio) Is when the biſhop ſays to a clerk, who is preſented to a church living, Inſtituo te rectorem talis eccleſiæ, cum cura animarum, & accipe curam tuam & meam: Or it is a faculty made by the ordinary, whereby a parſon is approved to be inducted to a rectory or parſonage. If the biſhop upon examination finds the clerk preſented capable of the benefice, he admits and inſtitutes him; and inſtitution may be granted either by the biſhop under his Epiſcopal ſeal; or it may be done by the biſhop's vicar general, chancellor or commiſſary; and if granted by the vicar general, or any other ſubſtitute; their acts are taken to be the acts of the biſhop: Alſo the inſtrument or letters teſtimonial of inſtitution may be granted by the biſhop, though he is not in his dioceſe; to which ſome witneſſes ſhould ſubſcribe their names. 1 Inſt. 344. Clergym. Law. 109. The biſhop by inſtitution transſers the cure of ſouls to the clerk; and if he refuſeth to grant inſtitution, the party may have his remedy in the Court of Audience of the archbiſhop, by duplex querela, &c. for inſtitution is properly cognizable in the Eccleſiaſtical court: Where inſtitution is granted, and ſuſpected to be void for want of title in the patron, &c. a ſuperinſtitution hath been ſometimes granted to another, to try the title of the preſent incumbent by ejectment. 2 Rol. Abr. 220. 4 Rep. 79.

Taking a reward for inſtitution incurs a forfeiture of double value of one year's profit of the benefice, and makes the living void. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 6. On inſtitution the clerk hath a right to enter on the parſonage houſe and glebe, and take the tithes; but he cannot grant, let, or do any act to charge them, till he is inducted into the living: He is complete parſon as to the ſpiritualty, by inſtitution; but not as to the temporalty, &c. By the inſtitution he is only admitted ad officium, to pray and preach; and is not intitled ad beneficium, until formal induction. Plowd. 528. Vide Inſtallment. The church is full by inſtitution againſt all common perſons, ſo that if another perſon be afterwards inducted, it is void, and he hath but a mere poſſeſſion; but a church is not full againſt the King till induction. 2 Inſt. 358. 1 Rol. Rep. 151. When a biſhop hath given inſtitution to a clerk, he iſſues his mandate for induction; and if the archbiſhop ſhould inhibit the archdeacon to induct the clerk thus inſtituted, he may do it notwithſtanding. The firſt beginning of inſtitutions to benefices, was in a national ſynod held at Weſtminſter, Anno 1124. Inſurance or Aſſurance, Signifies a ſecurity given, in conſideration of a ſum of money paid in hand of ſo much per cent. to an aſſurer or inſurer, to indemnify the inſured from ſuch loſſes as ſhall be ſpecified in the policy, or inſtrument of aſſurance, ſubſcribed by the inſurer or inſurers for that purpoſe. *Dict. I. The origin of inſurance, and the nature and effect of policies, &c.

It is conceived by Suetonius, that Claudius Cæſar was the firſt who brought in this cuſtom of aſſurance; by which the danger and adventure of voyages is divided, repaired and borne by many perſons, who, for a certain ſum, by the Spaniards called premio, aſſure ſhips or goods, or both, or a proportion, according to the policy. Molloy, b. 2. c. 7. ſect. 1. Malyne's Lex Mercatoria, ed. 1686. p. 104.

Mr. Savary, in his Dictionaire de Commerce, tit. Aſſurance, thinks this cuſtom was firſt introduced by the Jews in the year 1182, but whoever was the firſt contriver, or original inventer of this uſual branch of buſineſs, it has been many ages practiſed in this kingdom, and is ſuppoſed to have been introduced here by ſome Italians from Lombardy, who at the ſame time came to ſettle at Antwerp, and among us: And this being prior to the building of the Royal Exchange, they uſed to meet in a place where Lombard Street now is, at a houſe they had called the Pawn Houſe or Lombard, for tranſacting buſineſs; and as they were then the ſole negociators in inſurance, the policies made by others in after-times had a clauſe inſerted, that thoſe latter ones ſhould have as much force and effect, as thoſe formerly made in Lombard Street. Lex Mercatoria Rediviva 261.

Aſſurances are of various ſorts, ſome being to places certain, others general. Thoſe that are made to places certain, are commonly upon goods laden, or to be laden abroad outward, and until the ſame adventure ſhall be landed at ſuch a port; or upon goods laden, or to be laden homeward in ſuch a ſhip, till the adventure ſhall likewiſe be landed; or elſe upon goods out and in, with liberty to touch at all ports mentioned in the policy.

So, likewiſe on ſhips that go trading voyages, as round to Cadiz; and that it ſhall be lawful, after the ſhip's delivery there, to take in at the ſame port another cargo, and with that proceed to the Weſt-Indies or other ports, and back again to Cadiz, and from thence to London; this policy being general and dangerous, ſeldom procures ſubſcriptions, or at leaſt very chargeable ones.

As goods and merchandize are commonly inſured, ſo likewiſe are the ſhip's tackle and furniture; but in regard there ſeldom happens a voyage but ſomewhat is miſſing or loſt, the premium commonly runs higher than for merchandize.

Aſſurances may be made on goods ſent by land, ſo likewiſe on hoys and the like, and may be made on the heads of men; as if a man is going for the Streights, and perhaps is in ſome fear that he may be taken by the Moor or Turkiſh pirates, and ſo made a ſlave, for the redemption of whom a ranſom muſt be paid, he may advance a premium accordingly upon a policy of aſſurance; and if there be a caption, the aſſurer muſt anſwer the ranſom that is ſecured to be paid on the policy. Molloy, b. 2. c. 7. ſect. 4. cites Mich. 29 Car. 2. B. R. Liſle v. Sedgwick.

The policies are now ſo large, that almoſt all thoſe curious queſtions that former ages, and the Civilians according to the law marine, nay and the Common lawyers too, have controverted, are now out of date. Scarce any misfortune that can happen, or proviſion to be made, but the ſame is provided for in the policies that are now uſed; for they inſure againſt heaven and earth, ſtreſs of weather, ſtorms, enemies, pirates, rovers, &c. or whatſoever detriment ſhall happen or come to the thing inſured, &c. Molloy, b. 2. c. 7. ſ. 7. When a ſhip hath been long miſſing, and no advice can be had where ſhe is, the premium in time of war will run very high; ſometimes 30 or 40 per cent. or more, but when theſe words are inſerted in the inſurance, loſt or not loſt; in ſuch caſe, if it happens at the time the ſubſcription is made, that the ſhip is caſt away, the inſurers muſt anſwer: But if the party that cauſed the inſurance to be made, ſaw the ſhip wrecked, or had certain intelligence of it, ſuch ſubſcription will not be obligatory; ſo likewiſe if the inſured have a rotten ſhip, ſhall inſure upon the ſame more than ſhe is worth, and afterwards going out of the port ſhe is ſunk or wrecked, this will be adjudged fraudulent, and not oblige inſurers to anſwer. Mich. 26 Car. 2. B. R.

And wilfully caſting away, or making holes in the bottom of a ſhip, &c. with deſign to prejudice any inſurers, merchants, &c. is made felony by ſtat. 1 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 9. 4 Geo. 1. c. 12. and 11 Geo. 1. c. 29.

Subſcriptions for inſurances are generally for certain ſums; as 100*l.* or 500*l.* &c. at the premium current; and if a man inſures goods to the value of 5000*l.* and he hath but 2000*l.* remitted, now he having inſured a real adventure, if a loſs happens, by the law marine, all the inſurers are compellable to anſwer pro rata: Tho' this is more by the cuſtom of merchants than by law; and by ſome opinions, only the firſt ſubſcribers, who underwrit ſo much as the real adventure amounted to, are to be made liable, and the reſt to have their premiums deducted, and be diſcharged. Grot. Introd. Jur. Holl, 212. But we conceive the latter poſition is not, now, law in this kingdom.

If a merchant freights out wool, &c. which occaſions a forfeiture of ſhip and lading; or if he lades contraband goods knowingly, and afterwards inſures the ſame, and they are ſeized by the King's officers; the inſurers are not liable to bear the loſs: But if goods inſured are not contraband at the time of the lading and inſurance, and after become ſuch, if they are then ſeized, the inſurers are anſwerable. 12 Car. 2. 32.

A ſhip is inſured for a voyage, or cruiſe of three months and is taken by the enemy within that time, but before ſhe is carried infra præſidia hoſtis is re-taken by an Engliſhman, and is now a living ſhip, this is a total loſs. v. Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. fol. 191.

If a ſhip be inſured from the port of London to any foreign place, and before the ſhip breaks ground ſhe happens to take fire, and is conſumed, the inſurers are not obliged to anſwer, unleſs the words of the inſurance are At and from the port of London; for the adventure did not commence till the ſhip was gone from thence: Tho' if the ſhip had broken ground, and afterwards been driven by ſtorm back to the port of London, and there had taken fire, the inſurers muſt anſwer. Rot. Scaccar. 15 Car. 2. Goods are ſtolen and imbezilled on ſhip-board, the maſter, and not the inſurers are liable. This muſt be underſtood where there is not any proviſion in the policy for ſuch an act. When inſurers are to anſwer, and it happens that ſome part only of the effects inſured are loſt, as in the caſe of ejection in a ſtorm, or other ſuch accidents; then the inſurers make an average of it, and each man pays ſo much per cent, in proportion to the ſum for which he ſubſcribed. When advice is received of the loſs of the ſhip or goods, application is to be made to the inſurers, and the vouchers to be produced; with which if they are ſatisfied, they will pay the money; but if they have reaſonable ground to ſcruple it, the inſured muſt wait a convenient time, till the inſurers can obtain a more ſatisfactory advice; or if nothing can be heard of the ſhip in any reaſonable time, the inſurers are obliged to pay the money: Tho' if the ſhip afterwards arrive in ſafety, the money is to be returned them by the inſured. Mer. Compan. 91, 96, 97.

A merchant having inſured the greateſt part of the adventure of a ſhip, if advice is received of a loſs, but with hope of recovery, whereby ſuch merchant would have the aſſiſtance of the inſurers; he has a privilege to make a renunciation of the lading to the inſurers, and to come in himſelf in the nature of an inſurer, for ſo much as ſhall appear he hath born the adventure of, beyond his part of the value inſured. N. B. The party inſured, muſt have property in the thing inſured, at the time of inſurance and loſs. v. Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. fol. 10.

The 6 Geo. 1. c. 18. empowers his Majeſty to grant two charters for inſurance of ſhips and merchandiſe, &c. and to incorporate the adventurers, in conſideration of a large ſum of money advanced; and all other corporations for inſurance, and their policies, are declared void. But many individuals may ſubſcribe policies as inſurers, and be bound to pay, if a loſs happens.

By 11 Geo. 1. c. 30. Policies of inſurance ſhall be made out and ſtamped in three days after ſhips are inſured, on pain of 100*l.* and promiſſory notes for inſurance ſhall be void, and nothing recovered thereon. Where any perſon undertakes the inſuring of wool to be tranſported, or agrees to pay money for ſuch inſurance, he is liable to forfeit 500*l.* but one may be diſcharged of this penalty, and have likewiſe the whole forfeiture, on diſcovering, and convicting the other guilty party, in ſix months. Stat. 12 Geo. 2. c. 21.

By the ſtat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 26. no inſurance ſhall be made on money to be lent on bottomree, or Reſpondentia Bonds on foreign ſhips or goods bound to or from the Eaſt-Indies, on penalty of forfeiting treble the ſum inſured or lent. This prohibition not to extend to the ſhips or goods of the ſubjects of ſuch ſovereigns who traded there before the 7th of October 1748.

By the ſtat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 37. No aſſurance ſhall be made by any perſon on any ſhip belonging to his Majeſty or his ſubjects, (except privateers, and by the owners of them) or on any goods laden on board ſuch ſhip, intereſt or no intereſt, or without further proof of intereſt than the policy, or by way of gaming or wagering, or without benefit of ſalvage to the aſſurer. And every ſuch aſſurance ſhall be void. Re-aſſurance ſhall not be made except the aſſurer becomes inſolvent, and then but to the value before aſſured, and to be expreſſed in the policy to be re-aſſurance. The plaintiff in any action upon a policy of aſſurance, ſhall, within fifteen days after requeſt, declare what ſums he hath aſſured in the whole, or borrowed at Reſpondentia or bottomree for the voyage.

Any perſon ſued on a policy of aſſurance may bring the money into court, and if the plaintiff ſhall refuſe to accept it, and the jury ſhall not aſſeſs more damages than the money brought into court, the plaintiff ſhall pay coſts. See Bottomree.

II. Of Baratry and deviation.

Baratry is when the maſter of a ſhip, or the mariners, cheat the owners or inſurers, whether by running away with the ſhip, ſinking her, deſerting her, or imbezilling the cargo. Dict. Tr. and Com. 214.

Baratry of the mariners is a diſeaſe ſo epidemical on ſhipboard, that it is very rare for a maſter to prevent it. However the law does in ſuch caſes impute offences and faults committed by them to the negligence of the maſter; and, were it otherwiſe, the merchant would be in a very dangerous condition. The reaſons why he ought to be reſponſible are, that the mariners are of his own chuſing, and under his government, and know no other ſuperior on ſhipboard but himſelf; and if they are faulty, he may correct and puniſh them, and juſtify the ſame by law: and, if the fact is apparently proved againſt them, may reimburſe himſelf out of their wages. Molloy, b. 1. c. 3. ſ. 13. cites Roll. Abr. 533. Paſch. 11 Jac. in B. R. Horn v. Smith.

Therefore, in all caſes whereſoever the merchant loads aboard any goods or merchandize, if they be loſt, imbeziled, or any other way damnified, he muſt be reſponſible for them; for the very lading them aboard makes him liable, and that as well by the Common law as the law marine. Molloy, b. 1. c. 3. ſ. 14. cites 1 Vern. 190, 238. 1 Mod. 85. 2 Lev. 69.

Nay, if his mariners go with the ſhip-boat to the quay or wharf to fetch goods on ſhipboard, if once they have taken charge of them, the maſter becomes immediately reſponſible, if they ſteal, loſe, damnify, or imbezil them. Molloy, b. 1. c. 3. ſ. 15.

Where a ſhip was inſured againſt the baratry of the maſter, &c. in an action brought thereupon, the jury found that the ſhip was loſt by the fraud and negligence of the maſter: The court held, that if the maſter run away with the ſhip, or imbezil the goods, the merchant may have an action againſt him; for it is reaſonable that merchants who hazard their ſtocks in foreign traffick, ſhould ſecure themſelves in what manner they think proper, againſt baratry of the maſter and all other frauds; and this muſt be intended fraud in the maſter; not a bare neglect: and they all agreed that fraud is baratry, tho' not named in the covenant; but negligence might not. 1 Mod. 230, 231.

Baratry imports fraud (Du Freſne Gloſſar. verbo Barataria fraus, dolus,) and he who commits a fraud may properly be ſaid to be guilty of a neglect of his duty. Baratry of a maſter is not to be confined to the maſter's running away with the ſhip; and the general words of the policy ought to be conſtrued to extend to loſſes of the like nature as thoſe mentioned before. Loſſes ariſing from the fraud of the maſter, are of the ſame nature as if he had run away with the ſhip, ſuppoſing baratry to be confined to that which is not, becauſe it imports any fraud. Ld. Raym. 1349. Knight v. Cambridge. Stran. 581. S. C. Vide the caſe of Stamma v. Brown. 2 Stra. 1173. where the deviation of the maſter, being for the benefit of his owners, and not for his own, was conſtrued not to be baratry, in an action on a policy brought by a perſon who had put goods on board to be carried to Marſeilles.

An intention to deviate is not ſufficient to diſcharge the underwriter. Foſter v. Wilmor. 2 Stra. 1249.

The excuſe of neceſſity is always allowed. Elton v. Brogden. 2 Stra. 1264.

A voyage ought to be performed according to uſage: 2 Salk. 445.

If after a policy of inſurance a damage happens, and afterwards in the ſame voyage a deviation, yet the aſſured ſhall recover for what happened before the deviation; for the policy is diſcharged from the time of the deviation only. Vid. Shower 129. Kemp and Andrews. 2 Salk. 444.

In the French Encyclopédie it is called Baratterie, malverſation, tromperie, derived from Barat, an old French word out of uſe, which formerly ſignified, tromperie, fourbe, menſonge. (tom. 2. ſo. 68.) i. e. cheating, fraud, deceit.

III. Of warranty to depart with convoy.

Where the captain does every thing in his power, it is a departing with convoy; and theſe agreements are never confined to preciſe words; as in the caſe of departing with convoy from London, where the place of rendezvous is Spithead; a loſs in going thither is within the policy. So that the plaintiff recovered. Stran. 1250. 19 Geo. 2. Victorin v. Cleeve. See infra.

A ſhip is to be conſidered as under inſurance to a place of general rendezvous, according to the interpretation of the words warranted to depart with convoy. Salk. 443, 445. And if the parties mean to vary the inſurance from what is commonly underſtood, they ſhould particularize her departure with convoy from the place ſpecified. Stran. 1265. 2 Geo. 2. Gordon v. Morely, and Cambel v. Bordieu.

Intendment of Law, (intellectus legis) The underſtanding, intention and true meaning of law. Co. Litt. 78. ſays, the judges ought to judge according to the common intendment of law.

Intendment ſhall ſometimes ſupply that which is not fully expreſſed or apparent, and when a thing is doubtful in ſome caſes, intendment may make it out; alſo many things ſhall be intended after verdict, in a cauſe, to make a good judgment: but intendment cannot ſupply the want of certainty in a charge in an indictment for any crime, &c. 5 Rep. 121. 2 Hawk. P. C. 227, 441.

Sometimes a thing is neceſſarily intended by what precedes or follows it; and where an indifferent conſtruction may have two intendments, the rule is to take it moſt ſtrongly againſt the plaintiff. Show 162. Tho' if a plaintiff declares, that the defendant is bound to him by obligation, it ſhall be intended that the obligation was ſealed and delivered: if one is bound in a bond, and in the ſolvend. of the bond it is not expreſſed unto whom the money ſhall be paid, or if ſaid to the obligor; the law will intend it is to be paid to the obligee: and where no time is limited for payment of the money, it ſhall be intended to be preſently paid. 2 Lill. Abr. 71. Paſch. 24 Car. B. R.

The intent of parties in deeds, contracts, &c. is much regarded by the law: tho' it ſhall not take place againſt the direct rules of law: the law doth not in conveyances of eſtates admit them regularly to paſs by intendment and implication; in deviſes of lands they are allowed, with due reſtrictions. Vaugh. 261, 262. Where ſeiſin of an inheritance is once alledged, it ſhall be intended to continue till the contrary is ſhewn. Jones 181. But at this day the law does not generally puniſh intendments to do ill, if the intent be not executed, except in caſe of treaſon, where intention proved by circumſtances ſhall be puniſhed as if put in execution. 3 Inſt. 108. And if a perſon enter a houſe in the night, with intent to commit burglary, it is felony: and by ſtatute, maliciouſly cutting off or diſabling any limb or member, with an intent to diſfigure, &c. is felony. 23 Car. 2. c. 1. and vide Plowd. 474. Intent or Intention. The words of deeds ſhall be conſtrued according to the intent of the parties, and not otherwiſe. The intent ſhall be deſtroyed where it does not agree with the law. Pl. C. 160. b. 162. b. Throgmorton v. Tracy.

In every agreement the intent is the chief thing that is to be conſidered; and if by the act of God, or other means not ariſing from the party himſelf, the agreement cannot be performed according to the words, yet the party ſhall perform it as near the intent as he may. Arg. Pl. C. 290. Trin. 7 Eliz. in caſe of Chapan v. Dalton.

Common uſage and reputation frequently govern the matter, and direct the intention of the parties; as upon ſale of a barrel of beer the barrel is not ſold, but upon ſale of a hogſhead of wine it is otherwiſe. Savil 124. Mich. 32 & 33 Eliz. in caſe of Matthew al. Biſhop v. *Harcourt. All deeds are but in nature of contracts, and the intent of the parties reduced into writing, and the intention is to be chiefly regarded. In an act of parliament the intention appearing in the preamble ſhall controul the letter of the law; and from the regard which the law itſelf gives to the intention of the party, it is, that where there is fine by render, there ſhall be no dower; and ſo a rent or recognizance ſhall not be extinguiſhed by levying a fine to the party. *Per Maſter of the Rolls. Interdiction, (interdictio and interdictum) Has the ſame ſignification in the Common, as it hath in the Canon law, which thus defines it: interdictio eſt cenſura eccleſiaſtica prohibens adminiſtrationem divinorum. And ſo it is uſed 22 Hen. 8. cap. 12. and 25 ejuſdem, cap. 23. Eodem anno relaxatum eſt interdictum Oxoniæ, quod authoritate Domini Joh. Epiſcopi Linc. propter clericidium et ſacrilegia anno proximo præterito fuit illatum. Walſ. Hiſt. Anno 1357. So that an interdict is, a general excommunication of a whole country or province: it is mentioned in ſome of our hiſtorians, viz. Knighton tells us, anno 1208. that the Pope excommunicated King John, and all his adherents, Et totam terram Anglicanam ſuppoſuit interdicto, which began the firſt Sunday after Eaſter, and continued ſix years and one month; during all which time nothing was done in the churches beſides baptiſm and confeſſions of dying people.

The form of an interdict, as ſet down by Du Cange, is as follows, viz.

IN the name of Chriſt, We the biſhop, in behalf of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and of St. Peter, the chief of the apoſtles, and in our own behalf, do excommunicate and interdict this church, and all the chapels thereunto belonging, that no man from henceforth may have leave to ſing maſs, or to hear it, or in any wiſe to adminiſter any divine office, nor to receive God's tithes without our leave; and whoſoever ſhall preſume to ſing or hear maſs, or perform any divine office, or to receive any tithes contrary to this interdict, on the part of God the Father Almighty, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, and on the behalf of St. Peter, and all the ſaints, let him be accurſed and ſeparated from all Chriſtian ſociety, and from entering into Holy Mother Church, where there is forgiveneſs of ſins; and let him be Anathema, Maranatha, for ever, with the devils in hell. Interdictum, In the Civil law, was a prohibition or injunction of the prætor, or an order for the poſſeſſion of a thing in diſpute, made by the magiſtrate per interdictum repetere poſſeſſionem ſuam. Cic. pro Cæcin. 3. If a bill be filed in either of our courts of equity to quiet the poſſeſſion of lands, to ſtay waſte, or to ſtop proceedings at law, an injunction is prayed in the nature of the interdictum of the Civil law, commanding the defendant to ceaſe.

Interdicted of Water and Fire, Were anciently thoſe perſons who ſuffered baniſhment for ſome crime; by which judgment, order was given that no man ſhould receive them into his houſe, but deny them fire and water, the two neceſſary elements of life, which amounted as it were to a civil death; and this was called legitimum exilium, ſays Livy.

Intereſt, (intereſſe) Is commonly taken for a chattel real, as a leaſe for years, etc. and more particularly for a future term; in which caſe it is ſaid in pleading, that one is poſſeſſed de intereſſe termini. Therefore an eſtate in lands is better than a right or intereſt in them: tho' in legal underſtanding an intereſt extends to eſtates, rights and titles, that a man hath in, or out of lands, etc. ſo as by grant of his whole intereſt in ſuch land, a reverſion therein as well as poſſeſſion in fee-ſimple ſhall paſs. Co. Lit. 345.

A mortgage is an intereſt in land, and on non-payment, the eſtate is abſolute in law, and his intereſt is good in equity to intitle him to receive and enjoy the profits till redemption or ſatisfaction, and, on a foreclosure,

Intereſt on Bankrupts Debts. The uſual rule is, that all intereſt on debts carrying intereſt ſhall ceaſe, from the time of iſſuing the commiſſion, yet, in caſe of a ſurplus left after payment of every debt, ſuch intereſt ſhall again revive, and be chargeable on the bankrupt, or his repreſentatives. Atk. 244. *Black. Intereſt on Legacies. In caſe of a veſted legacy, due immediately, and charged on land, on money in the funds, which yield an immediate profit, intereſt ſhall be payable thereon from the teſtator's death; but if charged only on the perſonal eſtate, which cannot be immediately got in, it ſhall carry intereſt only from the end of the year after the death of the teſtator. 2 *P. Interlocutory Decree in Chancery. In a ſuit in equity, if any matter of fact is ſtrongly controverted, the fact is uſually directed to be tried in the court of King's Bench, or at the aſſizes, upon a feigned iſſue. If a queſtion of mere law ariſes in the courſe of a cauſe, it is the practice of the court of Chancery to refer it to the opinion of the judges of the court of King's Bench, upon a caſe ſtated for that purpoſe. In ſuch caſes interlocutory decrees, or orders are made. See Black. Com. 3 V. 452, 453.

Interlocutory Judgment. Interlocutory judgments are ſuch as are given in the middle of a cauſe, upon ſome plea, proceeding on default, which is only intermediate, and does not finally determine or complete the ſuit. As judgment for the plaintiff in abatement, of reſpondeat ouſter, i. e. that defendant ſhall anſwer over, or farther, plead in chief, or put in a more ſubſtantial plea.

But the interlocutory judgments, moſt uſually ſpoken of, are thoſe incompleat judgments, whereby the right of the plaintiff is indeed eſtabliſhed, but the quantum of damages ſuſtained by him is not aſcertained, which is the province of a jury. In ſuch caſe a writ of inquiry iſſues to the ſheriff, who ſummons a jury, enquires of the damages, and returns to the court the inquiſition ſo taken, whereupon the plaintiff's attorney taxes coſts, and ſigns final judgment. See Black. Com. 3 V. 396, 397.

Interlocutory Order, (ordo interlocutorius) Is that which decides not the cauſe, but only ſome incidental matter, which happens between the beginning and end of it; as where an order is made in Chancery, for the plaintiff to have an injunction, &c. till the hearing of the cauſe: this, or any ſuch order, not being final, is interlocutory.—Ordo interlocutorius non definit controverſiam, ſed aliquid obiter, ad cauſam pertinens, decernit. Lanc. Interrogatories, Are particular queſtions demanded of witneſſes brought in to be examined in a cauſe, eſpecially in the court of Chancery. And theſe interrogatories muſt be exhibited by the parties in ſuit on each ſide; which are either direct for the party that produces them, or counter on behalf of the adverſe party; and generally both plaintiff and defendant may exhibit direct, and counter, or croſs interrogatories.

They are to be pertinent, and only to the points neceſſary, and either drawn or peruſed by counſel, and be ſigned by them: if they are leading, viz. ſuch as theſe, Did you not do or ſee ſuch a thing, &c. the depoſitions on them will be ſuppreſſed; for they ſhould be drawn, Did you ſee, or did you not ſee, &c. without leaning to either ſide; and not only where they point more to one ſide of the queſtion than the other; but if they are too particular, they will likewiſe be ſuppreſſed: The commiſſioners, &c. who examine witneſſes on interrogatories, muſt examine to one interrogatory only at a time; they are to hold the witneſſes to every point interrogated; and take what comes from them on their examination, without aſking any idle queſtions, or putting down any impertinent anſwers not relating to the interrogatories, &c. Practiſ. Attorn. firſt Edit. 225. See Depoſitions.

At Common law, witneſſes going abroad, are ſometimes examined, by conſent, upon interrogatories de bene eſſe. See Black. Com. 3 V. 383. The mode of trial, in equity, is by interrogatories, adminiſtered, in writing to the witneſſes. Black. Com. 3 V. 438. 4 V. 449.

An attachment ſometimes iſſues againſt a perſon ſuppoſed guilty of ſome contempt to the court whence the proceſs goes forth, to bring him in; and when there, he is to ſtand committed, or put in bail to anſwer interrogatories upon oath. Whether this proceeding is legal and conſtitutional or not, it is not for the editor to determine. But, as a contempt can ſcarce be committed without a witneſs, it ſhould ſeem more rational to indict the party, and give him the benefit of a legal trial, by his peers. If it is in a court where the practice is to grant a rule to ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not iſſue for a contempt, &c. if there appears to the court a ſufficient ground to make the rule abſolute, a ſubſequent examination on interrogatories ſeems needleſs. It is, perhaps, only giving the party an opportunity of committing perjury to exculpate himſelf, when he comes to reconſider his ſituation and the conſequences that may enſue, if the report of the officer ſhould be ultimately againſt him.

If a contempt is committed in the face of the court, and a commitment enſues, an examination upon interrogatories muſt, to moſt men, appear totally unneceſſary.

Inteſtates, (Inteſtati). There are two kinds of inteſtates; one who makes no will; another who makes a will, and nominates executors, but they refuſe; in which caſe he dies an inteſtate, and the ordinary commits adminiſtration. 2 Par. Inſt. fol. 397. In former times, he who died inteſtate, was accounted damned, becauſe (as Mat. Par. tells us) he was obliged by the canons, to leave at leaſt a tenth part of his goods to pious uſes, for the redemption of his ſoul, therefore, whoever neglected ſo to do, took no care of his own ſalvation. They made no difference between a ſuicide and an inteſtate; for as, in one caſe, the goods were forfeited to the King, ſo in the other they were forfeited to the chief lord. But becauſe it was accounted a very wicked thing to die without making any diſtribution of his goods to pious uſes, and ſuch caſes often happen by ſudden deaths, therefore by ſubſequent conſtitutions, the biſhops had power to make ſuch diſtribution as the inteſtate himſelf was bound to do; and this was called Eleemoſyna rationabilis. Thus in Mat. Paris, anno 1190. we read, Si quis ſubitanea morte vel quolibet caſu præoccupatus fuiſſet ut de rebus ſuis diſponere non poſſet, diſtributio bonorum ejus eccleſiaſtica fiebat authoritate: And it was by this means that the ſpiritual courts came firſt to have juriſdiction in teſtamentary caſes. Cowell. i. e. by uſurpation.

By the ſtatute Weſtm. 2. Goods of inteſtates were to be committed to the Ordinary, to anſwer the debts of the deceaſed, &c. And the 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 10. appoints a diſtribution of inteſtates eſtates, after the debts and funeral expences are paid, among the wife and children of the deceaſed; or, for want of ſuch, the next of kin, &c. And the act of parliament doth immediately, upon the death of the inteſtate, veſt an intereſt in the perſons intitled; ſo that if any one dies before the diſtribution, though within the year, his ſhare ſhall go to his executors or adminiſtrators; and not to the ſurvivors and next of kin to the inteſtate. 1 Lil. If A. by will appoints that the executors of J. S. ſhall be his executors, and he dies, living J. S. there till the death of J. S. this is a dying inteſtate of A. for in the mean time A. has no executor. Per Dyer & Walſh, P. C. 281. b.

So if A. makes J. S. (to be) his executor a year after his death; for within the year he dies inteſtate, and therefore for this the ordinary has power to commit adminiſtration, and it ſhall never be diſproved; by Dyer and Walſh, P. C. 281. b. And if executor proves the teſtament, and dies inteſtate, there, from the death of ſuch executor by dying inteſtate, the firſt teſtator dyeth inteſtate, and for that reaſon the ordinary may grant adminiſtration. Per Dyer and Weſton, ibid. 281. b. 282. a.

Where the ſtrictneſs of the Civil law is obſerved, there a man cannot die partly teſtate and partly inteſtate; tho' here in England, where that ceremonial ſtrictneſs is not obſerved, but all immunities enjoyed, being not obliged to any other obſervance in making teſtaments than what is jure gentium, a man may ſeveral ways die partly teſtate and partly inteſtate. 1 Godolph. Lit. 277. For this intruſion information may be brought; but before office found, he who occupies the land ſhall not be ſaid to be an intruder, for intruſion cannot be but where the King is actually poſſeſſed, which is not before office; though the King is intitled to the meſne profits after the tenant's eſtate ended. Moor 295.

By Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 14. the defendants may plead the general iſſue in informations of intruſion, brought on behalf of the King, and retain their poſſeſſion till trial; where the King hath been out of poſſeſſion, and not received the profits for twenty years: And no ſcire facias ſhall iſſue, whereupon the ſubject ſhall be forced to ſpecial pleading, &c. See *Black. Invaſiones, In the inquiſition of ſerjeancies and knights fees; anno 12 and 13 of King John, there are ſome titles called Invaſiones; et invaſiones ſuper regem.

Inventiones, Is uſed in antient charters for treaſure-trove, money or goods found by any perſon, and not challenged by the owner; which, by the Common law is due to the King, who grants the privilege or benefit, to ſome particular ſubjects.——Quod habeant inventiones ſuas in Mare et in Terra. Chart. Inventory, (Inventorium) Is a liſt or ſchedule containing a true deſcription of all the goods and chattels of a perſon deceaſed at the time of his death, with their value appraiſed by indifferent perſons; which every executor or adminiſtrator ought to exhibit to the biſhop or ordinary at ſuch time as he ſhall appoint. Weſt. Symb. lib. 2. pag. 696. By 21 H. 8. c. 5. Executors and adminiſtrators are required to make and deliver in upon oath to the ordinary, inventories indented, of which one part ſhall remain with the ordinary, and the other part with the executor or adminiſtrator: And the intention of this ſtatute was for the benefit of the creditors and legatees, that the executor or adminiſtrator might not conceal any part of the perſonal eſtate from them: Tho' as to the valuation it is not concluſive, but the real value found by a jury; if they are under valued, the creditors may take them as appraiſed; and if over-valued, it ſhall not be prejudicial to the executor. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1015.

But though generally all the perſonal eſtate of the deceaſed, of what nature or quality ſoever, ought to be put into the inventory; yet goods given away in the life-time of the deceaſed, and actually in the poſſeſſion of the party to whom given, and the goods to which a huſband is intitled as adminiſtrator to his wife, are not to be included. 3 Bulſt. 355. Notwithſtanding the law requires that the inventory be exhibited within three months after the death of the perſon, if it is done afterwards, it is good, for the ordinary may diſpenſe with the time, and even in ſome caſes, whether it ſhall be exhibited, or not; as where creditors are paid, and the will performed, etc. Raym. 470. Theſe inventories proceed from the Civil law; and as, by the old Roman law, the heir was obliged to anſwer all the teſtator's debts, Juſtinian ordained, that inventories ſhould be made of the ſubſtance of the deceaſed, and he ſhould be no further charged. Juſtin. Inſt. In common parlance, &c. The term inventory is applied on other and more frequent occaſions, as on the ſale of goods by agreement between parties accounts of the goods ſold (ſuppoſing them paſſing with the poſſeſſion of an houſe, &c.) are called inventories. So the accounts taken by ſheriffs, of goods levied and ſold under executions, are called inventories, &c. See Executor and Black. Com. 2 V. 510.

In ventre ſa mere, (Fr.) In the mother's belly, relating to which there is a writ mentioned in the regiſter of writs, and in 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. Infant in ventre ſa mere, is where a woman is with child at the time of her huſband's death; which child, if he had been born, would have been heir to the land of the huſband: And this is ſometimes privily, and ſometimes open and viſible. 1 Shep. Abr. 142. And the law hath conſideration of ſuch a child, on account of the apparent expectation of his birth: For a deviſe to an infant in ventre ſa mere, ſhall be good by way of future executory deviſe. Raym. 164. He may be vouched in his mother's belly; and action lies for detainment of charters from him as heir, &c. Hob. 222. Dyer 186. And in all caſes, where a daughter or female comes into land by diſcent; there the ſon born after, ſhall ouſt her and have the land. 3 Rep. 61. Plowd. 375. But if the daughter and female heir cometh to land in nature of a purchaſer; as on a will of lands given to *J. Inveſt and Inveſtiture, (from the Fr. inveſtir) Signifies to give poſſeſſion: ſome define it thus, inveſtitura eſt alicujus in ſuum jus introductio; a giving livery of ſeiſin or poſſeſſion. The cuſtoms and ceremonies of inveſtiture or giving poſſeſſion, were long practiſed with great variety: at firſt inveſtitures were made by a form of words; afterwards by ſuch things as had moſt reſemblance to what was to be transferred; as lands paſſed by the delivery of a turf, &c. which was done by the grantor to the perſon to whom the lands were granted: but in after ages, the things by which inveſtitures were made were not ſo exactly obſerved. Ingulph. p. 901. In the church, it was the cuſtom of old for Princes to promote ſuch as they liked to eccleſiaſtical benefices, and declare their choice and promotion by delivery, to the perſons choſen, of a paſtoral ſtaff and ring; the one a ſymbolical repreſentation of their ſpiritual marriage with the church; and the other of their paſtoral care and charge, which was termed inveſtiture; after which they were conſecrated by eccleſiaſtical perſons. Hoveden tells us, that King Richard, being taken by the Emperor, gave this kingdom to him, et inveſtivit eum inde per pileum ſuum; and that the Emperor immediately afterwards returned the gift; et inveſtivit eum per duplicem crucem de auro. Hoved. 724. It is ſcarce neceſſary to obſerve, unleſs for the information of an unperienced reader, that it was not in the power of Richard, or of any other King of this realm to give the Kingdom to the Emperor, or to any other perſon. The act was void, as was the ſhameful reſignation, made by Stephen, to the Pope. Walſingham ſays, that John Duke of Lancaſter was inveſted Duke of Aquitane, per Virgam et Pileum, p. 343. Invitatoria & Venitarium, Thoſe hymns and pſalms that were ſung in the church to invite the people to prayer: They are mentioned in the ſtatute of St. Paul's MS.

Invoice. A particular account of merchandiſe, with its value, cuſtom and charges, &c. ſent by a merchant to his factor or correſpondent in another country. Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 34.

Involuntary Manſlaughter, Differs from homicide excuſable by miſadventure, in this; that miſadventure always happens in conſequence of ſome lawful act, but this ſpecies of manſlaughter in conſequence of an unlawful act. Yet, in general, when an involuntary killing happens in conſequence of an unlawful act, it will be either murder or manſlaughter, according to the nature of the act which occaſioned it. Vide *Black. Jocalia, (Fr. joyaux) Jewels; derived from the Lat. jocus, joculus, and jocula, which comprehend every thing that delighteth; but, in a ſpecial and more reſtrained ſenſe, it ſignifies thoſe things which are ornaments to women, and which in France they call their own; as diamonds, ear-rings, bracelets, &c. But in this kingdom a wife ſhall not be intitled to jewels, diamonds, &c. on the death of her huſband, unleſs they are ſuitable to her quality, and the huſband leaves aſſets to pay debts, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 911.

Jocari, To contend with pikes. Craſtino die quidam milites Anglici ſtrenue nimis et viriliter jocabantur. Mat. Paris, anno 1252.

Jocarius, A jeſter. In a deed of Richard, abbot of Bernay, to Henry Lovet, ſine dat. among the witneſſes to it was Willielmo tunc jocario Domini Abbatis. But in Domeſday it is ſaid Berdic was Joculator Regis, the King's jeſter.

Jocelet, (Sax.) Prædiolum, agri culendi portiuncula. A little farm or manor; in ſome parts of Kent a yoklet, as requiring but a ſmall yoke of oxen to till it. Sax. Dict.

Jocus partitus. It is ſo called when two propoſals are made, and a man hath liberty to chooſe which he will. Nec poteſt tranſigere, nec paciſci, nec jocum partitum facere, nec aliud. Bracton, lib. 4. tract. 1. cap. 32. par. 2. Etiam ſi apparentibus partibus queruletur et reſpondeatur, ſive loquela per non tenuram vel per quemcunque Biperti jocum cavilletur, etc. Hengham Magn. cap. 4.

Joinder in Action, Is the coupling or joining of two in a ſuit or action againſt another. F. N. B. fol. 118, 201, 221. In all perſonal things, where two are chargeable to two, the one may ſatisfy it, and accept of ſatisfaction, and bind his companion; and yet one cannot have an action without his companion, nor both only againſt one. 2 Leon. 77. In joint perſonal actions againſt two defendants, if they plead ſeverally, and the plaintiff is nonſuit by one before he hath judgment againſt the other, he is barred (in that ſuit) againſt both. Hob. 180. A perſon, in conſideration of a ſum of money paid to him by A. and B. promiſes to procure their cattle diſtrained to be delivered; if they are not delivered, one joint action lies by the parties; for the conſideration cannot be divided. Style 156, 203. 1 Danv. Abr. 5. And where two joint owners of a ſum of money are robbed upon the highway, they are to join in one action againſt the hundred. Latch 127. Dyer 307. It is otherwiſe if they have ſeveral properties. Ibid.

Where the ſuit will ſurvive to the wife, ſhe muſt join in the action. Wilſ. par. 1. p. 224. and ſee ibid. par. 2. fol. 423.

Upon a joint grievance all parties may join; as the inhabitants of a hundred, &c. And where an action againſt owners of a ſhip, in caſe of goods damaged, &c. quaſi ex contractu, it muſt be brought againſt all of them. 3 Lev. 258. 3 Mod. 321. 2 Salk. 440. Though one partner acts in trade, where there are many partners, actions are to be brought againſt all the partners jointly for his acts. 1 Salk. 292. If two men are partners, and one of them ſells goods in partnerſhip, action for the money muſt be brought in both their names. Godb. 244. But where there are two partners in merchandiſe, and one of them appoints a factor, they may have ſeveral writs of account againſt him, or they may join. Moor 188. And if one of the merchants dies, the ſurvivor is to bring the action. 2 Salk. 444. If one man calls two other men thieves, they ſhall not join in an action againſt him; and one joint action will not lie for, or againſt ſeveral perſons for ſpeaking the ſame words. 1 Danv. 5. Palm 313. For the wrong done to one is no wrong to the other; and the words of the one are not the words of the other.

So, in aſſault and battery. On a joint treſpaſs the plaintiff may declare ſeverally; but it remains joint till ſevered by the declaration. 2 Salk. 454. A man cannot declare in an action againſt one defendant for an aſſault and battery, and againſt another for taking away his goods; becauſe the treſpaſſes are of ſeveral natures. But where they are done by two perſons jointly at one time, they may be both guilty of the whole. Style 153. 10 Rep. 66. If two men procure another to be indicted falſly of barretry, he may have action againſt them both jointly; and it is the ſame if two conſpire to maintain a ſuit, though one only gives money, etc. Latch 262.

Tenants in common cannot join in an action of waſte againſt their leſſee; but it is otherwiſe in the caſe of coparceners or jointenants. Moor 34.

Joinder of Counties. There can be no joinder of counties for the finding of an indictment: though in appeal of death, where a wound was given in one county, and the party died in another, the jury were to be returned jointly from each county, before the ſtatute 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 24. But by that ſtatute the law is altered; for now the whole may be tried either on indictment or appeal, in the county wherein the death is. 2 Hawk. P. C. 323, 403. Where ſeveral perſons are arraigned upon the ſame indictment or appeal, and ſeverally plead Not guilty, the proſecutor may either take out joint venire's or ſeveral. H. P. C. 256. But after a joint venire, ſeveral ones cannot be taken out.

Joinder in Demurrer. An iſſue offered upon matter of law is called demurrer. It confeſſes the fact to be true as ſtated by the oppoſite party, but denies, that by the law ariſing upon thoſe facts, any injury is done to the plaintiff, or, that it is ſuch an injury for which, though the plaintiff may maintain an action, yet he has miſtaken the form of his action, or has not ſtated in his declaration a ſufficient ground to maintain his action, &c. or, if the plaintiff demurs then he denies that the defendant has made out a legitimate excuſe; according to the party who firſt demurs. The form of the demurrer is by averring the pleading inſufficient in law, to anſwer the end propoſed by it. The oppoſite party avers it to be ſufficient, which is called a joinder in demurrer, and then the parties are at iſſue in point of law. See Black. Com. 3 V. 314, 315.

Joindure in Battel, The form, on a writ of right, may be ſeen in Black. Com. Append. to 3 V. iv.

Joindure of Iſſue. Of an iſſue in fact, is when a party denies the fact pleaded by his antagoniſt who has tendered the iſſue thus, "And this he prays may be in-"quired of by the country," or "And of this he puts "himſelf upon the country," the party denying the fact, may immediately ſubjoin, "And the ſaid A. B. doth the like." Which done, the iſſue is ſaid to be joined. Vide Black. Com. 3 V. 315. 4 V. 334. See Joinder in Demurrer.

Joint Actions. In perſonal actions, ſeveral wrongs may be joined in one writ; but actions founded upon a tort, and on a contract, cannot be joined, for they require different pleas and different proceſs. 1 Keb. 847. 1 Vent. 366. So where there is a tort by the Common law, and a tort by ſtatute, they may not be joined; though where ſeveral torts are by the Common law, they may be joined, if perſonal. 3 Salk. 203.

Trover and aſſumpſit may not be joined; but in an action againſt a common carrier, the plaintiff may declare in caſe upon the cuſtom of the realm, and alſo upon trover and converſion, for Not guilty anſwers to both. 1 Danv Abr. 4. Debt upon an amerciament, and upon a mutuatus, may be joined in one declaration. Wilſ. par. 1. 248. So, caſe for a misfeaſance and negligence may be joined with account in trover; in the ſame declaration. Ib. par. 2. 319. Two counts may be joined in the ſame declaration, where there is the ſame judgment in both. Ib. 321. And any actions may be joined, where the plea of Not guilty goes to all. 8 Rep. 47. Ejectment and battery cannot be joined; but after verdict, where ſeveral damages were found, the plaintiff was allowed to releaſe thoſe for the battery, and had judgment for the ejectment. 1 Danv. 3. If this is law, it ſhews that cauſes of action cannot in every inſtance be joined, where the ſame plea will go to the whole. The doctrine in Danvers ſeems to be law, for ſuppoſing ejectment, aſſault and battery, &c. joined in one action, and a general verdict on Not guilty for the plaintiff. A new execution on ſuch a judgment muſt be framed. Indeed the joining two ſuch actions, ſeems rather abſurd. Although perſons may join in the perſonalty, they ſhall always ſever in actions concerning the realty; and waſte being a mixed action favouring of the realty, that being more worthy draws over the perſonalty with it, in any action brought. 2 Mod. Rep. 62. A perſon cannot as adminiſtrator, &c. join an action for the right of another, with any action in his own right; becauſe the coſts will be entire, and it cannot be diſtinguiſhed how much he is to have as adminiſtrator, and how much for himſelf. 1 Salk. 10. See this ſubject well treated, or rather a variety of caſes, well ſelected and digeſted, in Com. Dig. 1 V. tit. Action.

N. B. Every thing, that comes within the compaſs of the writ, may be comprehended within the declaration; but the declaration cannot in any manner be extended beyond the writ. Vide alſo as to this ſubject, Gilb. H. C. P. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

Joint and ſeveral. An intereſt cannot be granted jointly and ſeverally; as if a man grants proximam advocationem, or makes a leaſe for years, to two jointly and ſeverally, thoſe words (ſeverally) are void, and they are jointenants. 5 Rep. 19. Mich. 29 & 30 Eliz. Slingsby's caſe.

A power or authority may be joint and ſeveral. 5 Rep. 19. Slingſby's caſe. Joint words of parties ſhall, by conſtruction of law, be taken reſpectively and ſeverally. 5 Rep. 7. b.

When it appears by the count, that the ſeveral covenantees have, or are to have, ſeveral intereſts or eſtates, there when the covenant is made with the covenantees, & cum quolibet eorum, theſe words make the covenant ſeveral, in reſpect of their ſeveral intereſts. 5 Rep. 19. And ſee Jenk. 262, 263. pl. 63.

Grant of the next avoidance to two & cuilibet eorum, to preſent A. to the ſaid church, is good; for the contention is avoided by reſtraining both to preſent A. Jenk. 263. pl. 63. See 14 Vin. Abr. 48, 469.

Joint Executors, Are accounted in law but as one perſon, and acts done by any of them ſhall be taken to be the acts of every one of them; for they all repreſent the teſtator. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1026. If two joint executors have a leaſe for years, one of them may ſell the term without the other's joining, becauſe both are poſſeſſed of it as one perſon in right of the teſtator; and this is the reaſon why one of them cannot aſſign the term to the other; and for which cauſe one joint executor cannot compel his companion to account. Cro. Eliz. 347. Sid. 33. If one joint executor gives an acquittance or releaſe, the other is bound by it; for as they are but one executor to the teſtator, each hath an authority over the whole eſtate. 2 Brownl. 183. Keilw. 23. But if a releaſe is procured of one joint executor by fraud, for a leſs ſum than due; relief may be had in equity: and joint executors ſhall not be charged by the acts of their companions, any further than they are actually poſſeſſed of the goods of the teſtator. Moor 620. Cro. Eliz. 318. 2 Leon. 209. Here muſt be an exception as to creditors. If joint executors, by agreement among themſelves, agree, that each ſhall intermeddle with ſuch a part of the teſtator's eſtate; in this caſe each of them ſhall be chargeable for the whole by the agreement as to receipts, &c. Hard. 314.

Alſo it has been decreed in Chancery, that if two or more executors join in a receipt, and one of them only receives the money, each of them is liable for the whole, as to creditors at law; but as to legatees, and thoſe who claim diſtribution, who have no remedy but in equity, the receipt of one executor ſhall not charge the other. 1 Salk. 318. Two joint executors cannot plead diſtinct pleas, becauſe their teſtator, if living, who was but one perſon, on action brought againſt him, could have but one plea. Raym 123. It is held, where there are two joint executors, and one has poſſeſſed himſelf of a moiety of the goods, and then dies, in that caſe the ſurvivor ſhall have all. 2 P. Williams 352. See Executors.

Joint Fines. If a whole vill is to be fined, a joint fine may be laid, and it will be good for the neceſſity of it; but in other caſes, fines for offences are to be ſeverally impoſed on each particular offender, and not jointly upon all of them. 1 Rol. Rep. 33. 11 Rep. 42. Dyer 211.

Joint Indictments, May be ſometimes had: if offences of ſeveral perſons ariſe from a joint criminal act, without any regard to any particular perſonal default or defect of either of the defendants; as the joint keeping of a gaming-houſe; or unlawful hunting and carrying away deer; or for maintenance, extortion, &c. an indictment or information may charge the defendants jointly. 1 Ventr. 302. 2 Hawk. P. C. 240. When there are more defendants than one in an information, they may not exhibit a joint plea of Not guilty; but are to plead ſeverally, that neither they nor any of them are guilty, &c. 21 H. 6. 20. 2 Rol. Abr. 707.

Joint Lives. A bond was made to a woman dum ſola, to pay her ſo much yearly as long as ſhe and the obligor ſhould live together, &c. Afterwards the woman married, and debt being brought on this bond by huſband and wife, the defendant pleaded, that he and the plaintiff's wife did not live together; but it was adjudged, that the money ſhould be paid during their joint lives, ſo long as they were living at the ſame time, &c. 1 Lutw. 555. And where a perſon in conſideration of receiving profits of the wife's lands on marriage, during their joint lives, was to pay a ſum of money yearly, in truſt for the wife, though it was not ſaid every year during, &c. It was held, that the payment ſhall be intended to continue every year alſo during their joint lives. 1 Lutw. 459. Leaſe for years to huſband and wife, if they, or any iſſue of their bodies ſhould ſo long live, has been adjudged ſo long as either the huſband, wife, or any of their iſſue ſhould live; and not only ſo long as the huſband and wife, &c. ſhould jointly live. Moor 339. The word or may be taken disjunctively or diſtributively for either; when the word and, which requires a joining and coupling, ſhall not.

Jointenants, (ſimul tenentes or qui conjunctim tenent) Are thoſe who come to, and hold lands or tenements jointly by one title; and theſe jointenants muſt jointly plead, and be jointly ſued and impleaded, which property is common to them and coparceners; but jointenants have a ſole and peculiar quality of ſurvivorſhip, which coparceners have not; for if there be two or three jointenants, and one has iſſue and dies, the ſurvivors, or ſurvivor, ſhall have the whole. Lit. 277, 280. 1 Inſt. 180.

They are called jointenants, not only becauſe lands are conveyed to them jointly, by one and the ſame title; but for that they take by purchaſe only; whereas an eſtate in coparcenary is always by deſcent. Ibid. Where a man is ſeiſed of lands and tenements, and makes a feoffment to two or more, and their heirs; or makes a leaſe to them for life; or where two, or more, have a joint eſtate in poſſeſſion, in a chattel real or perſonal; or a joint eſtate in a debt, duty, covenant, contract, &c. it is a jointenancy; and the part of him who dieth, goeth not to his heir or executor; but the whole to the ſurvivors or ſurvivor.

But an exception is to be made as to joint merchants, for their ſtock or debts which they have in partnerſhip; for the ſhare of the perſon dying goes to the executor or adminiſtrator by the law merchant, and not to the ſurvivor. Ibid.

If a father makes a deed of bargain and ſale of lands to his ſon, to hold to him and his heirs, &c. to the uſe of the father and ſon, and their heirs and aſſigns for ever, they are jointenants. 2 Cro. 83. And if the father deviſes lands to his eldeſt and other ſons, they are jointenants and not tenants in common. Goldſ. 28. Poph. 52. Unleſs expreſſed in the will that they ſhall take as tenants in common, and not as jointenants.

But I conceive if a man has two daughters only, and deviſes them an eſtate in fee, without any condition annexed, they may reject the deviſe and take as heirs, in which caſe they will not be jointenants.

A man deviſed lands to his wife for life, and after her death to his three daughters, and the heirs males of their bodies, &c. The wife and the two eldeſt daughters died; and it was held that the ſurviving daughter ſhould have the whole for life, the three ſiſters being jointenants for life, and ſeveral tenants in tail of the inheritance. Lee 47. A deviſe to two jointly and ſeverally, is a jointenancy. Poph. 52. If lands are deviſed to two equally, and their heirs, they are jointenants; but if it had been to two, equally to be divided between them, it generally makes a tenancy in common. 2 And. 17. But by Holt Ch. Juſtice, the words equally to be divided, do not make a tenancy in common in a deed, but a jointenancy; tho' they might in a will. 1 Salk. 390. "Equally to be divided" in a deed of uſes makes a tenancy in common. Wilſ. par. 1. 261.

It is ſaid a term for years of goods deviſed to two equally, makes a tenancy in common, and not jointenancy; but land deviſed to two equally, makes a jointenancy. 3 Cro. 697. 3 Salk. 205. A deviſe to two equally to be divided, habendum to them and the heirs of the ſurvivor, is a jointenancy. Style 211, 434. Lands are given by will to two perſons, and the ſurvivor of them, and their heirs, equally to be divided between them ſhare and ſhare alike; it is held that the firſt part of the deviſe makes them jointenants for life, and the latter words import a tenancy in common, ſo as they are tenants in common of the inheritance. 2 Peere Williams 280, 282.

What words in a will make a tenancy in common, and yet there ſhall be a ſurvivorſhip, if any of the deviſees die under age, ſee Wilſ. par. 1. 165. One by will gives the reſidue of his perſonal eſtate to three perſons, it is a jointenancy, and the ſurvivor takes the whole; and where a ſurplus of ſuch eſtate is deviſed to A. and B. after the debts and legacies are paid, on one's dying, it will ſurvive. 2 Peere Williams 347.

Two or more purchaſe land, and advance the money in equal parts, and take a conveyance to them and their heirs; this makes a jointenancy with the chance of ſurvivorſhip: But where the proportions of money are not equal, they are in nature of partners; and though the legal eſtate ſurvives, the ſurvivor ſhall be as a truſtee for the others, in reſpect of the ſums paid by each. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 291. So, if where two having purchaſed jointly, afterwards one lays out a conſiderable ſum on improvements, &c. and dies, in equity it ſhall be a lien on the lands, and a truſt for the repreſentative of him who advanced it. Ibid.

A rent of 10*l.* a year is granted to A. and B. to hold to one until he marry, and to the other till he is preſented to ſuch a church; it was holden they were jointenants, and that if either of them die before marriage or preſentment, the rent ſhall ſurvive. Co. Lit. 180. if lands are given to two men, and the heirs of their bodies, the remainder to them and their heirs; they ſhall be jointenants for life, tenants in common of the eſtate tail, and jointenants of the fee-ſimple. Ibid. 183. But where a remainder is limited to the right heirs of two perſons, in this caſe they ſhall take ſeverally, though the words be joint. 5 Rep. 8. Land is granted to a man, and ſuch woman as ſhall be his wife; here is no jointenancy, but the man will have the whole: Though if one make a feoffment in fee to the uſe of himſelf, and of ſuch wife as he ſhall after marry, for their lives; when he takes a wife, they are jointenants. Co. Lit. 188. 1 Rep. 101.

One perſon is in by the Common law, and another by limitation of uſe, yet they may be jointenants by virtue of a deed of grant, &c. Jenk. Cent. 330. Lands given in the premiſſes of a deed to three, to hold to one for life, remainder to another for life, remainder to the third for life, they are not jointenants, but ſhall take ſucceſſively. Dyer 160.

There may be a jointenancy, tho' there is not equal benefit of ſurvivorſhip on both ſides. 1 Inſt. 181. When a fee-ſimple eſtate is limited by a new conveyance, there one may have the fee, and another an eſtate for life; but when two perſons are tenants for life firſt, and one of them gets the fee-ſimple, there the jointure is ſevered. 2 Rep 6. If a reverſion deſcend upon one jointenant, the jointure is ſevered, and by operation of law they are then tenants in common. 1 Bulſt. 113. And a diverſity has been taken, that where the reverſion comes to the freehold, the jointure is deſtroyed; but when the freehold comes to him in reverſion, and to another, it is otherwiſe. Cro. Eliz. 470, 743.

Two infants are jointenants, and one of them makes a feoffment of his moiety: this will be a ſeverance of the jointenancy. Bro. Jointen. 13. A jointenant in fee grants a leaſe for life, and then dies; it ſevers the jointure: Tho' if the tenant for life die before either of the jointenants, then it is in ſtatu quo prius. Co Litt. 193. If there be two jointenants in fee, and one makes a leaſe for life to a ſtranger, the freehold and reverſion is ſevered from the jointure: But in caſe one ſuch jointenant leaſes for years, the jointure of the inheritance is not ſevered; and the other jointenant ſhall have the reverſion by ſurvivorſhip. Lut. 729, 1173. See poſt. Two jointenants are of a leaſe for twenty-one years, and one lets his part but for three years, the jointure is ſevered, ſo that ſurvivorſhip ſhall not take place. 1 Inſt. 188, 192. In caſe three perſons are jointly intereſted in a term, and one of them mortgages his third part; by this it has been held, the jointenancy was ſevered. 1 Salk. 158. But where one jointenant of lands, in order to ſever the jointenancy, and provide for his wife, makes a deed of gift of his moiety to her; this being made to the wife, and ſo void in law, cannot be made good. Preced. Canc. 124.

If two jointenants be of a term, and one commits felony, or is outlawed, &c. the jointure will be ſevered; for the King ſhall have the moiety by the forfeiture: And if the jointenancy is of perſonal things, all will be forfeited. Plowd. 410.

Where there are ſeveral jointenants in fee-tail, and ſome of them ſuffer a common recovery of the whole, the eſtate of the others is turned to a right; and contingent remainders may be deſtroyed, and a new eſtate gained thereby. Sid. 241. And if one jointenant levies a fine, it ſevers the jointenancy; but it doth not amount to an actual turning out of his companion. 1 Salk. 286. A jointenant in fee makes a leaſe for years, of the land, to begin preſently, or in futuro, and dies, it is a ſeverance of the jointenancy, and cannot be avoided by the ſurvivor; becauſe immediately, by force of the leaſe, the leſſee hath a right in the ſame land, of all that to the leſſor belongs. Lit. 286. See ante, and poſt. And it has been held, that where a jointenant in fee or for life, makes a leaſe for years to commence after his death, it is good againſt the ſurvivor. 2 Cro. 91. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1037. But it has been alſo adjudged not good. Moor 776. Noy 157. See 2 Vern. 323.

If there are two jointenants for life, it is ſaid each of them hath an eſtate for life, and for the life of his companion; and for that reaſon, if one of them make a leaſe, it ſhall continue not only during the life of the leſſor, but after his death during the life of his companion, as long as the original eſtate out of which it was derived: Tho' it hath been reſolved, that ſuch a jointenant hath only an eſtate for his own life, and a poſſibility of ſurviving his companion to be entitled to his part; therefore if he grants over his eſtate, that poſſibility is gone; and if he dies, the eſtate of the grantee ſhall revert to him in reverſion. 1 Roll. 441. Jones 55. 3 Salk. 204, 205.

If one jointenant grants a rent-charge, &c. out of his part, and dies, the ſurvivor ſhall have the whole land diſcharged: For he hath the land by ſurvivorſhip, and not by diſcent from his companion. Litt. 286. 1 Co. Inſt. 184. And if one jointenant in fee, makes a leaſe for years, reſerving a rent, and dieth; the ſurvivor ſhall have the reverſion, but not the rent, becauſe he claims by title paramount. Co. Lit. 18.

Jointenants, as to the poſſeſſion of lands in jointure, are ſeiſed by intireties of the whole, and of every part equally, (and the poſſeſſion of any jointenant is the poſſeſſion of both) but as to the right of the land, they are ſeiſed only of moieties, therefore if one grant the whole, a moiety only paſſeth. 1 Bulſt. 3. Cro. Eliz. 809. If there be two jointenants, and each make a ſeveral leaſe of the whole, their ſeveral moieties only ſhall paſs by each leaſe. Wilſ. par. 1. fol. 1. Jointenants cannot ſingly diſpoſe of more than the part that belongs to them; where they join in a feoffment, in judgment of law each of them gives but his reſpective part; ſo it is of a gift in tail, leaſe for life, &c. And for a condition broken, they ſhall only enter on a moiety of the lands. 1 Inſt. 186.

Every jointenant hath a right, as to his own ſhare, to ſeveral purpoſes, as to give, leaſe, forfeit, &c. But a deviſe of land, whereof the deviſor is jointly ſeiſed, is void; the will not taking effect till after death, and the title of the ſurvivor cometh by the death. 1 Inſt. 186. Litt. 287. One jointenant may leaſe to his companion: But one jointenant cannot make a feoffment, or grant to another jointenant, tho' he may releaſe. 1 Vent. 78. Raym 187. By whatever means a jointenant comes to the eſtate of his companion, by conveyance, &c. from him, it may enure by way of releaſe. 2 Cro. 649.

Action of treſpaſs or trover may not be brought by one jointenant againſt his companion, becauſe the poſſeſſion of one is the poſſeſſion of the other. 1 Salk. 290. Before the ſtatute 4 Ann. c. 16. one jointenant had no remedy againſt his companion, to recover damages for what he had received more than his ſhare; and a jointenant might prejudice his companion in the perſonalty, by reaſon of the privity and truſt between them, tho' not in the realty; but that ſtatute gives action of account to one jointenant or tenant in common, his executors or adminiſtrators, againſt the other, as bailiff or receiver, his executors, &c. One jointenant may diſtrain for rent alone; and he may avow in his own right, and as bailiff to the others, but he cannot avow ſolely; and he may not bring debt alone. 5 Mod. 73, 150.

If a jointenant in fee-ſimple, is indebted to the King, and dieth; the lands cannot be extended in the hands of the ſurvivor; who claimeth not from his companion, but from the feoffor, &c. 1 Inſt. 185. Where there are two jointenants, and one is indebted to the King, and dieth, the other ſhall hold the land diſcharged of the debt: But if huſband and wife have a term jointly, and the huſband is indebted to the King, and dieth, in ſuch caſe the term ſhall be ſubject to the debt, becauſe the huſband might have diſpoſed of the whole eſtate. Plowd. 321.

Judgment in action of debt, is had againſt one jointenant for life, who before execution releaſes to his companion; adjudged that the moiety is ſtill liable to the judgment during the life of the releaſor; but if he had died before execution, the ſurvivor ſhould have had the land diſcharged of the debt and judgment. 6 Rep. 78. Huſband and wife were jointenants, and action was brought againſt the huſband alone, who made default, thereupon the wife prayed to be received; but it was not allowed, becauſe ſhe was not a party to the writ; but he in reverſion may be received, and plead jointenancy in abatement of the writ. Moor 242.

If a feme ſole and A. B. purchaſe a term for years jointly, and afterwards intermarry, the jointenancy continues. Dyer. 318. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1035. Sed qu. if the huſband may not diſpoſe of the whole as the wife's intereſt is only a chattel? See the next caſe. And where there are two women, jointenants of a leaſe for years, and one taketh huſband, and dies, the term ſhall ſurvive; if the huſband hath not aliened her part, and ſevered the jointure: But it is otherwiſe in caſe of goods, veſted in the huſband by marriage. 1 Inſt. 185. Jointenants ſometimes enter into covenants not to take advantage of each other by ſurvivorſhip. Wood's Inſt. 148.

When there are two jointenants, and one aliens his part, the alienee and the other jointenant are tenants in common; for they claim by ſeveral titles. Lit. 292, 319, 321. And jointenants and tenants in common of inheritance, by ſtatute, are to make partition, as coparceners; ners; alſo jointenants and tenants in common for life or years, may be compelled to do the ſame by writ of partition, &c. 31 H. 8. c. 1. 32 H. 8. c. 32. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 31.

The King cannot be jointenant with any perſon, becauſe none can be equal with him. 1 Inſt. 1. Finch. 83. And Black. Com. 2 V. 409. And a corporation cannot be jointly ſeiſed of any eſtate with another. 2 Lev. 12.

The eſſential difference between joint-tenants and tenants in common is, that joint-tenants have the lands by one joint title, and in one right, and tenants in common by ſeveral titles, or by one title and by ſeveral rights; this is the reaſon, ſays lord Coke, that joint-tenants have one joint freehold, and tenants in common have ſeveral freeholds, tho' this property is common to them both, viz. that their occupation is individed, and neither of them knoweth his part in ſeveral. Co Lit. 189. a.

If there be two joint-tenants, and one releaſeth to the other, this paſſeth a fee without the word heirs, becauſe it refers to the whole fee, which they jointly took, and are poſſeſſed of, by force of the firſt conveyance; but tenants in common cannot releaſe to each other; for a releaſe ſuppoſeth the party to have the thing in demand; but tenants in common have ſeveral diſtinct freeholds, which they cannot transfer, otherwiſe than as perſons who are ſole ſeiſed. Co. Lit. 9. 200. b.

Tenants in common cannot make a joint leaſe of the whole, for their eſtates are ſeveral and diſtinct, and there is no privity between them, and for that reaſon, one tenant in common may enfeoff another. Wilſ. par. 2. 232.

Vide this ſubject fully and very learnedly treated of in 3 New Abr. 187, &c. And ſee farther as to joint-tenancy, in lands. Black. Com. 2 V. 180. and as to joint-tenancy in things perſonal. Ib. 2 V. 399.

Jointures of Lands. A jointure is a ſettlement of lands and tenements made to a woman in conſideration of marriage; or it is a covenant, whereby the huſband, or ſome friend of his, aſſureth to the wife, lands or tenements, for term of her life: It is ſo called, either becauſe it is granted ratione juncturæ in matrimonio, or for that land in frank-marriage was given jointly to huſband and wife, and after to the heirs of their bodies, whereby the huſband and wife were made as it were jointenants during the coverture. 3 Rep. 27. By ſome a jointure is defined to be a bargain and contract of livelihood, adjoined to the contract of marriage; being a competent proviſion of freehold lands or tenements, &c. for the wife, to take effect after the death of the huſband, if ſhe herſelf is not the cauſe of the determination or forfeiture of it. 1 Inſt. 36. 4 Rep. 2, 3.

According to Co. Lit. 36. b. The maxims of the Common law, that no right could be barred before it accrued; and that a right or title to a freehold could not be barred by acceptance of a collateral ſatisfaction, and thoſe reaſons allowing the wife to claim her dower, and alſo the benefit of ſuch ſettlement as was made on her, which being contrary to juſtice. By 27 H. 8. c. 10. ſ. 6. Reciting, ‘ That whereas divers perſons had purchaſed, or ‘ had eſtates made and conveyed of and in, divers lands, ‘ &c. unto them and their wives, and to the heirs of the ‘ huſband, or to the huſband and wife, and to the heirs ‘ of their bodies, or to the huſband and wife for term of ‘ their lives, or for term of life of the wife." 'Tis enacted, ‘ That in ſuch caſe, or where any ſuch eſtate or ‘ purchaſe of any lands, &c. hath been or hereafter ſhall ‘ be made to any huſband and to his wife in manner and ‘ form above expreſſed, or to any other perſon or perſons, and to their heirs and aſſigns, to the uſe and ‘ behoof of the ſaid huſband and wife, or to the uſe of ‘ the wife, as is before rehearſed, for the jointure of ‘ the wife; that then, in every ſuch caſe, every woman ‘ married having ſuch jointure made, or hereafter to be ‘ made, ſhall not claim nor have title to any dower of the ‘ reſidue of the lands, tenements or hereditaments, that at ‘ any time were her ſaid huſband's, by whom ſhe hath any ‘ ſuch jointure; nor ſhall demand nor claim her dower of ‘ and againſt them that have the lands and inheritances of ‘ her ſaid huſband; but if ſhe have no ſuch jointure, then ‘ ſhe ſhall be admitted and enabled to purſue, have, and ‘ demand her dower, by writ of dower, after the due courſe ‘ and order of the Common law of this realm; this act or ‘ any law or proviſion made to the contrary thereof not- ‘ withſtanding.'

Sect. 7. Provided, ‘ That if any ſuch woman be law- ‘ fully expulſed or evicted from her ſaid jointure, or from ‘ any part thereof, without any fraud or covin, by law- ‘ ful entry, action; or by diſcontinuance of her huſband, ‘ then every ſuch woman ſhall be endowed of as much of ‘ the reſidue of her huſband's tenements or hereditaments ‘ whereof ſhe was before dowable, as the ſame lands and ‘ tenements ſo evicted and expulſed ſhall amount or ex- ‘ tend unto.'

Sect. 9. Provided alſo, ‘ That if any wife have, or ‘ hereafter ſhall have, any manors, lands, tenements or ‘ hereditaments unto her given or aſſured after marriage ‘ for term of her life or otherwiſe, in jointure, except ‘ the ſame aſſurance be to her made by act of parliament, ‘ and the ſaid wife after that fortune to overlive her ‘ huſband in whoſe time the ſaid jointure was made or ‘ aſſured unto her; that then the ſame wife ſo over- ‘ living ſhall and may at her liberty at the death of her ‘ ſaid huſband refuſe to have and take the lands and ‘ tenements ſo to her given, appointed, or aſſured dur- ‘ ing the coverture, for term of her life or otherwiſe, ‘ in jointure, except the ſame aſſurance be to her made ‘ by act of parliament as is aforeſaid, and thereupon to ‘ have, aſk, demand, and take her dower by writ of ‘ dower or otherwiſe, according to the Common law, of ‘ and in all ſuch lands, tenements and hereditaments, ‘ as her huſband was and ſtood ſeiſed of any eſtate of ‘ inheritance at any time during the coverture; any ‘ thing, &c.'

To make a good jointure within this ſtatute, the ſix following things are to be regarded:

1. The eſtate muſt take effect immediately upon the death of the huſband. Vide 4 Co. 3. Hutton 51. Hob. 151. Winch 33. 1 Sid. 3, 4. Per Bridgman. Co. Lit. 133. Moor 851. 3 Bulſt. 188. 1 Rol. Rep. 400. 2 Vern. 104.

2. The eſtate muſt be for term of the wife's life, or a greater eſtate. Vide Co. Lit. 36. a. b. 4. Co. 2. b. 3. a.

3. The eſtate muſt be made to herſelf and not to others in truſt for her. This rule, my Lord Coke ſays, is ſo neceſſary to be obſerved, that tho' the wife ſhould aſſent to a jointure made in truſt for her, yet it would not be good; for the ſtatute only bars the dower when by it the poſſeſſion (which was formerly an uſe) is executed in her. Co. Lit. 36. b.

But as the intention of the ſtatute was to ſecure the wife a competent proviſion, and alſo to exclude her from claiming dower, and likewiſe her ſettlement, it ſeems that a proviſion or ſettlement on the wife, tho' by way of truſt, if in other reſpects it anſwers the intention of the ſtatute, will be enforced in a court of equity.

4. The eſtate muſt be in ſatisfaction of her whole dower. The reaſon hereof is, that if it be in ſatisfaction of part only, it is uncertain for what part, therefore void in the whole. Co. Lit. 36. b.

If an eſtate be made to the wife, in ſatisfaction of part of her dower before marriage, and after marriage, other lands are conveyed to her, ſhe ſhall have dower of all the lands of her husband, notwithſtanding the ſettlement is in ſatisfaction of part. 4 Co. 5.

5. The eſtate muſt be expreſſed to be in ſatisfaction of her dower; and how far a collateral recompence ſhall be a bar of dower or jointure. Lord Coke ſays, that it muſt be expreſſed, or averred to be, in ſatisfaction of her dower; but quære, for this does not ſeem requiſite, either within the words or intention of the ſtatute. Co. Lit. 36. b. Vide Owen 3. 4 Co. 4. Moor pl. 103. Cro. Eliz 128. Goſling v. Warburton. Dyer 220. 2 Vent. 340. 1 Chan. Caſes 181. Pheaſant's caſe.

It hath been often ruled in Chancery, that if lands, money, goods, &c. are deviſed to a woman, without ſaying in lieu or ſatisfaction of dower, &c. the wife ſhall have both; becauſe a deviſe is to be conſidered as a bounty, and implies a conſideration in itſelf, but if it be ſaid in lieu or recompence of dower, there the wife cannot have both, but may waive which ſhe pleaſes. 2 Chan. Caſes 24. 2 Vern. 365. Preced. Chan. 133. Alſo vide Bro. Dow. 69. 4 Rep. 4. Dyer 220. 2 Vent. 365. Lawrence v. Lawrence. Abr. Eq. 218-9. S. C. and vide 1 Vern. 463. And Jordan v. Savage. 3 New Abr. 226.

6. The eſtate muſt not be made during the coverture. This the very words of the act of parliament require, therefore if a jointure be made to a woman during coverture in ſatisfaction of dower, ſhe may waive it after her huſband's death; but if ſhe enters and agrees thereto, ſhe is concluded; for tho' a woman is not bound by any act when ſhe is not at her own diſpoſal, yet if ſhe agrees to it when ſhe is at liberty, it is her own act, and ſhe cannot avoid it. 4 Co. 3. Alſo vide Co. Lit. 29. b. 36. b. 348. a. 357. 1 Bulſ. 163. Moor 717. pl. 1002. Perk. 352—3. 3 Co. 27. 3 Leon. 272. Cro. Jac. 490. Dyer 351. Hob. 72. 2 Rol. Abr. 422.

All other ſettlements in lieu of jointure, not made according to the ſtatute, are jointures at Common law, and no bars to claim of dower: And a jointure was no bar of dower before this ſtatute; as a right or title to a freehold cannot be barrred by acceptance of a collateral ſatisfaction. Co. Lit. 36. A father made a ſettlement to the uſe of himſelf for life, and afterwards to the uſe of his ſon and his wife, for their lives, for the jointure of the wife; this was adjudged no jointure to bar the wife of her dower, becauſe it might not commence immediately after the death of the husband, who might die in the life-time of the father. 2 Cro. 489. So, if a feoffment be made to the uſe of the husband for life, remainder to another for years, remainder to the wife for life for her jointure. Ibid. But a feoffment in fee, upon condition that the feoffee ſhall make another feoffment to the uſe of the ſon of the feoffor, and to his ſon's wife in tail, remainder to the right heirs of the feoffor, which feoffment is made accordingly; this is a good jointure within the ſtatute, and bar to the dower of the wife. Moor 28.

An eſtate ſettled in jointure, coming from the anceſtors of the wife, and not of the purchaſe of the husband or his anceſtors, is not within the ſtatute 11 H. 7. c. 20. as to diſcontinuances, alienations, &c. Where a father of the intended wife, in conſideration of marriage, &c. covenanted to aſſure lands to the husband and wife, his (the covenantor's) daughter, and the heirs of her body, &c. this was held no jointure, within the meaning of the ſtatute 11 H. 7. c. 20. being an advancement of the woman by her own father. 2 Cro. 264. 2 Lill. Abr. 80. And an eſtate in fee-ſimple conveyed to a woman for her jointure, was not any jointure within the ſtatute; which never extended to lands granted to women in fee: But an eſtate in fee, conveyed to a woman for her jointure, and in ſatisfaction of her dower, is a jointure within the ſtatute 27 H. 8. c. 10. 4 Rep. 3.

Yet an eſtate for life is the uſual jointure: And an eſtate for life upon condition, may bar the wife if ſhe accepts it; as a jointure to a woman on condition to perform the husband's will, was judged good, where the wife entered and agreed to the eſtate. 3 Rep. 1, 2, &c. If no inheritance is reſerved to the husband and his heirs, but the eſtate is limited to the wife for life, or in tail, the remainder to a ſtranger; it is not a jointure within the ſtat. 11 H. 7. c. 20. tho' made by the husband or his anceſtor. Cro. Eliz. 2. A husband covenanted to ſtand ſeiſed of lands, to the uſe of himſelf and his heirs, till the marriage ſhould take effect; and afterwards to himſelf, his wife, and their heirs; and it was adjudged a good jointure within the ſtatute 27 H. 8. c. 10. Dyer 248. A deviſe to a wife for life, or in tail, for her jointure, is good within this ſtatute: But a deviſe to a wife generally, without expreſſing what eſtate, is not good; becauſe it cannot be averred to be for her jointure. 3 Rep. 1. Though where an aſſurance was made to a woman, and it was not expreſſed to be made for her jointure; it was held it might be averred to be made for that purpoſe, which is not traverſable. Owen. 33.

A man makes his wife a jointure after marriage; and afterwards by will deviſes, that ſhe ſhall have a third part of all his lands, with her jointure; here the wife will have the third part of all as a legacy, and if ſhe waives her jointure, ſhe may have a third part of the reſidue for dower. Dyer 62. If a maſter, in conſideration of ſervice done by his ſervant, grants lands to the ſervant and a woman he intends to marry, and the heirs of their bodies, creating an eſtate-tail; this is not a jointure; not being a gift of the husband, or any of his anceſtors, but of his maſter, and in conſideration of ſervice, which will not make the husband ſuch a purchaſer as the law requires. Moor 683. But as to conſiderations, if an eſtate is ſettled in jointure upon a woman, in conſideration of money paid, and alſo of a marriage to be had; the marriage ſhall be looked upon to be the conſideration. Cro. Jac. 474. A husband, tenant in tail, remainder to his wife for life, makes a feoffment in fee to the uſe of himſelf and wife for life, for her jointure; it is no bar to the wife's dower, becauſe it may be avoided by a remitter to her firſt eſtate for life. Moor 872. If lands are conveyed to a woman before marriage, in part of her jointure only, and after marriage, other lands are granted in full; it is ſaid ſhe may waive and refuſe the lands conveyed to her after coverture, and retain her firſt jointure lands and dower alſo. 3 Rep. 1, 5. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1039.

Where a jointure is made of lands (according to the direction of the ſtatute of 27 H. 8. 10.) before coverture, and after the husband and wife alien them by fine, ſhe ſhall not have dower in any other lands of her husband; but it is otherwiſe where the jointure is made after marriage, when the wife's eſtate is waivable, and her election of chooſing comes not till the death of the husband. 1 Inſt. 36. A man levies a fine of his land, and it is granted back again to him and his wife for her jointure, and to the heirs of the husband; then he and his wife levy a fine to another uſe, the wife, if ſhe ſurvive her husband, will have dower notwithſtanding the fine. 1 And. 350. If the husband make a leaſe of lands to his friends, for any number of years, in truſt for his wife and children, that ſhe ſhall have 100*l*. a year out of it, or in any ſuch manner; by this ſhe may have the proviſion, which is no jointure, and likewiſe her dower. By Bridgman Ch. J. An eſtate is made to husband in tail, with remainder to the wife for life, and remainder to others; this is not ſuch a jointure, as with her acceptance within the ſtatute will hinder her from dower; and tho' the husband die without iſſue, it will not help it, but the wife ſhall be endowed in his other land: But if the eſtate were made to the husband and wife for their lives, it would be otherwiſe. 13 Jac. 1. B. R. 2 Shep. Abr. 74.

After the death of the husband, the wife may enter into her jointure, and is not driven to a real action, as ſhe is to recover dower by the Common law; and upon a lawful eviction of her jointure, ſhe ſhall be endowed according to the rate of her husband's land, whereof ſhe was dowable at Common law. Co. Lit. 37. Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. If ſhe be evicted of part of her jointure, ſhe ſhall have dower pro tanto. A wife's jointure ſhall not be forfeited by the treaſon of the husband: But feme-coverts committing treaſon or felony, may forfeit their jointures; and being convict of recuſancy, they ſhall forfeit two parts in three of their jointures and dower, by ſtatute 3 Jac. 1. c. 4. If a woman conceals her jointure, and brings dower and recovers it, and then ſets up her jointure, ſhe is barred of her jointure; and by bringing writ of dower for her thirds, the wife waives the benefit of entry into lands, ſo as to hold them in jointure. *Cro. Jointreſs or Jointureſs, Is ſhe who hath an eſtate ſettled on her by the husband, to hold during her life, if ſhe ſurvive him. 17 H. 8. c. 10. 1 Inſt. 46. When eſtates ſettled on a wife are a jointure, if the jointreſs makes any alienation of them by fine, feoffment, &c. with another husband, it is a forfeitutre of the ſame; but if they are not a jointure by law, it is otherwiſe. 2 Nelſ. 1040. A jointreſs within the ſtatute may make a leaſe for forty years, &c. if ſhe ſo long live; and alſo for life, and be no forfeiture. tho' ſhe levies a fine ſur cogniſance de droit, &c. Cro. Jac. 688. 3 Rep. 50. 1 Lill. 81. In other caſes, if ſhe levies a fine, it is a forfeiture; and if a jointreſs within the ſtatute 11 H. 7. c. 20. ſuffer a recovery covinouſly to bar the heir, the heir may enter preſently, &c. 2 Leon. 206. 1 Plowd. 42.

Jour, (Fr.) A day, uſed in heads of our old law; touts jours for ever. Law Fr. Dict.

Journal, Is a day-book or diary of tranſaction, uſed in many caſes: As by merchants and other tradeſmen in their accounts; by mariners in obſervations at ſea, &c.

Journals of Parliament, Are not records, but remembrances, and have been of no long continuance. Hob. Rep. 109.

Journchoppers, Were regrators of yarn, which formerly perhaps was called journ, They are mentioned in the ſtat. 8 H. 6. c. 5.

Journeyman, (from the Fr. journée, i. e. A day, or day's work) Was properly one who wrought with another by the day; tho' it is extended by ſtatute to thoſe alſo who covenant to work with others in their trades or occupation by the year. 5 Eliz. c. 4.

Journeys Accounts, (dietæ computatæ) Is a term in law thus underſtood: if a writ abates by the death of the plaintiff or defendant, or for falſe Latin, want of form, &c. the plaintiff ſhall have a new writ by journeys accounts, i. e. within as little time as he poſſibly can after the abatement of the firſt writ; and this ſecond writ ſhall be a continuance of the cauſe, as if the firſt writ had not abated. Terms de Ley. When the new writ is purchaſed, which muſt be recenter, the plaintiff is to recite in an entry upon the roll, that the former writ was abated, and ſhew for what: Super quo per dietas computat. recenter talit quoddam aliud breve, &c. 6 Rep. 10. This writ is to be brought preſently; and fifteen days is held a convenient time for the purchaſe of the new writ. 2 Lill. Abr. 83. 1 Lut. 297. Judicial writs ſhall never be had by journeys accounts; becauſe they never abate for form. The abatement of the writ muſt be without the default of the plaintiff, or a ſecond writ may not be purchaſed by journeys accounts: If a writ abates for the plaintiff's default, in his miſtaking the name of the vill, &c. he ſhall not have a writ of journeys accounts; but where it abates by default of the clerk, for any variance or want of form, in ſuch caſe he may have it. 6 Rep. 10. And when an outlawry is diſcharged or reverſed, the plaintiff may have writ of journeys accounts; for there is no default in him. Cro. Jac. 590. The writ muſt be brought for the ſame thing, and in the ſame court, as the firſt writ.

This learning is now of little uſe, it being cuſtomary to enter a judgment that the writ be quaſhed, and then to ſue forth another.

And by Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. ſect. 7. The death of one plaintiff or defendant where there is another ſurviving, not to abate the ſuit. The death to be ſuggeſted on the roll.

And by ſect. 6. death of the party after interlocutory judgment ſhall not abate the ſuit.

Ipſo facto, Is where the ſame perſon obtains two or more preferments in the church with cure, not qualified by diſpenſation, &c. the firſt living is void ipſo facto, viz. without any declaratory ſentence, and the patron may preſent to it. Dyer 275. And there is not only deprivation of a clergyman ipſo facto; but for crimes in ſtriking perſons in a church or church-yard, the offenders are to be excommunicated ipſo facto. Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 4. An eſtate or leaſe may be ipſo facto void by condition, &c. 1 Inſt 45, 215.

Ipſwich, The bailiffs and port-men, &c. of Ipſwich, may tax every houſe in reaſonable ſums to be yearly paid, towards finding a miniſter within every pariſh, and for the reparation of the churches; Alſo the ſtreets there ſhall be paved, by the landlords of houſes or tenements, under certain penalties. Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 24.

Ireland, Is a diſtinct kingdom from England, but ſubordinate to it in government; and by Poyning's Law (enacted in Ireland, Anno 10 Hen. 7.) all the ſtatutes of England, till that time were declared in force in Ireland:

And by ſpecial words, our ſtatutes STILL MAY BIND THE PEOPLE of Ireland, NOTWITHSTANDING THEY HAVE PARLIAMENTS OF THEIR OWN, who make laws and ſtatutes, being affirmed here by the King and Council. 1 Inſt. 141. 2 Inſt. 2. 3 Inſt. 18.

It would be the moſt amazing of all political paradoxes, if the SUPREME POWER of the STATE, which reſides in the KING, LORDS, and COMMONS, IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED, could not make laws to bind every part of the BRITISH EMPIRE! Whether, in ſome caſes, it is PRUDENT to exert that power, is a queſtion of a very different kind from the former. Of the PROPRIETY, moderate and impartial men will ſuppoſe the KING and the GREAT COUNCIL OF THE NATION, the beſt judges.

In the proceedings of the Iriſh parliament; firſt the lieutenant and council certify to the King the cauſes and conſiderations of all ſuch acts, as ſeem good to them to be paſſed in parliament; and licence, under the Great Seal of England, is obtained to ſummon and hold a parliament in Ireland: If the acts are affirmed, or altered or changed here, they are tranſcribed and returned into Ireland under the Great Seal: and all that paſſes ought to be inrolled here in the Chancery. 12 Rep. 111, 112. See Infra.

Treaſon committed in Ireland, by an Iriſh peer, is not triable in England, becauſe he is entitled to a trial by his peers, which cannot be in England, but Ireland. Dyer 360. But the Houſe of Lords of England, have power to reverſe or affirm the decrees of the court of Chancery, &c. of Ireland: And the King's Bench here may reverſe a judgment given in B. R. in Ireland, by directing a writ of error to the Chief Juſtice there, to ſummon the party to appear here, &c.

B. R. in England cannot iſſue a writ to the ſheriffs of Ireland, but in error may direct the court of B. R. or C. B. in Ireland to iſſue ſuch writ. Annally, 50, 51.

By ſtatute 17 Ed. 1. c. 1. No pardon for the death of a perſon, or for felony, ſhall be granted by the juſtices of Ireland, but at the King's command, and under his ſeals.

By 34 Ed. 3. c. 18. all kinds of merchandiſes may be exported and imported from and to Ireland, by aliens as well as deniſens: But wool, and woollen manufactures, &c. are prohibited to be exported from thence into foreign parts by a modern ſtatute. And by the 32 Car. 2. c. 2. cattle, butter, cheeſe, &c. are not to be imported from Ireland into this kingdom, on pain of forfeiture to the poor. Yet ſometimes temporary acts are paſſed, permitting the importation from Ireland, of various kinds of proviſions, i. e. as particular occaſions require.

The ſtatute 1 W. & M. c. 9. enacted and declared, "That the pretended parliament aſſembled at Dublin, was "an unlawful aſſembly; and that all acts done by them are "void." All cities, boroughs, &c. were reſtored by this ſtatute to their privileges, and the proceedings againſt them vacated; and all Proteſtants reſtored to their poſſeſſions, &c. By 3 W. & M. c. 2. members of parliament, officers in the government, eccleſiaſtical perſons, lawyers, &c. in Ireland, are to take the oaths, or be liable to forfeitures.

Acts of parliament made in England ſince the act of 10 H. 7. do not bind them in Ireland; but all acts made in England before 10 H. 7. do bind them in Ireland by the ſaid act made in Ireland. 10 H. 7. cap. 22. 12 Rep. 111. This means where Ireland is not expreſſed in thoſe acts.

Lord Coke in 2 Inſt. 2. ſays, that by this law [but there cites it as made 11 H. 7.] Magna Charta extends to Ireland. 4 Inſt. 351. recites the ſtatute more fully, and ſays that acts of parliament made in England ſince that time, wherein Ireland is not particularly named or generally included, extend not thereunto; for tho' it be governed by the ſame law, yet it is a diſtinct realm or kingdom, and hath parliaments there. S. P. Arg. Cart. 180, 198. cites And. 262. Orork's caſe. 2 Vent. 4 & 5 7 Rep. 23. in Calvin's caſe. Jenk. 164. pl. 14.

Irons, to ſecure priſoners. According to Blackſtone, in his Com. 4 V. 297. Impriſonment (before trial) is only for ſafe cuſtody, and not for puniſhment: therefore, in the dubious interval between the commitment and trial, a priſoner ought to be uſed with the utmoſt humanity; and neither be loaded with needleſs fetters, or ſubjected to other hardſhips than ſuch as are abſolutely requiſite for the purpoſe of confinement only: though what are ſo requiſite, muſt too often be left to the diſcretion of the gaolers; who are frequently a merciletſ race of men, and by being converſant in ſcenes of miſery, ſteeled againſt any tender ſenſation.

Yet the law will not juſtify them in fettering a priſoner, unleſs he is unruly, or has attempted an eſcape: (2 Inſt 381. 3 Inſt. 34.) this being the humane language of our ancient lawgivers: "Cuſtodes pœnam ſibi commiſſorum non augeant, nec eos torqueant; ſed omni ſævitia remota, pietateque adhibita, judicia debite exequantur." Fleta, lib. 1. c. 26.

The ſame learned author, in the ſame Vol. fo. 317, ſaith, The priſoner is to be called to the bar by his name; and it is laid down in our ancient books, that, though under an indictment of the higheſt nature, he muſt be brought to the bar without irons, or any manner of ſhackles or bonds; unleſs there be evident danger of an eſcape, and then he may be ſecured with irons. The purchaſe was completed in the year 1765, and confirmed by ſtatute 5 Geo. 3. c. 26 & 39. whereby the whole Iſland and all its dependencies, (formerly granted) except the landed property of the Athol family, their manerial rights and emoluments, and the patronage of the biſhoprick and other eccleſiaſtical benefices, are unalienably veſted in the crown, and ſubjected to the regulations of the Britiſh exciſe and cuſtoms.

Iſſuable terms. Hilary and Trinity terms are uſually called iſſuable terms, from the making up of the iſſues therein. Though for cauſes tried in Middleſex and London, many iſſues are made up in Eaſter and Michaelmas terms.

Iſſue, (Exitus, from the Fr. Iſſuer, i. e. Emanare) Hath divers ſignifications in law; ſometimes it is taken for the children begotten between a man and his wife, ſometimes for profits growing from amerciaments and fines; ſometimes for the profits of lands and tenements: But it generally ſignifies the point of matter, iſſuing out of the allegations and pleas of the plaintiff and defendant in a cauſe, to be tried by a jury of twelve men. 1 Inſt. 126. 11 Rep. 10.

The iſſues concerning cauſes are of two kinds:

Upon matter of fact,
Matter of law.

An iſſue in fact is where the plaintiff and defendant have agreed upon a point to be tried by a jury; and iſſue in law is where there is a demurrer to a declaration, plea, &c. and a joinder in demurrer, which is an iſſue at law to be determined by the judges. 1 Inſt. 71, 72.

As to iſſues of fact, viz. whether the fact is true or falſe, which are triable by the jury, they are either

General
Special.

General, when it is left to the jury to try whether the defendant hath done any ſuch thing as the plaintiff lays to his charge; as when he pleads Not guilty to a treſpaſs, &c.

Special, is when ſome ſpecial matter, or material point alledged by the defendant in his defence, is to be tried; as in aſſault and battery, where the defendant pleads that the plaintiff ſtruck firſt, &c. 1 Inſt. 126. And when ſpecial matter is alledged by the defendant, both parties join thereupon, and ſo go to a trial by the jury, if it be quæſtio facti; or to a demurrer, if it be quæſtio juris.

There is alſo a general iſſue, wherein the defendant may give the ſpecial matter in evidence, for excuſe or juſtification, by virtue of ſeveral ſtatutes, made for avoiding prolixity of pleading; and upon the general iſſue in ſuch caſes, the defendant may give any thing in evidence, which proves the plaintiff hath no cauſe of action. 1 Inſt. 283. Matter amounting to the general iſſue, and ſpecial matter of juſtification, have been joined in one intire plea, and held good. 3 Lev. 41. And where there is an iſſue upon Not guilty, and there are other iſſues upon juſtifications, the trial of the general iſſue of Not guilty, is but matter of form, and the ſubſtance is upon the ſpecial matter. Cro. Jac. 599. But the general iſſue is pleaded, to put the plaintiff on proof of the fact.

In real actions, cauſes grown to iſſue are tried by a jury of twelve men of the county where the cauſe of action ariſes; and in criminal caſes, iſſues ought to be tried in the county where the offence was committed; but this hath admitted of ſome alteration by ſtatute. 3 Inſt. 80, 135. 2 Rep. 93.

The place ought not to be made part of the iſſue, in a tranſitory action; it is not material, as it is in real and mixed actions. Trin. 24 Car. B. R. If the place is material, and make a part of the iſſue, there the jury cannot find the fact in another place, becauſe, by the ſpecial pleading, the point in iſſue is reſtrained to a certain place; but upon the general iſſue pleaded, the jury may find all local things in another county, and where the ſubſtance of the iſſue is found, it is good, and the finding more may be ſurpluſage. 6 Rep. 46. If an iſſue is of two matters in two counties, trial may be in one county, by the ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. for that ſtatute extends to caſes where the matter in iſſue ariſes in two counties, and the trial is by one only, as well as where the matter in iſſue ariſes in two places in one county, and the trial is by one. 2 Lev. 121. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1050. Every iſſue is to be joined in ſuch a court that hath power to try it, otherwiſe the iſſue is not well joined; for if the cauſe cannot be tried, the iſſue is fruitleſs, and if it be tried, the trial is coram non judice. 21 Car. B. R. 2 Lil. Abr. 84.

Where an iſſue is not joined, there cannot be a good trial, nor ought judgment to be given. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1042. All iſſues are to be certain and ſingle, and joined upon the moſt material thing in the cauſe; that all the matter in queſtion between the parties may be tried. 23 Car. B. R. 2 Lil. 85. An immaterial iſſue joined, which will not bring the matter in queſtion to be tried, is not helped after verdict by the ſtatute of jeofails; but there muſt be a repleader: But an informal iſſue is helped. 18 Car. 2. B. R.

For the difference between an immaterial and informal iſſue, ſee Annaly 341. The ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 30. helps misjoining of iſſues.

A repleader may be awarded after verdict, for the badneſs and incertainty of the iſſue: And a judgment may be reverſed in error, being on an immaterial iſſue. 2 Lutw. 1608. 2 Lev. 194. On a joint treſpaſs by many perſons, there muſt be only one iſſue in each plea joined: And if ſeveral offences are alledged againſt the defendant, he ought to take all but one by proteſtation, and offer an iſſue upon that one, and no more. Moor 80. But in action for damages, according to the loſs which the plaintiff hath ſuſtained, every part ought to be put in iſſue. 1 Saund. 269. In action upon the caſe for ſervice done for a time certain, the defendant ought to put in iſſue all the time alledged in the declaration. Lutw. 1268. And upon a general iſſue in waſte, the plaintiff muſt ſhew his title. Ibid. 1547. Though when any ſpecial point is in iſſue, the plaintiff is not obliged to ſet forth any other matter. Cro. Eliz. 320. If there are ſeveral things in a declaration, upon which an iſſue may be joined, and it is joined on any of them, it is good; and an affirmative and an implied negative will make a good iſſue. Style 151, 210.

There muſt be in every iſſue an affirmation on the one part, as that the defendant owes ſuch a debt, &c. and a denial on the other part, as that he oweth not the debt, &c. And though the matter contradicts, yet there muſt be a negative and affirmative of it, to make a right iſſue. 1 Ventr. 213.

An iſſue may be of two affirmatives. Wilſ. par. 1. 6. Alſo a negative ſhould be as full as the affirmative, or it is no negative to make an iſſue; as if a defendant pleads a grant of four acres, and two acres only are denied, &c. 1 Rol. Rep. 86. It has been held, that iſſue ought not to be joined on a traverſe only, without anſwering in the affirmative, &c. 2 And. 6, 102. But where the matter, which is the gift or cauſe of the action is found, it has been adjudged good after verdict, though there was no negative and affirmative to make the iſſue; as where in debt upon bond the defendant pleads payment, and concludes to the country, without giving the plaintiff opportunity to deny the payment, if the jury in ſuch caſe find the money paid, it is good after verdict. Sid. 341.

Where there are two iſſues joined, one good and the other bad, if entire damages are given upon the trial on both iſſues, it will be error; but if ſeveral damages are found, the plaintiff may releaſe the damages on the bad iſſue, and have judgment for the reſt. 2 Lil. Abr. 87, 88. And it is ſaid judgment may be entered as to one part of the iſſue; and a nolle proſequi to another part of the ſame iſſue, where it may be divided. Paſch. 23 Car. B. R. Where two iſſues are joined, and a verdict only on one of them, it is a miſ-trial, and the judgment may be arreſted, and a venire facias de novo awarded, if error brought, the judgment muſt be arreſted. Annaly 246.

There may be a plea to iſſue to part, and a demurrer to part; which have no dependence on each other. 1 Saund. 338. Where the declaration of the plaintiff is good, and the plea of the defendant is ill; if the plaintiff in his replication tender an iſſue upon ſuch ill plea, and a trial is had, and it is found for the plaintiff, he ſhall have judgment. Cro. Car. 18. And generally, when a plea is bad, that the plaintiff might have demurred upon it, and he doth not, but takes iſſue, and it is found for the defendant; this is aided by the ſtatute of jeofails, and the defendant ſhall have judgment: So likewiſe where the replication is bad, and iſſue is taken upon it, and found for the plaintiff, he ſhall have judgment. Cro. Eliz. 455. Cro. Jac. 312. But there are many caſes where, if the plea or replication is bad in ſubſtance, it is not aided by the ſtatute of jeofails. See Com. Dig. V. 1. tit. Amendment.

If iſſue be taken on a dilatory plea, &c. and found againſt the defendant, final and peremptory judgment ſhall be given; but it is otherwiſe on a demurrer. Raym. 118. In ſuch caſe there muſt be a reſpondeat ouſter. A good iſſue is offered to the defendant, he ought not to plead over; and if he plead over, the plaintiff ſhall have judgment. 1 Saund. 318, 338. If he does not join iſſue, but demurs, it is the ſame.

The plaintiff's attorney is to be paid by the defendant's attorney for entering the plea; and for paper books, in ſpecial pleadings, &c. 2 Lil. 87, 88.

When iſſue is joined between the parties, it cannot be afterwards waived, if it be a good iſſue, without conſent of both parties: But where defendant pleads the general iſſue, and it is not entered, he may, within fonr days of the term, waive that iſſue, and plead ſpecially; and when the defendant pleads in abatement, he may at any time after waive his plea of ſpecial matter, and plead the general iſſue, unleſs there be a rule made for him to plead as he will ſtand by it. 12 W. 3. B. R. 3 Salk. 211.

If the plaintiff will not try the iſſue after joined, in ſuch time as he ought by the courſe of the court, the defendant may give him a rule to enter it; which if he does not he ſhall be nonſuit, &c. 2 Lil. 84. If the tender of the iſſue comes on the part of the plaintiff, the form of it is; And this he prays may be inquired by the record; or by the country; and when on the part of the defendant, And of this he puts himſelf upon the country; and The plaintiff doth the like, &c.

There are many acts of parliament, that enable the defendant to plead the general iſſue—Too numerous, to ſet forth in a dictionary.—We therefore refer the reader to the table to the ſtatutes, tit. General Iſſue, &c.

Iſſues on Sheriffs, Are for neglects and defaults, by amercement and fine to the King, levied out of the iſſues and profits of their lands; and double or treble iſſues may be laid on a ſheriff for not returning writs, &c. But they may be taken off before eſtreated into the Exchequer, by rule of court, on good reaſon ſhewn. 2 Lil. Abr. 89. Iſſues ſhall be levied on jurors, for non-appearance; tho' on reaſonable excuſe proved by two witneſſes, the juſtices may diſcharge the iſſues. Stat. 35 Hen. 8. cap. 6. Itinerant, (Itinerans) Travelling or taking a journey: And thoſe were anciently called Juſtices Itinerant, who were ſent with commiſſion into divers counties to hear cauſes.

The King's courts were formerly itinerant, being kept in the King's palace, and removing with his houſhold. The Common Pleas is now fixed by Magna Charta; but though the court of King's Bench is conſtantly held in Weſtminſter-Hall, yet there is nothing but cuſtom to fix it there, as it is ſuppoſed to be before the King, and if actually ſo, muſt be itinerant.

Jubilee, (Annus Jubilæus) The moſt ſolemn time of Feſtival at Rome, when the Pope gives his bleſſing and remiſſion of ſins. It was firſt inſtituted by Boniface the 8th, in the year 1300, who granted a plenary indulgence and remiſſion of ſins to all who ſhould viſit the churches of St. Peter and St. Paul at Rome in that year, and ſtay there fifteen days; and this he ordered to be obſerved once in every hundred years; which Pope Clement the 6th reduced to fifty years, anno 1350, and to be held upon the day of circumciſion of our Saviour: And Urban the 4th, in the year 1389, ordained it to be kept every thirty-three years, that being the age of our Saviour: After which, Pope Sixtus the 6th, reduced it to twenty-five years. In imitation of the grand jubilee of Rome, the Monks of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, every fiftieth year invited a great concourſe of people to come thither, and viſit the tomb of Thomas Becket. And King Edw. 3. in the fiftieth year of his age, which was 1362, cauſed his birth-day to be obſerved at court, in the name of a Jubilee; giving pardons, privileges, and other civil indulgences.

Jubilæus, Signified afterwards a man one hundred years old, and likewiſe a poſſeſſion or preſcription for fifty years. Si ager non invenietur in ſcriptione inquiratur de ſenioribus, &c. Et ſi ſub certo jubilæo manſit, ſine vituperatione maneat in æternum. Du Freſne.

Judaiſmus is alſo taken for the manſion or dwelling-place of the Jews in any town; as Wigorniam cepit et intravit, et Judaiſmum evertit. Riſhangor, p. 668. And it ſometimes ſignifies uſury: as, Empta fuit grangia, &c. domus obligata in magnis debitis in Judaiſmo. Mon. 1 tom. p. 834.

Judge, (Judex) Is a chief magiſtrate in the law, to try civil and criminal cauſes, and puniſh offences. He is appointed with a certain juriſdiction; and our King hath the nomination and appointment of judges. 2 Inſt. 56. A judge at his creation takes an oath, That he will ſerve the King, and indifferently adminiſter juſtice to all men, without reſpect of perſons, take no bribe, give no council where he is a party, nor deny right to any, tho' the King by his letters, or by expreſs words, command the contrary, &c. and he is anſwerable in body, land and goods. 18 Ed. 3. c. 1.

Judex eſt lex loquens, and ought to judge by law, and not by examples: by Glanvil a judge is called juſtitia in abſtracto, becauſe he ſhould be as is were juſtice itſelf. Co. Lit. 71. 7 Rep. 4. And all the commiſſions of judges are bounded with this limitation, Facturi quod ad juſtitiam pertinet ſecundum legem & conſuetudinem Angliæ.

There are ancient precedents of judges, who were fined when they tranſgreſſed the laws, though commanded by warrants from the King; and it is ſaid, that Earl Typteſt, who was a Chancellor, was beheaded, for acting upon the King's warrant againſt law. Burnet's Rich. 2. pag. 38.

The judges are to give judgment according to law, and what is alledged and proved: And they have a private knowledge, and a judicial knowledge, though they cannot judge of their own private knowledge, but may uſe their diſcretion; but where a judge has a judicial knowledge, he may and ought to give judgment according to it. Plowd. 82.

King Henry 4. demanded of Judge Gaſcoigne, if he ſaw one in his preſence kill A. B. and another perſon, who was not culpable, ſhould be indicted of this, and found Guilty before him, what he would do in this caſe; to which he anſwered, That he ought to reſpite the judgment againſt him, and relate the matter to the King, in order to procure him a pardon; for there he cannot acquit him, and give judgment according to his private knowledge. Ibid.

And the ſame King Henry, when his eldeſt ſon the Prince, was by the Lord Chief Juſtice committed to priſon, for a great miſdemeanor, thanked God that he had a ſon of that obedience, and a judge of that courage and impartiality. Stow.

The King in all caſes doth judge by his judges; who ought to be of counſel with priſoners: And if they are doubtful or miſtaken in matter of law, a ſtander-by may be allowed to inform the court, as amicus curiæ. 2 Inſt. 178. Our judges are to execute their offices in proper perſon, and cannot act by deputy, or transfer their power to others; as the judges of eccleſiaſtical courts may. 1 Rol. Abr. 382. Bro. Judges, 11. Yet where there are divers judges of a court of record, the act of any one of them is effectual; eſpecially if their commiſſions do not expreſly require more. 2 Hawk. 3. Though what a majority rules when preſent, is the act of the court. If on a demurrer or ſpecial verdict, the judges are divided in opinion, two againſt two, the cauſe muſt be adjourned into the Exchequer Chamber. 3 Mod. 156. And a rule is to be made for this purpoſe, and the record certified, &c. 5 Mod. 335. In fines levied all the judges of C. B. ought to be particularly named: But writs of certiorari to remove records out of that court, &c. are directed to the Chief Juſtice, without naming his companions. 1 H. 7. 27. Jenk. Cent. 167.

When a record is before the judges, they ought ex officio to try it: And they are to take notice of ſtatutes, and of the terms, &c. Ibid. 215, 298. No judge is compellable to deliver his opinion before-hand, in relation to any queſtion which may after come judicially before him. 3 Inſt. 29. Judges of the Common law, have no ordinary juriſdiction to examine witneſſes at their chambers; though by conſent of parties, and rule of court, they may on interrogatories; and ſome things done by judges at their chambers, in order to proceedings in court, are accounted as done by the court.

A judge ſhall not be generally excepted againſt, or challenged; or have any action brought againſt him, for what he does as judge. 1 Inſt. 294. 2 Inſt. 422. And to kill a judge of either bench, or of aſſiſe, &c. in his place adminiſtring juſtice, is treaſon: Alſo drawing a weapon only upon a judge, in any of the courts of juſtice, the offender ſhall loſe his right hand, forfeit his lands and goods, and ſuffer perpetual impriſonment. 25 Ed. 3. c. 2. 2 Inſt. 549. Judges are not in any way puniſhable for a mere error of judgment: And no action will lie againſt a judge for an erroneous judgment; or for a wrongful imſonment, &c. 2 Hawk. 4. 1 Mod. 184.

The judges of courts of record are freed from all proſecutions whatſoever, except in parliament, where they may be puniſhed, for any thing done by them in ſuch courts as judges; this is to ſupport their dignity and authority, and draw veneration to their perſons, and ſubmiſſion to their judgments: But if a judge will ſo far forget the dignity and honour of his poſt, as to turn ſolicitor in a cauſe which he is to judge, and privately and extrajudicially tamper with witneſſes, or labour jurors, he may be dealt with according to the ſame capacity to which he ſo baſely degrades himſelf. 12 Rep. 24. Vaugh. 138. S. P. C. 173.

Bribery in judges is puniſhable by loſs of office, fine and impriſonment; and by the Common law, bribery of judges in relation to a cauſe depending before them, has been puniſhed as treaſon. 1 Leon. 295. Cro. Jac. 65. 1 Hawk. 170. A judge ignorantly condemns a man to death for felony, when it is not felony; for this offence, the judge ſhall be fined and impriſoned, and loſe his office. Jenk Cent. 162. If a judge who hath no juriſdiction of the cauſe, give judgment of death and award execution, which is executed, ſuch judge is guilty of felony; and alſo the officer who executes the ſentence. H. P. C. 35. 10 Rep. 76. And if juſtices of peace, on indictment of treſpaſs, arraign a man of felony, and judge him to death, and he is executed, it is felony in them. H. P. C. 35. Dalt. cap. 98. A judge ought not to judge in his own cauſe, or in pleas where he is party. 8 Rep. 118.

If a fine be levied to a juſtice of Bank, he cannot take the conuſance; for he cannot be his own judge. 8 H. 6. 21. Br. Patents, pl. 15. cites S. C. per Martin. If a fine be levied by or to a juſtice in Bank, his name ſhall not be in the fine. 11 H. 6. 49. b.

So if a juſtice of Bank be ſued in Bank, he cannot record it; it ſhall be recorded by the other juſtices. So if a juſtice of Bank ſues there, he cannot record it, but it ſhall be recorded by the other juſtices. Ibid. If the chief juſtice of Bank be to ſue a writ there, the writ ſhall not be in his name, but in the name of the ſecondary. 8 H. 6. 19. b.

None may judge in his own cauſe. Ibid. See Herodii Directa, lib. 2. fol. 1440.———Arg. Bridgm. 11, 12. for it is a manifeſt contradiction that a man can be agent and patient in the ſame thing, and what Lord Coke ſays in Dr. Bonham's caſe is far from any extravagancy; for it is a very reaſonable and true ſaying, that if an act of parliament ſhould ordain, that the ſame perſon ſhould be party and judge, or, which is the ſame thing, judge in his own cauſe, it would be a void act of parliament; per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 687.

This is a ground in the feudal law alſo, as appears in the prelections of Weſenbech. cap. 17. fol. 401.

A juſtice cannot raſe a record, nor embezzle it, nor file an indictment which is not found, nor give judgment of death where the law does not give it; if he does, it is miſpriſion, he ſhall loſe his office, and make fine for miſpriſion; but it is not felony. *Br. Judger. In Cheſhire, to be judger of a town, is to ſerve on the jury there. Leiceſter's Hiſt. Antiq. 302.

Judgment, (judicium, quaſi juris dictum) Is the determination or ſentence of the judges upon the ſuit, &c. and the ancient words of judgments are, conſideratum eſt per curiam, &c. becauſe judgment is ever given by the court upon due conſideration had of the record and matter before them. 1 Inſt. 39. Of judgments, ſome are final, and ſome not, &c. And a judgment may be given not only upon trial of the iſſue; but by default, nihil dicit, confeſſion, or on demurrer; and outlawry is a judgment in itſelf, 1 Inſt. 167. 2 Inſt. 236. Finch. 457. There is likewiſe judgment for departing in deſpight of the court, without leave, in common recoveries, &c. And after an iſſue joined in a cauſe to be tried by the plaintiff and defendant, the plaintiff may, (if he will,) without going to trial of any verdict, accept of a judgment from the defendant, which judgment muſt be by relicta verificatione cognovit actionem; but on this judgment error may be brought without putting in bail, which it may not on judgment after verdict. 2 Lill. Abr. 104.

Judgment is ſometimes had with a ceſſat executio; and if the defendant gives a judgment, with ſtay of execution, till a certain day, the plaintiff may notwithſtanding ſue forth a capias or a fieri facias into the county where the action is laid, returnable before the day, to enable him at that day to take a teſtatum againſt the defendant; tho' he ſhall not in that caſe ſue out a capias to warrant a ſcire facias againſt the bail. Paſch. 22 Car. 2. Sed qu. If a capias is ſued out, whether the end for which it iſſued, is ever enquired into? If debt be brought againſt an executor upon the bond of the teſtator, and he pleads plene adminiſtravit, this is a confeſſion of the debt; and the plaintiff may have judgment with a ceſſat executio till the defendant hath aſſets. 4 Rep. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1052.

If the plaintiff or defendant die after interlocutory judgment, the action ſhall not abate. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. Judgment upon a demurrer to a declaration, &c. is no bar to any other action; becauſe it is not on the merits, and the plaintiff may afterwards make his declaration right, and then proceed. 2 Lill. 113. But other judgments may be pleaded in bar to any other action for the ſame cauſe; and judgment in an inferior court, may be alledged in bar to an action in a ſuperior court. 2 Lev. 93. A judgment on nil dicit, in caſe, treſpaſs, or covenant, &c. is not perfect, until writ of enquiry of damages taken out and executed upon it, of which notice is to be given the defendant, and the time of execution, &c. But in debt, it is a perfect judgment as ſoon as ſigned, &c. and there needs no writ of enquiry. 2 Lill. 105.

Judgment final ought not to be given upon default in real actions; but a grand cape upon default before appearance and a petit cape on default after appearance. 1 Lev. 105.

If in debt, part is found for the plaintiff, and the defendant acquitted of the reſidue, the judgment muſt be quod quer. in miſericordia for that part whereof the defendant is acquitted. Cro. Eliz. 699. But the ſtatute 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 12. takes away the capiatur in treſpaſs, aſſault, falſe impriſonment, &c. and there is in lieu thereof 6 s. 8 d. paid to the ſecondary for the fine before he ſigns judgment.

All judgments given in any court of record, muſt be duly entered: the plaintiff's attorney, four days after the poſtea is brought into court, if the rule for judgment is out, may enter judgment for his client by the courſe of the court. 2 Lill. Abr. 95. But on a rule for judgment, Sunday is not one of the four days; tho' the rule is given the laſt day of the term. After a rule to ſign judgment, there ought to be four days excluſive of the day on which the rule was made, before the judgment is ſigned, that the party may have a reaſonable time to bring writ of error: in C. B. they never give rules for ſigning judgment, but ſtay till the quarto die poſt, which makes but four days incluſive. Mod. Caſ. 241. A plaintiff got his judgment ſigned on the very day, but it was not executed till after the ſixth day, ſo that the defendant had time enough to bring a writ of error, or move any thing in arreſt of judgment: but the court of B. R. held the ſigning of the judgment to be irregular, it being before the day allowed by the rules of the court; and tho' execution was taken out afterwards, judgment was ſet aſide. 5 Mod. 205.

If a diſtringas is returnable within term, and the cauſe, is tried two or three days only before the end of the term, the judgment ſhall be entered that very term, tho' there be not four days to move in arreſt of judgment. 1 Salk. 77. But a four day rule muſt be given, and the party cannot ſign judgment, 'till four days excluſive are elapſed, and if Sunday intervenes, that is not to be reckoned one of the four days. But if verdict be given after term, no judgment can be given on it till the next term following; for the judgment is the act of the court, and the court ſits not but in term. Mich. 22 Car. B. R.

If verdict paſs for the plaintiff, and he will not enter his judgment; the defendant by motion of court may oblige him to it. 2 Lill. Abr. 97. The defendant may enforce the plaintiff to enter his judgment to the end he may plead it to another action. Latch. 216. 1 Danv. 722.

Palm. 281. So if the defendant wants to bring a writ of error.

Judgments are not only to be ſigned by the proper officer, but entered of record; before which they are not judgments: and in a judgment given to recover a ſum of money, the ſum muſt be entered in words at length; and not in figures, which may be eaſily altered; and a judgment was reverſed, becauſe the time when given was in figures, and the ſum recovered expreſſed in figures, &c. But the court may amend their judgments of the ſame term, becauſe the term is but as one day in law; tho' they may not do it in another term. 2 Lill. 103. 3 Lev. 430. If a judgment be unduly obtained, the court will vacate the judgment, and reſtore the party damnified; if not, puniſh the offender: but it is againſt the courſe of the court to vacate a judgment the laſt day of the term. Paſch. 1656.

By ſtatute, if the plaintiff die before judgment, it ſhall not hinder the judgment being entered, provided it be done within two terms after verdict. 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. A judgment entered in C. B. ſhall relate to the eſſoin day of the term, and be a judgment from that time: but a judgment in B. R. ſhall relate only to the firſt day of the term. Cro. Car. 102. If a rule be given for the defendant to plead at a certain day, and he do not plead accordingly, the plaintiff may enter judgment againſt him, without moving the court; tho' in real actions, and criminal cauſes, on indictments, &c. there muſt be a motion in court, for a peremptory rule. 2 Lill. 116. Yet a plaintiff, after he hath ſigned judgment againſt the defendant, may waive it if he will, and accept of a plea from the defendant. Trin. 23 Car. B. R.

If a judgment be obtained, but the plaintiff doth not take out execution within a year and a day, the judgment muſt be revived by ſcire facias. If any thing be entered in a judgment, which is not mentioned in the plaintiff's declaration, the judgment is not good. 2 Lill. 104. And where it appears upon the record, that the plaintiff hath no cauſe of action, he ſhall never have judgment. 8 Rep. 120. In ſuch caſe the court may give judgment for the defendant. 1 Plowd. 66. Altho' it appear to the court that the defendant's title is not good, if the plaintiff in his declaration hath not ſet forth a good title for himſelf, the court ſhall never give him judgment. 2 Lill. 98. Tho' the plaintiff deſtroys the defendant's title, if he gives him another title by pleading, &c. the defendant ſhall have judgment; for the court are to judge upon the whole record. 8 Rep. 90. But if action of treſpaſs is brought for treſpaſs done in lands belonging to ſuch a houſe, and it appears at the trial that the plaintiff had no title to the houſe, the court cannot give judgment to turn him out of poſſeſſion, becauſe that was not judicially before them. 3 Salk. 213.

In debt on ſpecialty, the whole and exact ſum muſt be demanded; or the judgment upon it will not be good. 3 Mod. 41. If more be in the judgment than the plaintiff demands, it is erroneous; tho' this may be helped by a remiſit dampna for part. 2 Lill. 27. If in caſe, treſpaſs, &c. a verdict is given for more damages than laid in the plaintiff's declaration, and he does not remit the ſurplus damages, but takes judgment for the whole, it is an incurable error, and cannot be amended.

If iſſue is found againſt one party in a ſuit, and not againſt the other, judgment may be for the plaintiff to recover againſt him where the matter is found; and a nil capiat per billam be entered againſt the plaintiff as to the other. 1 Saund. 216. And when ſeveral damages are recovered againſt ſeveral defendants, the plaintiff may enter a nolle proſequi as to one of the defendants, &c. and have judgment againſt one only for the damages againſt him. 3 Mod. 101. If one entire judgment is given againſt two ſeveral perſons, and one of them is an infant, appearing by attorney, the whole judgment is void; (which being entire cannot be divided) except the infant be joint executor with the other party. 2 Lill. 100. When a judgment is entire, it cannot be divided, to make one part of it good, and another part thereof erroneous; but if it be not an entire judgmene, it may. Ibid. On action where damages are to be recovered, if the declaration be good in part, and inſufficient in part, and the defendant demurs upon the entire declaration; the plaintiff ſhall have judgment for that which is well laid, and be barred for the reſt. This muſt mean where there are ſeveral counts in the declaration. 2 Saund. 379. And if in action of debt upon three bonds, it appears that one of them is not forfeited, &c. the plaintiff ſhall have judgment for the other two. 1 Saund. 286.

Where a judgment is partly by the Common law, and partly by ſtatute, the judgment at Common law may remain and be compleat, without the other. 1 Salk. 24.

Where there are two diſtinct judgments, one at Common law, and the other by ſtatute, one may be affirmed, and the other reverſed on a writ of error. Annaly 50.

Every judgment ought to be compleat and formal: one judgment cannot determine another judgment, and the judges will not give a judgment againſt law, although the plaintiff and defendant do agree to it. 1 Salk. 213. Cro. Eliz. 817. Trin. 23 Car. B. R. In actions perſonal, judgment given againſt the plaintiff upon any plea to bar him, is peremptory. Jenk. Cent. 52. If the defendant doth not deny the debt, or other matter in ſuit, but endeavours to elude the action by inſufficient pleading: in this caſe, if it be found for the plaintiff, he ſhall have judgment; but not vice verſa, if for the defendant, becauſe the matter of the ſuit is not fully and ſufficiently denied, but in ſome meaſure confeſſed by the inſufficient plea. Ibid. 70.

Judgment may not be given for the plaintiff upon an inſufficient bar, if the replication be ſo, and ſhew no title; but a judgment ſhall not be ſet aſide for miſpleading a point collateral to the iſſue. Hob. 8, 128. In debt upon an obligation, the defendant pleaded that he delivered it on a condition to be performed by the plaintiff, which he had not done, and therefore it was not his deed; the jury found for the defendant, that the condition was not performed, yet the plaintiff had judgment; for the defendant's plea confeſſes it to be his deed, and the verdict does not diſprove it, and the iſſue is deed or no deed, &c. Jenk. Cent. 102. Here the plaintiff hath his judgment upon the defendant's confeſſion, not upon the verdict. Ibid.

A judgment contrary to the verdict found in the cauſe is generally void; for it is to be warranted by the verdict. Mich. 22 Car. B. R. There may be caſes where judgment may be given for one of the parties contrary to the verdict; as where the defendant pleads ſuch a plea as in effect acknowledges the demand, there, tho' there ſhould be a verdict for the defendant, judgment ſhall be for the plaintiff, or the judge of Niſi prius may refuſe to try it. Annaly 250. If a verdict is imperfect, judgment cannot be given upon it; and for the incertainty of the verdict, judgment may be void. 2 Lill. 111. Raym. 220. Action of debt lies upon a good judgment, as well after writ of error brought as before. Raym. 100. 2 Mod. 127. But if error is brought, and depending, the court will, on motion, ſtay proceedings in the new action, or rather prevent plaintiff from taking out execution, defendant confeſſing judgment in the laſt ſuit. In actions of debt on bonds, a rule may be made to ſtay proceedings on payment of principal, intereſt and coſts. Mod. Ca. 60. This may be done by virtue of 4 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 13. If a judgment is recovered jointly againſt three defendants, the plaintiff cannot bring action of debt upon that judgment againſt one alone. 2 Leon. 220. A plaintiff ſhall not have a new action of debt on the ſame bond, &c. after judgment had on it, as long as the judgment is in force. 6 Rep. 2. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1056. An erroneous judgment in Chancery is reverſible in B. R. Dyer 315. And if the Houſe of Lords reverſe a judgment of B. R. the Lords are to enter the new judgment, and not the court of B. R. who by the firſt judgment had executed their authority. Trin. 6 Ann. B. R. 1 Salk. 403.

Judgments are to continue, till they ſhall be attaint by error. Stat. 4 H. 4. cap. 23. And after verdict given in any court of record, there ſhall be no ſtay of judgment for want of form in a writ, count, &c, or miſtaking the name of either party, ſum of money, day, month, year, &c. rightly named in any writ or record preceding, &c. 18 Eliz. cap. 14. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 8.

A ſmall miſtake in the title of a declaration is not a reaſon to ſet aſide the judgment, and the roll may be right. Wilſ. par. 1. 104.

A regular judgment in a crown cauſe cannot be ſet aſide on payment of coſts. Ib. 163.

Where there is a judgment and no ſurpriſe, it ſhall not be ſet aſide on an affidavit of a matter relative to the merits which might have been pleaded. Annaly 157. But the court frequently ſets aſide regular judgments, on payment of coſts, where there are real merits, and thoſe merits ſworn to, the defendant by the rule, being bound not to delay the plaintiff.

Where the condition of a bond was, that the money was not to be paid till a future day, and the conuſee by virtue of a warrant of attorney entered judgment, and took out execution before the day, the court would not ſet the judgment aſide, but did the execution. Ibid. 270.

The Stat. 8 W. 3. c. 11. orders judgment for coſts, upon demurrers, and on ſuing writs of error, where the former judgment is affirmed, &c. And the ſtatutes of jeofails extend to judgments upon nihil dicit, confeſſion, & non ſum informatus, &c. 4 Ann. c. 16. See Error, Jeofail, and Iſſue.

Judgments acknowledged for Debts. The courſe for one to acknowledge a judgment for debt, is for him that doth acknowledge it to give a warrant of attorney to ſome attorney of that court where the judgment is to be acknowledged, to appear for him, to file common bail, and receive a declaration, and then plead non ſum informatus, &c. or to let it paſs by nihil dicit: whereupon judgment is entered for want of a plea. 2 Lill. 105. If one gives a warrant of attorney to confeſs judgment, and dies before it is confeſſed, this is a countermand of the warrant. 1 Ventr. 310. Tho' the courts have, on motion, allowed judgment to be entered up.—Where they may be entered after the party's death, ſee Annaly 158.—But the rule does not hold in adverſary ſuits. Ibid. 183. If a feme ſole gives warrant of attorney to confeſs judgment, and marries before it is entered, the warrant is abſolutely countermanded; and judgment ſhall not be entered againſt husband and wife. 1 Salk. 399.

A man under arreſt gives warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment; if no attorney for the defendant is then preſent, the court, on a ſuppoſition that the judgment was obtained by force or fear, will ſet aſide the ſame. 1 Salk. 402. It has been adjudged, that if one under arreſt gives a warrant to confeſs judgment, if an attorney be not by, it is ill: and ſo it is if one be ſeemingly diſcharged, with deſign that he ſhould give a warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment: but if one arreſted by proceſs of an inferior court, gives a warrant for confeſſing judgment in that court, B. R. will not ſet it aſide, tho' an attorney be not preſent. Mich. 2 Ann. Mod. Caſ. 85. By rule of B. R. Eaſter 15 Car. 2. No bailiff is to take from any priſoner in his cuſtody, a warrant to acknowledge judgment unleſs in the preſence of an attorney. And where one has been in priſon ſome time, and he confeſſes judgment to his creditor voluntarily, that judgment ſhall ſtand, altho' there be no attorney. Farreſley's Rep. 115. A judgment confeſſed upon terms, being in effect conditional, the court will ſee the terms performed: but where a judgment is acknowledged abſolutely, and a ſubſequent agreement is made, this does not affect the judgment, and the court will take no notice of it. Ibid. 400. Sed qu. if they would not ſtay or ſet aſide execution if iſſued ſooner than, or contrary to, an agreement of the parties, tho' made ſubſequent to the judgment? If a warrant be to enter judgment as of ſuch a term, or any time after; the attorney may enter it at any time during life: but without thoſe words the judgment muſt be entered the term expreſſed in the warrant: and if no term be mentioned, it may be intended the next term. 1 Mod. 1. Or it has been held it may be entered within a year after the date of it: and if judgment upon a warrant of attorney be not entered within the year, it cannot be done without leave of the court, on motion and affidavit made of the party's being living, and the debt not ſatisfied. 2 Lill. Abr. 118. 2 Show. 253. It is dangerous to take a judgment acknowledged in the vacation, as of the preceding term; and if any ſuch judgment be taken, the warrant of attorney to confeſs the ſame muſt bear date before, or in the term whereof it is confeſſed: but the ſafeſt way is to make it a judgment of the ſubſequent term. 2 Lill. 103.

By Holt Chief Juſtice, If one will enter a judgment as of a precedent term, he muſt actually enter it before the eſſoin day of the ſucceeding term: and if judgment be ſigned in Hilary term and in the ſubſequent vacation the defendant ſells lands, if before the Eſſoin of Eaſter term, the plaintiff enters his judgment, it ſhall affect the lands in the hands of the purchaſer; (but ſee poſt,) and if one enters judgment ſo in vacation, when the party is dead, the judgment ſhall be good by relation, if he was living in the precedent term. 1 Salk. 401. Law of Securities 74. On complaints for delay of entering judgments, the ſame ſhall be examined into by commiſſioners and ordered to be entered, &c. by the Stat. 14 Ed. 3. Stat. 1. c. 5. and by 29 Car. 2. c. 3.

Judgments, as againſt purchaſers, ſhall only relate to the day of ſigning. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſect. 15. If any perſon having acknowledged or ſuffered a judgment as a ſecurity for money, afterwards on borrowing other money of another, mortgage his lands, &c. without giving notice of ſuch judgment, unleſs he pay it off in ſix months, he ſhall forfeit his equity of redemption, &c. 4 W. & M. c. 16. The particular times of entering judgments of debt, by confeſſion, non ſum informatus, &c. and docketting them after every term, by the clerks of courts, &c. is directed under the penalty of 100 l. by Stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 20. And no judgment ſhall affect purchaſers of lands and mortgagees till docketted; nor have any preference againſt heirs, executors, &c. in the adminiſtration of eſtates. Ibid. Upon ſigning judgment 6 s. 8 d. is to be paid the proper officer, in ſatisfaction of the capiatur fine, &c. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 12. To ſearch for judgments a fee is paid of 4 d. a term.

On judgments, a releaſe of errors is uſually entered into at the time of the warrant of attorney given, or judgment had. And in caſe of ſeveral judgments, if two are given in one term, and the laſt is firſt executed, that creditor hath the beſt title. Latch. 53. When a judgment is ſatisfied, it is to be acknowledged on record by attorney, &c. Acknowledging a judgment in the name of another, who is not privy or conſenting to the ſame, is felony. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 26.

Judgment in criminal Caſes. No man can be attainted of treaſon or felony, but on judgment by expreſs ſentence, or by outlawry, or abjuration. 2 Hawk. 447. And a perſon ſhall not have two judgments for one offence; for in outlawry, which is a judgment, execution ſhall be awarded againſt the offender, but no ſentence pronounced. Finch. 389, 467. But one convicted of a ſcandalous libel, had judgment to pay a fine, and to go to all the courts in Weſtminſter-Hall with a paper in his hat ſignifying his crime; and on his behaving impudently, his puniſhment was encreaſed. 1 Salk 401. No judgment or puniſhment can be inflicted unknown to our laws; but only by act of parliament. Daliſ. 20. And the law makes no diſtinction, in fixed and ſtated judgments, between a peer and a commoner; or between a common and ordinary caſe and one extraordinary. 2 Hawk. 443.

Judgment cannot be given for a corporal puniſhment, in the abſence of the party. 1 Salk. 400. Tho' perſons may have judgment to be fined in their abſence, having a clerk in court to undertake for the fine. 1 Salk. 56.

Judgment in high treaſon is for the offender to be drawn, hanged, his entrails taken out and burnt, his head cut off, and body quartered, &c. In petit treaſon, to be drawn to the place of execution and hanged: and a woman in all caſes of high and petit treaſon, to be drawn and burnt. A man or woman for felony, is to be hanged by the neck till dead. Miſpriſion of treaſon is liable to impriſonment for life.

In præmunire, the party offending is to be out of the King's protection, and his body to remain in priſon during the King's pleaſure, &c. And for miſpriſion of felony, fine and impriſonment is inflicted. 2 Hawk. 443, 444. For crimes and miſdemeanors of an infamous nature; perjury or forgery at Common law, groſs cheats, conſpiracy, keeping bawdy-houſes, &c. the judgments are diſcretionory in the court, by fine, pillory, whipping, &c. 2 Hawk. 445.

Judicatores terrarum, Are perſons in the county palatine of Cheſter, who on a writ of error out of Chancery, are to conſider of the judgment given there, and reform it; and if they do not, and it be found erroneous, they forfeit 100*l.* to the King by the cuſtom. Dyer 348. Jenk. Cent. 71.

Judices fiſcales; So Polydore Virgil calls Empſon and Dudley, who were employed by Hen. 7. for taking the benefit of penal ſtatutes, and were put to death by Hen. 8. See Lord Herb. H. 8. fol. 5, 6.

Judicial deciſions, opinions or determinations, as far as they refer to the laws of this kingdom, are for the matter of them of three kinds.

Or 2dly, They are ſuch deciſions, as by way of deduction and illation upon thoſe laws are formed or deduced; as for the purpoſe, Whether of an eſtate thus or thus limited the wife ſhall be endowed? Whether, if thus or thus limited, the heir may be barred? And an infinite number of the like complicated queſtions. And herein the rule of deciſion is; firſt, the Common law and cuſtom of the realm, which is the great ſubſtratum that is to be maintained; then authorities of deciſions of former times in the ſame or the like caſes; and then the reaſon of the thing itſelf.

3dly, Or they are ſuch as ſeem to have no other guide but the common reaſon of the thing, unleſs the ſame point has been formerly decided, as in the expoſition of the intention of clauſes in deeds, wills, covenants, &c. where the very ſenſe of the words, and their poſitions and relations, give a rational account of the meaning of the parties, and in ſuch caſes the judge does much better herein, than what a bare grave grammarian or logician, or other prudent man could; for in many caſes there have been former reſolutions, either in point, or agreeing in reaſon or analogy with the caſe in queſtion; or perhaps the clauſe to be expounded is mingled with ſome term or clauſes that require the knowledge of the law to help out with the conſtruction or expoſition; both which often happen in the ſame caſe; therefore it requires the knowledge of the law to render and expound ſuch clauſes and ſentences; and doubtleſs a good common lawyer is the beſt expoſitor of ſuch clauſe, &c. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 68, 69. cites Plowden 122 to 130, 140, &c.

An extra-judicial opinion, given in or out of court, is no more than the prolatum or ſaying of him who gives it, nor can be taken for his opinion, unleſs every thing ſpoken at pleaſure muſt paſs as the ſpeaker's opinion. Vaugh. 382.

So an opinion given in court, if not neceſſary to the judgment given of record, but that it might have been as well given, if no ſuch or a contrary opinion had been broached, is no judicial opinion, nor more than a gratis dictum. But an opinion, though erroneous, concluding to the judgment, is a judicial opinion, becauſe delivered under the ſanction of the judges oath upon deliberation, which aſſures that it is or was, when delivered, the opinion of the deliverer. Ibid.

Judicial Power. By the long and uniform uſage of many ages, our Kings have delegated their whole judicial power to the judges of their ſeveral courts; which are the grand depoſitory of the fundamental laws of the kingdom, and have gained a known and ſtated juriſdiction, regulated by certain and eſtabliſhed rules, which the crown itſelf cannot alter but by act of parliament. Black. Com. 1 V. 267. cites 2 Hawk. P. C. 2.

Jura regalia. See Regalia.

Jurats, (jurati) Are in nature of aldermen, for the government of many corporations. As Romney Marſh is incorporate of one bailiff, twenty-four jurats, and the commonalty thereof, by Chart 1 Ed. 4. And we read of the mayor and jurats of Maidſtone, Rye, Winchelſea, &c. Alſo Jerſey hath a bailiff and twelve jurats, or ſworn aſſiſtants, to govern that iſland. The name is taken from the French; for in France, among others, there are major & jurati, &c.

Juridical Days, (dies juridici) Days in court, on which the law was adminiſtered. See Day.

Juriſdiction, (juriſdictio) Is an authority or power, which a man hath to do juſtice in cauſes of complaint brought before him: of which there are two kinds; the one, which a perſon hath by reaſon of his fee, and by virtue thereof doth right in all plaints, concerning the lands within his fee; the other is a juriſdiction given by the prince to a bailiff, as divided by the Normans; and by him whom they called a bailiff, we may underſtand all who have commiſſion from the King to give judgment in any cauſe. Cuſtum. Normand. cap. 2.

The courts and judges at Weſtminſter have juriſdiction all over England; and are not reſtrained to any county or place: but all other courts are confined to their particular juriſdictions; which if they exceed, whatever they do is erroneous. 2 Lil. Abr. 120.

There are three ſorts of inferior juriſdictions; the firſt whereof is tenera placita, which is the loweſt, and the party may either ſue there, or in the King's courts: the ſecond is conuſance of pleas; and by this a right is veſted in the lord of the franchiſe to hold pleas; and he is the only perſon that can take advantage of it, by claiming his franchiſe: the third ſort is an exempt juriſdiction; as where the King grants to ſome city, that the inhabitants ſhall be ſued within their city, and not elſewhere; tho' there is no juriſdiction, which can withſtand a certiorari to the ſuperior courts. 3 Salk. 79, 80.

A court ſhall not be preſumed to have a juriſdiction, where it doth not appear to have one. 2 Hawk. 59. If an action is brought in a corporate town, and the plaint ſheweth not that the matter ariſes infra juriſdictionem of the court, it will be wrong, though the town be in the margin; but the county ſerves in the margin for the ſuperiour courts. Jenk. Cent. 322. After a verdict for the plaintiff in C. B. for leſs than 40*s.* the defendant may enter a ſuggeſtion on the roll that he reſided in Middleſex, which if true, the C. B. hath no juriſdiction, by the late ſtatute, touching the county court of Middleſex. Ib. 68. See Stat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 33.

Juris utrum, Is a writ which lies for the parſon of a church, whoſe predeceſſor hath alienated the lands and tenements thereof. F. N. B. 48. New Nat. Br. 109. But if a parſon receive rent of the tenant of the land, which is aliened by his predeceſſor, he ſhall not himſelf have a writ of juris utrum; but his ſucceſſor ſhall have it. Ibid. 111. Juror, (jurator) Is one of thoſe perſons who are ſworn on a jury; and the law requires the returning of able and ſufficient jurors. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 3. See alſo the ſtatutes 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 32. 3 Geo. 2. c. 25. 4 Geo. 2. c. 7. 24 Geo. 2. c. 18. 29 Geo. 2. c. 19. Jury, (jurata, from the Lat. jurare, to ſwear) Signifies a certain number of men ſworn to inquire of and try the matter of fact, and declare the truth upon ſuch evidence as ſhall be delivered them in a cauſe: And they are ſworn judges upon evidence in matter of fact.

The privilege of trial by jury, is of great antiquity in this kingdom; ſome writers will have it that juries were in uſe among the Britains; but it is more probable that this trial was introduced by the Saxons: Yet ſome ſay that we had our trials by jury from the Greeks; (the firſt trial by a jury of twelve, being in Greece.) By the laws of King Ethelred, it is apparent that juries were in uſe many years before the Conqueſt; and they are, as it were, incorporated with our conſtitution, being the moſt valuable part of it; for without them no man's life can be impeached, (unleſs by parliament) and no one's liberty or property ought to be taken from him. And theſe juries are not only uſed in the circuits of the judges, but in other courts and matters: As if a coroner inquire how a perſon killed came by his death, he doth it by jury; and the juſtices of peace in their quarter-ſeſſions, the ſheriff in his County-Court, the ſteward of a Court-Leet or Court-Baron, &c. if they inquire of any offence, or decide any cauſe between party and party, they do it in like manner: And at the general aſſiſes there are uſually many juries, becauſe there are many cauſes, civil and criminal, to be tried; whereof one is called the Grand Jury, and the reſt Petit Juries, of which it is ſaid there ſhould be one for every hundred. Lamb. Eiren. pag. 384

Anciently the jury as well in Common Pleas, as Pleas of the Crown, were twelve knights, according to Glanvill and Bracton: And to make a jury in a writ of right, called the Grand Aſſiſe, there muſt be ſixteen, viz. four knights, and twelve others. Finch 412. The grand jury generally conſiſts of twenty-four men of greater quality than the other, choſen indifferently out of the whole county by the ſheriff; and the petit jury conſiſteth of twelve men, of equal condition with the party indicted, impanelled in criminal caſes, called the Jury of Life and Death: The grand jury find the bills of indictment againſt criminals, and the petit jury convict them by verdict, in the giving whereof all the twelve muſt agree; and according to their verdict the judgment paſſeth. 3 Inſt. 30, 31, 221.

By the Common law jurymen are to be returned in all caſes for trial of general iſſues, from the county where the fact was done. S. P. C. 154. And jurymen are to be freemen, indifferent, and not outlawed or infamous; aliens, men attainted of any crime, ought not to ſerve on juries; and infants, perſons ſeventy years old, clergymen, apothecaries, &c. are exempted by law from ſerving upon juries. 2 Inſt. 447. 3 Inſt. 221. Barons of the realm, and all above them, are not to ſerve in any ordinary jury; and others may have this privilege by writ, or the King's grant, &c. 6 Rep. 53. 1 Brownl. 30. But ſuch as have charters of exemption, ſhall be ſworn on great aſſiſes, and in attaints, &c. when their oath is requiſite. 52 H. 3. c. 14.

By ſtatute, jurors impanelled are to be the next neighbours, moſt ſufficient and leaſt ſuſpicious; or the officer ſhall forfeit double damages. 28 Ed. 1. c. 9. Their qualification by 13 Ed. 1. was 40*s.* per Annum eſtate; which was increaſed to 4*l.* per Annum by 27 Eliz. c. 6. and is made 10*l.* per Annum freehold or copyhold within the ſame county, by 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24. But all cities, boroughs, and corporate towns, are excepted out of this laſt act: And trials of felons in corporations may be by freemen worth 40*l.* in goods, by the 23 Hen. 8. c. 13. Panels of juries returned to inquire for the King, may be reformed by the judges of gaol-delivery, &c. 3 Hen. 8. c. 12.

Jurymen not appearing ſhall forfeit iſſues, if they have no reaſonable excuſe for their defaults, viz. 5*s.* on the firſt writ, upon the ſecond 10*s.* and the third writ 13*s.* 4*d.* 35 Hen. 8. c. 6. Though no jury is to appear at Weſtminſter for a trial, when the offence was committed thirty miles off; except the Attorney General require it. 18 Eliz. c. 5. Conſtables of pariſhes, &c. at Michaelmas quarter-ſeſſions yearly, are to return to the juſtices of peace, liſts of the names and places of abode of perſons qualified to ſerve on juries, between the ages of twenty-one and ſeventy, atteſted upon oath, on pain of forfeiting 5*l.* And the juſtices of peace ſhall order the clerk of the peace to deliver a duplicate of thoſe liſts to the ſheriff, &c. And ſheriffs are to impanel no other perſons, under the penalty of 20*l.* &c. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 32. 3 Ann. c. 18.

No ſheriff, bailiff, &c. ſhall return any perſon to ſerve on a jury, unleſs he hath been duly ſummoned ſix days, before the day of appearance; nor ſhall take any money, or other reward to excuſe the appearance of any juryman, on pain of forfeiting 10*l.* 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24.

If a trial is for any thing which concerns the ſheriff or under-ſheriff, the coroner is to return the jury. And the proceſs to bring in the jury in B. R. is a diſtringas jurat', and in C. B. venire fac' & habeas corpora jurator': Upon the venire, the ſheriff, &c. returns the jury in a panel (or little piece of parchment) annexed to the writ, and then goes the writ of habeas corpora to bring in the jury; and where, after iſſue joined, a ſuit is continued on the roll, the proceſs is to be continued from time to time againſt the jurors. Br. Diſcontin.

If the ſheriff return twelve jurors only according to the writ, where he ought to have returned twenty-four according to the uſage, for ſpeeding the trial in caſe of challenge, death, or ſickneſs, &c. he ſhall be amerced. Jenk. Cent. 172.

Liſts of jurors qualified according to the acts (4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 32. and 3 & 4 Ann. c. 18.) are now to be made from the rates of each pariſh, and fixed on the doors of churches, &c. twenty days before the feaſt of St. Michael, that public notice may be given of perſons qualified omitted, or of perſons inſerted who are not ſo, &c. and the liſts being ſet right by the juſtices of peace in quarter-ſeſſions, duplicates are to be delivered to the ſheriffs of counties, by the clerks of the peace; the names contained in which ſhall be entered alphabetically by the ſheriffs in a book, with their additions, and places of abode, &c. If any ſheriff ſhall return other perſons to ſerve on juries; or the clerk of the aſſize record any appearance, when the party did not appear, they ſhall be fined by the judges, not above 10*l.* nor leſs than 40*s.* The like penalty for taking money to excuſe perſons from ſerving; and the ſheriffs may be fined 5*l.* for returning jurors, who have ſerved two years before, &c.

Sheriffs on the return of writs of venire facias, are to annex a panel of the names of a competent number of jurors named in the liſts, not leſs than forty-eight in any county, nor more than ſeventy-two, (without direction of the judges) who ſhall be ſummoned to ſerve at the aſſiſes, &c. and the names of the perſons impanelled ſhall be written in ſeveral diſtinct pieces of paper, of equal ſize, and be delivered by the under-ſheriff to the judge's marſhal, who is to cauſe them to be rolled up all in the ſame manner, and put together in a box; and when any cauſe ſhall be brought on, ſome indifferent perſon is to draw out twelve of the ſaid papers of names, who, not being challenged, ſhall be the jury to try the cauſe; but if any perſons are challenged and ſet aſide, or ſhall not appear, then a further number to be drawn till there is a full jury, &c.

Where a cauſe comes on, before the jury in any other cauſe have given their verdict, the court ſhall order twelve of the reſidue of the papers to be drawn, &c. And jurors making default in appearance, ſhall be fined, not exceeding 5*l.* nor under 40*s.* Stat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 25. Perſons having eſtates for five hundred years, or ninety-nine years, or other term determinable on lives, &c. of the yearly value of 20*l.* are declared qualified to ſerve on juries, and to be inſerted in the freeholders book, &c. And ſheriffs of any county, or city, ſhall not impanel perſons on any jury for the trial of capital offences, that would not be qualified in civil cauſes: In London jurors to be houſe-keepers, having lands or goods worth 100*l.* who may be examined on oath, &c. Ibid. Leaſeholders on leaſes where the rent is 50*l.* a year are liable to ſerve upon juries in the county of Middleſex; but no perſon ſhall be returned as a juror, who hath ſerved two terms before in that county, by ſtat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 7. Vide the Statutes.

Either the plaintiff or defendant may uſe their endeavours for any juryman to appear; but one who is not a party to the ſuit, may not: And an attorney was thrown over the bar, becauſe he had given the names of ſeveral perſons in writing to the ſheriff, whom he would have returned on the jury, and the names of others whom he would not have returned. Moor 882. If a juryman appear, and refuſe to be ſworn, or refuſe to give any verdict, if he endeavours to impoſe upon the court, or is guilty of any miſbehaviour after departure from the bar, he may be fined, and attachment iſſue againſt him. 2 Hawk. P. C. 145, 146.

After a juror is ſworn he may not go from the bar until the evidence is given, for any cauſe whatſoever, without leave of the court; and with leave he muſt have a keeper with him. 2 Lil. 123, 127. A witneſs may not be called by the jury to recite the ſame evidence he gave in court, when they are gone from the bar. Cro. Eliz. 189. Nor may a party give a brief or notes of the cauſe to the jury to conſider of; if he doth, he and the jurors may be fined. Moor 815. The jurymen are not to meddle with any matters which are not in iſſue; but they may find a thing of their own knowledge, which is not given in evidence. 3 Leon. 121. When the evidence is given, the jury are to be kept together till they bring in their verdict, without ſpeech with any, and without meat or drink, fire or candle, otherwiſe than with leave of the court, by conſent of the parties; and the court may give them leave to eat or drink at the bar, but not out of court. 1 Inſt. 227.

If jurymen after ſworn, either before or after they are agreed of their verdict, eat and drink, the verdict may be good; but they are fineable: And if it be at the charge of either party, the verdict is void. Daliſ. 10. Cro. Jac. 21. If they agree to caſt lots for their verdict, or to bring in Guilty or Not guilty, as the court ſhall ſeem inclined, they may be fined. 2 Lev. 205. Cro. Eliz. 779. But a jury have been permitted to recall their verdict; as where one was indicted of felony, the jury found him Not guilty, but immediately before they went from the bar, they ſaid they were miſtaken, and found him guilty, which laſt was recorded for their verdict. Plowd. 211.

Juries are fineable, if they are unlawfully dealt with to give their verdict; but they are not fineable for giving their verdict contrary to the evidence, or againſt the direction of the court; for the law ſuppoſes the jury may have ſome other evidence than what is given in court, and they may not only find things of their own knowledge, but they go according to their conſciences. Vaugh. 153. 3 Leon. 147.

Attaint may lie againſt a jury in a civil cauſe, for going contrary to evidence, in caſe of any corruption. Vaugh. 144. And jurors are ſubject to no proſecution for giving their verdicts, except by way of attaint for a falſe verdict; in which caſe being found guilty, they are puniſhable by loſs of lands and goods, their houſes to be raſed, and their bodies caſt into priſon, and the party is to be reſtored to all that he loſt by the verdict; but this puniſhment is altered by the ſtat. 23 Hen. 8. c. 3. 2 Hawk. 147.

For a falſe verdict, in that point which is merely out of the iſſue, the jury may not be ſued. Hob. 53, 114, 227. If a jury find matter not in iſſue or pertinent, it will be void: So, if it be againſt law and ſenſe, &c.

They are to adjudge upon the evidence given; but the jurors may not contradict what is agreed in pleading between the parties; if they do, it ſhall be rejected; and where the jury finds the fact, but conclude upon it contrary to law, the court may reject the concluſion. 1 And. 41. 10 Rep. 56. Co. Lit. 22. Hob. 222. The jury may find a thing done in another county, upon a general iſſue; and foreign matters done out of the realm, &c. Moor c. 238. Godb. 33. Jurors having once given their verdict, although it be imperfect, ſhall not be ſworn again in the ſame iſſue unleſs it be in aſſiſe. 2 Cro. 210. If a juryman is guilty of bribery, he is diſabled to be of any aſſiſe or jury, and to he impriſoned and ranſomed at the King's will. 5 Ed. 3. c. 10. Jurymen accuſed of bribery, are to be tried preſently by a jury then taken. 34 Ed. 3. c. 8. And if a juror takes any thing of either party to give his verdict, he ſhall pay ten times as much as taken; or ſuffer a year's impriſonment. 38 Ed. 3. c. 12.

If a jury take upon them the knowledge of the law, and give a general verdict, it is good; but in caſes of difficulty, it is beſt and ſafeſt to find the ſpecial matter, and leave it to the judges to determine what is the law upon the fact. 1 Inſt. 30. A jury ſworn and charged in caſe of life and member, cannot be diſcharged till they give a verdict: In civil caſes, it is otherwiſe; as where nonſuits are had, &c. And ſometimes when the evidence had been heard, the parties doubting of the verdict, do conſent that a juror ſhall be withdrawn or diſcharged. 1 Inſt. 154, 227.

Special Jury, Is where either party is of opinion, that the perſons who uſually attend on common juries may not be of ſufficient knowledge and experience to determine the point in queſtion, and would prefer men who in all probability have had a more liberal education and who poſſeſs more extenſive knowledge, &c. then the court upon motion orders the ſheriff to attend the Secondary or prothonatory, with his book of freeholders of the county, and he, in the preſence of the attornies on both ſides, is to ſtrike a jury: And when a cauſe of conſequence is to be tried at the bar, the court, on motion and affidavit made, will make a rule for the ſecondary or prothonatory to name forty-eight freeholders; and each party is to ſtrike out twelve, one at a time, the plaintiff or his attorney beginning firſt, and out of the remainder the jury for the trial are to be taken; and this is called a Special Jury. Trin. 23 Car. B. R. 2 Lil. 123.

How ſpecial juries are to be ſtruck, ſee Annaly, 158.

The nomination of a ſpecial jury, is to be in the preſence of the attornies on each ſide; but if either of them refuſe to come, then the ſecondary, &c. may proceed ex parte, and he ſhall ſtrike twelve for the attorney who makes default. Trin. 8 W. 3. B. R.

It has been alſo adjudged, that if a rule is made for a ſpecial jury, and it is not expreſſed that the maſter of the office or ſecondary ſhall ſtrike forty-eight freeholders, and that each of the parties ſhall ſtrike out twelve; in ſuch caſe the maſter may ſtrike the twenty-four, and neither of the parties ſtrike out any. 1 Salk. 405. This is never done in a capital cauſe. T. Jones 222. A ſpecial jury may be granted to try a cauſe at bar, without the conſent of parties. Paſch. 10 Geo. 1. A rule may be made for a good jury, and that a ſpecial verdict may be found, &c. Mod. Caſ. in Law and Eq. 221.

By the late act, in trials of iſſues or indictments, &c. and in all actions whatſoever, on the motion of any proſecutor, plaintiff or defendant, &c. the courts at Weſtminſter may order a ſpecial jury to be ſtruck in ſuch manner as upon trials at bar: And when any ſpecial jury ſhall be ordered by rule of the ſaid courts in any cauſe ariſing in any city, &c. the jury is to be taken out of liſts or books of perſons qualified, which ſhall be produced and brought by ſheriffs, &c. before the proper officer, as the freeholders book is for ſtriking juries in cauſes ariſing in counties. Stat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 25.

The juſtices of aſſiſe for the counties palatine of Cheſter, Lancaſter, &c. upon motion in behalf of the King, or any proſecutor, or defendant, in an indictment, information, or any ſuit, may appoint a jury to be ſtruck for trial of iſſues in like manner as ſpecial juries in the courts of law at Weſtminſter. 6 Geo. 2. c. 37. And by this ſtatute, the 3 & 4 Geo. 2. are made perpetual.

Jus accreſcendi, Is the right of ſurvivorſhip between jointenants. Lit. 280. 1 Inſt. 180. Black. Com. 2 V. 184.

Jus ad rem. An inchoate and imperfect right, ſuch as a parſon promoted to a living acquires by nomination and inſtitution. Black. Com. 2 V. 312.

Jus Anglorum. The laws and cuſtoms of the Weſt Saxons, in the time of the Heptarchy, by which the people were for a long time governed, and which were preferred before all others, were termed Jus Anglorum.

Jus Coronæ, The right of the Crown; and it is part of the law of England, though it differs in many things from the general law relating to the ſubject. 1 Inſt. 15. The King may purchaſe lands to him and his heirs, but he is ſeiſed thereof in jure coronæ; and all the lands and poſſeſſions whereof the King is thus ſeiſed, ſhall follow the crown in diſcents, &c.

Jus Curialitatis Angliae. See Curteſy of England.

Jus duplicatum, Is where a man hath the poſſeſſion as well as property of any thing. Bract. lib. 4. tract. 4. c. 4. Black. Com. 2 V. 189.

Jus Gentium, Is the law by which kingdoms and ſocieties in general are governed. Selden.

Jus Habendi & Retinendi, Right to have and retain the profits, tithes, and offerings, &c. of a rectory or parſonage. Hugh's Parſons Law 188.

Jus Hæreditatis, The right or law of inheritance.

Jus in re, Complete and full right. Such as a parſon acquires, on promotion to a living, who, after nomination and inſtitution hath corporal poſſeſſion delivered to him, for till ſuch delivery of corporal poſſeſſion he had only jus in rem. Black. Com. 2 V. 312.

Jus Patronatus, Is a commiſſion granted by the biſhop to ſome perſons to inquire who is the rightful patron of a church. If two patrons preſent their clerks, the biſhop ſhall determine who ſhall be admitted by right of patronage, &c. on commiſſion of inquiry of ſix clergymen, and ſix laymen, living near to the church; who are to inquire on articles as a jury, Whether the church is void? Who preſented laſt? Who is the rightful patron? &c. But if coparceners ſeverally preſent their clerks, the biſhop is not obliged to award a jus patronatus, becauſe they preſent under one title; and are not in like caſe where two patrons preſent under ſeveral titles. 5 Rep. 102. 1 Inſt. 116.

The awarding a jus patronatus is not of neceſſity, but at the pleaſure of the ordinary, for his better information who hath the right of patronage, for if he will at his peril take notice of the right, he may admit the clerk of either of the patrons, without a jus patronatus. 1 Leon. 168. A biſhop may award a jus patronatus with a ſolemn premonition to all perſons, quorum intereſt, &c. where he knows not who is the patron, to give notice of an avoidance by deprivation, &c. Hob. 318. This inquiry by jus patronatus is to excuſe the ordinary from being a diſturber. Jus patronatus is not within the ſtatute of limitations, 1 M. Seſſ. 2. c. 5. In whoſe name, and under what teſte a jus patronatus is to iſſue. See ſtat. 1 Ed. 6. c. 2. ſect. 3. And Black. Com. 3 V. 246.

Jus Poſſeſſionis, A right of ſeiſin or poſſeſſion; and a parſon hath a right to the poſſeſſion of the church and glebe, for he hath the freehold; and is to receive the profits to his own uſe. Parſ. Law 188.

Jus Preſentationis, The right of the patron of preſenting his clerk unto the ordinary to be admitted, inſtituted and inducted into a church. Ibid.

Jus Recuperandi, Intrandi, &c. A right of recovering and entering lands, &c.

All theſe rights following the relation of their objects, are the effects of the Civil law. Co. Lit. 266.

Juſta, A certain meaſure of liquor, quaſi juſta menſura; being as much as was ſufficient to drink at once. Mon. Ang. Tom. 1. pag. 149.

Juſts, (Fr. jouſta, i. e. decurſus) Were exerciſes between martial men and perſons of honour, with ſpears on horſeback; and different from tournaments which were military contentions, and conſiſted of many men in troops; whereas jouſts were uſually between two men ſingly. They are mentioned in the ſtatute 24 Hen. 8. c. 13. and are now diſuſed. See Tournament.

Juſtice, (juſtitia) Is a conſtant, righteous inclination to give every one his due; or the act of doing what is right and juſt. Chamb. Johnſon, Locke, Inſtit'. The delaying juſtice is an obſtruction to and kind of denial thereof; but this is underſtood of unneceſſary and unjuſt delay, for ſometimes it is convenient for the better finding out the truth, and preparation of parties, that they may not be ſurpriſed.

Juſtice and right ſhall not be ſold, denied or delayed. Mag. Chart. 9 Hen. 3. c. 29. Right ſhall be done to all without reſpect. Stat. Weſt. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 1. Juſtice ſhall not be delayed for any command under the Great Seal, &c. 2 Ed. 3. c. 8. 14 Ed. 3. ſtat. 1. c. 14. 11 R. 2. c. 10. See *Black. Juſtice, (juſticiarius) Signifies an officer deputed by the King to adminiſter juſtice, and do right by way of judgment; and is called juſtice, becauſe in ancient time the Latin word for him was juſtitia, and for that he hath his authority by deputation, and not jure magiſtratus. Glanvil, lib. 2. c. 6.

In the King's Bench and Common Pleas, there are Chief Juſtices; the former of which, is called Capitalis Juſticiarius Banci Regii, vel ad placita coram rege tenenda, hath the title of Lord whilſt he enjoys his office, and is ſtiled Capitalis Juſticiarius, becauſe he is chief of the reſt; and for this reaſon he hath uſually the title of Lord Chief Juſtice of England. This juſtice was anciently created by letters patent under the Great Seal; but is now made by writ in this ſhort form: Rex, &c. Roberto Raymond Mil ſalutem, ſciatis quod conſtituimus vos juſticiarium noſtrum capitalem ad placita coram nobis tenenda, quamdiu vos bene geſſeritis, &c. Teſte, &c.

The ancient dignity of this ſupreme magiſtrate was very great; he had the prerogative to be vicegerent of the kingdom, when any of our Kings went beyond ſea, being choſen to this office out of the greateſt of the nobility; and had the power alone, which afterwards was diſtributed to three other great magiſtrates, that is, he had the power of the Chief juſtice of the Common Pleas, of the Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and the Maſter of the Court of Wards; and he commonly ſat in the King's Palace, and there executed that authority which was formerly performed per comitem palatii, in determining differences which happened between the barons and other great perſons of the kingdom, as well as cauſes criminal and civil between other men: But King Richard I. firſt diminiſhed his power, by appointing two other juſtices; to each whereof he aſſigned a diſtinct juriſdiction, viz. to one the North parts of England, to the other the South; and in the reign of King Edward I. they were reduced to one court, with a further abridgment of their authority, both as to the dignity of their perſons, and extent of their juriſdiction; for no more were choſen out of the nobility as anciently, but out of the commons, who were men of integrity, and ſkilful in the laws of the land; whence it is ſaid the ſtudy of the law dates its beginning. Origines Judiciales.

In the time of King John, and other of our ancient Kings, it often occurs in charters of privilege, Quod non ponatur reſpondere, niſi coram nobis, vel capitali juſticia noſtra: And this high officer hath at this time a very extenſive power and juriſdiction in pleas of the crown; and is particularly intruſted not only with the prerogative of the King, but the liberty of the ſubject. The Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas hath alſo the title of Lord whilſt he is in office, and is called dominus juſticiarius communium placitorum, vel dominus juſticiarius de banco; who, with his aſſiſtants, did originally, and doth yet, hear and determine Common Pleas, in civil cauſes, as diſtinguiſhed from the King's pleas, or pleas of the crown. Bract. lib. 3. The chief Juſtices are inſtalled or placed on the bench by the Lord Chancellor; and the other juſtices by the Lord Chancellor and the Lord Chief Juſtices. Beſides the Lords Chief Juſtices and the other juſtices of the courts at Weſtminſter, there are many other juſtices commiſſioned by the King to execute the laws; as juſtices of aſſiſe, of the Foreſt, of Niſi prius, Oyer and Terminer, &c. all of them treated of under their heads; and Juſtices of Peace, &c.

Juſtice of the Foreſt, (Juſticiarius foreſtæ) Is alſo a Lord by his office, and hears and determines all offences within the foreſt, committed againſt vert or veniſon: Of theſe there are two, whereof one hath juriſdiction over all foreſts on this ſide Trent, the other of all beyond it. The chief point of their juriſdiction conſiſteth upon the articles of the King's charter, called Charta de foreſta, made Anno 9 Hen. 3. concerning which ſee Cambd. Brit. p. 214. See Protoforeſtarius. The court where this juſtice ſits and determines, is called The juſtice-ſeat of the foreſt, held once every three years. Manwood's Foreſt Laws, cap. 24. He is alſo called Juſtice in eyre of the foreſt; and is the only juſtice that may appoint a deputy by the ſtatute of 33 Hen. 8. c. 35.

Juſtice of the hundred, (Juſticiarius Hundredi) Erat ipſe hundredi Dominus, qui et centurio et centenarius, hundredique aldermannus appellatus eſt. Præerat omnibus, hundredi friborgis, cognovitque de cauſis majuſculis, quæ in eiſdem finiri non potuerunt. Spelm.

Juſtiſements, from juſtitia, All things belonging to juſtice Co. on Weſtm. 1. fol. 225. Alſo the effects or execution of juſtice or of juriſdiction.

Juſtices of Aſſiſe, (Juſticiarii ad capiendas aſſiſas) Are ſuch as were wont by ſpecial commiſſion to be ſent (as occaſion was offered) into this or that county, to take aſſiſes for the eaſe of the ſubjects; for, as theſe actions paſs always by jury, many men could not, without damage and charge, be brought to London, therefore juſtices for this purpoſe, by commiſſion particularly authorized, were ſent to them. For it ſeems, that the juſtices of the Common Pleas had no power to take aſſiſes till the ſtat. of 8 R. 2. c. 2. by which they were enabled to it, and to deliver gaols. And the juſtices of the King's Bench have by that ſtatute ſuch power affirmed unto them, as they had one hundred years before.

Theſe commiſſions Ad capiendas aſſiſas, have of late years been ſettled and executed only in Lent, and the long vacation, (called now the Lent and Summer aſſiſes) when the juſtices, and other learned lawyers, may be at leiſure to attend thoſe controverſies; whereupon it alſo falls out, that the matters that were wont to be heard by more general commiſſions of juſtices in eyre, are heard all at one time with theſe aſſiſes, which was not ſo of old, as appears by Bracton, lib. 3. cap. 7. num. 2. Habeat etiam juſticiarios itinerantes de comitatu in comitatum, quandoque ad omnia placita; quandoque ad quædam ſpecialia, ſicut aſſiſas, &c. & ad gaolas deliberandas; quandoque ad unam vel duas; non plures. And by this means the juſtices of both benches being worthily accounted the fitteſt of all others, and their aſſiſtants, were employed in theſe affairs. But no juſtice of either bench, or any other, may be juſtice of aſſiſe in his own county, Anno 8 R. 2. c. 2. and 33 Hen. 8. c. 24. Tho' they are not reſtrained from and frequently ſit on the crown ſide indeed, otherwiſe the buſineſs of the circuits, could not well be tranſacted. And thoſe who now are called juſtices of aſſiſe, and twice every year go the circuit by two and two through all England, diſpatch their ſeveral buſineſſes by ſeveral commiſſions. Cromp. Jur. fol. 210. For they have one commiſſion to take aſſiſes, another to deliver gaols, another of oyer and terminer, &c. That juſtices of aſſiſe and juſtices in eyre did anciently differ, appeareth by 27 Ed. 3. cap. 5. And that juſtices of aſſiſe and juſtices of gaol-delivery were different, is evident by 4 Ed. 3. c. 3. The oath taken by the juſtices of aſſiſe is all one with that taken by the juſtices of the King's Bench. Old Abridgement of Statutes, tit. Sacramentum Juſticiariorum. Cowell.

Juſtices of both benches, Shall decide pleas commenced before other matters be arraigned, St. Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 46.

Juſtices in eyre, (Juſticiarii itinerantes) Are ſo termed of the old French word erre, as (a grand erre, i. e. magnis itineribus,) proverbially ſpoken. Theſe in ancient time, were ſent with commiſſion into divers countries to hear ſuch cauſes eſpecially, as were termed pleas of the crown. And this was done for the eaſe of the people, who muſt elſe have been hurried to the King's Bench, if the caſe were too high for the county-court: They differed from the juſtices of oyer and terminer, becauſe they (as we ſaid before) were ſent upon one or few ſpecial cauſes, and to one place; whereas the juſtices in eyre were ſent thro' the provinces and counties of the land, with more indefinite and general commiſſion, as appeareth by Bracton, lib 3. c. 11, 12, 13. and Britton, cap. 2.

And again, becauſe the juſtices of oyer and terminer were ſent uncertainly upon any uproar, or other occaſion in the country; but theſe in eyre (as Mr. Gwin ſets down in the Preface to his Reading,) were ſent but once in every ſeven years; with whom agrees Horne in his Mirror of Juſtices, l. 2. c. Queux poient eſtre actours, &c. & l. 2. cap. Des peches criminals. &c. al ſuit del Roy, &c. And lib. 3. cap. De juſtices in eyre: Where he alſo declares what belongs to their office. But according to Orig. Juridiciales, they went oftner. Theſe were inſtituted by King Henry the Second, as Camb. in his Brit. witneſſeth, pag. 104. and Hoveden par. poſt. ſuor. Annal. fol. 113. hath of them theſe words, Juſticiarii itinerantes, conſtituti per Henricum ſecundum, qui diviſit Regnum ſuum in ſex partes, per quarum ſingulas tres juſticiarios itinerantes conſtituit, &c. In ſome reſpect they reſembled our juſtices of aſſiſe at preſent, though their authority and manner of proceeding much differ. Co. Litt. fol. 293. Cowell.

Juſtices of Gaol-Delivery, (Juſticiarii ad gaolas deliberandas,) Are thoſe who are ſent with commiſſion, to hear and determine all cauſes appertaining to ſuch, who for any offence are caſt into gaol: part of their authority is to puniſh ſuch as let to mainprize thoſe priſoners who are not bailable by law, nor by the ſtatute De Finibus, cap. 3. F. N. B. fol. 151. Theſe ſeem in ancient time to have been ſent into the country upon ſeveral occaſions; but afterwards juſtices of aſſiſe were likewiſe authorized to the like purpoſes. Anno 4 Ed. 3. c. 3. Their oath is all one with others of the King's juſtices of either bench. Old Abridgment of the Statutes, tit. Sacramentum Juſticiariorum. Cowell.

Juſtices of aſſiſe, if laymen, ſhall deliver the gaols. 27 Ed. 1. ſt. 1. c. 3.

The juſtices of peace ſhall deliver over their indictments to the juſtices of gaol-delivery. 4 Ed. 3. c. 2.

Shall be ſworn like the other judges. 2 Ed. 3. c. 3.

Juſtices of the Jews, (Juſticiarii ad cuſtodiam Judæorum aſſignati,) King Richard 1. after his return out of the Holy Land, anno 1194. appointed particular juſtices, laws, and orders, for preventing the frauds, and regulating the contracts and uſury of the Jews. Hoveden, parte poſt, pag. 745. Clauſ. 3 Ed. 1. m. 19.

Juſtices of labourers, Were juſtices heretofore appointed to redreſs the frowardneſs of labouring men, who would either be idle, or have unreaſonable wages. See 21 Ed 3. c. 1. 25 Ed. 3. c. 8. and 31 Ed. 1. c. 6.

Juſtices of Niſi prius, Are all one at this time with juſtices of aſſiſe, for it is a common adjournment of a cauſe in the Common Pleas, to put it off to ſuch a day, Niſi prius Juſticiarii venerint ad eas partes ad capiendas aſſiſas; and upon this clauſe of adjournment they are called Juſtices of Niſi prius, as well as juſtices of aſſiſe. Their commiſſion you may ſee in Cromp. Juriſ. fol. 204. yet with this difference between them, that Juſtices of aſſiſe have power to give judgment in a cauſe, but Juſtices of Niſi prius only to take the verdict. But in the nature of both their functions, this ſeems to be the greateſt difference, that Juſtices of Niſi prius have to deal in cauſes perſonal as well as real; whereas Juſtices of aſſiſe, in ſtrict acceptation, meddle only with the poſſeſſory writs called Aſſiſe. Cowell.

Juſtices of oyer and terminer, (Juſticiarii ad audiendum & terminandum,) Were juſtices deputed upon ſome ſpecial or extraordinary occaſions. Fitzherbert in his Nat. Brev. ſaith, That the commiſſion d'oyer and terminer is directed to certain perſons upon any great riot, inſurrections, heinous miſdemeanors, or treſpaſſes committed. And becauſe the occaſion of granting this commiſſion ſhould be maturely weighed, it is provided by the ſtatute made 2 Ed. 3. c. 2. That no ſuch commiſſion ought to be granted, but that they ſhall be diſpatched before the juſtices of the one bench or other, or juſtices errant, except for horrible treſpaſſes, and that by the ſpecial favour of the King. The form of this commiſſion, ſee F. N. B. f. 110.

Juſtices of the pavilion, (Juſticiarii pavilionis,) Are certain judges of a pie-powder court, of a moſt tranſcendent juriſdiction, held under the biſhop of Wincheſter at a fair on St. Giles's Hill. near that city, by virtue of letters patent granted by Richard 2. and Edward 4. Epiſcopus Wynton. & ſucceſſores ſuos, a tempore quo, &c. Juſticiarios ſuos, qui vocantur Juſticiarii pavilionis, cognitiones placitorum & aliorum negotiorum eadem feria durante, necnon claves portarum & cuſtodiam prædictæ civitatis noſtræ Wynton, pro certo tempore feriæ illius, & nonnullas alias libertates, immunitates & conſuetudines habuiſſe, &c. See the patent at large in Prynne's Animad. on 4 Inſt. fol. 191.

Juſtices of the Peace, (Juſticiarii ad Pacem) Are thoſe who are appointed by the King's commiſſion to keep the peace of the county where they dwell; and are rather commiſſioners of the peace, of whom ſome of the greater quality are of the quorum, becauſe buſineſs of importance may not be diſpatched without the preſence of them, or one of them. Juſtices of peace, (Polidore Virgil tells us,) had their beginning in the reign of William 1ſt, called the Conqueror; but Sir Edward Coke was of opinion, that in the ſixth year of K. Ed. 1. Prima fuit inſtitutio juſticiariorum pro pace conſervanda. Mr. Prynne affirms, that in the reign of King Hen. 3. after the agreement made between that King and his barons, guardians ad pacem conſervandam were conſtituted; And Sir Henry Spelman differs from both theſe, being of opinion that they were not made until the beginning of the reign of King Ed. 3. when they were thought neceſſary for ſuppreſſing commotions, which might happen upon dethroning of K. Ed. 2.

It is certain the general commiſſion of the peace, by ſtatute, began 1 Ed. 3. Tho' before that time there were particular commiſſions of peace to certain men, in certain places; tho' not throughout England. 2 Nelſ. Ab. 1063. Heretofore there were conſervators of the peace at the Common law, elected by the county, upon a writ directed to the ſheriff: But the election of conſervators is transferred by ſtatutes from the people to the King; and at length juſtices of peace were and ſtill are created conſervators of the peace by commiſſion or letters patent under the Great Seal: The power of conſtituting them is only in the King; tho' they are generally made at the diſcretion of the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, by the King's leave; and the King may appoint in every county in England and Wales as many as he ſhall think fit. 1 Inſt. 174, 175. At firſt the number of juſtices was not above three or four in a county. 18 Ed. 3. Afterwards the number was limited to ſix in every county; whereof two were to be of the beſt quality, (ſuch as we now call of the quorum) two men of the law, and two others. And after there was to be one lord, and three or four of the moſt worthy of the county, with ſome learned in the law. 34 Ed. 3. By the ſtatute 14 R. 2. eight juſtices of peace were to be aſſigned in every county: And the number of juſtices has greatly increaſed ſince their firſt inſtitution; Mr. Lambard above one hundred years ago complaining of their exceſſive number; and after him the learned Spelman takes notice that there were above threeſcore in each county: they are now without limitation; and their prodigious increaſe, with the unſuitable appointment many times made of perſons for this truſt, hath rendred the office contemptible in the eye of our beſt gentry, for whom it was originally intended; it hath therefore been propoſed, that in each county there ſhould be eight honorary juſtices conſtituted of men of quality, who ſhould not be obliged to an attendance any farther than their zeal for juſtice, and love for their country ſhall incline them; and the like number of acting juſtices, gentlemen capable of buſineſs, who ſhould conſtantly attend, and be intitled to a reward for their pains, and upon any neglect be ſubject to penalties. Lamb. Juſt.

Juſtices of peace were formerly to be allowed 4 s. a day during their attendance at the quarter ſeſſions, to be paid by the ſheriffs of counties. 12 R. 3. 2 H. 5. 18 H. 6. Attornies, &c. are incapable to be in the commiſſion of the peace whilſt they practice, but not when they have left off buſineſs. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 18. By the ſtatute 18 Geo. 2. c. 20. No perſon ſhall be capable of being a juſtice of peace, or acting as ſuch, who ſhall not have, in law or equity, for his own uſe in poſſeſſion, a freehold, copyhold, or cuſtomary eſtate for life, or ſome greater eſtate, or for years determinable upon a life or lives, or 21 years, in lands, &c. of the clear yearly value of 100 l. over and above all incumbrances, rents and charges; or intitled to the immediate reverſion or remainder in lands, &c. of 300 l. per ann. and who ſhall not take the oath in this act mentioned, under the penalty of 100 l. to be recovered by action of debt, and the proof of the qualification to lie on the defendant; and if he inſiſts on any lands not mentioned in the oath, he is to give notice of them; and lands not mentioned in the oath or notice are not to be allowed.

This act not to extend to cities or towns, &c. the board of green cloth, or the two univerſities. Juſtices of peace are to hold their ſeſſions four times a year, i. e. the firſt week after Michaelmas, the Epiphany, Eaſter, and St. Thomas called Becket, being the 7th of July. 36 Ed. 3. c. 12. 12 R. 2. c. 10. They are juſtices of record, for none but juſtices of record can take a recogniſance of the peace: And their power ariſes from their commiſſion, or from ſtatutes by virtue of theſe words in their commiſſion, viz. Sciatis quod aſſignavimus vos conjunctim & diviſim & quemlibet veſtrum juſticiarios noſtros ad pacem noſtram in comitatu noſtro S. conſervandum, &c. Every juſtice of peace hath a ſeparate power, and may do all acts concerning his office apart and by himſelf; and even may commit a fellow juſtice upon treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace: And this is the ancient power which conſervators of the peace had at Common law. But it has been held, that one juſtice of the peace cannot commit another juſtice, for breach of the peace; though the juſtices in ſeſſions may do it. Lamb. Juſt. 385. Jenk. Cent. 174. By virtue of another aſſignavimus, or clauſe in the commiſſion, two or more juſtices of the peace (one of the quorum) have a joint power to inquire by jury of all offices mentioned in the commiſſion; to take indictments, and grant proceſs thereupon; and to hear and try offences; which are matters to be tranſacted at the quarter-ſeſſions. And by the ſtatutes they may act in many caſes where their commiſſion doth not reach; the ſtatutes themſelves being a ſufficient commiſſion. Lamb. lib. 4. Wood's Inſt. 79, 80.

The ſtatutes 4 H. 7. c. 12. 33 H. 8. c. 10. and 37 H. 8. c. 7. give them a further general power than is expreſſed either in their commiſſion, or in any particular ſtatute. The particular ſtatutes are to be executed as they direct; wherein if no expreſs power is given to any one juſtice, he can admoniſh only, and if not obeyed, may make preſentment of the offence upon the ſtatute, and with his fellow juſtices hear and determine it in ſeſſions; or he may bind the offender to the peace, or the good behaviour: ſome ſtatutes empower one juſtice of peace alone to act; ſome require two, three, four juſtices, &c. And where a ſpecial authority is given to juſtices of peace, it muſt be exactly purſued; or the acts of the juſtices will not be good. 2 Salk. 475.

A juſtice of peace's oath for the execution of his office, is as follows: 'You ſhall ſwear, That in the office of a 'juſtice of peace in and for the county of, &c. in all 'and every the articles in his Majeſty's commiſſion en'joined and to you directed, you will do equal right to 'the rich and poor, according to your knowledge, and 'the laws and ſtatutes of this realm; you ſhall not be 'counſel to any perſon, in any quarrel depending before 'you; you ſhall hold your ſeſſions according to the di'rection of the ſtatutes in that caſe made; and you ſhall 'cauſe to be entered the iſſues, fines, and amerciaments 'that ſhall happen to be made, and all forfeitures, with'out any concealment, and ſend an account of them to 'the King's Exchequer; you ſhall not ſpare any one for 'gift or other cauſe, nor take any thing for doing the bu'ſineſs of your office, but the fees and allowances accuſ'tomed and fixed by acts of parliament, &c. And in 'all things you ſhall well and truly do and execute the of'fice of a juſtice of peace.' Dalt. Juſt.

If a juſtice of peace does not obſerve the form of proceeding directed by ſtatute, it is coram non judice, and void; but if he acts according to the direction of the ſtatutes, neither the juſtices in ſeſſions nor B. R. can reverſe what he has done. Jones 170.

The power of juſtices is miniſterial when they are commanded to do any thing by a ſuperior authority, as by the court of B. R. &c. In all other caſes they act as judges: but they muſt proceed according to their commiſſion, &c. And a juſtice is to exerciſe his authority only within the county where he is appointed by his commiſſion; not in any city which is a county of itſelf or town corporate, having their proper juſtices, &c. tho' in other towns and liberties he may. Dalt.

When a juſtice of peace acts to compel another to perform any thing required by law, as where he impriſons or commands any one to be impriſoned, &c. he cannot act out of the juriſdiction of his county; but he may take informations any where to prove offences in the county where committed, and he principally reſides, or take a recogniſance to proſecute. Cro. Car. 213. And by a late ſtatute, juſtices of any county, dwelling in a city that is in itſelf a county within the county at large, may grant warrants, take informations, make orders, &c. at their own dwelling houſes, tho' out of the county, &c. 9 Geo. 1. c. 7.

Alſo juſtices of peace may do all things relating to the laws for relief of the poor, the paſſing and puniſhing vagrants, the repairs of the highways, or concerning parochial taxes or rates, altho' ſuch juſtices are rated to the taxes, within any place where they execute their office:

but no juſtice ſhall act in determining any appeal to the quarter-ſeſſions, from any order that relates to the pariſh where he is ſo charged. Statute 16 Geo. 2. cap. 18. On appeals to juſtices of peace in the ſeſſions, they are to cauſe defects in form in orders, &c. to be rectified without charge, and then determine the matters according to the merits of the caſe; and their proceedings ſhall not be removed into B. R. without entering into recogniſance of 50*l.* to proſecute with effect, and pay coſts if affirmed, &c. by ſtatute 5 Geo. 2. c. 19.

No certiorari ſhall iſſue to remove any order, made by juſtices of peace of any county, &c. or at the quarter-ſeſſions, unleſs it be applied for within ſix months, and proved on oath that ſix days notice in writing was given to the juſtices, by whom the order was made, that they or the parties concerned may ſhew cauſe againſt it. 13 Geo. 2. c. 18.

A man may be a juſtice of peace in one part of Yorkſhire, and yet not be juſtice of peace in every part of the county; this county being divided into ſeparate ridings. Hill. 22 Car. B. R.

Juſtices of peace have power by their commiſſion to hear and determine felonies and treſpaſſes, &c. 13 Ed. 3. c. 2. But this is by a ſpecial clauſe in their commiſſion; otherwiſe they cannot do it. H. P. C. 165. And if a commiſſion of oyer and terminer iſſues to hear and determine felonies, that determines the commiſſions of juſtices of peace as to felonies, tho' not as to the peace, &c. The ſtat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13. directs juſtices of peace to take examinations in caſes of felony and murder, and to certify them to the juſtices of gaol-delivery, &c. ſince which they forbear to try great felonies. H. P. C. 166.

Juſtices of peace may take an information againſt perſons committing treaſon; iſſue warrants for their apprehenſion, and commit them to priſon, &c. They commit all felons in order to trial; and bind over the proſecutors to the aſſiſes: And if they do not certify examinations and informations to the next gaol-delivery; or do not bind over proſecutors, &c. they ſhall be fined. Dalt. c. 11. For petit larceny, and ſmall felonies, the juſtices in their quarter ſeſſions may try offenders; other felonies being of courſe tried at the aſſiſes: And in caſe of felonies, and pleas upon penal ſtatutes, they cannot hold cogniſance without an expreſs power given them by the ſtatutes.

Juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions cannot try a cauſe the ſame ſeſſions, without conſent of parties, etc. for the party ought to have convenient time, or it will be error. Cro. Car. 317. Sid. 334. Nor can the ſeſſions of juſtices refer a matter which ought to be tried, to be determined by another ſeſſion; yet they may refer a thing to another to examine, and make report to them for their determination. 2 Salk. 477. The ſeſſions is all as one day, and the juſtices may alter their judgments at any time while it continues. Ibid. 494.

It is incident to the office of a juſtice of peace to commit offenders; And a juſtice may commit a perſon that doth a felony in his own view, without warrant; but if it be on the information of another, he muſt make a warrant under hand and ſeal for that purpoſe. If a juſtice iſſues a warrant to arreſt a felon, and the accuſation be falſe, the juſtice is excuſed, where a felony is committed: if there be no accuſation, action will lie againſt the juſtice. 1 Leon. 187. A juſtice makes a warrant to apprehend a felon, tho' he is not indicted, he who executes the warrant ſhall not be puniſhed. 13 Rep. 76. Cro. Jac. 432. If complaint and oath be made before a juſtice of peace, by one, of goods ſtolen, and that he ſuſpects they are in ſuch a houſe, and ſhews the cauſe of his ſuſpicion; the juſtice may grant a warrant to the conſtable, etc. to ſearch in the place ſuſpected, and ſeize the goods and perſon in whoſe cuſtody they are found, and bring them before him, or ſome other juſtice, to give an account how he came by them; and farther to abide ſuch order, as to law ſhall appertain. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 114. The ſearch on theſe warrants ought to be in the day-time, and doors may be broke open by conſtables to take the goods; which are to be depoſited in the hands of the ſheriff, etc. till the party robbed hath proſecuted the offender, to have reſtitution. Ibid. 150, 151.

A juſtice of peace may make a warrant to bring a perſon before himſelf only, and it will be good; tho' it is uſual to make warrants to bring the offenders before him or any other juſtice of the county, &c. And if a juſtice directs his warrant to a private perſon, he may execute it. 5 Rep. 60. 1 Salk. 347. If a juſtice grants his warrant beyond his authority, the officer muſt obey; but if it be where the juſtice has no authority, the officer is puniſhable if he executes it. Juſtices of peace may make and perſuade an agreement in petty quarrels and breaches of the peace, where the King is not intitled to a fine: tho' they may not compound offences, or take money for making agreements. Noy 103. Juſtices may not intermeddle with property; if they do, action lies againſt them and the officers who execute their orders. 3 Salk. 217.

A juſtice of peace hath a diſcretionary power of binding to the good behaviour; and may require a recognizance with a great penalty of one for his keeping of the peace, where the party bound is a dangerous perſon, and likely to break the peace, and do much miſchief. Paſch. 1652 2 Lill. Abr. 131. And where a perſon is to be bound to the good behaviour, for default of ſureties he may be committed to gaol. But a man giving ſecurity for keeping the peace in B. R. or the Chancery, may have a ſuperſedeas to the juſtices in the country not to take ſecurity; and ſo where a perſon hears of a warrant out againſt him, and gives ſurety of the peace to any other juſtice, etc.

If one make an aſſault upon a juſtice of peace, he may apprehend the offender, and ſend him to gaol till he finds ſureties for the peace; and a juſtice may record a forcible entry upon his own poſſeſſion: In other caſes he cannot judge in his own cauſe. Wood's Inſt. 81. Where a man abuſeth a juſtice by words, before his face or behind his back, in relation to his office, he may be bound to his good behaviour; and if a juſtice of peace be abuſed in the execution of his office, the offender may be alſo indicted and fined. Cromp. 149. 4 Rep. 16. To ſay of a juſtice of peace he doth not underſtand law, etc. is indictable: And contempts againſt juſtices are puniſhable by indictment and fine at the ſeſſions. 3 Mod. 139. 1 Sid. 144. But abuſing a juſtice out of his office, by words that do not relate to his office, ſeems to ſtand only as in the caſe of other perſons.

Juſtices ſhall not be regularly puniſhed for any thing done by them in ſeſſions as judges; and if a juſtice of peace be ſued for any thing done in his office, he may plead the general iſſue, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence; and if a verdict goes for him or the plaintiff be nonſuit, he ſhall have double coſts. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 12. Tho' if a juſtice of peace is guilty of any miſdemeanor in his office, information lies againſt him in B. R. where he ſhall be puniſhed by fine and impriſonment. Sid. 192. If a perſon be never ſummoned by juſtices of peace, to be heard and make his defence, before the juſtices make any order againſt him, it is a miſbehaviour for which an information will lie againſt them: but it has been held, that it is not abſolutely neceſſary to ſet it out in the order. Trin. 11 Geo. 1.

The court of B. R. will grant an information againſt a juſtice of peace on motion for ſending a ſervant to the Houſe of Correction without ſufficient cauſe; if the juſtice do ſhew not good cauſe, etc. Mod. Caſ. in L. and E. 45, 46. And for contempt of laws, etc. Attachment may be had againſt juſtices of peace in B. R. on motion of the Attorney General, etc. A juſtice of peace fined a thouſand marks, for corrupt practices, ſee 1 Keb. 727. If a new commiſſion is made and granted for juſtices of peace, out of which ſome of the juſtices in the old commiſſion are omitted, yet what acts they do as juſtices are lawful till the next ſeſſions, at which the new commiſſion is publiſhed, and when the new commiſſion is publiſhed, they are to take notice of it, and not act further. Moor 187. By granting a new commiſſion, diſcharge under the Great Seal, acceſſion of another office, and by the death of the King, the power and offices of juſtices of peace determine. 4 Inſt. 165. But till then they are empowered to act in a great many particular caſes by ſtatute.

By Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 44. No writ ſhall be ſued out againſt any juſtice of peace, for any thing done by him in the execution of his office, until a notice in writing ſhall be delivered to him one month before the ſuing out the ſame, containing the cauſe of action, &c. within which month he may tender amends, and if the tender be found ſufficient, he ſhall have a verdict. No ſuch plaintiff ſhall recover againſt the juſtice, unleſs ſuch notice ſhall be proved at the trial.

If the juſtice ſhall neglect to make ſuch tender, or ſhall make an inſufficient tender, he may, before iſſue joined, pay into court ſuch ſum as he ſhall think fit. Where an action is againſt a juſtice and conſtable, if there be a verdict againſt the juſtice, and the conſtable be acquitted, the plaintiff ſhall recover ſuch coſts againſt the juſtice, as to include the coſts the plaintiff ſhall be obliged to pay to the conſtable. If plaintiff in any ſuch action ſhall recover againſt a juſtice, and the judge ſhall certify that the injury was wilfully and maliciouſly done, the plaintiff ſhall recover double coſts.

No action ſhall be brought againſt a juſtice for any thing done in the execution of his office, unleſs commenced within ſix months after the act committed.

By Stat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 27. No act, order, adjudication, warrant, indenture of apprenticeſhip, or other inſtrument made, done or executed by two or more juſtices, which doth not expreſs that one or more of them is or are of the quorum, ſhall be impeached, ſet aſide, or vacated for that defect only. By the ſtatute 24 Geo. 2. c. 55.

Where a juſtice ſhall grant a warrant againſt a perſon reſiding out of his juriſdiction, a juſtice of the county, &c. where ſuch perſon ſhall reſide, ſhall indorſe his name on the warrant, which ſhall be a ſufficient authority to the perſon to whom the warrant was originally directed to execute the warrant, and carry the perſon before the juſtice who indorſed the warrant, or any other juſtice of the ſame county, who, if the offence be bailable, ſhall take bail for the perſon's appearing at the next ſeſſions for the county, &c. where the offence was committed, and deliver the recogniſance and all proceedings to the conſtable, &c. who apprehended the party, to be by him delivered to the clerk of the peace of the county, &c. where the fact was committed; if the fact be not bailable, or the party ſhall not give bail, the conſtable may carry the party before a juſtice of the county where the fact was committed.

No action lies againſt the juſtice, who indorſes ſuch warrant, but only againſt the juſtice who granted it, if cauſe. By the Stat. 27 Geo. 2. c. 20. In all caſes of a warrant of diſtreſs for levying any penalty inflicted, or money directed to be paid, the juſtice or juſtices granting ſuch warrant, may therein order the goods diſtrained to be ſold within a certain time limitted in the warrant, to be not leſs than four days, nor more than eight days, unleſs the penalty or money, with the reaſonable charges of taking and keeping ſuch diſtreſs be ſooner paid. The officer may deduct the reaſonable charges of taking, keeping and ſelling the diſtreſs; and if required ſhall ſhew the party his warrant, and permit him to take a copy of it. [The Editor would have been much fuller under this head, but for two reaſons; firſt, the laws are ſo voluminous that the nature of this work would not admit ſufficient to be farther uſeful;—the ſecond, that Dr. Burn hath ſo fully collected and ſo well digeſted all the laws relative to the office and duty of a juſtice of peace, that every one who is deſirous of being acquainted with this part of the law is, or ought to be, poſſeſſed of that very valuable work, which renders it wholly unneceſſary, here, to enlarge on the ſubject.]

Juſtices of Peace within Liberties, (juſticiarii ad pacem infra libertates) Are ſuch in cities, and other corporate towns, as the others are of the county; and their authority is all one within the ſeveral territories and precincts, having beſides the aſſiſe of ale and beer, wood, victuals, &c. 27 H. 8. c. 5. But if the King grant to a corporation, that the mayor and recorder, &c. ſhall be juſtices of peace within the city; if there be no words of excluſion, juſtices of the county have concurrent juriſdiction with them; and the King, notwithſtanding his charter, may grant a commiſſion of the peace ſpecially in that city or county. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 47. Alſo where the juſtices of any corporate town, deny doing right; juſtices of the peace of the county may inquire into it, as hath been lately adjudged. Mod. Caſ. 164. The juſtices of peace in cities, or towns corporate, may commit perſons apprehended within their liberties to the houſe of correction of the county, &c. which perſons ſhall be liable to the like correction and puniſhment, as if committed there by any juſtice of the ſame county. Stat. 15 Geo. 2. c. 24. Juſtices of cities and corporations, are not within the qualification act. 5 Geo. 2. c. 18. Juſtices of Trail-baſton, Were juſtices appointed by King Ed. 1. during his abſence in the Scotch and French wars. They were ſo ſtiled, ſays Hollingſhead, of trailing or drawing the ſtaff of juſtice; or for their ſummary proceeding, according to Sir Edward Coke, who tells us, they were in a manner juſtices in eyre; and it is ſaid, they had a baſton, or ſtaff delivered to them as the badge of their office, ſo that whoever was brought before them was traile ad baſton, traditus ad baculum: whereupon they had the name of juſtices de trail-baſton, or juſticiarii ad trahendum offendentes ad baculum vel baſton. Their office was to make inquiſition through the kingdom on all officers and others, touching extortion, bribery, and ſuch like grievances; of intruders into other mens lands, barretors, robbers and breakers of the peace, and divers other offenders; by means of which inquiſitions, ſome were puniſhed with death, many by ranſom, and the reſt flying the realm, the land was quieted, and the King gained great riches towards the ſupport of his wars. Mat. Weſtm. Anno 1305. A commiſſion of trail baſton was granted to Roger de Grey. and others his aſſociates, in the reign of King Ed. 3. Spelm. Gloſſ.

Juſtice Seat, Is the higheſt court that is held in a foreſt, and is always held before the Lord Chief Juſtice in Eyre of the foreſt, upon warning forty days before; and there fines are ſet for offences, and judgments given, &c. Manwood's Foreſt Law, cap. 24. The fine and amercement of the juſtices in eyre, for falſe judgment, or other treſpaſs, ſhall be aſſeſſed by the ſaid juſtices upon the oaths of knights, and other honeſt men, and be eſtreated into the Exchequer. Stat. 3 Ed. 1. c. 18. And juſtices in eyre ſhall appoint a time for delivering in all writs by the ſheriff, &c. 13 Ed. 1. c. 10. See Black. Com. 3 V. 72.

Juſticiar, or Juſticier, (Fr. juſticier,) A juſtice, or juſticier. The Lord Bermingham, juſticier of Ireland. Baker's Cron. Angl. fol. 118.

The whole juriſdiction which is now diſtributed among the ſeveral courts of Weſtminſter-Hall, ſeems in the firſt reigns after the conqueſt to have been lodged in one court, commonly called the King's court, where juſtice is ſaid to have been adminiſtred ſometimes by the King himſelf in perſon, and ſometimes by the high juſticier, who was an officer of very great authority, and uſed in the King's abſence beyond ſea to govern the realm as vice-roy. 2 Hawk. P. C. 6.

The firſt juſticiaries after the conqueſt were Odo biſhop of Baieux in Normandy, half brother by the mother to the conqueror, and William Fitz-Oſborn, who was vice-roy, and had the ſame power in the north that Odo had in the ſouth, and was the chief in the conqueror's army. Brady's Preface to the Norman Hiſtory 151. (B). Dugd. Chron. Series 1.

The next juſticiaries were William Earl of Warren in Normany, a great commander in the battle againſt Harold, and Richard de Benefacta, alias Richard de Tonebridge, ſon to Gilbert Earl of Brion in Normandy, and were conſtituted in 1073. Brady's Preface, &c. 151. (B.) Dugd. Chron. Series 1.

In a great plea between Lanfrank and the ſaid Odo, Goisfrid biſhop of Conſtance, in Normandy, was juſticiary. Brady's Preface, &c. 151. (C). Dugd. Chron. Series 1.

In the beginning of William Rufus, Odo was again juſticiary. William de Carileſo biſhop of Durham, a Norman, ſucceded Odo, and then followed Ranulph Flambard in 1099. Afterwards in the reign of H. 1. in 1100. Hugo de Bocland, a Norman, was juſticiary, and after him his ſon Richard Baſſet; then Roger biſhop of Saliſbury, was juſticiary and chancellor. The next, in the time of King Stephen, was Henry duke of Normandy, afterwards King Henry II. And in Henry the Second's time was Robert de Bello Monte earl of Leiceſter in 1168, but Alboric de Vere earl of Guiſnes, is ſaid to have been juſticiary before him; and after earl of Leiceſter, Richard de Lucie was made juſticiary; after him in 1180. Ranelagh de Glanvil, that famous lawyer, was made juſticiary; after him, Hugo de Putaceo, commonly called Puſur, Putac, or Pudſey, nephew to King Stephen by his ſiſter, was made juſticiary in the north parts beyond Trent; and William de Longo-Campo, or Long-Champ, biſhop of Ely, was at the ſame time by Richard the Firſt made juſticiary on the ſouth parts of this ſide Trent. Then, after the deprivation of William biſhop of Ely, Walter archbiſhop of Roven in Normandy, was made juſticiary of all England. Brady's Preface, &c. 151. (D) (E) (F) 152. (A) (B) (C). William Long-Champ biſhop of Ely, chief juſticiar and lord chancellor to Ric. 1. Speed. 473. Fitz Peter, chief juſticiar in the firſt of John. Ib. 487. Hubert de Burgh earl of Kent, chief juſticiar. 1 H. 3. Ib. 513. And after him, Stephen Segrave. Ib. 521. The chief juſticiar was the miniſter of regal command in the abſence of the King. Ib. 513.

Towards the latter end of the Norman period, the power of the grand juſticiar was broken, ſo that the Aula Regis, which before was one great court where the juſticiar preſided, was divided into four diſtinct courts, viz. Chancery, Exchequer, King's Bench, and Common Pleas, Gilb. Hiſt. View of the Court of Exchequer 7. cites Madd. 2, 4. it determined about the 45 H. 3. Brady's Preface, &c. 154. b.

The chancellor was the firſt in order on the left hand of the juſticiary, and as he was a great perſon in court, ſo he was in the Exchequer; for no great thing paſſed but with his conſent and advice; nothing could be ſealed without his allowance and privity. But the juſticiary ſurmounted him and all others in authority, and he alone was endowed with and exerciſed all the power which afterwards was executed by the four chief judges, viz. the Ch. Juſt. of B. R. the Ch. Juſt. of C. B. the Ch. B. of the Exchequer, and the Maſter of the court of Wards. Brady's Preface to the Roman Hiſtory 153. (B) As long as the power of the juſticiar continued, the Aula Regis was one court, and only diſtinguiſhed by the ſeveral officers; for all the officers were united under the juſticiar, and he was the governor and ſuperintendant of the courts. *Gilb. Juſticies, Is a writ directed to the ſheriff ih ſome ſpecial caſes, by virtue of which he may hold plea of debt in his county court for a large ſum; whereas otherwiſe by his ordinary power he is limited to ſums under 40*s.* F. N. B. 117. Kitch. 74. It is called juſticies, becauſe it is a commiſſion to the ſheriff to do a man juſtice and right, beginning with the word juſticies, &c. Bract. lib. 4. makes mention of a juſticies to the ſheriff of London, in a caſe of dower; and it lies in account, annuity, cuſtoms and ſervices, &c. *New Nat. Juſtifiable Homicide. See Homicide, murder, and Black. Com. 4 V. 178

Juſtification, (juſtificatio) Is a maintaining or ſhewing good reaſon in court why one did ſuch a thing which he is called to anſwer. Broke. And pleas in juſtification are to ſet forth ſome ſpecial matter whereby the party juſtifies what he hath done, concerning lands or goods; as that he did it by authority: and this may be by the law, or from another perſon; wherein, to make it right, there muſt be good authority, which is to be exactly purſued. Shep. Epit. 1041. Juſtification may be in treſpaſs, and under writs, proceſſes, &c. But a perſon cannot juſtify a treſpaſs, unleſs he confeſſeth it; for he ought to plead the ſpecial matter, and confeſs and juſtify what he hath done. 3 Salk. 218. Where a defendant juſtifies in treſpaſs on his poſſeſſion, by virtue of any eſtate, he muſt ſhew his title; but when the matter is collateral to the title to the land, it is otherwiſe. 2 Mod. 70. Sed qu. If he ſhould not give colour? or probably ſuch plea may amount to the general iſſue. If a ſheriff, or other officer, juſtifies by virtue of any returnable writ, he is to ſhew that the writ was returned; though he need not if the writs are not returnable writs. 1 Salk. 409. And it muſt be ſhewn from what courts the writs iſſued. Ibid. 517. Juſtification may be by the command of an officer, to aid him, &c. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1067.

When the action concerns a tranſitory thing, if the defendant juſtify the taking or doing in one place; it is a juſtification in all places: if the action concern a local thing, a juſtification in one place is not a juſtification in another place; for in the former caſe the place is not material, but the mere doing or taking of the thing is the ſubſtance; and in the latter, the place is material, as the defendant may be able to juſtify as to one place, and not in another. Paſch. 24 Car. B. R. 2 Lil. Abr. 134. If the matter of juſtification is local, there the defendant ought to ſhew the cauſe ſpecially, and traverſe the place; but not where it is tranſitory. Cro. Eliz. 667. If one have corn upon the lands of another, and he take it, and the owner of the ground ſues him, he muſt juſtify, and not plead the general iſſue. 5 Rep. 85. in actions for entering a cloſe, and taking corn; the defendants may juſtify they did it as ſervants to the parſon; and that the corn was tithe, ſevered from the nine parts, &c. 2 Keb. 44. A man may plead in juſtification, that land is his freehold, on making an entry thereon, &c. That one entered a houſe to apprehend a felon; or by warrant to levy a forfeiture; to take a diſtreſs, &c. And in aſſault that he did it in his own defence, &c. Lib. Ent. Words ſpoken may be juſtified, becauſe ſpoken in a legal way: for words the defendant may juſtify in an action; but not in an indictment, &c. 1 Danv. 162. 3 Salk. 226. A juſtification (in other words) is a ſpecial plea in bar; as in actions of aſſault and battery, ſon aſſault de meſne, viz. that the plaintiff firſt, with force and arms, aſſaulted the defendant, and he defended himſelf, and therefore, if any damage happened to plaintiff, it was owing to the aſſault he made on defendant, and in his neceſſary defence; in other actions of treſpaſs, that the defendant did the thing complained of in right of ſome office which warranted him ſo to do; or in an action of ſlander, that the plaintiff was guilty of ſuch or ſuch a crime, and therefore he, the defendant, ſpoke the words. See Black. Com. 3 V. 306. Com. Dig. 5 V. 69, 319, &c. There is a juſtifiable homicide, &c. and juſtifiable aſſault. See Aſſault.

Juſtificators, (juſtificatores) Are a kind of compurgators, or thoſe that by oath juſtify the innocence, or oaths of others; as in the caſe of waging of law: and we read in Spelman, who leaves this word without explication——Wil. Rex Angliæ H. Camerario et juſtificatoribus ſuis, omnibus ſuis fidelibus Norf. Salutem: inquirite per comitatum quis juſtius hujuſmodi foriſfacturam haberet tempore patris mei, ſive Abbas Rameſiæ, &c.

Juſtifying Bail. If a man is arreſted and puts in bail, the defendant's attorney may except againſt the bail, as being, in his opinion, inſufficient. In ſuch caſe, the bail (or other bail in their place) muſt juſtify themſelves in court, or before a commiſſioner (for taking bail) in the country, by ſwearing themſelves houſe-keepers, and each of them to be worth double the ſum for which they are bail, after payment of all their debts. See the Books of Practice, and Black. Com 3 V. 291.

Keep. A ſtrong tower or hold in the middle of any caſtle or fortification, wherein the beſieged make their laſt efforts of defence, was formerly in England called a keep: and the inner pile within the caſtle of Dover, erected by K. Hen. 2. about the year 1153. was termed the King's keep: ſo at Windſor, &c. It ſeems to be ſomething of the nature of that which is called abroad a Citadel.

Keeper of the Foreſt, (Cuſtos Foreſtæ) Or chief warden of the foreſt, hath the principal government over all officers within the foreſt; and warns them to appear at the court of juſtice ſeat, on a general ſummons from the Lord Chief juſtice in Eyre. Manwood, Part. 1. p. 156.

Keeper of the Great Seal, (Cuſtos magni ſigilli) Is a Lord by his office, ſtiled Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, and is of the King's Privy Council: Through his hands paſs all charters, commiſſions and grants of the King, under the Great Seal; without which ſeal many of thoſe grants and commiſſions are of no force in law, for the King is by interpretation of law a corporation, and paſſeth nothing but by the Great Seal, which is as the public faith of the kingdom, in the high eſteem and reputation juſtly attributed thereto.

The Great Seal conſiſts of two impreſſions, one being the very ſeal itſelf with the effigies of the King ſtamped on it; the other has an impreſſion of the King's arms in the figure of a target, for matters of a ſmaller moment, as certificates, &c. that are uſually pleaded ſub pede ſigilli. And anciently, when the King travelled into France or other foreign kingdoms, there were two Great Seals; one went with the King, and another was left with the Cuſtos Regni, or the Chancellor, &c.

If the Great Seal be altered; the ſame is notified in the Court of Chancery, and public proclamations made thereof by the ſheriffs, &c. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 171, 174.

The Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, by ſtatute 5 Eliz. c. 18. hath the ſame place, authority, pre-eminence, juriſdiction and execution of laws, as the Lord Chancellor of England hath, and he is conſtituted per traditionem magni ſigilli, &c. and by taking his oath. 4 Inſt. 87. Kidnapping, Is the ſtealing and conveying away of a man, woman or child; and is an offence at Common law, puniſhable by fine, pillory, &c. Raym. 474. Alſo if a maſter of a ſhip, &c. ſhall, during his being abroad, force any man aſhore, and willingly leave him behind, he ſhall ſuffer three months impriſonment. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 7. But the party thus injured may maintain an action againſt the party offending, for damages ſuſtained on occaſion of ſuch treatment, and is not bound to proceed on the ſtatute.

According to Blackſtone, this is unqueſtionably a very heinous crime, as it robs the King of his ſubjects, baniſhes a man from his country, and may in its conſequences, be productive of the moſt cruel and diſagreeable hardſhips; and therefore the Common law of England has puniſhed it with fine, impriſonment and pillory. Raym. 474. 2 Show. 221. Skin. 47. Comb. 10. Kindred, Are a certain body of perſons of kin or related to each other. There are three degrees of kindred in our law; one in the right line deſcending, another in the right line aſcending, and the third in the collateral line.

The right line deſcending, wherein the kindred of the male line are called Agnati, and of the female line Cognati, is from the father to the ſon, and ſo on to his children in the male and female line; and if no ſon, then to the daughter, and to her children in the male and female line; if neither ſon nor daughter, or any of their children, to the nephew and his children, and if none of them, to the niece and her children; if neither nephew nor niece, nor any of their children, then to the grandſon or grand daughter of the nephew; and if neither of them, to the grandſon or grandaughter of the niece; and if none of them, then to the great grandſon or great grandaughter of the nephew and of the niece, &c. et ſic ad infinitum.

The right line aſcending is directly upwards; as from the ſon to the father or mother; and if neither father nor mother, to the grandfather or grandmother; if no grandfather or grandmother, to the great grandfather or great grandmother; if neither great grandfather or great grandmother, to the father of the great grandfather, or the mother of the great grandmother; and if neither of them, then to the great grandfather's grandfather, or the great grandmother's grandmother; and if none of them, to the great grandfather's great grandfather, or great grandmother's great grandmother, et ſic in infinitum.

The collateral line is either deſcending by the brother and his children downwards, or by the uncle upwards: It is between brothers and ſiſters, and to uncles and aunts, and the reſt of the kindred, upwards and downwards, a-croſs and amongſt themſelves. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1077, 1078.

If there are no kindred in the right deſcending line, the inheritance of lands goes to the collateral line; but it never aſcends in the right line upwards, if there are any kindred of the collateral line, though it may aſcend in that line: And there is this difference between the right line deſcending and the collateral line; that the right of repreſentation of kindred in the right deſcending line reaches beyond the great grandchildren of the ſame parents; but in the collateral line, it doth not reach beyond brothers and ſiſters children; for after them there is no repreſentation among collaterals.

In the right aſcending line the father or mother are always in the firſt degree of kindred; and by the Civil law, if the ſon died without iſſue, his father or mother ſucceeded, and after them his brother or ſiſter, uncle, aunt, &c. But in caſe of purchaſe by the ſon, if he died without iſſue, his father or mother could not inherit, but his brothers and ſiſters, &c. by which it appears, that the father cannot ſucceed the ſon immediately, though he is the next of kin. If a man purchaſe lands and dies without iſſue, it ſhall never go to the half blood in the collateral line; though it is otherwiſe in caſe of a deſcent from a common anceſtor.

The children of the brothers and ſiſters of the half blood, ſhall exclude all other collateral aſcendants, as uncles and aunts, and all remoter kindred of the whole blood in the collateral line. Ibid.

There are ſeveral rules to know the degrees of kindred; in the aſcending line, take the ſon and add the father, and it is one degree aſcending, then add the grandfather, and it is a ſecond degree, a perſon added to a perſon in the line of conſanguinity making a degree; and if there are many perſons, take away one, and you have the number of degrees; as if there are four perſons, it is the third degree, if five, the fourth, &c. ſo that the father, ſon, and grandchild, in the deſcending line, though three perſons make but two degrees: to know in what degree of kindred the ſons of two brothers ſtand, begin from the grandfather and deſcend to one brother, the father of one of the ſons, which is one degree, then deſcend to his ſon the anceſtor's grandſon, which is a ſecond degree; and then deſcend again from the grandfather to the other brother, father of the other of the ſons, which is one degree, and deſcend to his ſon, &c. and it is a ſecond degree; thus reckoning the perſon from whom the computation is made, it appears there are two degrees, and that the ſons of two brothers are diſtant from each other two degrees: For in what degree either of them is diſtant from the common ſtock, the perſon from whom the computation is made, they are diſtant between themſelves in the ſame degree; and in every line the perſon muſt be reckoned from whom the computation is made. If the kindred are not equally diſtant from the common ſtock; then in what degree the moſt remote is diſtant, in the ſame degree they are diſtant between themſelves, and ſo the kin the moſt remote maketh the degree; by which rule, I, and the grandchild of my uncle, are diſtant in the third degree, ſuch grandchild being diſtant three degrees from my grandfather, the neareſt common ſtock. Wood's Inſt. 48, 49. The Common law agrees in its computation with the Civil and Canon law, as to the right line; and only with the Canon law as to the collateral line. Ibid. See Black. Com. 2 V. 205. Well worthy the readers attention.

King, (Rex, from Lat. Rego to rule, in Sax. Cyning or Coning) Is a monarch or potentate, who rules ſingly and ſovereignly over a people; or he that has the higheſt power and rule in the land. The King is the head of the commonwealth; and the learned Bracton tells us, Rex eſt vicarius & miniſter Dei in terra, omnes quidem ſub eo, & ipſe ſub nullo niſi tantum ſub Deo. Bract. lib. 1. c. 8.

But our King, on his coronation, takes an oath to the following purport, viz. To govern the people of this kingdom, according to the ſtatutes in parliament agreed on, and the laws and cuſtoms of the ſame; to his power to cauſe law and juſtice in mercy to be executed in all his judgments; to maintain to the utmoſt in his power the laws of God, the true profeſſion of the goſpel and the proteſtant reformed religion eſtabliſhed by law; and preſerve to the biſhops and clergy their rights and privileges, as by law are appertaining to them: this is the obligatory oath of our Kings, as regulated to be taken by 1 W. & M. c. 6. And the coronation oaths, in former times, were undoubtedly a contract between the King and the people in this nation.

The nature of the government of our King, ſays Forteſcue, is not only regal, but political: If it were merely the former, regal, he would have power to make what alterations he pleaſed in our law, and impoſe taxes and other hardſhips upon the ſubject, whether they would or no; but his government being political, he cannot change the laws of the realm, without the people conſent thereto, nor burthen them againſt their wills. Forteſcue's Laud. Leg. Angl. 17.

It is alſo ſaid by the ſame writer, that the King is appointed to protect his ſubjects in their lives, properties and laws; for which end and purpoſe he has the delegation of power from the people: likewiſe our King is ſuch by the fundamental law of our land; by which law the meaneſt ſubject enjoys the liberty of his perſon, and property in his eſtate; and it is every man's concern to defend theſe, as well as the King in his lawful rights. Forteſcue.

A late author taking notice of the breaches made in the conſtitution of this kingdom in ſeveral reigns, and the neceſſity of their being redreſſed, affirms that it is the original power and conſtitution of the ſtates of the kingdom to re-inſtitute the regal eſtate, as well where Kings act arbitrarily and break through the conſtitution, as where there is no immediate heir to ſucceed the King, ſo that the throne becomes actually vacant; and without this he takes it there is no perfect conſtitution. Britan. Conſtitut.

In King John's Magna Charta of liberties, there was a clauſe making it lawful for the barons of the realm to chooſe twenty-five barons to ſee the charter obſerved by the King: with power, on any juſtice or other miniſter of the King's failing to do right, and acting contrary thereto, for four of the ſaid barons to addreſs the King, and pray that the ſame might be remedied; and if the ſame were not amended in forty days, upon the report of the four barons to the reſt of the twenty-five, thoſe twenty-five barons, with the commonalty of the whole land, were at liberty to diſtreſs the King, take his caſtles, lands, &c. until the evils complained of ſhould be remedied, according to their judgment; ſaving the perſon of the King, queen, and their children: And when the evils were redreſſed, the people were to obey the King as before. King John's Magna Chart. cap. 73. But this clauſe, and ſome others in favour of liberty, are omitted out of King Henry IIId's Magna Charta; though in a ſtatute made at Oxford, anno 42 Hen. 3. to reform miſgovernment, it was enacted, that twenty-four great men ſhould be named, twelve by the King, and twelve by the parliament, to appoint juſtices, chancellors, and other officers, to ſee Magna Charta obſerved.

The editor has ſuffered this clauſe to ſtand, being part of the original text, fearing, if he expunged it, he might be ſuppoſed an enemy to the liberty of the ſubject; but, though no one wiſhes more for the perpetual preſervation of every liberty and every bleſſing the people enjoy, under our free conſtitution, he cannot help declaring, that he conceives ſuch a power veſted in any ſubjects whatſoever, is repugnant, in the higheſt degree, to the fundamental principles of the conſtitution. It is veſting a power in the ſubject, ſuperior to the executive power of the ſtate, which is, by the very nature, and in the eſſence, of our conſtitution, veſted in the King. The King is a political entity, acting through the medium of his miniſters, or great officers of ſtate, without whoſe concurrence no regal act can be done, and they are ever reſponſible to the people. Thoſe are the proper guards or checks the conſtitution hath placed, on the acts of the crown, whereas the power granted to the twenty-five barons, was a power to commit high treaſon, under colour of law, whenever they thought proper, for they were the ſole judges, whether it was or was not proper to diſtreſs the King and take his caſtles, &c. in fact, to take out of his hands all power, and conſequently authority. I may conclude with this plain queſtion, Could theſe men be called ſubjects, or did they owe any allegiance to the King?

The barons wars mentioned in our ancient hiſtories, ſeem to have proceeded in ſome meaſure from a like power granted to them as by the charter of King John; and probably the parliament's wars from their examples. Sir Edward Coke tells us, that if there be a King regnant, in poſſeſſion of the crown, although he be but Rex de facto, and not de jure, yet he is Seignior le Roy; and another that hath right, if he be out of poſſeſſion, he is not within the meaning of the ſtat. 11 H. 7. c. 1. for the ſubjects to ſerve and defend him in his wars, &c. And a pardon, &c. granted by a King de jure, that is not likewiſe de facto, is void. 3 Inſt. 7. A King that uſurps the crown, grants licences of alienation or eſcheats, it will be good againſt the rightful King; ſo of pardons, and any thing that doth not concern the King's ancient patrimony, or the government of the people: Judicial acts in the time of ſuch a one, bind the right King and all who ſubmitted to his judicature. The crown was toſſed between the two families of York and Lancaſter many years; and yet the acts of royalty done in the reign of the ſeveral competitors, were confirmed by the parliament: And theſe reſolutions were made, becauſe the common people cannot judge of the King's title, and to avoid anarchy and confuſion. Jenk. Cent. 130, 131.

Every King for the time being, has a right to the people's allegiance, who it is ſaid are bound by the ſtatute 11 H. 7. c. 1. to defend him in his wars againſt every power whatſoever, and ſhall incur no pains or forfeiture thereby. 1 Hawk. P. C. 36. And a King out of poſſeſſion, we are bound by the duty of our allegiance to reſiſt. Ibid But in the caſe of King Charles the Second, who was kept out of the exerciſe of the kingly office by traitors and rebels, it was adjudged that he was King both de facto and de jure; and all the acts which were done to the keeping him out, were high treaſon. Kel. Rep. 15.

There may be ſome Kings de facto, to whom it may be dangerous to do any ſervice, viz. Such as ſhall depoſe a rightful King: And according to the Lord Chief Juſtice Hale, if the right heir of the crown be in actual exerciſe of the ſovereignty in one part of the kingdom, and an uſurper in the exerciſe of it in another, the law adjudgeth him in the poſſeſſion of the crown that hath the true right; and the other is not a King de facto, but a diſturber, and no King: this was the caſe between King Ed. 4. and Hen. 6. And the like was held as to Queen Mary, who openly laid claim to the crown, and was proclaimed Queen; at the ſame time the Lady Jane was proclaimed Queen at London on the nomination of King Ed. 6. ſo that both being de facto in poſſeſſion of the crown, the law adjudged the poſſeſſion in Mary, who had the right of the ſame. State Trials 932.

It is high treaſon to conſpire againſt the King, Queen, &c. And a perſon may be guilty of treaſon againſt a King, tho' he be not in poſſeſſion of the crown. The dignity of the King of England is imperial; and our Kings have placed on their heads an imperial crown: King Edgar wrote himſelf imperator & dominus, &c. But no King of England uſed any ſeal of arms till the reign of Rich. 1. before that time, the ſeal was the King ſitting in a chair of ſtate on one ſide of the ſeal, and on horſeback on the other ſide; but this King ſealed with a ſeal of two lions, and King John was the firſt that bare three lions; and afterwards Ed. 3. quartered the arms of France, which has been continued down to this time. Alſo King Henry 8. was the firſt to whom Majeſty was attributed; before which our Kings were called Highneſs, &c. Lex Conſtitut. 47, 48.

The eldeſt ſon of the King of England is Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall, &c. and the younger ſons are born Dukes and Earls of what places the King pleaſes. K. Hen. 2. took his ſon into a kind of ſubordinate regality with him, ſo that there were Rex Pater and Rex Filius; but he did not diveſt himſelf of his ſovereignty, but reſerved to himſelf the homage of his ſubjects. And notwithſtanding this King, by conſent of parliament, created his ſon John King of Ireland; and King Rich. 2. made Robert de Vere Duke of Ireland; and Ed. 3. made his eldeſt ſon Lord of Ireland, with royal dominion; yet it has been held, that the King cannot regularly make a King within his own kingdom. 4 Inſt. 357, 360. Hen. de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, was by King Henry 6. crowned King of Wight Iſland; but it was reſolved, that this could not be done without conſent of parliament, and even then our greateſt men have been of opinion, that the King could not by law create a King in his own kingdom, becauſe there cannot be two Kings of the ſame place: And afterwards the ſame King Henry made the ſame Earl of Warwick Primus Comes totius Angliæ. A King cannot reſign or diſmiſs himſelf of his office of King, without conſent of parliament; nor could Hen. 2. without ſuch conſent, divide the ſovereignty: there is a ſacred band between the King and his kingdom, that cannot be diſſolved without the free and mutual conſent of both in parliament; and though in foreign kingdoms there have been inſtances of voluntary ceſſions and reſignations, which poſſibly may be warranted by their ſeveral conſtitutions, yet, by the laws of England, the King cannot reſign his ſovereignty without his parliament. Sir Matt. Hale's Hiſt. Coronæ. But yet let it be remembered, it was adjudged by parliament that James the Second had abdicated the throne.

If a King hath a kingdom by title of deſcent, where the laws have taken good effect and rooting; or if a King conquers a Chriſtian kingdom, after the people have laws given them for the government of the country, to which they ſubmit, no ſucceeding King can alter the ſame without the parliament. 7 Rep. 17. It is nevertheleſs held that conquered countries may be governed by what laws the King thinks fit, and that the laws of England do not take place in ſuch countries, until declared ſo by the conqueror, or his ſucceſſors; here in caſe of infidels their laws do not ceaſe, but only ſuch as are againſt the law of God; and where the laws are rejected or ſilent, they ſhall be governed according to the rule of natural equity. 2 *Salk. Our Kings have diſtributed their whole power of judicature to the courts of juſtice; which courts by immemorial uſage have gained a known and ſtated juriſdiction, that no King can alter without an act of parliament. 2 *Hawk P. But as it has been reſolved, that the ſucceſſor of every King begins his reign on the very day that the former King died; therefore all patents of judges, ſheriffs, juſtices of peace, &c. determine by the death of the King. The Kings of England not having the whole legiſlative power, if the King and clergy make a canon, tho' it binds the clergy in re eccleſiaſtica, it does not bind laymen; for they are not repreſented in the convocation, but in parliament: In the primitive church, the laity were preſent at all ſynods; and when the empire became Chriſtian, no canon was made without the Emperor's conſent, and indeed the Emperor's conſent included that of the people, he having in himſelf the whole legiſlative power; but the Kings of this kingdom have it not. 2 *Salk. King's Bench, (Bancus Regius.) from the Saxon banca, a bench or form.

We ſhall here treat of,

II. Of its criminal juriſdiction.
III. Of its civil juriſdiction, &c.
IV. How far its preſence ſuſpends the power of other courts, &c.
V. Of the officers of the court.

I. Of the court of King's Bench.

The court of King's Bench is the court or judgment-ſeat, where the King of England was ſometimes uſed to ſit in his own perſon; and therefore it was moveable with the court of King's houſhold, and called Curia Domini Regis and Aula Regia, as Gwin reports in the Preface to his reading; and that therein, and in the court of Exchequer, which were the only courts of the King till the time of Henry the Third, were diſcuſed all matters of juſtice, as well civil as criminal.

After the diviſion of the courts, and the eſtabliſhment of the court of Common Pleas, for the expreſs purpoſe of determining civil ſuits, the court of King's Bench was accuſtomed in ancient times to be eſpecially exerciſed in all criminal matters and pleas of the crown, leaving the judging of private contracts and civil actions to the Common Pleas and other courts. Glanvil, lib. 1. cap. 2, 3, 4. and lib. 10. cap. 18. Smith de Rep. Ang. lib. 2. c. 11. 4 Inſt. fol. 70.

This court hath a preſident who is Lord Chief Juſtice of England, with three juſtices aſſiſtants; formerly, according to Forteſcue, cap. 51. four or five, and officers thereto belonging, the clerk of the crown, a prothonotary, and other inferior miniſters and attornies.

Toward the the latter end of the Norman period, the Aula Regis, which was before one great court where the juſticiar preſided, was divided into four diſtinct courts, i. e. the court of Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer. Madox, c. 19. Bract. lib. 3. c. 7. fol. 105.

The court of King's Bench retained the greater ſimilitude with the ancient Curia or Aula Regis, and was always ambulatory, and removed with the King where-ever he went: Hence the original writs returnable into this court are Coram nobis ubicunque fuerimus in Anglia; and all records there are ſtiled Coram Rege, as it is ſtill ſuppoſed to have always the King himſelf in perſon ſitting in it; from whence it obtained the name of the court of King's Bench, and hath always retained a ſupreme original juriſdiction in all criminal matters; for in theſe the proceſs both iſſued from, and was returnable into, this court; but in treſpaſs it might be made returnable into either the King's Bench or Common Pleas, becauſe the plea was criminal as well as civil. 2 Inſt. 24. 4 Inſt. 70. Co. Lit. 71. Dyer 187. Cromp. of Courts 78. 1 Rol. Abr. 94. By Stat. 28 Ed. 1. c. 5. this court is to follow the King. King Hen. 3. ſat in perſon with the juſtices in Banco Regis ſeveral times, being ſeated on a high bench, and the judges in a lower one at his feet: And the King's Bench was originally the only court in Weſtminſter-Hall; out of which the courts of Common Pleas and Exchequer ſeem to have been derived. 2 Hawk. P. C. 6.

This court hath ſupreme authority, the King being ſtill preſumed by law to ſit there as judge of the court, tho' he doth judge by his judges; and the proceedings are ſuppoſed to be Coram nobis, that is before the King himſelf, for which reaſon all writs in this court are made ſo returnable, and not Coram juſticiariis noſtris, as is the form in the Common Pleas. 4 Inſt. 73.

II. Of the criminal juriſdiction of the court of King's Bench.

This court is termed the Cuſtos morum of all the realm, and by the plenitude of its power, where-ever it meets with an offence contrary to the firſt principles of juſtice, and of dangerous conſequence if not reſtrained, adapts a proper puniſhment to it. 1 Sid. 168. 2 Hawk. P. C. 6.

The juſtices of B. R. are the ſovereign juſtices of oyer and terminer, goal-delivery, and of eyre, and coroners of the land; and their juriſdiction is general all over England: By their preſence the power of all other juſtices in the county, during the time of this court's ſitting in it, is ſuſpended; for in præſentia majoris ceſſat poteſtas minoris; but ſuch juſtices may proceed by virtue of a ſpecial commiſſion, &c. H. P. C. 156. 4 Inſt. 73. 2 Hawk. P. C. 32. It is theſe juſtices who have a ſovereign juriſdiction over all matters of a criminal and public nature, judicially brought before them, to give remedy either by the Commom law or by ſtatute: And their power is original and ordinary: when the King hath appointed them, they have their juriſdiction from the law. 1 Hawk. 152. 4 Inſt. 74.

It has a particular juriſdiction, not only over all capital offences, but alſo over all other miſdemeanors of a public nature, tending either to a breach of the peace, or to oppreſſion or faction, or any manner of miſgovernment; and it is not material whether ſuch offences being manifeſtly againſt the public good, directly injure any particular perſon or not. 4 Inſt. 71. 11 Co. 98. 2 Hawk. P. C. 6.

And for the better reſtraining ſuch offences, it has a diſcretionary power of inflicting exemplary puniſhment on offenders, either by fine, impriſonment or other infamous puniſhment, as the nature of the crime, conſidered in all its circumſtances, ſhall require; and it may make uſe of any priſon which ſhall ſeem moſt proper; and it is ſaid, that no other court can remove or bail perſons condemned to impriſonment by this court. 2 Hawk. P. C. 7.

Alſo it hath ſo ſovereign a juriſdiction in all criminal matters, that an act of parliament appointing that all crimes of a certain denomination ſhall be tried before certain judges, doth not exclude the juriſdiction of this court, without expreſs negative words; and therefore it hath been reſolved, that 33 H. 8. cap. 12. which enacts, That all treaſons, &c. within the King's houſe, ſhall be determined before the Lord Steward of the King's houſe, &c. doth not reſtrain this court from proceeding againſt ſuch offences. 2 Inſt. 549. 2 Jones 53. 2 Hawk. P. C. 7.

But where a ſtatute creates a new offence which was not taken notice of by the Common law, and erects a new juriſdiction for the puniſhment of it, and preſcribes a certain method of proceeding, it ſeems queſtionable how far this court has an implied juriſdiction in ſuch a caſe. 1 Sid. 296. 2 Hawk. P. C. 7.

This court, by the plenitude of its power, may as well proceed on indictments removed by certiorari, out of inferior courts, as on thoſe originally commenced here, whether the court below be determined, or ſtill in eſſe, and whether the proceedings be grounded on the Common law, or on a ſtatute making a new law concerning an old offence. Dalſ. 25. 44 Ed. 3. 31. b. Cromp. Juriſ. 131.

But the court of King's Bench will not give judgment on a conviction in the inferior court, where the proceedings are removed by certiorari, but will allow the party to waive the iſſue below, and to plead de novo, and to go to trial upon an iſſue joined in B. R. Carth. 6. adjudged in the caſe of one Baker, who was convicted at Kingſtone upon Hull, for ſpeaking ſeditious words.

Nor can a record, removed into the King's Bench from an inferior court regularly be remanded after the term in which it came in; yet if the court perceives any practice in endeavouring to remove ſuch record, or that it is intended for delay, they may in diſcretion refuſe to receive it, and remand it back before it is filed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 7. and ſeveral authorities there cited.

Alſo by the conſtruction of the ſtatutes, which give a trial by niſi prius, the King's Bench may grant ſuch a trial in caſes of treaſon or felony, as well as in common caſes, becauſe for ſuch trial, not the record, but only a tranſcript is ſent down. 4 Inſt. 74. Raym. 364.

And by the 6 Hen. 8. cap. 6. it is enacted, "That the King's Bench have full authority, by diſcretion, to remand as well the bodies of all felons removed thither, as their indictments, into the counties where the felonies were done; and to command the juſtices of goal-delivery, juſtices of the peace, and all other juſtices, to proceed thereon after the courſe of the Common law, as the ſaid juſtices might have done, if the ſaid indictments and priſoners had not been brought into the ſaid King's Bench." This act extends not to high treaſon. Raym. 367.

The judges of this court are the ſovereign juſtices of oyer and terminer, gaol-delivery, conſervators of the peace, &c. as alſo the ſovereign coroners; and therefore, where the ſheriff and coroners may receive appeals by bill, a fortiori they may; alſo this court may admit perſons to bail in all caſes according to their diſcretion. 4 Inſt. 73. 9 Co. 118. b. 4 Inſt. 74. Vaugh. 157.

In the county where the King's Bench ſits, there is every term a grand inqueſt, who are to preſent all criminal matters ariſing within that county, and then the ſame court proceeds upon indictments ſo taken; or if in vacation, tion, there be any indictment of felony before the juſtices of peace, oyer and terminer or gaol-delivery there ſitting, it may be removed by certiorari into B. R. and there they proceed de die in diem, &c. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 3.

It may award execution, againſt perſons attainted in parliament, or any other court; when the record of their attainder or a tranſcript is removed, and their perſons brought thither by habeas corpus. Cro. Car. 176. Cro. Jac. 495. Pardons of perſons condemned by former juſtices of gaol-delivery, ought to be allowed in B. R. the record and priſoner being removed thither by certiorari and habeas corpus. 2 Hawk. 27.

III. Of the civil juriſdiction of the court of King's Bench, &c.

On the firſt diviſion of the courts, it was intended to confine the juriſdiction of the court of King's Bench to matters merely criminal, and accordingly ſoon afterwards it was enacted by Magna Charta, cap. 11. That Common Pleas ſhould not follow the King's court, (i. e. B. R.) but be held in a certain place: Hence it is that this court cannot determine a mere real action. 17 Ed. 3. 50. 1 Rol. Abr. 536, 537.

But notwithſtanding Common Pleas cannot be immediately holden Banco Regis, yet where there is a defect in the court, where by law they be holden originally, they may be holden in B. R. as if a record come out of the Common Pleas by writ of error, there they may hold plea to the end; ſo where the plea in a writ of right is removed out of the county by a pone in B. R. on a writ of meſne replevin, &c. 2 Inſt. 23. 4 Inſt. 72, 113. and ſee Saund. 256. Show. P. C. 57.

So any action vi & armis, where the King is to have fine, as ejectment, treſpaſs, forcible entry, &c. being of a mixed nature, may be commenced in B. R. 2 Inſt. 23.

Alſo any officer or miniſter of the court, entitled to the privilege thereof may be there ſued by bill in debt, covenant or other perſonal action; for the act takes not away the privilege of the court. 2 Inſt. 23. 4 Inſt. 71. 2 Bulſt. 123.

From hence aroſe the notion, that if a man was taken up as a treſpaſſer in the King's Bench, and there in cuſtody, they might declare againſt him in debt, covenant or account; for this likewiſe was a caſe of privilege, ſince the Common Pleas could not procure the priſoners of the King's Bench to appear in their court; and therefore it was an exception out of Magna Charta. 4 Inſt. 71. Cro. Car. 330.

By the ſtatute of Glouceſter, cap. 8. None ſhall have writs of treſpaſs before juſtices, unleſs he ſwear by his faith that the goods taken away were worth forty ſhillings.

This oath is now diſuſed, yet if the damages laid in the declaration (in caſes cognizable in inferior courts) do not amount to 40 s. the court will not hold plea of the matter. If laid to the amount of 40*s.* and there is not any ſett off, and plaintiff recovers under 40*s* defendant may ſuggeſt it on the roll, and plaintiff ſhall not have more coſts than damages.

The court of King's Bench now holds plea in all actions in general, ſuppoſing the party to be in cuſtody of the marſhall, except real actions, ſuffering of recoveries, and levying of fines, &c. but vide infra.

To this court it regularly belongs to examine errors of all judges and juſtices in their judgments and proceedings; the court of Exchequer excepted. F. N. N. 20, 21. It hath been held, that a writ of error lies in B. R. of an attainder before the Lord High Steward. 1 Sid. 208. And upon judgment given in the Chancery, (i. e. in the petty bag ſide) as well as other courts, writ of error in many caſes will lie returnable in the court of King's Bench. But on proceedings in B. R. by original writ, error lies not, but to the parliament. The court of B. R. being the higheſt court of Common law, hath power to reform inferior courts, reverſe erroneous judgments given therein, and puniſh the magiſtrates and officers for corruption, &c. 2 Hawk. 8.

The court of King's Bench, as it is the higheſt court of Common law, hath not only power to reverſe erroneous judgments for ſuch errors as appear the defect of the underſtanding; but alſo to puniſh all inferior magiſtrates and all officers of juſtice, for wilful and corrupt abuſes of their authority againſt the obvious principles of natural juſtice; the inſtances of which are ſo numerous, and ſo various in their kinds, that it ſeems needleſs to attempt to inſert them. 2 Hawk. P. C. 8. Vaugh. 157. 1 Salk. 201.

This court grants habeas corpus's to relieve perſons wrongfully impriſoned; and may bail any perſon whatſoever: A perſon illegally committed to priſon by the King and council, or either houſe of parliament, (as it is ſaid) may be bailed in B. R. and in ſome caſes on legal commitments; alſo perſons committed by the Lord Chancellor, &c. 2 Hawk. 110, 111. Writs of Mandamus are granted by this court, to reſtore officers in corporations, colleges, &c. unjuſtly turned out; and freemen wrongfully diſfranchiſed: Alſo quo warranto's againſt perſons or corporations, uſurping franchiſes and liberties againſt the King; and on miſuſer of privileges to ſeize the liberties, &c. and in B. R. the King's letters patent may be repealed by Scire facias, &c.

This court in ancient times was (as before obſerved) ordinarily exerciſed in all criminal matters, and pleas of the crown; leaving private contracts and civil actions to the Common Pleas, and other courts. 4 Inſt. 70. It is now divided into a Crown-ſide and a Plea-ſide; the one determining criminal, and the other civil cauſes: The Crown-ſide determines all criminal matters, (wherein the King is plaintiff) as treaſons, felonies, murders, rapes, robberies, riots, breaches of the peace, and all cauſes proſecuted by way of indictment, information, &c. And into the court of B. R. Indictments from all inferior courts and orders of ſeſſions, &c. may be removed by certiorari; and inquiſitions of murder are certified of courſe into this court, as it is the ſupreme court of criminal juriſdiction: Hence alſo iſſue attachments, for diſobeying rules or orders, &c. 4 Inſt. 71, 72. On the Plea-ſide it holds plea of all perſonal actions proſecuted by bill or writ, as actions of debt, detinue, covenant, account, actions upon the caſe, and all other perſonal actions, ejectment, treſpaſs, waſte, &c. againſt any perſon in the cuſtody of the marſhal of the court, as every one ſued here is ſuppoſed to be; and in all perſonal actions for or againſt any officer, miniſter or clerk of the court, who in reſpect of their neceſſary attendance have the privilege of the court. Ibid.

It has been held, that action upon the ſtatute of Wincheſter, of robbery, does not lie by original in the court of B. R. becauſe it is a common plea; but it has been adjudged otherwiſe, and allowed on bill. 2 Danv. Abr. 279, 282.

An appeal in B. R. muſt be arraigned on the Plea-ſide: except it come in by certiorari, when it is ſaid it ought to be arraigned on the Crown-ſide. 2 Hawk. 308. Where the court of B. R. proceeds on an offence committed in the ſame county wherein it ſits, the proceſs may be made returnable immediately; but when it proceeds on an offence removed by certiorari from another county, there muſt be fifteen days between the teſte and return of every proceſs, &c. 9 Rep. 118. 1 Inſt. 134. 1 Sid. 72.

IV. How far the preſence of the court of King's Bench ſuſpends the power of other courts, &c.

This court being the ſupreme court of oyer and terminer, gaol-delivery and eyre, its preſence ſuſpends the power, and avoids the proceedings of all other courts of the ſame nature in the county wherein it ſits, during its ſitting there, eſpecially if the juſtices of ſuch courts have notice of its ſitting. H. P. C. 156. 9 Co. 118. 27 Aſſ. pl. 1. 2 Inſt. 27. 2 Hawk. P. C. 8. or without notice, per 4 Inſt. 73.

But if an indictment in a foreign county be removed before commiſſioners of oyer and terminer into the county where the King's Bench ſits, they may proceed; for the King's Bench not having the indictment before them cannot proceed for this offence. 4 Inſt. 73.

But if an indictment is found in the vacation-time in the ſame county in which the King's Bench ſits, and in term-time the King's Bench is adjourned, there may be a ſpecial commiſſion to hear it. Ibid.

The firſt proceſs in civil ſuits in this court is a bill either real or feigned, and ſo called, becauſe its foundation was the bill of complaint in court, touching a ſuppoſed treſpaſs, for which according to another ſuppoſition the defendant has been taken up, and is in the cuſtody of the marſhal; on this is founded the latitat, which ſuppoſes that the defendant had eſcaped, and therefore iſſues in the King's name, to apprehend the party wherever he may be found; for the King has an univerſal juriſdiction over all his ſubjects, and conſequently may call any of them that fled from the juſtice of his own court. But now defendant is only ſerved with a copy of the proceſs, unleſs affidavit is made of a debt, &c. and for 10*l.* at leaſt, an acetiam introduced into the writ, and the ſum ſworn to indorſed thereon.

All proceſs on writs of appeal, and all proceſs on indictments removed hither by certiorari from a foreign county, ought to be returnable coram nobis ubicunque fuerimus. 2 Hawk. P. C. 8, 9.

V. Of the officers of the court of King's Bench.

The officers of the King's Bench are, on the Crown-ſide, the Clerk of the Crown, and the Secondary of the Crown: And on the Plea-ſide there are many clerks and officers; as a Chief Clerk or Prothonotary, and his Secondary and deputy, the Cuſtos Brevium, a Clerk of the Papers, the Clerk of the Declarations, Signer and Sealer of bills, the Clerk of the Rules, Clerk of the Errors, the Clerk of the Bails, Filizers, the Marſhal of the court, and the Cryer. The prothonotary is the maſter of the King's Bench office. The ſecondary conſtantly attends the ſitting of the court, to receive matters referred to him by the judges, to be examined and reported to the court; he ſigns all judgments, and taxes coſts, &c. And he alſo informs the court in point of practice. Their deputy has the cuſtody of the ſtamp, for ſigning all writs, &c. and keeps remembrances of all records; writs returned are filed in his office, and common bails, &c. The Cuſtos Brevium files originals and other writs whereon proceedings are had to outlawry; examines and ſeals all records of Niſi prius for trials at the aſſiſes, and has ſeveral clerks under him for making up records throughout England. The Clerk of the Papers makes up the paper-books of all ſpecial pleadings and demurrers, which the plaintiff's attorney commonly ſpeaks for, and afterwards gives a rule for the defendant's attorney to bring to him again to be entered, &c. The Clerk of the Declarations files all declarations, and continues them on the back from the term of declaring till iſſue is joined. The ſigner and ſealer of bills keeps a book of entry of the names of the plaintiffs and the defendants in all ſuch writs and proceſſes; and the defendants enter their appearances with him. The Clerk of the Rules takes notice of all rules and orders made in court, and afterwards draws them up and enters them in a book at large; and with him alſo are given all rules of courſe on a cepi corpus, habeas corpus, writs of inquiry, &c. and files all affidavits uſed in court, and makes copies of them. The Clerk of the Errors allows all writs of error, and makes Superſedeas's thereupon into any county, and tranſcribes and certifies records. The Clerk of the Bails and Poſteas files the bail-pieces, and marks the Poſteas, &c. The Filizers of counties make the meſne proceſs after the original, in ſuing to the outlawry; and have the benefit of all proceſs and entries, thereupon. The Marſhal, by himſelf or deputy always attends the court, to receive into his cuſtody ſuch priſoners as ſhall be committed. The Cryer makes proclamations of ſummoning and adjourning the court, calls nonſuits, and ſwears jurymen, witneſſes, &c.

But in Qneen Elizabeth's reign, the profits of the kingdom being very much advanced, 40,000*l.* per annum was allowed for her houſhold. And on the reſtoration of King Charles 2. the parliament, for the honour of the King and kingdom, ſettled on his Majeſty 200,000*l.* per annum. In the reigns of King William 3. and Queen Anne 700,000*l.* a year was allotted for the ſupport of the houſhold, and ordinary charge of the civil liſt. And his Majeſty King George 1. had the like ſum of 700,000*l.* per annum ſettled upon him by parliament, ariſing out of the duties of exciſe, wine-licences, poſt-office, &c. Alſo to his late Majeſty King George 2. The duty of exciſe on ale, beer, &c. was granted with a further ſubſidy of tonnage, and the yearly ſum of 100,000*l.* out of the aggregate fund, for ſupport of the houſhold and dignity of the crown; ſo as to make the revenue 800,000*l.* per annum, and deficiencies to be made good by parliament. See the ſtatutes 13 & 14 W. 3. 1 Ann. c. 7. 1 Geo 1. 1 Geo. 2. c. 1. Alſo to his preſent Majeſty King George 3. is granted the ſum of 800,000*l.* for ſupport of the houſhold and the honour and dignity of the crown. See 1 Geo. 3. c. 1. and 17 Geo. 3. c. 21. by which an addition of 100,000*l.* per annum is granted to his Majeſty for the like purpoſe, chargeable upon the aggregate fund.

King's Palace. The limits of the King's Palace at Weſtminſter, extend from Charing-Croſs to Weſtminſter-Hall, and ſhall have ſuch privileges as the ancient palaces. Stat. 28 H. 8. If any perſon ſhall ſtrike another in the King's Palace, he ſhall have his right-hand cut off, be impriſoned during life, and alſo be fined, 32 H. 8. c. 12.

King's Prerogative. The ſtatute of the King's prerogative 17 Ed. 2. contains not the King's whole prerogative, but only ſo much thereof as concerns the profits of his coffers, for his prerogative extends much further; and the King hath divers rights of Majeſty peculiar to himſelf, which the learned in the law term ſacra ſacrorum, ſacred and inſeparable, and which are many and various. Staundf. Prærog. Reg. Plowd. 314. Sir Henry Spelman calls the King's prerogative, Lex Regiæ Dignitatis; and a great many prerogatives ariſe to the King from the reaſon of the Common law; which allows that to be law almoſt in every caſe for the King, which is not ſo for the ſubject: But the King's prerogative does not extend to any thing injurious to his ſubjects; as, if lands had been given to the King and to the heirs of his body, he could not before iſſue had, have aliened in fee, but only to have barred his iſſue as a common perſon might have done; but not to have barred the reverſion, for that would have been a wrong in the caſe of a ſubject, and the King's prerogative cannot alter his caſe nor make it greater, than the donor gave unto him: And it is a maxim in our law, that "the King can do no wrong." Finch 85. 1 Inſt. 19.

The King's prerogative is incident to his crown, and as ancient as that itſelf; and hath in it a preſcription, and is not only the law of the Exchequer, but the law of the land: This prerogative of the King is of a very large extent; it reacheth to all perſons eccleſiaſtical and civil: as he is perſona mixta, ſo is his power and prerogotive. 7 Rep. 14. It is the King's Royal Prerogative to make war and peace: And as head of the ſtate he calls, continues, prorogues and diſſolves parliaments; and all ſtatutes are to have his royal aſſent, which he may refuſe to give to a bill; though his denial is not an expreſs negative, but that he will adviſe upon it. 1 Inſt. 110, 165.

His proclamation in calling or diſſolving parliaments, declaring war and peace, &c. has the effect of a law; but he cannot by proclamation introduce new laws, yet he may inforce old ones diſcontinued. 3 Inſt. 162. 2 Inſt. 743. It was anciently held, but it is not ſo now, that the King might ſuſpend or alter any particular law that was hurtful to the public: but he may diſpenſe with a penal ſtatute wherein his ſubjects have not any intereſt.

4 Inſt. 7. Rep. 36. But by ſtat. 1 W. & M. Seſſ. 2. c. 2. it is declared and enacted, "that no diſpenſation by non obſtante of or to any ſtatute or any part thereof be allowed, but that the ſame ſhall be held void and of none effect, except a diſpenſation be allowed in ſuch a ſtatute." Acts of parliament do not bind the King, if he be not ſpecially named; unleſs they concern the commonwealth, ſuppreſs wrong or fraud, &c. in which caſes they do; but he may take the benefit of any ſtatute, though not named. 5 Rep. 14. 7 Rep. 32. 11 Rep. 71. And a prerogative given generally to one King, or any thing to be done to one, goes of courſe to others. Raym. 212. He determines rewards and puniſhments; moderates laws, and pardons offenders: But the King cannot pardon murder, where appeal is brought by the ſubject. 2 Inſt. 216. Becauſe it is the action of the party proſecuting, and not the proſecution of the crown. Pardons of felony, &c. ſhall be granted only where the King may lawfully do it, acccording to his coronation oath. 14 Ed. 3. ſtat. 1. c. 15. The King may lay imbargo's on ſhipping; but then it muſt be pro bono publico, and not for the private advantage of any particular traders. 1 Salk. 32. And tho' the King hath an intereſt in every ſubject, and a right to his ſervice; he cannot diſcharge the right of a ſubject, or hinder him of a remedy the law gives him. Holt Ch. J. 1 Salk. 19. 168.

It is held that the King is Cuſtos totius Regni Angliæ: And he may, if he ſee cauſe, open or ſhut the ſea-ports, and forbid the paſſage of his ſubjects over ſea without licence, &c. 12 Rep. 34. He may not diſpoſe of the ports to any ſubject; but ſhall appoint officers for the cuſtody thereof, under him. 11 Rep. 86. It is his prerogative alone to diſpoſe and govern the militia of the nation: to make dukes, earls, barons, knights of the garter, &c. He names, creates, makes and removes the great officers of the government. 1 Inſt. 165. All writs, proceſſes, commiſſions, &c. are in the King's name; and he may make courts, which ſhall proceed according to the Common law. Jenk. Cent. 285. He may create univerſities, colleges, counties, boroughs, fairs, markets, &c. No foreſt, chaſe or park, can be made, or caſtle built, without the King's leave. 4 Inſt. 294. The King may incorporate a whole city, pariſh, &c. or part of it, and grant and annex to ſuch corporations divers franchiſes: Though they may not, under colour thereof, ſet up a monopoly. Godb. 253. Noy 182. And he may incorporate a town, and enable them to chuſe burgeſſes of parliament, but this part of the prerogative of increaſing the number of parliament men, ſeems to be given up, by the late Kings. Hob. 14.

As ſupreme head of the church, our King hath power to call a national or provincial council; and by his royal aſſent the canons made in convocation have the force of laws: And to him the laſt appeal is made. Danv. 73. 4 Inſt. 325. He hath the ſupreme right of patronage all over England; and is the founder and patron of all biſhopricks, &c. ſo that none can be made biſhop but by his nomination: He not only founds churches, but licenſes others to found them, exempt from the ordinary's juriſdiction; and he hath the tithes of foreſts and places extraparochial, which he may grant by letters patent: Alſo the King ſhall pay no tithes; though his leſſee ſhall pay them. Wood's Inſt. 18. 1 Cro. 511. The King hath power to make an alien free born, and to grant letters of ſafe conduct to foreign parts: He can put a value upon the coin, which is made by his authority; and make foreign coin current by proclamation: And to make money, the law gives the King all mines of gold and ſilver. Plowd. 314.

He is the general guardian of ideots and lunaticks; and ſhall have the lands of felons, &c. convict; alſo the goods of felons and fugitives; goods and chattels of pirates; wreck of the ſea, &c. Stat. 17 Ed. 2. cap. 1. 9 H. 3. 4 Inſt. 136. The King is lord paramount of all the lands in England; and all eſtates for want of heirs, or by forfeiture, eſcheat to him: All lands are ſaid to be holden of the King; as by conſtruction of law they are originally derived from the crown. 1 Inſt. 1. But this muſt be conſidered as in truſt for the benefit of the ſtate.

Lands in the King's poſſeſſion, are free from tenure; and the King may not be jointenant with any. Finch 83. The grant of the King is taken moſt ſtrongly againſt a ſtranger, and favourably for him: And he may avoid his own grants for deceit, &c. Plowd. 243. The King may grant a thing in action, which another cannot; and reſerve a rent to a ſtranger, &c. He cannot grant or take any land (not caſt upon him by deſcent) but by matter of record: And the King may not grant an annuity to charge his perſon, which is not chargeable like the perſon of a ſubject; though he may grant it out of the revenues of exciſe, &c. 4 Rep. 54. 2 Inſt. 186. 1 Salk. 58.

Where the title of the King and of a common perſon concur, his title ſhall be preferred. 1 Inſt. 30. No diſtreſs can be made upon the King's poſſeſſion; but he may diſtrain out of his fee in other lands, &c. and may take diſtreſſes in the highway. 2 Inſt. 131. An heir ſhall pay the King's debt, though he is not named in the bond: And the King's debt ſhall be ſatisfied before that of a ſubject, for which there is a prerogative writ. 1 Inſt. 130, 386. By the ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 19. a common perſon may ſue the King's debtor, notwithſtanding he hath a protection, and recover judgment againſt him; but he cannot have execution unleſs he give ſecurity to pay the King's debt: If he take out execution before, and levy the money, the ſame may be ſeiſed to ſatisfy the debt of the King. Godb. 290. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1081, 1082. If a debtor has not a writ of protection, he may be in execution for a debt at the ſuit of the ſubject. See poſt. The King hath the command of all forts, and places of ſtrength, &c. and authority in making and caſting of ordnance. 21 Jac. 1. c. 3.

The King is the fountain of honour, and has the ſole power of conferring dignities and honourable titles. It hath been adjudged, that although the King hath a prerogative by the Common law, to have his debt firſt ſatisfied, that muſt be when it is in equal degree with the debt of his ſubject; and by the ſtat. 33 Hen. 8. c. 39. the King's debt ſhall be preferred, ſo as there is no judgment, &c. Cro. Car. 283. Hardr. 23. Goods and chattels may go in ſucceſſion to the King; though they may not to any other ſole corporation. 1 Inſt. 90. In whoſoever hands the goods of the King come, their lands are chargeable, and may be ſeized for the ſame: And the King is not bound by ſale of his goods in open market. 2 Inſt. 713. No preſcription of time runs againſt the King; he is not within the ſtatute of limitation of actions. 11 Rep. 74.

By Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 2. No title is to be impeached by the crown, unleſs the King's title appeared within ſixty years, before the holding the parliament. And this ſtatute is amended by 9 Geo. 3. c. 16. which diſables the crown to ſue or implead any perſon for any manors, lands, hereditaments, &c. where the right hath not or ſhall not firſt accrue and grow within ſixty years, next before the commencing ſuch ſuit, &c. Vide the ſtatute, which is altered with reſpect to the Savoy, by 11 Geo. 3. c. 4.

Action lies not againſt the King; but a petition inſtead of it, to him in the Chancery: And it is lawful for any ſubject to petition the King for redreſs, where he finds himſelf grieved by any ſentence or judgment. 2 Inſt. 187. Hob. 220. There are no coſts againſt the King; no entry will bar him; and no judgment is ever final againſt him, but with a Salvo jure Regis. Lit. 178. Finch. 460.

The King's title is not to be tried without warrant from the King, or aſſent of the Attorney General. 2 Inſt. 424. The King may have ſuch proceſs in his ſuit, as no other perſon but himſelf can have in any caſe. 1 Rep. 18. Finch. 476. He may plead ſeveral matters, without being double, and the parties ſhall anſwer them all. Bro. Doubl. pl. 57. And in his pleading, he need not plead an act of parliament, as a ſubject is bound to do. 4 Rep. 75.

The King may ſue in what court he pleaſes, and cannot be nonſuit, as he is ſuppoſed to be preſent in all his courts: he is not bound to join in demurrer on evidence; and the court may direct the jury to find the matter ſpecially. Finch 82. 5 Rep. 104. The King's only teſtimony of any thing done in his preſence, is of as high a nature and credit as any record; whence it is, that in all original writs or precepts ſent out for the diſpatch of juſtice, he uſeth no other witneſſes than himſelf, as teſte meipſo, &c. The King cannot be a minor; and in him the law will ſee no defect, negligence or folly. 1 Inſt. 41, 57.

There are ſome other prerogatives belonging to our Kings; but the judges at Weſtminſter ought to judge of matters of prerogative relating to the King, as they do matters concerning other perſons. Noy 181. Plowd. 136.

The King may not by petition, bill, &c. diſpoſe of any man's lands or goods: Nor ſhall he take that he hath right to, which is in the poſſeſſion of another, but by due courſe of law. Winch. 9. He may not command a man to priſon, againſt the writs and proceſs of law. 12 Rep. 66.

The law is the rule of the King's prerogative; which ought to be grounded upon antiquity, or otherwiſe it may be an incroachment on the liberty of the ſubject. Rex eſt anima Legi & Lex eſt anima Regi. 2 Inſt. 262.

King's Silver, Is the money which is paid to the King in the court of Common Pleas, for a licence granted to any man to levy a fine of lands, tenements or hereditaments to another perſon: And this muſt be compounded according to the value of the land, in the alienation office, before the fine will paſs. 2 Inſt. 511. 6 Rep. 39, 43.

Kintal, Is a certain weight of merchandiſe, moſt commonly of one hundred pounds, or ſomething under or over, according to the ſeveral uſes of divers nations. Plowden, fol. 3. mentions 2000 kintals of woad in the caſe of Reniger and Fogaſſa. Item duodecim denarios de quolibet ceræ quintallo. Chart. 31 Edw. 1. m. 4. See Quintal.

Kipe, (from the Saxon, Cypa) Is a baſket or engine made of oſiers, broad at one end, and narrower by degrees, uſed in Oxfordſhire and other parts of England for the taking of fiſh; and fiſhing with thoſe engines is called Kipping.

To the curious reader, it may not be improper to obſerve, that this manner of fiſhing with baſkets of the ſame kind and ſhape, is practiſed by the barbarous inhabitants of Ceylon in the Eaſt-Indies, as appears in the relation and figure of it given by Mr. Knox in his travels, pag. 28.

Kipper-time. No ſalmon ſhall be taken between Graveſend and Henley upon Thames in kipper-time, viz. between the Invention of the Croſs (3 May) and the Epiphany. Rot. Parl. 50 Edw. 3. Cowell.

Kirby's Queſt, Is an ancient record remaining with the remembrancer of the Exchequer; ſo called from its being the inqueſt of John de Kirby, treaſurer to King Edw. 1.

Kirk-mote, A ſynod; and ſometimes it has been taken for a meeting in the church or veſtry. Blount.

Knave, An old Saxon word, which had at firſt a ſenſe of ſimplicity and innocence, for it ſignified a boy; Sax. cnapa, whence a knave child, i. e. a boy diſtinguiſhed from a girl in ſeveral old writers; afterwards it was taken for a ſervant boy, and at length for any ſervant man: Alſo it was applied to a miniſter or officer, that bore the weapon or ſhield of his ſuperior, as ſcild knapa, whom the Latins called armiger, and the French eſcuyer. 14 Ed. 3. c. 3. And it was ſometimes of old made uſe of as a titular addition; as Johannes C. filius Willielmi C. de Derby, knave, &c. 22 Hen. 7. 36. The word is now perverted to the hardeſt meaning, viz. A falſe and deceitful fellow. A knave-child between them two they gate.—Gower, Poem, fol. 52, 106. And Wickliff in his old tranſlation, Exod. 1. xvi. If it be a knave-child, i. e. a ſon or male child. In the viſion of Piers Plowman. Cokes and her knaves cryden hotes pyes, hote, i. e. Cooks and their boys, or ſcullions. Cowell.

Knight, (Sax. cnyt, Lat. miles, and eques auratus, from the gilt ſpurs he uſually wore, and thence called anciently Knights of the ſpur: The Italians term them Cavalieri, the French Chevaliers, the Germans Ruyters, the Spaniards Cavallaro's &c.) In its original properly ſignified a ſervant; but there is now but one inſtance where it is taken in that ſenſe, and that is knight of a ſhire, who properly ſerves in parliament for ſuch a county; but in all other inſtances it ſignifies one who bears arms, who, for his virtue and martial proweſs, is by the King, or one having his authority, exalted above the rank of gentleman to a higher degree of dignity. The manner of making them, Camden in his Britan. thus ſhortly expreſſeth: Noſtriſs vero temporibus, qui equeſtrem dignitatem ſuſcipit, flexis genibus leviter in humero percutitur, princeps his verbis Gallice affatur; Sus vel ſois Chevalier au nom de Dieu, i. e. Surge aut ſis eques in nomine Dei. This is meant of knights bachelors, which is the loweſt, but moſt ancient degree of knighthood with us. The privilege belonging to a knight, ſee in Fern's Glory of Generoſity, p. 116.

Of knights there are two ſorts; one ſpiritual, ſo called by divines in regard of their ſpiritual warfare, the other temporal. Caſſaneus de Gloria Mundi, par. 9. conſiderat. 2. See Selden's Titles of Honour, fol. 770.

Chief Juſtice Popham affirmed, he had ſeen a commiſſion granted to a biſhop, to knight all the perſons in his dioceſe. Godbolt's Reports, fol. 398.

Of the ſeveral orders, both of ſpiritual and temporal knights, ſee Mr. Aſhmole's Inſt. of the Knights of the Garter.

He who ſerved the King in any civil or military office or dignity, was formerly called miles: It is often mentioned in the old charters of the Anglo-Saxons, which are ſubſcribed by ſeveral of the nobility, viz. after biſhops, dukes and earls, per A. B. militem, where miles ſignifies ſome officer of the courts, as miniſter was an officer to men of quality. Thus we read in Ingulphus, De dono F. quondam Militis Kenulſi Regis, fol. 860.

Afterwards the word was reſtrained to him who ſerved only upon ſome military expedition, or rather to him who by reaſon of his tenure was bound to ſerve in the wars, and in this ſenſe the word miles was taken pro vaſſallo. Thus in the laws of William the Conqueror: Manibus ei ſeſe dedit, cuncta ſua ab eo miles a Domino recepit. And he who by his office or tenure was bound to perform any military ſervice, was furniſhed by the chief lord with arms, and ſo adoptabatur in militem, which the French call adouber, and we do dub ſuch a perſon a knight. But before they went into the ſervice, it was uſual to go into a bath and waſh themſelves, and afterwards they were girt with a girdle; which cuſtom of bathing was conſtantly obſerved, eſpecially at the inauguration of our Kings, when thoſe knights were made, who for that reaſon were called Knights of the Bath. Cowell. See Black. Com. 2 V. 69. 4 V. 432.

Knights Bachelors, The moſt ancient, though the loweſt order of knighthood amongſt us; for we have an inſtance of King Alfred's conferring this order on his ſon Athelſtan. Wil. Malmſ. lib. 2. Black. Com. 1 V. 404. See Knights of the Chamber.

Knights Baneret, (milites vexillarii) Are made only in the time of war, and is a high honour: and though knighthood is commonly given for ſome perſonal merit, which therefore dies with the perſon; yet John Coupland, for his valiant ſervice performed againſt the Scots, had the honour of Baneret conferred on him and his heirs for ever, by patent. 29 Ed. 3. See Baneret. See Black. Com. 1 V. 404.

Knights of the Bath, (Milites Balnei) Have their name from their bathing the night before their creation. See Knight. This order of knights was introduced by King Hen. 4. and revived by King George the Firſt in the year 1725; who erected the ſame into a regular military order for ever, by the name and title of The Order of the Bath, to conſiſt of thirty-ſeven knights, beſides the Sovereign. See the antiquity and ceremony of their creation in Dugdale's Antiquities of Warwickſhire, fol. 531, 532. They have each three honorary Eſquires; and they now wear a red ribbon a-croſs their ſhoulders; have a prelate of the order, who is the biſhop of Rocheſter ſeveral heralds, and other officers, &c. See Black. Com. 1 V. 404.

Knights of the Chamber, (Milites Cameræ) Seem to be ſuch Knights Bachelors as are made in time of peace, becauſe knighted in the King's chamber, and not in the field: they are mentioned in Rot. Parl. 28 Ed. 3. 2 Inſt. 666. See Black. Com. 1 V. 404. They are alſo mentioned in 2 Inſt. 666. and in Rot. Pat. 29 Ed. 3. par. 1. m. 29.

Knights Court, Is a court-baron, or honour-court, held twice a year under the biſhop of Hereford, at his palace there; wherein thoſe who are lords of manors, and their tenants, holding by knight's ſervice of the honour of that biſhoprick, are ſuitors; which court is mentioned in Butterfield's Surv. fol. 244. If the ſuitor appear not at it, he pays 2 s. ſuit-ſilver for reſpite of homage. Cowell.

Knighten-gyld, Was a gyld in London, conſiſting of nineteen knights, which King Edgar founded, giving them a portion of void ground lying without the walls of the city, now called Portſoken-ward. Stow's Annals, p. 151. This in Mon. Angl. par. 2. fol. 82. a. is written cnittene-geld.

Knight's-fee, (Feodum militare) Is ſo much inheritance, as is ſufficient yearly to maintain a knight with convenient revenue; which in Henry the Third's days was 15 l. Cam. Britan. pag. 111. But Sir Thomas Smith (in his Repub. Angl. lib. 1. cap. 18.) rates it at 40 l. and by the ſtatute for knights, 1 Ed. 2. cap. 1. ſuch as had 20 l. per annum in fee, or for life, might be compelled to be knights; which ſtatute is repealed by 17 Car. 1. cap. 20. Stow in his Annals, p. 285. ſays, there were found in England, at the time of the Conqueror, 60,211 knights-fees, according to others 60,215; whereof the religious houſes, before their ſuppreſſion, were poſſeſſed of 28,015. Oct. carucatæ terræ faciunt feodum unius militis. Mon. Angl. 2 pag. fol. 825. a. Of this you may read more in Selden's Titles of Honour, fol. 691. and Bracton, lib. 5. tract. 1. cap. 2. See Coke on Lit. fol. 69. a. A knight's fee contained twelve plow-lands. 2 Inſt. fol. 596. or 680 acres. Virgata terra continet 24 acras, 4 virgatæ terræ make an hide, and five hides make a knight's fee, whoſe relief is five pounds. Cowell. See Black. Com. 1 V. 405, 409. 2 V. 62.

Knight of the Garter, (equites garterii, or periſcelidis) Are an order of knights, founded by King Ed. 3. who after he had obtained many notable victories, for furniſhing this honourable order, made choice in his own realm, and all Europe, of twenty-five the moſt excellent and renowned perſons for virtue and honour, and ordained himſelf and his ſucceſſors Kings of England, to be the ſovereign thereof, and the reſt to be fellows and brethren, beſtowing this dignity on them, and giving them a blue garter, decked with gold, pearl, and precious ſtones, and a buckle of gold, to wear daily upon the left leg only, a kirtle, crown, cloak, chaperon, a collar, and other magnificent apparel, both of ſtuff and faſhion; exquiſite and heroical to wear at high feaſts, as to ſo high and princely an order was meet. Smith's Repub. Ang. lib. 1. cap. 20. And, according to Camden and others, this order was inſtituted upon King Edward the Third's having great ſucceſs in a battle, wherein the King's garter was uſed for a token.

But Polydore Virgil gives it another original, and ſays, that the King in the height of his glory, the Kings of France and Scotland being both priſoners in the Tower of London at one time, firſt erected this order, anno 1350, (ſee infra) from the Counteſs of Saliſbury's dropping her garter, in a dance before his Majeſty, which the King taking up, and ſeeing ſome of his nobles ſmile, he ſaid, Honi ſoit qui mal y penſe, interpreted, evil (or ſhame) be to him that evil thinketh, which has ever ſince been the motto of the garter, declaring ſuch veneration ſhould be done to that ſilken tie, that the beſt of them ſhould be proud of enjoying their honours that way.

Camden in his Britannia ſaith, that this order of knights received great ornament from King Ed. 4. And King Charles I. as an addition to the ſplendor, ordered all the knights companions to wear on their upper garment, the croſs incircled with the garter and motto. The honourable ſociety of this order is intitled to St. George; and they are a college or corporation, having a Great Seal, &c.

The ſite of the college is the royal caſtle of Windſor, with the chapel of St. George, and the chapter-houſe in the caſtle, for their ſolemnity on St. George's day, and at their feaſts and inſtallations.

Beſides the King their Sovereign, and twenty-five companions, Knights of the Garter, they have a dean and canons, &c. and twenty-ſix poor knights, that have no other ſubſiſtence but the allowance of this houſe, which is given them in reſpect of their daily prayer to the honour of God and St. George; and theſe are vulgarly called Poor Knights of Windſor.

There are alſo certain officers belonging to the order; as Prelate of the Garter, which office is inherent to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, for the time being; the Chancellor of the Garter, who is the Biſhop of Sarum; Regiſter, always Dean of Windſor; the Principal King at Arms, called Garter, to manage and marſhal their ſolemnities, and the Uſher of the Garter, being likewiſe Uſher of the Black Rod.

A Knight of the Garter wears daily abroad, a blue garter decked with gold, pearl, and precious ſtones on the left leg; and in all places of aſſembly, upon his coat on the left ſide of his breaſt, a ſtar of ſilver embroidery; and the picture of St. George, enamelled upon gold and beſet with diamonds, at the end of a blue ribbon that croſſes the body from the left ſhoulder; and when dreſſed in his robes, a mantle collar of S S. &c.

According to Blackſtone, 1 V. 404. Knights of the Garter, or Knights of the order of St. George, were firſt inſtituted by Ed. 3. A. D. 1344. Seld. Tit. of Honour, 2, 5, 41.

Knighthood. Formerly when the heir came of full age, provided he held a knights fee, he was to receive the order of knighthood, and was compellable to take it upon him, or elſe to pay a fine to the King. See Black. Com. 2 V. 69.

Note, The perſons thus compellable were the King's tenants in capite, and that in conſequence of the feodal tenures. This being conſidered in the reign of Charles I. as a great grievance, the Stat. 16 Car. 1. c. 20. was paſſed, whereby it is enacted, "that none ſhall be compelled to take knighthood." See Black. Com. 4 V. 430.

Knights of the Order of St. John of Jeruſalem, (Milites Sancti Johannis Hieroſolymitam) Were an order of knighthood, that began about the year of our Lord 1120, Honorius being Pope. They had their denomination from John the charitable patriarch of Alexandria, though vowed to St. John the Baptiſt their patron; Fern's Glory of Generoſity, pag. 127. They had their primary abode in Jeruſalem, and then in the iſle of Rhodes until they were expelled thence by the Turks, anno 1523. Since which time, their chief ſeat is in the Iſle of Malta, where they have done great exploits againſt the infidels, but eſpecially in the year 1595. They live after the order of friers, under the rule of St. Auguſtine, of whom mention is made in the ſtatute 25 Hen. 8. cap. 2. and 26 Hen. 8. cap. 2. They had in England one general prior that had the government of the whole order within England and Scotland, Reg. Orig. fol. 20. and was the firſt prior in England, and ſat in the houſe of Lords. But towards the end of Henry the Eighth's days they in England and Ireland, being found to adhere to the Pope too much againſt the King, were ſuppreſſed, and their lands and goods given to the King, by the 32 Hen. 8. 24. For occaſion and propagation of this order more eſpecially deſcribed, ſee in the treatiſe, intitled The Book of Honour and Arms, lib. 5. c. 18. written by Mr. Richard Jones.

Knights of Malta. Theſe knights took their name and original from the time of their expulſion from Rhodes, anno 1523. The iſland of Malta was then given them by the Emperor Charles V. where they now reſide, and are therefore called Knights of Malta. See the preceding article.

Knight Marſhal, (Mareſchallus Hoſpitii Regis) Is an officer of the King's houſe, having juriſdiction and cognizance of tranſgreſſions within the King's houſe, and verge of it; as alſo of contracts made within the ſame houſe, whereto one of the houſe is a party. Reg. of Writs, fol. 185. a. and 191. b. and Spelman's Gloſſ. in voce Mareſchallus.

Knights of Rhodes. The Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, after they removed to Rhode iſland. 32 H. 8. c. 24. See Knights of the Order of St. John of Jeruſalem.

Knights Service, (Servitium Militare) Was a tenure whereby ſeveral lands in this kingdom were held of the King; which drew after it homage, and ſervice in war, eſcuage, wardſhip, marriage, &c. The Knight's Service in capite, or in chief, was ſervice, by which the tenant was bound to ſerve the King in his wars: and if he held of a common perſon, then he was to go with his lord in the wars. But it is taken away by Stat. 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. See Chivalry, and Black. Com. 2 V. 62.

Knights of the Shire, (Milites Comitatus) Otherwiſe called knights of parliament, are two knights or gentlemen of worth, choſen on the King's writ, in pleno comitatu, by the freeholders of every county that can diſpend 40*s.* a year; and theſe, when every man that had a knight's fee was cuſtomarily conſtrained to be a knight, were obliged to be milites gladio cincti, for ſo runs the writ at this day; but now notabiles armigeri may be choſen. Stat. 1 Hen. 5. c. 1. 10 H. 6. c. 2. 23 H. 6. c. 6. Their expences were to be borne by the county, during their ſitting in parliament, by the 35 H. 8. c. 11. And as to their qualifications, they are to have 600*l.* per annum freehold eſtate, &c. Vide 9 Ann. c. 5. and Parliament, and Black. Com. 1 V. 172.

Knights Templars, (Milites Templarii) Were a religious order of knights, inſtituted in the year of our Lord 1119, and ſo called, becauſe they dwelt in part of the buildings belonging to the Temple at Jeruſalem, and not far from the ſepulchre of our Saviour. They entertained Chriſtian ſtrangers and pilgrims, and in their armour led them through the Holy Land, to view the ſacred monuments of Chriſtianity, without danger from infidels. This order was far ſpread in Chriſtendom, particularly here in England, where it flouriſhed in the time of King Hen. 2. And had in every nation a particular governor or maſter, but at length, ſome of them at Jeruſalem falling away to the Saracens from Chriſtianity, the whole order was ſuppreſſed by Clemens quintus, anno 1307. And their ſubſtance given partly to the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, and partly to other religious. Caſſan. de Gloria Mundi, par. 9. Theſe knights at firſt wore a white garment; and afterwards, in the pontificate of Pope Eugenius, it was ordained, that they ſhould wear a red croſs: in ancient records they were alſo called Fratres Militiæ Templi Solomonis. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. p. 554.

Knights of the Thiſtle, The honourable the Scotch knighthood, the knights whereof wear a green ribbon over their ſhoulders, and are otherwiſe honourably diſtinguiſhed.

Knopa, A knob, nob, boſſe, or knot.—Textus ſuper Evangeleis cum uno claſpi habens ex uno latere quinq; knopas argenteas, &c. Mon. Angl. tom. 3. p. 365.

Known-men. The Lollards in England, called hereticks, for oppoſing the church of Rome before the reformation, went commonly under the name of known-men, and juſt faſt-men; which title was firſt given them in the dioceſe of Lincoln, by Biſhop Smith, anno 1500.

Kyddiers, Mentioned in Stat. 13 Eliz. cap. 35. See Kidder.

Kylyw, Signifies ſome liquid thing; and in the North it is uſed for a kind of liquid victuals. It is mentioned as an exaction of foreſters, &c. Mon. Angl. tom. 1. p. 722.

Kyſte, (Sax.) A coffin or cheſt for burial of the dead. Ex Reg. Epiſc. Lincoln. MS.

Kyth, Is uſed for kin or kindred. Cognatus.

LAAS, (laqueus, à lax, i. e. Fraus) A net, gin, or ſnare. Lit. Dict.

Label, (appendix lemniſcus) Is a narrow ſlip of paper or parchment, affixed to a deed, writing or writ, hanging at or out of the ſame; and an appending ſeal is called a label.

Labina, Signifies watery land; in qua facile labitur. ——Jamque diverſi ligei noctanter tranſeuntes in aquis & labinis periclitantur. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. pag. 372.

Laborariis, Is an ancient writ againſt perſons refuſing to ſerve and do labour, who have no means of living; or againſt ſuch as, having ſerved in the winter, refuſe to ſerve in the ſummer. Reg. Orig. 189.

Labour, Is the foundation of property. Bodily labour, beſtowed upon any ſubject which before lay in common to all men, is univerſally allowed to give the faireſt and moſt reaſonable title to an excluſive property therein. Black. Com. 2 V. 5.

Labourers, Conſpiring together concerning their work or wages, ſhall forfeit 10*l.* for the firſt offence, 20*l.* for the ſecond, &c. And if not paid, be ſet on the pillory. Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 15. Juſtices of peace and ſtewards of leets &c. have power to hear and determine complaints relating to non-payment of labourers wages. 4 Ed. 4. 1. And labourers taking work by the great, and leaving the ſame unfiniſhed, unleſs for nonpayment of wages, or where they are employed in the King's ſervice, &. are to ſuffer one month's impriſonment, and forfeit 5*l.* The wages of labourers are to be yearly aſſeſſed for every county by the ſheriff, and juſtices of peace in the Eaſter ſeſſions, and in corporations by the head officers, under penalties. 5 Eliz. cap. 4. And the ſheriff is to cauſe the rates and aſſeſſments of wages to be proclaimed. 1 Jac. 1. c. 6.

All perſons fit for labour, ſhall be compelled to ſerve by the day in the time of hay or corn harveſt; and labourers in the harveſt-time may go to other counties, having teſtimonials. From the middle of March to the middle of September, labourers are to work from five o'clock in the morning till ſeven or eight at night, being allowed two hours for breakfaſt and dinner, and half an hour for ſleeping the three hot months; and all the reſt of the year from twilight to twilight, except an hour and a half for breakfaſt and dinner, on pain of forfeiting 1*d.* for every hour abſent. See 5 Eliz. c. 4. If any labourer ſhall make an aſſault upon his maſter, he ſhall ſuffer and be puniſhed as a ſervant making ſuch aſſault. Ibid.

By the Stat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 34. 22 Geo. 2. c. 27. All contracts of journeymen employed in any woollen, linen, ſilk, leather, or iron, &c. manufactures for raiſing wages, leſſening the hours of work, &c. are illegal, and the offenders ſhall be ſent to the Houſe of Correction for three months. The wages, &c. of journeymen taylors are by 8 G. 3. c. 17. to be regulated and ſettled at the quarter ſeſſions in London. For other matters reſpecting this branch of labourers, vide the laſt mentioned ſtatute.

Juſtices of peace may hear and determine diſputes concerning the wages of ſervants and labourers, not exceeding 10*l.* 20 Geo. 2. c. 19. Extended to the tinners in the Stannaries, by 27 Geo. 2. c. 6. Juſtices may puniſh ſervants on complaint of the maſters, 20 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſ. 2. The 20 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſhall extend to all ſervants employed in huſbandry, though hired for leſs than a year, 31 Geo. 2. c. 11. ſ. 3. See Black. Com. 1 V. 406, 426.

Lace, Foreign bone-lace not to be imported, 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 13. May be exported free to Scotland, Ireland, or the Plantations, 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 3. ſ. 15. Lacerta, A word ſignifying a fathom. Domeſday.

Laches, (from the Fr. laſcher, i. e, laxare, or laſcht, ignavus) In our law ſignifies ſlackneſs or negligence; as it appears in Littleton, where laches of entry is a neglect in the heir to enter. And probably it may be an old Engliſh word; for when we ſay there is laches of entry; it is all one as if it were ſaid, there is a lack of entry; and in this ſignification it is uſed. Lit. 136. No laches ſhall be adjudged in the heir within age; and regularly laches ſhall not bar either infants or feme coverts, for not entry or claim, to avoid deſcents; but laches ſhall be accounted in them, for non-performance of a condition annexed to the ſtate of the land. Co. Lit. 146. See Black. Com. 1 V. 247. as to Laches generally. And as to the Laches of an Infant, 1 V. 465.

Lacta, A defect in the weight of money; whence is derived the word lack. Du Freſne.

Lada, Hath divers ſignifications; 1ſt, From the Sax. lathian, to convene or aſſemble, it is taken for a lath, or court of juſtice. 2dly, It is uſed for purgation by trial, from ladian: and hence the lada ſimplex, and lada triplex or lada plena, among the Saxons, mentioned in the laws of King Ethelred and K. Hen. 1. 3dly, Lada is applied to a lade or courſe of water; Camden uſes water-lade, or water-courſe: And Spelman ſays, that lada is a canal to carry water from wet grounds; ſometimes lada ſignifies a broad way. Spelm. Gloſſ. Mon. Angl. tom. 1. p. 854.

Lade, Lode, i. e. The mouth of a river; from the Sax. ladian, purgare, becauſe the water is there clearer; from hence Cricklade, Lechlade, &c.

Laedorium, Reproach. Facetiam in ſermone plurimam obſervant dum vel ſales vel laedoria nunc levi lingua nunc mordaci. Girald. in deſcrip. Camb. cap. 14.

Læſæ Majeſtatis, crimen. The crime of high treaſon. So denominated by Glanvil, l. 1. c. 2. High treaſon is alſo in Latin altaproditio.

Læſione fidei, Suits pro. The clergy, ſo early as the reign of King Stephen, attempted to turn their eccleſiaſtical courts into courts of equity, by entertaining ſuits pro læſione fidei, as a ſpiritual offence againſt conſcience, in caſe of non-payment of debts, or any breach of civil contracts. See Ld. Lyttelt. H. 2. b. 3. p. 361. note. But they were checked by the conſtitutions of Clarendon, 10 Hen. 2. c. 15. See Black. Com. 3 V. 52.

Lafordſwick, (Sax. hlaford, i. e. dominus, and ſwic, proditio, infidelitas erga dominum) A betraying one's lord or maſter. This word is found in King Canutus's laws, c. 61. And in the laws of King Hen. 1. Quædam placita emendari (viz. quædam crimina expiari) non poſſunt, huſbrech, opentheſe, eberemorth, & lafordſwick. Leg. 1. c. 13.

Laga, (lex) The law, lagam Regis Edwardi vobis reddo, cum illis emendationibus, quibus pater meus eam emendavit, ſays Magna Charta. Hence we deduce Saxon-lage Mercen-lage, Dane-lage, &c.

Lagan, Is goods ſunk in the ſea, from the Sax. liggan cubare: when mariners in danger of ſhipwreck caſt goods out of the ſhip, and becauſe they know they are heavy and ſink, faſten a buoy or cork to them, that they may find and have them again; if the ſhip be loſt, theſe goods are called lagan, and ſo long as they continue upon the ſea, belong to the Lord Admiral; but if they are caſt away upon the land, they are then a wreck. and belong to the lord intitled to the ſame. 5 Co. Rep. 106. At firſt lagan was that right which the chief lord of the fee had to take goods caſt on ſhore by the violence of the ſea, &c. Bract. lib. 3. cap. 2. See 26 Geo. 2. c. 19.

Lagedayum, Laghday, A law-day, or time of open court. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Lageman. (legamannus) Homo habens legem, or homo legalis ſeu legitimus; ſuch as we call now good men of the jury. The word is frequently uſed in Domeſday, and the laws of Edward the Confeſſor, cap. 38. thus: Poſtea inquiſiſſet juſtitia per legamannos, & per meliores homines de burgo, &c. Sir Edw. Coke ſays, A lageman was he who had ſocam & ſacam ſuper homines ſuos, i. e. that had a juriſdiction over their perſons and eſtates; of which opinion were Somner and Lambard, and that it ſignified the Thanes, called afterwards Barons, who ſat as judges to determine rights in courts of juſtice. In ſenatus conſult. de Monticolis Walliæ, cap. 3. it is ſaid, Let twelve laghmen, which Lambard renders men of law, viz. ſix Engliſh, and ſix Welch, do right and juſtice, &c. Blount.

Lagen, (lagena) Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 8, 9. In antient times it was a meaſure of ſix ſextarii. Hence perhaps our flagon. Donatio inſuper de ſex laganis olei annuatim. Charta 2 Ed. 3. m. 25. n. 82. The lieutenant of the Tower has the privilege to take unam lagenam vini, ante malum & retro, of all wine ſhips that come up to the Thames. Sir Peter Leyceſter, in his Antiquities of Cheſhire, interprets lagena vini, a bottle of wine.

Laghday, or Lahday, A time of open court. See Lagedayum, Law-day.

Laghſlite, Lagſlite, Lahſlite. (Sax. lag, leg, & ſlite, ruptio) A breaking or tranſgreſſing of the law; and ſometimes the puniſhment inflicted for ſo doing. Leg. H. 1. c. 13.

Lairwite, Lecherwite, and Legergeldum, (from the Sax. legan, i. e. concumbere, & wite, mulcta) Pœna vel mulcta offendentium in adulterio & fornicatione; and the privilege of puniſhing adultery and fornication did anciently belong to the lords of ſome manors, in reference to their tenants. Fleta, lib. 1. c. 47. 4 Inſt. 206.

Lammas-Day, Is the firſt of Auguſt, ſo called quaſi Lamb-mas; on which day the tenants that held land of the cathedral church of York, (which is dedicated to St. Peter ad Vincula) were bound by their tenure to bring a live lamb into the church at high maſs. It is otherwiſe ſaid to come from the Sax. hlaffmæſſe, viz. loaf maſs, as on that day the Engliſh made an offering of bread made with new wheat. 23 Hen. 8. c. 4.

Lamp-black, To what duties liable, 4 Will. & Ma. c. 5. ſ. 2.

Lamprays. See Fiſh.

Lamps. None but Britiſh oil to be uſed for lamps in private houſes, under penalty of 40*s.* 8 Ann. c. 9. Shares in the lights how taxable. 30 Geo. 2. c. 3. By the Stat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 29. Such convenient number of lamps as the Mayor, Alderman and Commonalty of the city of London ſhall think proper, ſhall be erected in ſuch places as to them ſhall ſeem meet; and they are to make rates not exceeding 6 d. in the pound, nor above 50 s. a year on any one perſon. The Alderman of each ward, with the conſent of his deputy and Common Council-men, or the major part of them, may contract for the lamps, &c. Wilfully breaking or extinguiſhing any lamp incurs the penalty of 40 s. for the firſt, 50*s.* for the ſecond, and 3 l. for the third offence. See the new acts for lighting, &c. the ſtreets of London and Weſtminſter.

Lancaſter, Was erected into a county palatine, anno 50 Ed. 3. and granted by the King to his ſon John for life, that he ſhould have jura regalia, and a King-like power to pardon treaſons, outlawries, &c. and make juſtices of peace and juſtices of aſſiſe within the ſaid county, and all proceſſes and indictments to be in his name; but theſe royalties are abridged by the Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 24. There is a ſeal for the county palatine, and another for the dutchy, i. e. ſuch lands as lie out of the county palatine, and yet are part of the dutchy: for ſuch there are, and the Dukes of Lancaſter hold them, but not as counties palatine, for they had not jura regalia over thoſe lands. 2 Lutw. 1236. 3 Salk. 110, 111. The ſtatute 37 H. 8. c. 16. annexes lands to the dutchy of Lancaſter, for the enlargement of it. Fines levied before the juſtices of aſſiſe of Lancaſter, of lands in the county palatine, ſhall be of equal force with thoſe acknowledged before the juſtices in the Common Pleas. 37 H. 8. c. 19. And proceſs againſt an outlawed perſon in the county palatine of Lancaſter, is to be directed to the Chancellor of the dutchy, who ſhall thereupon iſſue like writs to the ſheriff, &c. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. 26. The ſtatute 17 Car. 2. concerning cauſes of replevin ſhall be of force in the court of Common Pleas for the county palatine of Lancaſter. 19 Car. 2. 5. By the ſtat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 7. The Chancellor or Vice-chancellor may by commiſſion impower perſons to take affidavits in any cauſe, &c. depending in the Chancery or Courts of Seſſions, in any plea whatſoever, civil or criminal. Land-man, Terricola, The terre-tenant.

Land-tax. The ancient method of taxation was by eſcuage, which was on lands held by knight-ſervice; and by tallage on the cities and boroughs, and it was made in this manner: When the King wanted money for his wars, thoſe tenants that did not attend him in perſon, paid him an aid, and the aid was aſſeſſed before the juſtices itinerant. It was generally a gift of all the inhabitants as a body corporate; if they did not give according to the wants of the Crown, the juſticiar enquired into their behaviour, and if there were any forfeitures of their charters, quo warranto's came out, to ſeize their liberties into the King's hands. But Ed. 1. found this way of taxing by eſcuage and tallage to be very incomplete; becauſe wars were drawn out into great length and expence; and therefore he formed into diſtinct bodies, the tenants in capite that held great baronies, and theſe were called the barones majores, (the now peers of parliament;) and the repreſentatives of the barones minores and of ſeveral corporations, viz. the citizens and burgeſſes, of whom he made one body; which now compoſes the Houſe of Commons. Gilb. Treat. of the Excheq. 192.

King Edward the Firſt granted the people Magna Charta, which they had long contended for, and alſo the charter of the foreſts; and for Magna Charta they granted the King a fifteenth, by the name of Quindecimam partem omnium bonorum; ſo that inſtead of particular aſſeſſments in cities and boroughs, there was one univerſal aſſeſſment of the fifteenth of all their ſubſtance: this fifteenth ſeems to have been at firſt made out of the eccleſiaſtical tenth; for the Popes claimed the tenths of all benefices; it was therefore eaſy to know, by the Pope's collections of his tenths, what was the value of every eccleſiaſtical benefice, for the Pope's tenth was reckoned at 2 s. per pound, and therefore the fifteenth muſt be 1 s 4 d. The benefice conſiſted of the glebe and the tenth part of the townſhip; therefore by the value of the benefice deducting the glebe, they knew the true value of the townſhip, and how to ſet a fifteenth upon it: ſo that the fifteenth of the townſhips were certain ſums, ſet by the King's taxors and collectors under the act of parliament; and commiſſions were granted to the taxors and collectors of them under the Great Seal; but in collecting of the fifteenths the ſums only appeared in the books below. And the collectors of every townſhip, either returned their collection into the Exchequer, or elſe there were head collectors for the whole county, who returned it thither; there were likewiſe commiſſioners appointed, to ſuperviſe ſuch taxation and collections: But about the time of Edward III. there were certain eſtabliſhed ſums ſet upon every townſhip; and ſo as the King's wants increaſed, they gave one, two, or three fifteenths. Gilb. Treat. of the Excheq. 193, 194.

We find in the times of Henry the Eighth, Queen Elizabeth, and King James the Firſt, that they raiſed both ſubſidies and fifteenths; this was, becauſe the value of things increaſed, and therefore the old fifteenths were not according to the then true value of townſhips. And therefore they contrived that the ſubſidy ſhould be raiſed by a pound-rate upon lands, and likewiſe a pound-rate upon goods; and we find in the ſubſidy 4 Car. (which is ſaid to be the greateſt ſubſidy that ever was given, and which paſſed upon the petition of rights) there was 4 s. in the pound laid upon land, and 2 s. 8 d. upon goods; now 4 s. upon land amounts to three fifteenths, and 2 s. 8 d. which was upon goods to two fifteenths; but in this they had no regard to the old rates made in the tax-book of the ſeveral townſhips, otherwiſe than to diſcover the value of the lands; but a method is chalked out by the act of parliament to appoint commiſſioners, aſſeſſors, and collectors, in order to rate and get in the ſaid ſubſidy. Ibid.

This was found very inconvenient, becauſe the commiſſioners uſed to be favourable to their own country, therefore it was found neceſſary to revive ſo far the ancient method, as to appoint a certain ſum; and in the time of the civil war, the long parliament would not ſettle any perſons to appoint commiſſioners, but the appointment of commiſſioners was made in the act itſelf: And in this new manner of taxing, they appointed the ſum to be levied on each particular county, in the act itſelf; as well as the commiſſioners names, and where to levy it; And the ſix aſſociated counties, viz. London, Middleſex, Kent, Suſſex, Surry, and Hertford, being not ſpoiled and pillaged in the civil wars, and more hearty to the parliament intereſt, were taxed higher than any other counties in England. Gilb. Treat. of the Excheq. 194, 195, 196.

After the revolution, to ſupport King William in his wars with France, it was neceſſary to come into a land-tax; and from 1684 to 1693, the tax was made by a pound-rate, like the former ſubſidies; but when the people found that the war was like to hold, about 1693, the tax was mightily leſſened, every body being willing to eaſe his neighbour; and then they came to lay a rate upon every county, and the aſſociating counties, being very zealous for the government in the revolution, and having taxed themſelves higher than their neighbours in 1693, it was argued that thoſe counties were better able to bear the tax, and therefore in 1693, they laid the diſproportioned ſums that are now the ſtandard of the land-tax: let us now compare the ſubſidy law, 4 Car. 1. with the preſent land-tax, and conſider the manner of gathering them. Ibid.

In the old time, according to the way of making war then uſed, the tenants per baroniam, and by knight-ſervice as is herein before mentioned, were obliged to be in the camp 40 days, at their own expence, and the eſcuage was levied upon the defaulters; but when the art of war improved, and armies were brought into the field that continued a long time, they made their taxation by way of ſubſidy; which was ſo much in the pound upon the perſonal and real eſtate; as the ſubſidy of the fourth of King Charles was 2*s.* 8*d.* per pound on the perſonal, and 4*s.* per pound on the real eſtate; and where there were different times of taxation and collecting, they were called ſo many different ſubſidies; and the ſpiritualty gave their tax in convocation, and the temporalty in parliament; but the convocation-tax always paſſed both houſes of parliament, ſince it could not bind as a law till it had the conſent of the legiſlature. Their tax was made according to the rate in the King's books, and ſince a tenth was paid yearly to the crown, they only taxed the other nine parts as they ſtood in thoſe books.

The temporalty and ſpiritualty were taxed in the ſame manner as to their perſonal eſtate, but as to their real eſtate, what was given in convocation excuſed their tax quoad their ſpiritualties. The commiſſioners for executing the act, were appointed by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, or other great officers of the Crown, or any two of them, the Lord Chancellor being one. Gilb. Treat. of the Excheq. 197, 198.

The preſent land-tax, tho' it follows the plan of the ſubſidies, viz. in taxing ſo much on the perſonal, and ſo much on the real eſtate, yet it differs in two material circumſtances, viz. that there is a ſum impoſed on each particular county, and that the commiſſioners are named in the act itſelf; this came in, in the time of the civil war, in this manner; they had firſt taxed according to the pound-rate, but when the zeal of the people fell off, they found it neceſſary to ſet a ſum upon each particular county; and ſo they taxed them according to the higheſt ſum that had been levied in ſuch county, and obliged them to make it up; and they being then in oppoſition to the crown, they named the commiſſioners in the act itſelf; and this way of taxing was afterwards followed at the reſtoration, becauſe they found it for the eaſe of the crown to name particular ſums in the act of parliament, and then they named commiſſioners alſo, who were to aſſeſs and rate each particular inhabitant. Ibid.

The commiſſioners by the ſubſidy, were duly to execute that act; but by the land-tax they were directed in a particular manner how they ſhould do it: that is to ſay, by making the diſtribution of the particular ſum upon each particular hundred, lathe and wapentake; but by both laws, they were to ſubdivide themſelves, and the reſpective commiſſioners were not to act out of their diſtrict. The commiſſioners by the land-tax acts, are to give a note to the receiver general, of the names of the acting commiſſioners, and ſums in each diviſion. We do not find this clauſe in the old ſubſidy law, becauſe it was not neceſſary, where there was not a particular ſum impoſed on each county. Ibid.

The commiſſioners, both in the ſubſidy and land tax, were to iſſue their precepts to the conſtables and other inhabitants, and to appoint aſſeſſors; and by both laws, the commiſſioners are to give them in charge, to make a juſt aſſeſſment, and to return ſuch aſſeſſments to the commiſſioners; who by the land-tax were to return the names of collectors. And by both laws, the perſons aggrieved might appeal from the aſſeſſors to the commiſſioners; and alſo ſtock upon land is excuſed from paying as perſonal eſtate. Gilb. Treat. of the Excheq. 199, 200.

By the ſubſidy law, the commiſſioners appointed collectors; but by the land-tax, the aſſeſſors brought in the names of the collectors; becauſe the place was anſwerable for the ſums ſo aſſeſſed, until they were paid in to the receiver general; and therefore it was neceſſary that the aſſeſſors ſhould appoint collectors: but by the ſubſidy law, there was no particular ſum locally fixed; and therefore the collectors were appointed by the commiſſioners, who acted in behalf of the crown; and the collectors names were returned in, by both laws, to the receiver general or high collectors; and this diſpoſition was that the receiver might know in whoſe hands the money was. In the ſubſidy, the commiſſioners appointed the high collectors in each ſhire and diviſion, to whom the ſub-collectors were accountable, and the high collectors were accountants to the Exchequer; and one duplicate of the aſſeſſments was given to the high collector, and the other returned into the Exchequer, to be a charge upon the high collectors receipt: But according to the frame of the land-tax, the receiver is now appointed by the Lord Treaſurer; and by this law, a duplicate of each particular diviſion is to be given to the receiver general, and another to be returned into the Exchequer; the duplicate returned to the receiver, is to charge the collectors, and that returned into the Exchequer, to charge the receiver general. Ibid. 200, 201.

The high collectors by the ſubſidy law, gave ſecurity to the commiſſioners by recognizance, to anſwer the money by them received; but now the receiver general, by the conſtitution of the treaſury gives ſecurity to the crown. In the ſubſidy law and land-tax, the under-collector was to diſtrain the parties refuſing to pay the ſum aſſeſſed: And by the ſubſidy law, the under-collectors paid in the money collected to the high collector, who was an accountant at the Exchequer; but by the land-tax, the collectors are to pay in the money to the receiver, and he is the accountant at the Exchequer. If the collectors did not pay in the money they had collected to the receivers, the commiſſioners were to impriſon them, and ſeize their effects; but if the proportion was not anſwered, the place itſelf was anſwerable, by a re-aſſeſſment of the commiſſioners. By both laws, the collectors had precepts and aſſeſſments delivered: and, under ſuch precepts, had authority to diſtrain the lands and goods of the perſons ſo aſſeſſed, by virtue of the act. By both laws the parties were to be taxed for goods, in the place where they dwelt. By both laws the diſtreſs was to be ſold, and the overplus paid to the owner; by the ſubſidy law, in eight days; by the land-tax, in four days: And for neglect or refuſal to pay, and failure of diſtreſs, the party to be impriſoned. By the ſubſidy law, all the commiſſioners joined in one certificate; but now the commiſſioners in each diviſion return their eſtates, which are a charge upon the receiver general; but in the land-tax, if a non-payment in any place be certified by the receiver under his hand, Exchequer proceſs is to iſſue againſt the acting commiſſioners. By the land-tax, if land doubly taxed comes into proteſtant hands, and they get a certificate from the commiſſioners, and prove the truth of the certificate before the barons, by two credible witneſſes, the Court of Exchequer is impowered to diſcharge ſuch ſum from the pariſh or townſhip in which the lands lie, and that diſcharge is carried to the Houſe of Commons, in order to be diſcharged out of the general ſum the next year. Ibid. 203, 204. Lapſe, (Lapſus) Is a ſlip or omiſſion of a patron to preſent to a church, within ſix months after it becomes void; in which caſe we ſay, that benefice is in lapſe or lapſed. 13 Eliz. c. 12. And lapſe is defined to be a title given to the ordinary to collate to a benefice, on the patron's negligence in preſenting within ſix months; and alſo to be a devolution of a right of preſenting from the patron to the biſhop; from the biſhop to the archbiſhop; and from the archbiſhop to the King. Wood's Inſt. 158. If after an avoidance, the patron doth not preſent in ſix months, the ordinary hath the next ſix months to collate to the benefice; and if he doth not collate in ſix months, then the metropolitan hath further ſix months; and if he doth not collate within his ſix months, it then devolves to the crown. 2 Rol. Abr. 360. Hob. 30. 4 Rep. 17. And the computation of the ſix months is by the kalendar months, excluſive of the day in which the church becomes void. 6 Rep 62. Where a patron preſents his clerk before the biſhop hath collated, the preſentation is good notwithſtanding the ſix months are paſt, and ſhall bar the biſhop, who cannot take any advantage of the lapſe: And ſo if the patron makes his preſentation before the archbiſhop hath collated, though twelve months are paſt: But if the biſhop collates after twelve months, this bars not the archbiſhop. 2 Rol. Abr. 369. 2 Inſt. 273. If a biſhop doth not collate to benefices of his own gift the lapſe at the end of ſix months to the archbiſhop; and if the archbiſhop neglects to collate within ſix months, to a benefice of his gift, the King ſhall have it by lapſe. Dr. & Stud. cap. 36. And if a church continues void ſeveral years by lapſe, the ſucceſſor of the King may preſent. Cro. Car. 258. But if the King hath a title to preſent by lapſe, and he ſuffers the patron to preſent, and the preſentee dies, or reſigns before the King hath preſented, if the preſentation is real and not by covin, he hath loſt his preſentation, for lapſe is but for the firſt and next turn; and by the death of the incumbent, a new title is given to the patron; though it hath been adjudged that the King in ſuch caſe may preſent at any time as long as that preſentee is incumbent. 2 Cro. 216. 7 Rep. Moor 244. When the patronage of the church is litigious, and one party doth recover againſt the other in a quare impedit, if the biſhop be not named in the writ, and ſix months paſs while the ſuit is depending, lapſe ſhall incur to the biſhop: if the biſhop be named in the writ, then neither the biſhop, archbiſhop, or King, can take the benefice by lapſe; and yet it is ſaid, if the patron within the ſix months brings a quare impedit againſt the biſhop, and then the ſix months paſs without any preſentation by the patron, lapſe ſhall incur to the biſhop. 2 Rol. Abr. 365. 6 Rep. 52. 1 Inſt 344. Hob. 270

Though where the biſhop is a diſturber, or the church remains void above ſix months by his fault, there ſhall be no lapſe. 1 Inſt. 344. A clerk preſented being refuſed by the biſhop for any ſufficient cauſe, as illiterature, ill life, &c. he is to give the patron notice of it, that another may be preſented in due time, otherwiſe the biſhop ſhall not collate by lapſe; becauſe he ſhall not take advantage of his own wrong, in not giving notice to the patron as he ought to do by law. Dyer 292. And if an avoidance is by reſignation, which muſt neceſſarily be to the biſhop by the act of the incumbent; or by deprivation, which is the act of the law, lapſe ſhall not incur to the biſhop, till ſix months after notice given by him to the patron: When the church becomes void by the death of the incumbent, &c. the patron muſt preſent in ſix months without notice from the biſhop, or ſhall loſe his preſentation by lapſe. Dyer. 293, 327. 1 Inſt. 135. 4 Rep. 75.

In the caſes of deprivation and reſignation, where the patron is to have notice before the church can lapſe, the patron is not bound to take notice from any body but the biſhop himſelf, or other ordinary, which muſt be perſonally given to the party, if he live in the ſame county; and ſuch notice muſt expreſs in certain the cauſe of deprivation, &c. If the patron live in a foreign county, then the notice may be publiſhed in the pariſh church, and affixed on the church door. Cro. Eliz. 119. Dyer 328.

In ſuch caſes where there ought to be notice, if none is given by the biſhop or archbiſhop in a year and a half, whereby lapſe would come to the King if it had been given; here the lapſe ariſes not to the King, where no title aroſe to the inferior ordinary: Dyer 340. And it has been adjudged, that lapſe is not an intereſt, like the patronage, but an office of truſt repoſed by law in the ordinary; and the end of it is, to provide the church a rector, in default of the patron: And it cannot be granted over; for the grant of the next lapſe of ſuch a church, either before it falls or after, is void. F. N. B. 34. Alſo if lapſe incurs, and then the ordinary dies, the King ſhall preſent, and not the ordinary's executors, becauſe it is rather an adminiſtration, than an intereſt. 25 Ed. 3. 4 Mallor. Q. Imped. 118. A lapſe may incur againſt an infant or feme covert, if they do not preſent within ſix months. 1 Inſt. 246. But there is no lapſe againſt the King, who may take his own time, and plenarty ſhall be no bar againſt the King's title, becauſe Nullum tempus occurrit Regi. 2 Inſt. 273. Dyer 351. By preſentation and inſtitution, a lapſe is prevented; though the clerk is never inducted: And a donative cannot lapſe, either to the ordinary or the King. 2 Inſt. 273. See Black. Com. 2 V. 276. 4 V. 106.

Larceny, (Fr. Larrecin, Lat. Latrocinium) Is a theft or felony of another's goods, in his abſence; and in reſpect of the thing ſtolen, it is either

Great
Small.

Grand larceny is a felonious taking and carrying away the perſonal goods of another, above the value of 12*d.* not from the perſon, or by night, in the houſe of the owner.

Petit larceny is when the goods ſtolen do not exceed the value of 12 d. It agrees with grand larceny in all things except only the value of the goods; ſo that whereever any offence would be grand larceny, if the thing ſtolen was above 12 d. value; it is is petit larceny, if it be but of that value, or under. H. P. C. 60, 69.

If two perſons ſteal goods to the value of 13 d. it is grand larceny in both; and if one at different times ſteals divers parcels of goods from the ſame perſon, which together exceed the value of 12*d.* they may be put together in one indictment, and the offender found guilty of grand larceny; but this is very ſeldom done: On the contrary, the jury ſometimes, where it is an offender's firſt offence, &c. find it ſpecially, as they may, that the goods are but of 10*d.* value; whereby it will be only petit larceny, though the offender is indicted for ſtealing things of the value of 30 or 40*s.* H. P. C. 70. Pult. 125. 3 Inſt. 109. Hetl. Rep. 66.

Grand larceny is a felony puniſhed with death; petit larceny only with whipping, or other corporal puniſhment, &c. But the offenders may have the benefit of tranſportation by ſtatute.

There is not only ſimple larceny, by taking away the goods of another, but a mixed or complicated larceny, which has a further degree of guilt in it, and is either a taking from the perſon, or from the houſe; as in caſe of robbery, burglary, &c. Alſo there is a private larceny from a man's perſon, without his knowledge; or an open larceny with his knowledge; private, by picking the pocket, &c. openly, where a thief takes off my hat, or periwig, from my head, and runs away with it: And as to private larceny from the perſon above 12*d.* it is excluded clergy, if laid in the indictment as done clam & ſecrete, &c. according to the words of the Stat. 8 Eliz. c. 4. but otherwiſe it is not. Open larceny with knowledge, by the Common law is within the benefit of clergy. H. P. C. 75. Dalt. cap 110. 3 Inſt. 68. Dyer 224.

Of all moveable goods, the property whereof is in any perſon, felony, or larceny may be committed; as money, houſehold-ſtuff, hay, corn and trees ſevered from the ground, &c. But the goods ſtolen muſt be merely perſonal, to make it larceny; for if it be of any thing in the realty, or fixed to the freehold; as corn, or fruit growing, not ſevered, lead on a church, &c. it is not larceny. 3 Inſt. 109. 8 Rep. 33. Dalt. 372. Taking lead from a freehold is made felony by Stat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 32. And ſtealing black-lead in a mine is made felony, by 25 Geo. 2. c. 10.

Of paper and parchment, on which conveyances are written concerning lands, or obligations, &c. larceny cannot be committed. Wood's Inſt. 366. But ſee Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 15. as to ſtealing of bonds and notes; and the 4 Geo. 2. c. 32. againſt ſtealing and taking away lead, or iron bars from houſes, &c. Where a perſon finds the goods of another that are loſt, and converts them to his own uſe, it is no larceny. H. P. C. 61. To take away goods the owner of which is unknown, ſometimes is no larceny; ſuch as treaſure-trove, wrecks, waifs, ſtrays, before ſeizure by the perſon who hath a right to the ſame; though in other caſes, a man may be guilty of larceny in taking away goods, the owner whereof is not known. Dalt. 370. 3 Inſt. 208. H. P. C. 67. By 26 Geo. 2. c. 19. In ſome extraordinary caſes, the law will rather feign a property, where in ſtrictneſs there is none, than ſuffer an offender to eſcape juſtice. 1 Hawk. P. C. 94.

A man may commit larceny by taking away his own goods in the hands of another; as where the owner delivers goods to a carrier, and afterwards ſecretly ſteals them from him with an intent to charge him for them, &c. becauſe the carrier had a ſpecial property, and the poſſeſſion for a time. 3 Inſt. 110. Dalt. 373. Pult. 126.

To make the crime of larceny, there muſt be a felonious taking; or an intent of ſtealing the thing, when it comes firſt to the hands of the offender, at the very time of the receiving. 3 Inſt. 107. Dalt. 367. And if one intending to ſteal goods, gets poſſeſſion of them by ejectment, replevin, or other proceſs at law unduly obtained, by falſe oath, &c. it is a felonious taking. 3 Inſt. 64. Kel. Rep. 43, 44. If a man hath poſſeſſion of goods once lawfully, though he afterwards carry them away with an ill intention, it is no larceny: where a taylor imbezils cloth delivered to him, to make a ſuit of clothes, &c. it is not felony. H. P. C. 61. 5 Rep. 31. And if I lend a perſon my horſe to go to a certain place, and he goes there, and then rides away with him, it is not larceny; but remedy is to be had by action for the damage: tho' if one comes on pretence to buy a horſe, and the owner gives the ſtranger leave to ride him, if he rides away with the horſe, it is felony; for here an intention is implied. Wood's Inſt. 364, 365. In the above caſes, there is a lawful poſſeſſion by delivery, to extenuate the offence: but perſons having the poſſeſſion of goods by delivery, may in ſome inſtances be guilty of felony, by taking away part thereof; as if a carrier open a pack, and take out part of the goods; a miller who has corn to grind, takes out part of the ſame, with an intent to ſteal it, &c. in which caſes, the poſſeſſion of part, diſtinct from the whole, was gained by wrong, and not delivered by the owner, &c. H. P. C. 62. S. P. C. 25. 1 Hawk. P. C. 90. If a lodger hath the poſſeſſion of goods and furniture in a houſe, by the conſent and delivery of the owner, the taking away, imbezilling or purloining thereof, with an intent to ſteal them, is felony and larceny. Stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 9. And by ſtatute, if a ſervant being of the age of eighteen years, and not an apprentice, goes away with goods of his maſter or miſtreſs delivered him to keep; or being in his ſervice imbezils them, or converts them to his own uſe, with intention to ſteal them, it is felony, if the goods are of the value of 40*s.* or above. 21 H. 8. c. 7. Vide alſo, 27 H. 8. c. 17. 28 H. 8. c. 2. 1 Ed. 6. c. 12. ſect. 18. 5 El. c. 10.

Alſo if one ſervant delivers the goods to another ſervant, this is a delivery by the maſter; yet if the maſter or another ſervant delivers a bond, or cattle to ſell, and the ſervant goes away with the bond, and receives the money thereon due, or receives the money for the cattle ſold, and goes away with the ſame, this is no felony or larceny within the ſtatute. Dalt. 388. H. P. C. 62. 3 Inſt. 105. So if a ſervant receives his maſter's rents; for the maſter did not deliver the money to the ſervant, and it muſt be of things delivered to keep: And if goods delivered to the ſervant to keep, are under 40*s.* value, and he goes away with them, this is only a breach of truſt, by reaſon of the delivery; but if the goods were not delivered to him, is is felony and larceny to go away with or imbezil them, though under the value of 40*s.* &c. Dalt. 369. See 12 Ann. c. 7.

A perſon that hath the bare charge of goods, and not the poſſeſſion; as a butler that hath the charge of plate, a ſhepherd of ſheep, a ſervant who hath the charge of a chamber by delivery of the key to him, &c. may be guilty of larceny. 3 Inſt. 108. If the goods of a dead perſon are ſtolen, it is felony and larceny: But where ſervants in a houſe imbezil them after their maſter's deceaſe, this ſeems not to be felony, becauſe the things were in ſome meaſure in their cuſtody; though, if they appear not on proclamation, they ſhall be attainted of felony, by ſtatute 33 H. 6. 3. 1. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 515.

A man puts a child of ſeven years old to take goods and bring them to him, and he carries them away; the child is not guilty by reaſon of his infancy, yet it is larceny in the other. Ibid. 514. If a man reduced to extreme neceſſity (not owing to his own unthriftineſs) ſteals victuals merely to ſatisfy his preſent hunger, and keep him from ſtarving, by our ancient books, this is neither felony nor larceny. 1 Hawk. P. C. 93. Sed. qu if it is not now otherwiſe held, and that with great propriety, as it would open a door to innumerable evil conſequences? An acquittal of larceny in one county, may be pleaded in bar of a ſubſequent proſecution for the ſame ſtealing in another county: And an averment that the offences in both indictments are the ſame, may be made out by witneſſes, or inqueſt of office, without putting it to trial by jury; though that of later years hath been the uſual method. 2 Hawk. P. C. 370. But it is no plea in appeal of larceny, that the defendant hath been found Not guilty in action of treſpaſs brought againſt him by the ſame plaintiff for the ſame goods, for larceny and treſpaſs are entirely different; and a bar in an action of an inferior nature, will not bar another of a ſuperior. 2 Hawk. P. C. 371. If a perſon be indicted for felony or larceny generally, and upon the evidence it appears that the fact is but a bare treſpaſs, he cannot be found guilty, and have judgment on the treſpaſs, but ought to be indicted anew; tho' it may be otherwiſe where the jury finds a ſpecial verdict, or when the fact is ſpecially laid, &c. In treſpaſs where the taking is felonious, no verdict ought to be given, unleſs the defendant hath before been tried for the felony. 2 Hawk. 440. All felony includes treſpaſs, ſo that if the party be guilty of no treſpaſs in taking the goods, he cannot be guilty of felony or lacreny in carrying them away; and in every indictment of laeceny, there muſt be the words felonice cepit & aſportavit, &c. H. P. C. 61. 1 Hawk. 89.

By the 2 Geo. 2. cap. 25. it is enacted, “That if any perſon or perſons ſhall ſteal, or take by robbery, any Exchequer orders or tallies, or other orders, intitling any other perſon or perſons to any annuity or ſhare in any parliamentary fund, or any Exchequer bills, Bank notes, South-Sea bonds, Eaſt-India bonds, dividend warrants of the Bank, South-Sea company, Eaſt-India company, or any other company, ſociety, or corporation, bills of exchange, navy bills or debentures, goldſmiths notes for payment of any money, or other bonds or warrants, bills or promiſſory notes for the payment of any money, being the property of any other perſon or perſons, or of any corporation; notwithſtanding any of the ſaid particulars are termed in law a choſe in action, it ſhall be deemed and conſtrued to be felony of the ſame nature and in the ſame degree, and with or without the benefit of the clergy in the ſame manner, as it would have been, if the offender had ſtolen or taken by robbery any other goods of like value with the money due on, or ſecured by, ſuch orders, &c.

Lathe, Leth, (læſtum, Leda, Sax. læthe) Is a great part of a county, containing three or four hundreds, or wapentakes; as it is uſed in Kent and Suſſex. Leg. Ed. Confeſſ. c. 35.——Et ſint quieti de ſectis Comitatuum, Leth, Hundred. & auxiliis vice comitum. Pat. 1 H. 4. par. 8. m. 8. See Lada. And Black. Com. 1 V. 116.

Lathreve, Leidgreve or Trithingreve, Was an officer under the Saxon government, who had authority over a third part of the county; and whoſe territory was therefore called Trithing, otherwiſe a Leid or Leithen, in which manner the county of Kent is ſtill divided; and the Rapes in Suſſex ſeem to anſwer the ſame. As to the juriſdiction of this officer, thoſe matters that could not be determined in the hundred court, were thence brought to the Trithing, where all the principal men of three or more hundreds being aſſembled by the Lathreve or Trithingreve did debate and decide it; or if they could not, then the Lathreve ſent it up to the county court, to be there finally determined.——Suoque olim ſubaudiens magiſtratui quem Ledgrevium appellabant Spelm. Latimer, Is uſed by Sir Edward Coke for an interpreter, 2 Inſt. 515. It ſeems that the word is miſtaken, and ſhould be latiner, becauſe heretofore he that underſtood Latin, which in the time of the Romans was the prevailing language, might be a good interpreter. Camden agrees, that it ſignifies a Frenchman or interpreter, and ſays the word is uſed in an old inquiſition. Britan. fol. 598. and may be derived or corrupted from the Fr. latinier, q. d. latiner. Cowell.

Latin. There are three ſorts of Latin. 1. Good Latin, allowed by grammarians and lawyers. 2. Falſe or incongruous Latin, which in times paſt would abate original writs; though not make void any judicial writ, declaration or plea, &c. And 3. Words of Art, known only to the ſages of the law, and not to grammarians, called Lawyers Latin. 1 Lil. Abr. 146, 147. Stat. 36 Ed. 3. Formerly the uſe of a word not Latin at all, or ſo in the ſenſe in which uſed, might in many caſes be helped by an Anglice; though where there was a proper Latin word for the thing intended to be expreſſed, nothing could help an improper one. 2 Hawk P. C. 232. And when there was no Latin for a thing, words made which had ſome countenance of Latin, were allowed good, as Velvetum, Anglice velvet, &c. 10 Rep. 133. See Indictment, and Proceſs.

Latinarius, An interpreter of Latin, or latiner, from the Fr. latinier. 2 Co. Inſt. 515. See Latimer.

Latitat, Is a writ whereby all men are originally called to anſwer in perſonal actions in the King's Bench, having its name upon a ſuppoſition that the defendant doth lurk and lie hid, and cannot be found in the county of Middleſex to be taken by bill, but is gone into ſome other county, to the ſheriff of which this writ is directed, to apprehend him there. F. N. B. 78. Terms de Ley.

The original of it is this: In ancient time, while the King's Bench was moveable, when any man was ſued, a writ was ſent forth to the ſheriff of the county where the court was reſident, called a bill of Middleſex, to take him; and if the ſheriff returned Non eſt inventus, then a ſecond writ was ſued out, that had theſe words, Cum teſtatum eſt quod Latitat, &c. and thereby the ſheriff was commanded to attach the party in any other place, where he might be found: And when the tribunal of the King's Bench came to be ſettled at Weſtminſter, the ſame courſe was obſerved for a long time; but afterwards, by the contrivance of clerks, it was deviſed to put both theſe writs into one, and ſo attach the defendant upon a fiction that he was not in the county of Middleſex, but lurking elſewhere; and that therefore he was to be apprehended by the ſheriff of the county where he was ſuſpected to be, and lie hid.

It is called a teſtatum writ, iſſuing out of B. R. grounded upon a bill of Middleſex, ſuppoſed to be ſued out before, and returned Non eſt inventus: And a latitat out of the King's Bench is in nature of the original writ Clauſum fregit, on which the practice is in the Common Pleas. 2 Lil. Abr. 147. A latitat cannot iſſue into the county of Middleſex, except the court remove out of Middleſex into another county, for in the county where the court of B. R. is, the proceſs muſt be by bill, and out of the county by latitat. Ibid. If the writ of latitat is iſſued during the vacation, it muſt be as of the laſt day of the term preceeding: A note is to be made of it on paper for the officer, and the latitat being filled up, is to be carried with the note to the King's Bench Office, and there the writ is ſigned; from whence it is carried to the Seal-Office, where it is ſealed, if bailable; affidavit of the debt muſt be made, an acetiam introduced into the body of the writ, the ſum ſworn to indorſed on the back, previous to the ſigning and ſealing of the writ, after which, a warrant is to be procured from the ſheriff of the county to execute the writ.

Latro, (latrocinium) He who had the ſole juriſdiction de latrone in a particular place: It is mentioned in Leg. Wil. 1. See Infangthef.

Lavatorium, A laundry, or place to waſh in, applied to ſuch a place in the porch or entrance of cathedral churches, where the prieſt and other officiating members were obliged to waſh their hands before they proceeded to divine ſervice: And in the ſtatutes of St. Paul's church in London, it was ordained, ut ſacriſta lavatorium in veſtibulo per ſervientes frequenter mundari faciat. Liber Statut. Laund or Lawnd, (landa) An open field, without wood. Blount.

Laurels, pieces of gold coined in the year 1619, with the King's head laureated, which gave them the name of laurels; the twenty-ſhilling pieces whereof were marked with XX. The ten-ſhillings X. and the five-ſhilling piece with V. Camd. Annal. Jac. 1. MS.

Law, (In Sax. lag, Lat. lex, from lego or legendo, chooſing, or rather à ligando, binding) Is the rule and bond of men's actions: Or it is a rule for the well governing of civil ſociety, to give to every man that which doth belong to him. According to Bracton, Lex eſt ſanctio juſta, jubens honeſta et probibens contraria: And the ſchoolman ſays, Lex humana eſt quoddam dictamen rationis, quo diriguntur humani actus. The law is rectum, as it diſcovers that which is crooked or wrong; and theſe three qualities are incident to the law, viz. It muſt be juſta, jubens honeſta, probibens contraria: And juſta requires five properties; poſſibilis, neceſſaria, conveniens, manifeſta, nullo privata commodo. 2 Inſt. 56, 587.

Laws are arbitrary or poſitive, and natural; the laſt of which are eſſentially juſt and good, and bind every where and in all places where they are obſerved: Arbitrary laws are either concerning ſuch matter as is in itſelf morally indifferent, in which caſe both the law and the matter, and ſubject of it is likewiſe indifferent, or concerning the natural law itſelf, and the regulating thereof; and all arbitrary laws are founded in convenience, and depend upon the authority of the legiſlative power which appoints and makes them, and are for maintaining public order: Thoſe which are natural laws, are from God; but thoſe which are arbitrary, are properly human and poſitive inſtitutions. Selden on Forteſcue, cap. 17.

The learned Selden tells us, that the laws of any country began, when there firſt began to be a ſtate in the land: And that we may conſider the world as one univerſal ſociety, and then that law by which nations were governed, is called jus gentium; if we conſider the world as made up of particular nations, the law which regulates the public order and right of them, is termed jus publicum; and that law which determines the private rights of men, is called jus civile. Ibid. See Monteſquieu on this ſubject.

No law can oblige a people without their conſent; this conſent is either verbis or factis, i. e. it is expreſſed by writing or implied by deeds and actions; and where a law is grounded on an implied aſſent, rebus & factis, it is either Common law, or cuſtom; if it is univerſal, it is Common law; and if particular to this or that place, then it is cuſtom. 3 Salk. 112.

The law in this land hath been variable; the Roman laws were in uſe anciently in Britain, when the Romans had ſeveral colonies here, each of which was governed by the Roman laws: Afterwards we had the laws called merchenlage, Weſt Saxonlage and Danelage; all reduced into a body, and made one by King Edw. Confeſſ. Magna Charta, cap. 1. & 14. Camd. Britan 94.

At preſent the laws of England are divided into three parts: 1. The Common law which is the moſt ancient and general law of the realm, and common to the whole kingdom, being appropriate thereto, and having no dependance upon any foreign law whatſoever.

2. Statutes or acts of parliament, made and paſſed by the King, lords, and commons in parliament; being a reſerve for the government to provide againſt new miſchiefs ariſing through the corruption of the times: And by this the Common law is amended where defective, for the ſuppreſſion of public evils; though where the Common law and Statute law concur or interfere, the Common law ſhall be preferred.

3. Particular cuſtoms; but they muſt be particular, for a general cuſtom is part of the Common law of the land. Co. Lit. 15, 115.

There is another diviſion of our laws; more large and particular: as into the prerogative or crown law; the law and cuſtom of parliament; the common law; the ſtatute law; reaſonable cuſtoms; the law of arms, war and chivalry; eccleſiaſtical or canon laws; civil law, in certain courts and caſes; foreſt law; the law of marque and repriſal, the law of merchants; the law and privilege of the Stannaries, &c. But this large diviſion may be reduced to the common diviſion; and all is founded on the law of nature and reaſon, and the revealed law of God, as all other laws ought to be. 1 Inſt. 11. The law of nature is that which God at man's creation infuſed into him, for his preſervation and direction; and this is lex æterna, and may not be changed: and no laws ſhall be made or kept, that are expreſly againſt the law of God, written in his Scripture; as to forbid what he commandeth, &c. 2 Shep. Abr. 356.

As to the law of nature, it is generally the law of all places, perſons and times, without alteration; and has the ſame force all the world over: but it is limitable, as circumſtances require; and limited law of nature, is the law now uſed in every ſtate.

All laws derive their force a lege naturæ; and thoſe which do not, are accounted as no laws. Forteſcue. No law will make a conſtruction to do wrong; and there are ſome things which the law favours, and ſome it diſlikes; it favoureth thoſe things that come from the order of nature. 1 Inſt. 183, 197. Alſo our law hath much more reſpect to life, liberty, freehold, inheritance, matters of record, and of ſubſtance; than to chattels, things in the perſonalty, matters not of record, or circumſtances. Ibid. 137. 4 Rep. 124. The uſe of the law is to ſecure the property of what we enjoy; and the objects of it concern perſons, their eſtates, crimes and miſdemeanors, courts of juſtice, &c.

Law, in its moſt general and comprehenſive ſenſe, as defined by Mr. Juſtice Blackſtone, in his Commentaries, 1 V. 38. is "a rule of action; and is applied indiſcriminately to all kinds of action, whether animate or inanimate, rational or irrational." And it is that "rule of action, which is preſcribed by ſome ſuperior, and which the inferior is bound to obey."

See Common Law, and Black. Com. 1 V. 38, &c.

Law hath alſo a ſpecial ſignification, wherein it is taken for that which is lawful with us, and not elſewhere; as tenant by the Curteſy of England, is called tenant by the law of England.

Law of Arms, (lex armorum) Is that law which gives precepts how to proclaim war, make and obſerve leagues and treaties, to aſſault and encounter an enemy, and puniſh offenders in the camp, &c. The law and judgment of arms are neceſſary between two ſtrange princes of equal power, who have no other method of determining their controverſies, becauſe they have no ſuperior or ordinary judge, but are ſupreme and public perſons; and by the law of arms, Kings obtain their rights, rebels are reduced to obedience, and peace is eſtabliſhed: but when the law of arms and war do rule, the civil laws are of little or no force. Treat. Laws 57.

It is a kind of law among all nations, that in caſe of a ſolemn war, the prince that conquers gains a right of dominion, as well as property over the things and perſons he has ſubdued; and it is for this reaſon, becauſe both parties have appealed to the higheſt tribunal that can be, viz. the trial by arms and war; wherein the Great judge and Sovereign of the world, in a more eſpecial manner, ſeems to decide the controverſy. Hale's Hiſt. L. 73, 74.

Common things concerning arms and war, are under the cogniſance of the conſtable and Marſhal of England. 13 R. 2.

Law-Books. All books written in the law are either hiſtorical, as the Year-Books; explanatory, ſuch as Standford's Treatiſe of the Royal Prerogative; miſcellaneous, as the Abridgments of the Law; monological, being on one certain ſubject, ſuch as Lambard's Juſtice of Peace, &c. Fullbeck's Paralell, cap. 3. And our books of Reports have ſuch great weight with the judges, that many of them are as highly valued as the Reſponſa Prudentum among the Romans, which were authoritative. Wood's Inſt. 10. Authors of Law-Books. Vide Common Law.

Law-Day, (lagedayum) Called alſo view of frankpledge, or court-leet, was any day of open court; and commonly uſed for the courts of a county or hundred. Et quietæ ſint de ſectis comitatum & hundredorum noſtrorum de viſu franci plegii & lawdayorum, &c. Chart. 39 Hen. 3.

Lawing of Dogs, Is the cutting off ſeveral claws of the fore-feet of dogs in the foreſt. Chart. Foreſt. c. 6. See Expeditate, and Black. Com. 3 V. 72.

Lawleſs-Court, Is a court held on Kingſhill at Rochford in Eſſex, on Wedneſday morning next after Michaelmas day yearly, at cock-crowing; at which court, they whiſper, and have no candle, nor any pen and ink, but a coal: and he that owes ſuit or ſervice there, and appears not, forfeits double his rent: this court is mentioned by Camden, who ſays, that this ſervile attendance was impoſed on the tenants, for conſpiring at the like unſeaſonable time to raiſe a commotion. Camd. Britan 441. It belongs to the honour of Raleigh, and is called lawleſs, becauſe held at an unlawful hour; or quia dicta ſine lege. The title of it is in rhime, and in the court-roll runs thus:

Kingſhill in Rochford. } ſſ.

Lawleſs Man, (exlex) is an outlaw. Pro exlege tenebitur, cum principi non obediat nec legi, et tunc utlagabitur ſicut ille qui eſt extra legem, ſicut lawleſs man. Bract. lib. 3. c. 11.

Law of Marque, (from the Germ. march, i. e. limes) Is where they that are driven to it, do take the ſhipping and goods of that people of whom they have received wrong, and cannot get ordinary juſtice in another territory, when they can take them within their own bounds and precincts. Stat. 27 Ed. 3. c. 17.

Law Merchant, (lex mercatoria) Is a ſpecial law differing from the common law of England, proper to merchants, and part of the law of the realm. And the charta mercatoria, 31 Ed. 1. grants this perpetual privilege to merchants, coming into this kingdom: quod omnes balivi, miniſtri feriarum, civitatum, burgorum et villarum mercatoriarum mercatoribus antedictus comparentibus coram eis celerem juſtitiam faciant de die in diem ſine delatione; ſecundum legem mercatoriam, de univerſis et ſingulis qua per eandem legem poterunt terminari. Sce 13 Ed. 1. and 27 Ed. 3. c. 8. Law Spiritual, (lex ſpiritualis) Is the Eccleſiaſtical law, allowed by our laws where it is not againſt the Common law, nor the ſtatutes and cuſtoms of the kingdom: and regularly, according to ſuch Eccleſiaſtical or Spiritual laws, the Biſhops and other Eccleſiaſtical judges proceed in cauſes within their cogniſance. Co. Lit. 344. It was alſo called Law Chriſtian; and, in oppoſition to it, the Common law was often called Lex Terrena, &c.

Law of the Staple, (mentioned in Stat. 27 Ed. 2. ſtat. 2. cap. 22.) Is the ſame with law merchant. See 4 Inſt. 237, 238. and Staple.

Lawyer, (legiſta, legiſperitus, juriſconſultus) By the Saxons called labman, is a counſellor, or one learned in the law. And lawyers, ſuch as counſellors, attornies &c. are within the act 3 Jac. 1. c. 7. againſt extortion; but it has been held only to extend to officers. 2 Keb. 548.

Lay-Corporations, Are of two ſorts, civil and eleemoſynary. The civil are ſuch as are erected for a variety of temporal purpoſes. The eleemoſynary ſort are ſuch as are conſtituted for the perpetual diſtribution of the free alms, or bounty, of the founder of them to ſuch perſons as he hath directed See *Black. Lay inveſtiture of Biſhops. Election was, in very early times, the uſual mode of elevation to the epiſcopal chair throughout all Chriſtendom; and this was promiſcuouſly performed by the laity as well as the clergy: till at length, it becoming tumultuous, the emperors and other ſovereigns of the reſpective kingdoms of Europe took the appointment in ſome degree into their own hands; by reſerving to themſelves the right of confirming theſe elections, and of granting inveſtiture of the temporalties, which now began almoſt univerſally to be annexed to this ſpiritual dignity; without which confirmation and inveſtiture, the elected biſhops could neither be conſecrated nor receive any ſecular profits. This right was acknowledged in the Emperor Charlemagne, A D. 773, by Pope Hadrian I. and the council of Lateran, and univerſally exerciſed by other chriſtian princes: but the policy of the court of Rome at the ſame time began by degrees to exclude the laity from any ſhare in theſe elections, to confine them wholly to the clergy, which at length was completely effected; the mere form of election appearing to the people to be a thing of little conſequence, while the crown was in poſſeſſion of an abſolute negative, which was almoſt equivalent to a direct right of nomination. Hence the right of appointing to biſhopricks is ſaid to have been in the crown of England (as well as other kingdoms in Europe) even in the Saxon times; becauſe the rights of confirmation and inveſtiture were in effect (tho' not in form) a right of complete donation. But when, by length of time, the cuſtom of making elections by the clergy only was fully eſtabliſhed, the Popes began to except to the uſual method of granting thoſe inveſtitures, which was per annulum et baculum, by the prince's delivering to the prelate a ring, and paſtoral ſtaff or croſier; pretending, that this was an enchroachment on the church's authority, and an attempt by theſe ſymbols to confer a ſpiritual juriſdiction: and Pope Gregory VII. towards the cloſe of the eleventh century, publiſhed a bull of excommunication againſt all princes who ſhould dare to confer inveſtitures, and all prelates who ſhould venture to receive them. This was a bold ſtep towards effecting the plan then adopted by the Roman ſee, of rendering the clergy entirely independent of the civil authority: and long and eager were the conteſts occaſioned by this papal claim. But at length, when the Emperor Henry V. agreed to remove all ſuſpicion of encroachment on the ſpiritual character, by conferring inveſtitures for the future per ſceptrum, and not per annulum et baculum; and when the Kings of England and France conſented alſo to alter the form in their kingdoms, and receive only homage from the biſhops for their temporalties, inſtead of inveſting them by the ring and croſier; the court of Rome found it prudent to ſuſpend for a while it's other pretenſions.

This conceſſion was obtained from King Henry the firſt in England, by means of that obſtinate and arrogant prelate, archbiſhop Anſlem: but King John (about a century afterwards) in order to obtain the protection of the Pope againſt his diſcontented barons, was alſo prevailed upon to give up by a charter, to all the monaſteries and cathedrals in the kingdom, the free right of electing their prelates, whether abbots or biſhops: reſerving only to the crown the cuſtody of the temporalties during the vacancy; the form of granting a licence to elect, (which is the original of our congé d'eſlire) on refuſal whereof the electors might proceed without it; and the right of approbation afterwards, which was not to be denied without a reaſonable and lawful cauſe. This grant was expreſly recognized and confirmed in King John's magna charta, and was again eſtabliſhed by ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 6. ſect. 3.

But by ſtat. 25 H. 8. c. 20. the ancient right of nomination was, in effect, reſtored to the crown. See Black. Com. 1 V. 378, &c. the ſeveral authorities there cited, and the ſtatute of Hen. 8.

Lay-Fee, (feodum laicum) Lands held in fee of a lay-lord, by the common ſervices to which military tenure was ſubject; as diſtinguiſhed from the eccleſiaſtical holding in frankalmoign, diſcharged from thoſe burdens. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Layman, Is one that is not of the clergy; and the Latin word laicus ſignifies as much as populus, that which is common to the people, or belongs to the laity. Lit. Dict.

Lazarets. Places where quarentine is to be performed, by perſons coming from infected countries. Eſcaping from them felony, without benefit of clergy. See 1 Jac. 1. c. 31. 26 Geo. 2. c. 6. 29 Geo. 2. c. 8.

Lazzi. The Saxons divided the people of the land into three ranks: the firſt they called edhilingi, which were ſuch as are now nobility: the ſecond were termed frilingi, from friling, ſignifying that he was born a freeman, or of parents not ſubject to any ſervitude, which are the preſent gentry: and the third and laſt were called lazzi, as born to labour, and being of a more ſervile ſtate than our ſervants, becauſe they could not depart from their ſervice without the leave of the lord; but were fixed to the land where born, and in the nature of ſlaves: hence the word lazzi, or lazy, ſignifies thoſe of a ſervile condition. Nithardus de Saxonibus. lib. 24.

Leaſe, (from locatio, letting, or rather dimiſſio, from the Fr. laiſſer, i. e. dimittere to depart with) Is a demiſe or letting of lands, tenements or hereditaments to another for term of life, years, or at will, for a rent reſerved. Co. Lit. 43. Leaſes are either in writing, or by word of mouth, when they are called leaſes parol; and it is ſaid not to be material whether any rent is reſerved upon a leaſe for life, or years, except in the caſe of leaſes by tenant in tail, &c. according to the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 28.

A leaſe for life requires livery of ſeiſin; and generally, to the making of a good leaſe, ſeveral things neceſſarily concur; there muſt be a leſſor, not reſtrained from making a leaſe; a leſſee not diſabled to receive; a thing demiſed which is demiſable, and a ſufficient deſcription of the thing demiſed, &c. If it be for years, it muſt have a certain commencement and determination, it is to have all the uſual ceremonies, as ſealing, delivery, &c. and there muſt be an acceptance of the thing demiſed. Lit. 56. 1 Inſt. 46. Plowd. 273, 523.

A demiſe having no certain commencement is void: for every contract ſufficient to make a leaſe, ought to have certainty in commencement, in the continuance, and in the end. Vaugh. 85. 6 Rep. 35. A leaſe at will is at the will of the leſſor or leſſee; or regularly at the will of both parties. 1 Inſt. 55.

All eſtates, intereſts of freehold, or terms for years in lands, &c. not put in writing, and ſigned by the parties, ſhall have no greater effect than as eſtates at will; unleſs it be of leaſes not exceeding three years from the making, wherein the rent reſerved ſhall be two thirds of the value of the thing demiſed. Stat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. Leaſes exceeding three years muſt be made in writing, and if the ſubſtance of a leaſe be put in writing, and ſigned by the parties, though it be not ſealed, it ſhall have the effect of a leaſe for years, &c. Wood's Inſt. 266. Articles with covenants to let and make a leaſe of lands, for a certain term, at ſo much rent, hath been adjudged a leaſe. Cro. Eliz. 486. In a covenant with the words have, poſſeſs and occupy lands, in conſideration of a yearly rent, without the word demiſe; it was held a good leaſe: and a licence to occupy, take the profits, &c. which paſſeth an intereſt amounts to a leaſe. 3 Bulſt. 204. 3 Salk. 223. An agreement of the parties, that the leſſee ſhall enjoy the lands, will make a leaſe; but if the agreement hath a reference to the leaſe to be made, and implies an intent not to be perfected till then; it is not a perfect leaſe until made afterwards. Bridge 13. 2 Shep. Abr. 374. If a man, on promiſe of a leaſe to be made to him, lays out money on the premiſſes, he ſhall oblige the leſſor afterwards to make the leaſe; the agreement being executed on the leſſee's part: where no ſuch expence hath been, a bare promiſe of the leaſe for a term of years, tho' the leſſee have poſſeſſion, ſhall not be good without ſome writing. Preced. Can. 561. A perſon ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee-ſimple, in his own right, of any lands or tenements, may make a leaſe of it for what lives or years he will; and he that is ſeiſed of an eſtate tail in lands, may make a leaſe of it for his own life, but no longer; except it be by fine or recovery, or leaſe warranted by the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. And if tenant in tail, or for life, make a leaſe generally, it ſhall be conſtrued for his own life. 1 Inſt. 42.

He that is ſeiſed of an eſtate for life, may make a leaſe for his life according as he is ſeiſed; alſo he may make a leaſe for years of the eſtate, and it ſhall be good as long as the eſtate for life doth laſt: one poſſeſſed of lands for years, may make a leaſe of all the years, except one day, or any ſhort part of the term; it is to be granted for a leſs term than the maker hath in the lands; for if all the eſtate is granted, it is an aſſignment: and if leſſee for years makes a leaſe for life, the leſſee may enjoy it for the leſſor's life, if the term of years laſts ſo long; but if he gives livery and ſeiſin upon it, this is a forfeiture of the eſtate for years. Wood's Inſt. 267. Jointenants, tenants in common, and coparceners, may make leaſes for life, years, or at will, of their own parts, and ſhall bind their companions: and in ſome caſes, perſons who are not ſeiſed of lands in fee, &c. may make leaſes for life or years, by ſpecial power enabling them to do it, when the authority muſt be exactly purſued. Ibid. But there is a difference, where there is a general power to make leaſes, and a particular power. 8 Rep. 69.

A leaſe for life cannot be made to commence in futuro, by the Common law; becauſe livery cannot be made to a future eſtate: though where a leaſe is made for life, habendum at a day to come, and after the day, the leſſor makes livery, there it ſhall be good; and a leaſe in reverſion may be made for life, which commences at a day that is future. 5 Rep. 94. Hob. 314. 1 Inſt. 5. A leaſe for years may begin from a day paſt, or to come, at Michaelmas laſt, Chriſtmas next, three or four years after, or after the death of the leſſor, &c. Tho' a term cannot commence upon a contingency, which depends on another contingency. 1 Inſt. 5. 1 Rep. 156. If one make a leaſe for years; after the death of A. B. if he die within ten years; this is a good leaſe, in caſe he dies within that time, otherwiſe not. Plowd. 70. And where a man has a leaſe of lands for eighty years, and he grants it to another to hold for thirty years, to begin after his death; it will be good for the whole thirty years, provided there be ſo many of the eighty to come at the time of the death of the leſſor. Bro. Grant, 54. 1 Rep. 155. A leaſe made from the leſſor's death, until anno Domini 1780 is good: and if a leaſe be during the minority of J. S. or until he ſhall come to the age of twenty-one years; theſe are good leaſes; and if he dies before his full age, the leaſe is ended. Hob. 174. A perſon grants a rent of 20*l.* a year, till an hundred pounds be paid, it is a leaſe of the rent for five years. Co. Lit. 42. If a man makes a leaſe of land to another, until he ſhall levy out of the profits one hundred pounds, or he is paid that ſum, &c. This will be a leaſe for life, determinable on the payment of the hundred pounds, if livery and ſeiſin be made: but if there is no livery, it will not be good for years, but void for incertainty. 21 Aſſiſ. 18. Plowd. 27. 6 Rep. 35.

A leaſe for years to ſuch perſon as A. B. ſhall name, is not good: though it may be for ſo many years, as he ſhall name; not as ſhall be named by his executors, &c. for it muſt be in the life-time of the parties. Hob. 173. Moor, caſ. 911. And if a man makes a leaſe to another for ſo many years as a third perſon ſhall name, when the years are named by ſuch perſon, it is good for ſo many years. 1 Inſt. 45. So if a perſon lets his lands for as many years as he hath in the manor of D. and he hath then a term for ten years, this is a good leaſe for ten years; and in the like caſes, by referring to a certainty, it may be made good and certain. Ibid. A leaſe may be made for life or years, of any thing that lies in livery or grant; but leaſes for years ought to be made of ſuch lands, &c. whereunto the leſſor may come to diſtrain; not of incorporeal inheritances. 1 Inſt. 47. And they may be for the term of one thouſand years, or any number of years, months or weeks; or be from week to week, &c. for one, two or three years, and be good for thoſe years: and a tenant for half a year, or a quarter of a year, is tenant for years. 1 Inſt. 6. If one makes a leaſe for a year, and ſo from year to year, it is a leaſe for two years; and afterwards it is but an eſtate at will. 1 Mod. 4. 1 Lutw. 213. And if from three years to three years, it is a good leaſe for ſix years: alſo if a man make a leaſe for years, without ſaying for how many, it may be good for two years, to anſwer the plural number. Wood's Inſt. 265.

A leſſee hath a term for a year by parol, and ſo from year to year, ſo long as both parties pleaſe; if the leſſee enters on a ſecond year, he is bound for that year, and ſo on: and if there is a leaſe by deed for a year, and ſo from year to year as long as both parties agree, this is binding but for one year, though if the leſſee enters upon the ſecond year, he is for that year bound: if it is for a year, and ſo from year to year, ſo long as both parties agree till ſix years expire; this is a leaſe for ſix years, but determinable every year at the will of either party: but if it is for a year, and ſo from year to year till ſix years determine, this is a certain leaſe for ſix years; adjudged by Holt Chief Juſtice. Mod. Ca. 215. If A. make a leaſe of land to B. for ten years; and it is agreed between them, that he ſhall pay fifty pounds at the end of the ſaid term, and if he do ſo, and pay fifty pounds at the end of every ten years; then the ſaid B. ſhall have a perpetual demiſe and grant of the lands, from ten years to ten years continually following, extra memoriam hominum, &c. Though this be a good leaſe for the firſt ten years, as for all the reſt, it is incertain and void: By covenant a further leaſe may be made for the like term of years. Plowd. 192. 2 Shep. Abr. 376.

A parſon makes a leaſe of his glebe for ſo many years as he ſhall be parſon, this cannot be made certain; but if he makes a leaſe for three years, and ſo from three years to three years, ſo long as he ſhall be parſon, it is a good leaſe for ſix years, if he continue parſon ſo long. 6 Rep. 35. 3 Cro. 511. And if one make a leaſe for twenty-one years, if the leſſee ſhall ſo long live; this a good leaſe for years, and a certainty in an uncertainty. 1 Inſt. 46. A leaſe made to a man for ſeven years, if D. ſhall live ſo long, who is dead when the leaſe is made; by this the leſſee hath an abſolute leaſe for ſeven years. 9 Rep. 63. Leaſe for life is granted, and ſays that if the leſſee within one year do not pay 20*s.* then he ſhall have but a leaſe for two years; here, if he pays not the money, he ſhall have only the two years, although livery of ſeiſin be had thereon. 1 Inſt. 218. If a leaſe be made to A. B. during his own life, and the lives of C. and D. it is one entire eſtate of freehold, and ſhall continue during the three lives, and the life of the ſurvivor of them; and tho' the leſſee can have it no longer than his own life, yet his aſſignee ſhall have the benefit of it ſo long as the other two are living. 5 Rep. 13. Moor 32. Where one grants land by leaſe to A. B. and C. D. to hold to them during their lives, although the words and the longeſt liver of them be omitted, they ſhall hold it during the life of the longeſt liver. 5 Rep. 9. A leaſe is made to a perſon for ſixty years, if A. B. and C. D. ſo long live; and afterwards A. B. dies, by his death the leaſe is determined. Though if the leaſe be made to one for the lives of A. B. and C. D. the freehold doth not determine by the death of one of them; and if in the other caſe of a term, the words or either of them be inſerted in the leaſe, it will be good for both their lives. 13 Rep. 66.

A leaſe was made to a man for ninety-nine years, if he ſhould ſo long live; and if he died within the term, the ſon to have it for the reſidue of the term: this was adjudged void as to the ſon, becauſe there can be no limitation of the reſidue of a term which is determined. Cro. Eliz. 216. But if the words of the leaſe be, To hold during the reſidue of the ninety-nine years, and not during the reſt of the term, in this caſe it may be good to the ſon alſo. 1 Rep. 153. Dyer 253. A leaſe was made for twenty-one years, if the leſſee lived ſo long, and in the ſervice of the leſſor; the leſſor died within the term, and yet it was held that the leaſe continued, for it was by the act of God that the leſſee could ſerve no longer. Cro. Eliz. 643.

If a leaſe be to a man, and to her whom he ſhall take to wife, it is void; becauſe there ought to be ſuch perſons at the time of the commencement of the leaſe which might take. 4 Leon. 158. When a leaſe in reverſion is granted as ſuch after another leaſe, and that leaſe is void by raſure, &c. the reverſionary leaſe, expectant upon the leaſe for years that is void, is void alſo. Cro. Car. 289. But where a man recites a leaſe, when in truth there is no leaſe; or a leaſe which is void, and miſrecites the ſame in a point material, and grants a further leaſe to commence after the determination thereof; in ſuch caſe the new leaſe ſhall begin from the time of delivery. Dyer 93. 6 Rep. 36. Vaugh. 73, 80, &c. A leaſe that has an impoſſible date for its commencement, is ſaid to be void; and an uncertain limitation makes the leaſe void, becauſe, it being part of the agreement, the court cannot determine what the contract was. 1 Mod. 180. Though it hath been adjudged, where a leaſe bears a date which is impoſſible, the term ſhall begin from the delivery, as if there was no date. 1 Inſt. 40. If a leaſe be to hold from the day of the date, the day itſelf is excluded; otherwiſe the day of delivery is incluſive. 5 Rep. 2.

A man makes a leaſe for years to one, and afterwards makes a leaſe for years to another of the ſame land; the ſecond leaſe is not void; but ſhall be good for ſo many years thereof, as ſhall come after the firſt leaſe ended. Noy's Max. 67. And if one make a leaſe for years, and afterwards the leſſor enters upon the lands let, before the term is expired, and makes a leaſe of theſe lands to another; this ſecond leaſe is a good leaſe until the leſſee doth re-enter; and then the firſt leaſe is revived, and he is in thereby. 2 Lill. Abr. 152. It hath been held, that a leaſe may be void as to one, and ſtand good to another: and leaſes voidable, or void for the preſent, may after become good again. 1 Inſt. 46. 3 Rep. 51 If a leaſe be made to two, to hold to them and two others, it is voidable as to the two other perſons; and when the two firſt die, the leaſe is at an end. 2 Leon. 1. A leaſe which is only void able, and not abſolutely void, muſt be made void by the leſſor by re-entry; but if a leaſe be void abſolutely, there needs no re-entry: And as a voidable leaſe is made void by re-entry, and putting out the leſſee; ſo it is affirmed by accepting and receiving the rent which acknowledges the leſſee to be tenant. 21 Car. B. R. 2 Lil. 149. If a leſſor accepts of rent of an aſſignee of a leaſe, having knowledge of the aſſignment, he may not afterwards charge the leſſee with the rent in action of debt. 3 Rep. 23. And where a leſſee for years accepts of a leſs term from the leſſor, even by word, it is ſaid this is a ſurrender of the term which he had by deed. Style 448.

When a term for years in leaſe, and a fee-ſimple, meet in one perſon, the leaſe is drowned in the inheritance; yet in ſome caſes it may have continuance, to make good charges and payments, &c. Popb. 39. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1100. If a leaſe for years is made to a man and his heirs it ſhall go to his executors. 1 Inſt. 46, 388. And a leaſe for years, notwithſtanding it be a very long leaſe, cannot be intailed; but may be aſſigned in truſt, to ſeveral uſes. 2 Lill. Abr. 150. This means by deed, for by will it may paſs by way of entail. If ſuch a leaſe comes to be limited in tail, the law allows not a preſent remainder to be limited thereupon. Ibid. Leſſee for years, tho' for never ſo great a term, has only a chattel; but tenant for life hath a freehold. 1 Inſt. 6. A leaſe is ſealed by the leſſor, and the leſſee hath not ſealed the counterpart, action of covenant may be brought upon the leaſe againſt the leſſor: but where the leaſe is ſealed by the leſſee, and not the leſſor, nothing operates. Yelv. 18. Owen 100.

A man out of poſſeſſion, cannot make a leaſe of lands, without entering and ſealing the leaſe upon the land. Daliſ. 81. The leſſee is to enter on the premiſſes let; and ſuch leſſee for years is not in poſſeſſion, ſo as to bring treſpaſs, &c. until actual entry; but he may grant over his term before entry, 1 Inſt. 46 2 Lil. 160. A leſſee of a future intereſt never enters by virtue of his term, but enters before, and continues after the commencement of the term; and then the leſſor ouſts him, the leſſee may aſſign over his term off the land. 1 Lev. 47. But a leaſe to begin at Michaelmas, if the leſſee enters before Michaelmas, and continues the poſſeſſion immediately, is a diſſeiſin. Ibid. 46. If a leaſe be made of a cloſe of land, by a certain name, in the pariſh of A. in the county of B. whereas the cloſe is in another county, the ſaid pariſh extending into both counties; ſuch a leaſe is good to paſs ſuch land: though where a houſe is leaſed without a name, and the pariſh is miſtaken; it hath been held otherwiſe. Dyer 276, 292.

Land and mines are leaſed to a tenant; this only extends to the open mines, and the leſſee ſhall not have any others, if there are ſuch: And if land and timber are demiſed, the leſſee is not empowered to ſell it. 2 Lev. 184. 2 Mod. 193. A man makes a leaſe of lands for life, or years, the leſſee hath but a ſpecial intereſt in the timber-trees, as annexed to the land, to have the maſt and ſhadow for his cattle; and when they are ſevered from the lands, or blown down with wind, the leſſor ſhall have them as parcel of his inheritance. 4 Rep. 62. 11 Rep. 81. If an houſe falls down by tempeſt, &c. the leſſee hath an intereſt to take the timber, to re-edify it for his habitation. 4 Rep. 63. And every leſſee for years, &c. may take of timber neceſſary plough-bote, houſe-bote, fire-bote, &c. without doing waſte. 1 Inſt. 41. And tenants ſuffering houſes to be uncovered, or in decay; taking away wainſcot, &c. fixed to the freehold, unleſs put up by the leſſee, and taken down before the term is expired; cutting down timber-trees to ſell; permitting young trees to be deſtroyed by cattle, &c. ploughing up ground that time out of mind hath not been ploughed; not keeping banks in repair, &c. are guilty of waſte. 1 Inſt. 52. Dyer 37. 1 Salk. 368.

Leſſees are bound to repair their tenements, except it be mentioned in the leaſe to the contrary. Though a leſſee for years is not obliged to repair the houſe let to him which is burnt by accident; if there be not a ſpecial covenant in the leaſe, that he ſhall leave the houſe in good repair at the end of the term: yet if the houſe be burnt by negligence, the leſſee ſhall repair it, altho' there be no ſuch covenant. Paſch. 24 Car. B. R. A leſſee at will is not bound to ſuſtain or repair, as tenant for years, is: if the houſe of ſuch a tenant is burnt down by negligence, action lies not againſt the tenant; but action lies for voluntary waſte, in pulling down houſes, or cutting wood, &c. 5 Rep. 13.

By ſtat. 6 & 10 Ann. c. 14. No action ſhall be brought againſt any perſon, in whoſe houſe, any fire ſhall accidentally begin, or any recompence be made by ſuch perſon for damages, ſo as not to extend to, or make void, any agreement between landlord and tenant; and negligent firing of houſes is liable to penalties.

A leſſor who hath fee, cannot reſerve rent to any other but himſelf, his heirs, &c. And if he reſerves a rent to his executors, the rent ſhall be to the heir, as incident to the reverſion of the land. 1 Inſt. 47. The leſſor may take a diſtreſs on the tenements let for the rent; or may have action of debt for the arrears, &c. Alſo land leaſed ſhall be ſubject to thoſe lawful remedies which the leſſor provides for the recovery of his rent, poſſeſſion, &c. into whoſe hands ſoever the land comes. Cro. Jac. 300. And as to the leſſee, if leſſee for years loſes his leaſe, if it can be proved that there was ſuch a term let to him by leaſe, and that is not determined, he ſhall not loſe his term; ſo it is of any other eſtate in lands, if the deed that created it be loſt, for the eſtate in the land is derived from the party that made it, and not from the deed otherwiſe than inſtrumentally and declarative of the mind and intent of the party, &c. 2 Lill. Abr. 152. If a perſon be in poſſeſſion of the lands of another, and hath uſually paid rent for them; the proof of a quarter or half year's rent paid, will be good evidence of a leaſe at will, tho' it cannot be expreſly proved that the lands were demiſed at will to him in poſſeſſion; it ſhall be preſumed the rent was received by the owner of the land upon ſome private contract. Ibid. 151.

Lands are leaſed at will, the leſſee cannot determine his will before or after the day of payment of the rent, but it muſt be done on that very day; and the law will not allow the leſſee to do it to the prejudice of the leſſor, as to the rent; nor that the leſſor ſhall determine his will to the prejudice of the leſſee, after the land is ſown with corn, &c. Sid. 339. Lev. 109. For where leſſee at will ſows the land, if he does not himſelf determine the will, he ſhall have the corn: And where tenant for life ſows the corn, and dies, his executors ſhall have it; but it is not ſo of tenant for years, where the term ends before the corn is ripe, &c. 5 Rep. 116. The leſſor and leſſee, where the eſtate is at will, may determine the will when they pleaſe; but if the leſſor doth it within a quarter, he ſhall loſe that quarter's rent; and if the leſſee doth it, he muſt pay a quarter's rent. 2 Salk. 413. By words ſpoken on the ground by the leſſor in the abſence of the leſſee, the will is not determined; but the leſſee is to have notice. 1 Inſt. 55. If a man makes a leaſe at will, and dies, the will is determined; and if the tenant continues in poſſeſſion, he is tenant at ſufferance. Ibid. 57. But where a leſſor makes an eſtate at will to two or three perſons, and one of them dies; it has been adjudged this doth not determine the eſtate at will. 5 Rep. 10. Tenant at will grants over his eſtate to another, it determines his will. 1 Inſt. 57. No tenant ſhall take leaſes of above two farms, in any town, village, &c. nor hold two unleſs he dwell in the pariſh, under penalties and forfeitures, by Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 13. See 21 H. 8. cap. 13. Statutes, to which there is not any regard now paid.

There is a late ſtatute for the more effectual preventing frauds committed by tenants; and for the more eaſy recovery of rents, and renewal of leaſes; by which chief leaſes of lands may be renewed on ſurrender, without the ſurrendering of the under leaſes, &c. 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. And how leaſes of lands, &c. left uncultivated, may become void, for non-payment of rent, on view of two juſtices of peace, &c. by the late act 11 Geo. 2. cap. 19. See the purport of theſe ſtatutes, under Rent.

Leaſes by Statute. There are three kinds of perſons, who may make leaſes for life or years by ſtatute, that could not do ſo heretofore, viz. Tenants in tail, huſband and wife of the wife's land, and perſons ſeiſed of lands in right of the church. By the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. Tenants in tail are enabled to make leaſes on the following conditions, i. e. They are to be made by deed indented; to begin from the time of making, or ſome ſhort time after, as Michaelmas next, &c. If there be an old leaſe in being, it muſt be abſolutely ſurrendered, or expire within a year after the making of the new; they muſt not exceed three lives or twenty-one years, from the making, or be for both, but may be for leſs terms; they are to be of lands manurable or corporeal, out of which a rent may be legally iſſuing; and of ſuch lands or tenements which have been moſt commonly let to farm by the ſpace of twenty years; the accuſtomed yearly rent, paid within twenty years is to be reſerved; and they are not to be made without impeachment of waſte, &c. It has been held on this ſtatute, that where a new thing is demiſed with lands accuſtomably let, though there be great increaſe of rent, the leaſe is void: but more rent than the accuſtomed rent may be reſerved. 5 Rep. 5. 6 Rep. 37. And the leaſes according to the ſtatute bind the iſſue in tail; but not thoſe in reverſion or remainder: for if tenant in tail makes a leaſe warranted by the ſtatute, and dies without iſſue, the leaſe as to him in reverſion or remainder is void; tho' by a common recovery, leaſes may be made to bind him in remainder, &c. Wood's Inſt. 267.

A guardian during the minority of an infant tenant in tail, who was but one year old, made a leaſe for twenty years; and it was adjudged not good by the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. to bind the iſſue in tail; and it is the ſame in the caſe of tenant in dower, tenant by the curteſy, or huſband ſeiſed in right of his wife, becauſe they have no inheritance. Dyer 271.

The ſtatute impowers a huſband to make leaſes of land in tail, held in his wife's right, ſo as in ſuch leaſes the conditions aforementioned are obſerved, and the wife be made a party to and ſeal the leaſes; and the rent is to be reſerved to the huſband and wife, and her heirs, &c. If a leaſe of the wife's land is not warranted by the ſtatute, it is a good leaſe againſt the huſband, though not againſt the wife: the huſband and wife cannot bind him in reverſion or remainder, 1 Inſt. 362.

Biſhops, Spiritual Perſons, &c. ſeiſed in fee in right of their churches, may make leaſes of their ſpiritual livings for three lives, or one and twenty years, having all the qualities required by the ſtatute, in caſe of leaſes made by tenants in tail. 32 H. 8. c. 28. And leaſes otherwiſe made are to be void; but not againſt the biſhops, &c. making them only againſt their ſucceſſors. 3 Rep. 59.

A biſhop, &c. may make leaſes of lands for twenty one years, or three lives, according to the ſtatute, without confirmation of dean and chapter; and at Common law might make them for any longer time, without limitation, with confirmation of dean and chapter; but this is reſtrained by the ſtatutes 1 Eliz. c. 19. and 13 Eliz. c. 10. Such confirmation will now make good concurrent leaſes for twenty-one years, &c. upon leaſes for years; though a biſhop cannot make a concurrent leaſe for life or lives. Wood's Inſt. 273. If a biſhop have two chapters, as there may be two or more to one biſhoprick; both chapters muſt confirm leaſes made by the biſhop. 1 Inſt. 131. A leaſe by a biſhop made to begin preſently for twenty-one years, when there is an old leaſe in being, is good, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of 1 Eliz. c. 19. Moor, caſ. 241. But if ſuch leaſe is to commence at a day to come, it will be void. 1 Leon. 44. Leaſe for three lives of a biſhop of tithes, is void againſt the ſucceſſor; although the uſual rent be duly reſerved. Moor, caſ. 1078. 2 Cro. 173.

Leaſes of a dean and chapter are good, without confirmation of the biſhop. Dyer 273. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1096. Where there is a chapter, and no dean, they may make grants, &c. and are within the ſtatute, 1 Mod. 204. And a prebendary is ſeiſed in right of the church within the equity of the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 28. 4 Leon. 51. A prebendary's leaſe confirmed by the archbiſhop, who is his patron, is good without confirmation of dean and chapter. 3 Bulſtr. 290. But where a prebendary made a leaſe for years of part of his prebend, and this was confirmed by dean and chapter; becauſe it was not confirmed likewiſe by the biſhop, who was patron and ordinary of the prebend, the leaſe was adjudged void. Dyer 60. If a prebendary hath rectories in two ſeveral dioceſes belonging to his prebend, and his leaſe of them is confirmed by the biſhop, dean and chapter of the dioceſe of which he is prebendary, it is good, though not confirmed by the other. Sid. 75.

A chancellor of a cathedral church may make a leaſe, and it is ſaid it will be good againſt the ſucceſſor, though not confirmed, &c. Ibid. 158. If a parſon or vicar makes a leaſe for life or years, of lands uſually letten, reſerving the cuſtomary rent, &c. it muſt be confirmed by patron and ordinary, for they are out of the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 28. And if the parſon and ordinary make a leaſe for years of the glebe to the patron; and afterwards the patron aſſigns this leaſe to another, ſuch aſſignment is good, and is a confirmation of that leaſe to the aſſignee. 5 Rep. 15. Ancient covenants in former leaſes may be good to bind the ſucceſſor, ſo as to diſcharge the leſſee from payment of penſions, tenths, &c. but of any new matter they ſhall not. 1 Vent. 223.

By the Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 20. the leaſe of a parſon is not good for any longer time than the parſon's reſidence upon his living, without abſence fourſcore days in any year; and an incumbent offending contrary to this act, ſhall loſe a year's profit of the benefice, &c. 4 Rep. A leaſe for years of a ſpiritual perſon, will be void by his death, if it is not according to the ſtatutes; and a leaſe for life is voidable by entry, &c. of the ſucceſſor: And ſo in like caſes, leaſes not warranted by ſtatute, are void or voidable on the deaths of their makers: Acceptance of rent on a void leaſe ſhall not bind the ſucceſſor. 2 Cro. 173.

On college leaſes, a third part of the rent is to be reſerved in corn, &c. 18 Eliz. c. 6. By 14 Eliz. c. 11. it is ordained, that the 13 Eliz. c. 10. ſhall not extend to leaſes of the maſters and fellows of colleges, &c. of houſes in corporation towns, which may be made for forty years, &c. But the 18 Eliz. c. 11. makes void leaſes of maſters and fellows of colleges, deans and chapters, maſters of hoſpitals, &c. where another leaſe for years is in being, and not to be expired or ſurrendered within three years; and leaſes of ſuch perſons are to be made for twenty-one years or three lives, reſerving the accuſtomed rents, &c. Biſhops are out of this ſtatute.

If a biſhop be not biſhop de jure, leaſes made by him to charge the biſhoprick, are void; though all judicial acts by him are good. 2 Cro. 353. And where a biſhop makes a leaſe, which may tend to the diminution of the revenues of the biſhoprick, &c. which ſhould maintain the ſucceſſor; there the deprivation or tranſlation of the biſhop, is all one with his death. 1 Inſt. 329. Alſo all aſſurances and demiſes of biſhops lands to the King, ſhall be void. 1 Jac. 1. c. 3.

Perſons for whoſe lives eſtates are held by leaſe, &c. remaining beyond ſea, or being abſent ſeven years; if no proof be made of their being alive, ſhall be accounted dead. 19 Car. 2. c. 6.

If the aſſignee of a term of years aſſigns it over to a poor inſolvent perſon, on purpoſe to get rid of it, he ſhall not be liable to rent afterwards incurred, for the privity of eſtate is deſtroyed by the legal aſſignment to the inſolvent perſon, and it was the folly of the landlord to diſcharge the original leſſee. 2 Strange 1221.

Leaſes of the King. Leaſes made by the King, of part of the dutchy of Cornwall, are to be for three lives, or thirty-one years, and not be made diſpuniſhable of waſte, whereon the ancient rent is to be reſerved; and eſtates in reverſion, with thoſe in poſſeſſion, are not to exceed three lives, &c. 13 Car. 2. c. 4. All leaſes and grants made by letters patent, or indentures under the Great Seal of England, or ſeal of the court of Exchequer, or by copy of court-roll, according to the cuſtom of the manors of the dutchy of Cornwall, not exceeding one, two or three lives, or ſome term determinable thereon, &c. are confirmed; and covenants, conditions, &c. in leaſes for lives or years, ſhall be good in law, as if the King were ſeiſed in fee-ſimple. Stat. 1 Jac. 2. c. 9. See 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 18. 12 Ann. c. 22. And leaſes from the crown of lands in England and Wales, and under the ſeals of the dutchy of Lancaſter, &c. for one, two or three lives, or terms not exceeding fifty years, are allowed time for inrollment, &c. by 10 Ann. c. 18. Leaſes made by the Prince of Wales of lands, &c. in the dutchy of Cornwall, for three lives or thirty-one years, on which is reſerved the moſt uſual rent paid for the greateſt part of twenty years before, ſhall be good againſt the King, the Prince, and their heirs, &c. and the conditions of ſuch leaſes be as effectual, as if the Prince had been ſeiſed of an abſolute eſtate in fee-ſimple in the lands. Stat. 10 Geo. 2. c. 29.

A freehold leaſe for three lives, differs from a chattel leaſe only in this, viz. That the habendum is to the leſſee, his heirs and aſſigns, for and during the natural lives of him the ſaid C. D. E. his wife, and T. D. his ſon, and during the life natural of every and either of them longeſt living. And in every covenant, the leſſee covenants for himſelf, his heirs and aſſigns; and the covenants are the ſame as in a chattel leaſe; with the addition of a letter of attorney at the end, to deliver poſſeſſion and ſeiſin, as in a deed of feoffment.

Leaſe and Releaſe, Is a conveyance of right or intereſt in lands or tenements, to another that hath the poſſeſſion thereof. Accomp. Conv. 1 V. 129. Though the deed of feoffment was the uſual conveyance at Common law; yet ſince the ſtatute of 27 H. 8. c. 10. of uſes, the conveyance by leaſe and releaſe has taken place of it, and is become a very common aſſurance to paſs lands and tenements; for it amounts to a feoffment, the uſe drawing after it the poſſeſſion without actual entry, &c. and ſupplying the place of livery and ſeiſin, required in that deed: In the making it, a leaſe or bargain and ſale for a year, or ſuch like term, is firſt prepared aad executed; to the intent that by virtue thereof the leſſee may be in actual poſſeſſion of the lands intended to be conveyed by the releaſe, and thereby and by force of the ſtatute 27 H. 8. c. 10. for transferring of uſes into poſſeſſion, be enabled to take and accept a grant of the reverſion and inheritance of the ſaid lands, &c. to the uſe of himſelf and his heirs for ever: upon which the releaſe is accordingly made, reciting the leaſe, and declaring the uſ*es*: And in theſe caſes, a pepper-corn rent in the leaſe for a year is a ſufficient reſervation to raiſe an uſe, to make the leſſee capable of a releaſe. 2 Ven. 35. 2 Mod. 262.

When an eſtate is conveyed by leaſe and releaſe, in the leaſe for a year there muſt be the words, bargain and ſell for money, and five ſhillings or any other ſum, though never paid, is a good conſideration, whereupon the bargainee for a year is immediately in poſſeſſion on the executing of the deed, without actual entry: if only the words demiſe, grant and to farm let are uſed, in that caſe the leſſee cannot accept of a releaſe of the inheritance until he hath actually entered and is in poſſeſſion. 2 Lil. Abr. 435. But where Littleton ſays that if a leaſe is made for years and the leſſor releaſes to the leſſee before entry; ſuch releaſe is void, becauſe the leſſee had only a right, and not the poſſeſſion; and ſuch releaſe ſhall not enure to enlarge the eſtate, without the poſſeſſion: though this is true at Common law, it is not ſo now upon the ſtatute of uſes. 2 Mod. 250, 251. And if a man make a leaſe for life, remainder for life, and the firſt leſſee dieth; on which the leſſor releaſes to him in remainder, before entry; this is a good releaſe to enlarge the eſtate, he having an eſtate in law capable of enlargement by releaſe, before entry had. 1 Inſt. 270.

No perſon can make a bargain and ſale, who hath not poſſeſſion of the lands: but it is not neceſſary to reſerve a rent therein; becauſe the conſideration of money raiſes the uſe. If a leaſe be without any ſuch conſideration, the leſſee hath not any eſtate till entry, nor hath the leſſor any reverſion; and therefore a releaſe will not operate, &c. 1 Inſt. 270, 278. Cro. Jac. 169. 1 Mod. 263. On leaſe at will, a releaſe ſhall be good by reaſon of the privity between the parties: but if a man be only tenant at ſufferance, the releaſe will not enure to him; and as to the perſon who hath the reverſion it is void, for ſuch tenant hath not any poſſeſſion, there being no eſtate in him. Lit. Sect. 461, 462. Cro. Eliz. 21. Dyer 251. It is neceſſary in all caſes where a releaſe of lands is made, that the eſtate be turned to a right; as in a diſſeiſin, &c. where there are two rights, a right of poſſeſſion in the diſſeiſor, and a right to the eſtate in the diſſeiſee; now when the diſſeiſee hath releaſed to the diſſeiſor, here the diſſeiſor hath both the rights in him, viz. The right to the eſtate, and alſo to the poſſeſſion: or elſe it is requiſite that there be privity of eſtate between the tenant in poſſeſſion and the releſſor; for a releaſe will not operate without privity. 2 Lil. 435. A releaſe made by one that at the time of the making thereof had no right, is void; and a releaſe made to one that at the time of making thereof hath nothing in the lands, is alſo void, becauſe he ought to have a freehold, or a poſſeſſion or privity. Noy's Max. 74.

He that makes a releaſe muſt have an eſtate in himſelf, out of which the eſtate may be derived to the releſſee; the releſſee is to have an eſtate in poſſeſſion in deed or in law, in the land whereof the releaſe is made, as a foundation for the releaſe; there muſt be privity of eſtate between the releſſor and releſſee; and be ſufficient words in law not only to make the releaſe, but alſo to create and raiſe a new eſtate, or the releaſe will not be good. 1 Inſt. 22. A releaſe to a man and his heirs will paſs a fee-ſimple; and if made to a man, and the heirs of his body, by this the releſſee hath an eſtate-tail: But a releaſe of a man's right in fee-ſimple, is not ſufficient to paſs a fee-ſimple. 1 Inſt. 273. And if a perſon releaſe to another all his right which he hath in the land, without uſing any more words, as To hold to him and his heirs, &c. the releſſee hath only an eſtate for life. Dyer 263. A releaſe made to a tenant in tail, or for life, of right to land, ſhall extend to him in remainder or reverſion. 1 Inſt. 267. By releaſe of all a man's right unto lands, all actions, entries, titles of dower, rents, &c. are diſcharged; though it bars not a right that ſhall deſcend afterwards: And a releaſe of all right in ſuch land will not diſcharge a judgment not executed; becauſe ſuch judgment doth not veſt any right; but only makes the land liable to execution. 8 Rep. 151. 3 Salk. 298.

It is ſaid a releaſe of all one's title to lands, is a releaſe of all one's right. Lit. 509. 1 Inſt. 292. By a releaſe of all entries, or right of entry, a man hath into lands, without more words, the releſſor is barred of all right or power of entry into thoſe lands; and yet if a man have a double remedy, viz. a right of entry, and an action to recover, and then releaſe all entries, by this he is not barred and excluded his action; nor doth a releaſe of actions bar the right of entry. Plowd. 484. 1 Inſt. 345. A releaſe made by deed-poll, of right to lands, &c. needs no other execution than ſealing and delivery; and will operate without conſideration: But it is convenient to put a valuable conſideration therein; leſt it ſhould be judged fraudulent by ſtatute. Lit. Sect. 445. Lil. Convey. 230, 248. Cro. Jac. 270.

A releaſe that doth not enure by way of paſſing away an eſtate, or extinguiſhment, may be made upon condition or with a defeaſance, ſo as the condition, &c. be contained in the releaſe, or delivered at the ſame time with it; And there may be a recital, covenants, warranty, &c. inſerted in this releaſe; though it is ſaid the deed is good, without any ſuch additions. Accom. Convey. Vol. 1.

In a leaſe and releaſe to make a tenant to the præcipe to ſuffer a recovery, where the releaſe is made to A. B. and his heirs, (viz. the tenant to the præcipe) it muſt be alſo ſaid to the uſe of him the ſaid A. B. and his heirs and aſſigns for ever; for the releſſee muſt be abſolute tenant of the freehold. 2 Vent. 312. Lil. Conveyance 251. And a releaſe made on truſt, muſt be to A. B. his heirs and aſſigns, to the only uſe and behoof of the releſſee his heirs and aſſigns for ever; in truſt for C. D. who is to be a party to the deed, and the purchaſe-money to be paid by the ceſtui que truſt: If the words to the uſe, &c. are not inſerted in the releaſe, the eſtate doth not execute by the ſtatute of uſes, and the truſt is void. Lil. Ibid. 233, 251. A leaſe and releaſe make but one conveyance, being in the nature of one deed. 1 Mod. 252.

It may not be improper here to obſerve, that in a court of equity, either ſuppreſſio veri, or ſuggeſtio falſi, is a good reaſon to ſet aſide any releaſe or conveyance. 1 Wilſ. Rep. 239, 240, 727.

Leather. There are ſeveral ſtatutes relating to leather; as the 27 H. 8. c. 14. directs packers to be appointed for leather to be tranſported; but the 18 Eliz. c. 9. prohibits the ſhipping of leather, on penalty of forfeiture, &c. Though by 20 Car. c. 5. tranſportation of leather is allowed to Scotland, Ireland, or any foreign country, paying a cuſtom or duty; which ſtatute is continued by divers ſubſequent acts. No perſon ſhall ingroſs leather to ſell again, under the penalty of forfeiture: none but tanners are to buy any rough hides of leather, or calve-ſkins in the hair, on pain of forfeiture; and no perſon ſhall foreſtal hides, under the penalty of 6*s.* 8*d.* a hide. Leather not ſufficiently tanned, is to be forfeited. In London, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen are to appoint and ſwear ſearchers of leather, out of the company of ſhoemakers, &c. and alſo triers of ſufficient leather; and the ſame is to be done by mayors, &c. in other towns and corporations; and ſearchers allowing inſufficient leather, incur a forfeiture of 40*s.* Shoemakers making ſhoes of inſufficient leather, are liable to 3*s.* 4*d.* penalty. 1 Jac. 1. c. 22.

Red tanned leather is to be brought into open leather markets, and ſearched and ſealed before expoſed to ſale, or ſhall be forfeited; and contracts for ſale otherwiſe to be void. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 7. Hides of leather are adjudged the ware and manufacture of the currier, and ſubject to ſearch, &c. All perſons dealing in leather, may buy tanned leather ſearched in open market; and any perſon may buy or ſell leather hides or ſkins by weight. 1 W. & M. c. 33. Duties are granted on leather, and entries to be made of tan-yards, under the penalty of 50*l.* and tanners and leather-dreſſers uſing any private tanyards, or concealing ſkins, &c. ſhall forfeit 20*l.* leviable by juſtices of peace, by diſtreſs, &c. 9 Ann. c. 11. Lectrinum, Is taken for a pulpit. Mon. Ang. tom. 3. p. 243.

Lecturer, (Prælector) A reader of lectures; and in London, and other cities, there are lecturers who are aſſiſtants to the rectors of churches in preaching, &c. Theſe lecturers are choſen by the veſtry, or chief inhabitants of the pariſh, and are uſually the afternoon preachers: The law requires, that they ſhould have the conſent of thoſe by whom they are employed, and likewiſe the approbation and admiſſion of the ordinary; and they are, at the time of their admiſſion, to ſubſcribe to the thirty-nine articles of religion, &c. required by the ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 4. They are to be licenſed by the biſhop, as other miniſters, and a man cannot be a lecturer without a licence from the biſhop or archbiſhop; but the power of a biſhop, &c. is only as to the qualification and fitneſs of the perſon, and not as to the right of the lectureſhip; for if a biſhop determine in favour of a lecturer, a prohibition may be granted to try the right. Mich. 12 W. 3. B. R. If lecturers preach in the week days, they muſt read the Common Prayer for the day when they firſt preach, and declare their aſſent to that book; they are likewiſe to do the ſame the firſt lecture day in every month, ſo long as they continue lecturers, or they ſhall be diſabled to preach till they conform to the ſame: And if they preach before ſuch conformity, they may be committed to priſon for three months, by warrant of two juſtices of peace, granted on the certificate of the ordinary. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 4. Rights Clerg. 338.

Where lectures are to be preached or read in any cathedral or collegiate church, if the lecturer openly, at the time aforeſaid, declare his aſſent to all things in the book of Common Prayer, it ſhall be ſufficient; and univerſity ſermons or lectures are excepted out of the act concerning lectures. There are lectures founded by the donations of pious perſons, the lecturers whereof are appointed by the founders; without any interpoſition or conſent of rectors of churches, &c. though with the leave and approbation of the biſhop; ſuch as that of lady Moier at St. Paul's, &c. But ſuch is not intitled to the pulpit without the conſent of the rector, or vicar, in whom the freehold of the church is. Caſes B. R. 420, 433.

Leet, Leta, viſus Franci plegii, Is otherwiſe called a law-day. Smith de Rep. Ang. lib. 2. cap. 18. and ſeems to have grown from the Saxon leo, which (as appears by the laws of King Edward, publiſhed by Lambard, num. 34.) was a court of juriſdiction above the wapentake or hundred. According to others, it is ſaid to be Leta, From the Sax. Lite, i. e. Parvus, quaſi a little court; or from the German, Laet, a country judge.

Many lords, together with their courts-baron, have likewiſe leets adjoined, and thereby enquire of ſuch tranſgreſſions as are ſubject to the enquiry and correction of this court. See Kitchin, and Britton. cap. 28. But this court, in whoſe manor ſoever it be kept, is accounted the King's court, becauſe the authority thereof originally belongs to the crown. Kitchin, fol. 6. Dyer, fol. 64. ſaith, that this leet was firſt derived from the ſheriff's torn. And it enquireth of all offences under high treaſon, committed againſt the crown and dignity of the King, though it cannot puniſh many, but muſt certify them to the juſtices of aſſiſe, by the ſtatute of 1 Ed. 3. cap. ult. but what things are only inquirable, and what puniſhable, ſee Kitchin in the charge of a court-leet, from fol. 8. to fol. 20. Lega & Lacta. Anciently the allay of money was ſo called Debita nummi temperies, quam veteres legam & lactam appellabant. Spelm.

Legabilis, Signifies what is not entailed as hereditary; but may be bequeathed by legacy, in a laſt will and teſtament. Articula propoſit. in parliamento coram Rege, Anno 1234.

Legacy, (legatum) Is a perpetual thing given by a man's laſt will and teſtament; and he to whom ſuch legacy is given, is called a legatee; and there is a reſiduary legatee.

Of legatees, time of payment, and lapſed legacies.

It ſeems neceſſary, that the legatee ſhould be born at the time of making the will; and it has been adjudged, where legacies were given to a man's children, that thoſe who were born afterwards ſhould have no ſhare thereof. 1 Bulſt. 153. But it has been otherwiſe decreed in Chancery. 1 Ch. Rep. 301. A man deviſed 200*l.* apiece to the two children of A. B. at the end of ten years after the death of the teſtator; afterwards the children died within the ten years; and it was held a lapſed legacy: for there is a difference where a deviſe is to take effect at a future time; and where the payment is to be made at a future time; and whenever the time is annexed to the legacy itſelf, and not to the payment of it, if the legatee dies before the time happens, it is a lapſed legacy. 2 Salk. 415. A beqeuſt of money to one at the age of twenty-one, or day of marriage, without ſaying to be paid at that time, and the legatee dies before the term; this is a lapſed legacy: And ſo it is if the deviſe had been to her when ſhe ſhall marry; or when a ſon ſhall come of age, and they die fore. Godb. 182. 2 Vent. 342.

But a deviſe of a ſum of money, to be paid at the day of marriage, or age of twenty-one years; if the legatee die before either of theſe happen, the legatee's adminiſtrator ſhall have it, becauſe the legatee had a preſent intereſt, though the time of payment was not yet come; and it is a charge on the perſonal eſtate which was in being at the teſtator's death; and if it were diſcharged by this accident, then it would be for the benefit of the executor, which was never intended by the teſtator. 2 Vent. 366. 2 Lev. 207. A father bequeathed goods to his ſon, when he ſhould be of the age of twenty-one years, and if he die before that time, then his daughter ſhould have them; afterwards the father died, and then the ſon died before he was of age; adjudged, that the daughter ſhall have the goods given in legacy immediately, and not ſtay till her brother would have been of age, if he had lived. 1 And. 33. And where a legacy was deviſed to an infant, to be paid when he ſhall come of age, and he died before that time; it was ruled that his adminiſtrator ſhould have it preſently, and not ſtay until the infant ſhould have been of age, if he had lived. 1 Leon. 278. In a caſe of this nature, it has been decreed in equity, that although the adminiſtrator ſhould have the legacy, yet he muſt wait for it till ſuch time as the child would have come to twenty-one. 2 Vern. 199.

Of legacies deviſed out of real eſtates, &c.

Where a legacy is to ariſe out of the real eſtate, it ſhall not go to the repreſentative of the legatee; but ſink in the inheritance: And yet where 1000 l. was given by a perſon out of lands, to his daughter, and intereſt to be computed from his death, &c. here, though the legatee died before the time appointed for paying the ſame, it was held the legacy ſhould be raiſed notwithſtanding; and the Lord Chancellor ſaid, that this legacy was a veſted one. 2 Vern. Rep. 617. Barnardiſt. 328, 330. A perſon by will, &c. gives a portion or legacy to a child, payable at twenty-one years of age, out of a real and perſonal eſtate, and the child dies before the legacy becomes payable; in that caſe, ſo much thereof as the perſonal eſtate will pay, ſhall go to the child's executors and adminiſtrators: But ſo far as the legacy is charged upon the land, it is ſaid it ſhall ſink. 2 Peere Williams 613. Alſo if a legacy be given to one, to be paid out of ſuch a fund, and the ſame fails; it has been reſolved, that it ought to be paid out of the perſonal eſtate, and the failing of the manner appointed for payment ſhall not defeat the legacy. 1 Peere Williams 779. One by will diſpoſes of his eſtate in legacies, and afterwards by parol, or word of mouth, gives a bill for a certain ſum, to be delivered over to another, if he the teſtator ſhould die of that ſickneſs; this is adjudged good, but it being in the nature of a legacy, may he deemed fraudulent againſt creditors. Ibid. 405, 406.

Of payment of legacies, &c.

If a legacy when due be paid to the father of an infant, it is no good payment; and the executor may be obliged in equity to pay it over again: And where any legacy is bequeathed to a feme covert, paying it to her alone, is not ſufficient, without her huſband. 1 Vern. 261. As an executor is not obliged to pay a legacy, without ſecurity given him by the legatee to refund, if there are debts, becauſe the legacy is not due till the debts are paid, and a man muſt be juſt before he is charitable; ſo in ſome caſes, the executor may be compelled to give ſecurity to the legatee for the payment of his legacy; as where a teſtator bequeathed 1000*l.* to a perſon, to be paid at the age of twenty-one, and made an executor, and died; afterwards the legatee exhibited a bill in equity againſt the executor, ſetting forth that he had waſted the eſtate, and praying that he might give ſecurity to pay the legacy when it ſhould become due; and it was ordered accordingly. 1 Ch. Rep. 136, 257.

Of intereſt on legacies.

If a legacy is deviſed, and no certain time of payment, and the legatee is an infant, he ſhall have intereſt for the legacy from the expiration of one year after the teſtator's death; for ſo long the executor ſhall have, that he may ſee whether there are any debts, and no laches ſhall be imputed to the infant: But if the legatee be of full age, he ſhall have no intereſt but from the time of the demand of his legacy. Where a legacy is payable at a day certain, it muſt be paid with intereſt from that day. 2 Salk. 415. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1114. A perſon gives a legacy charged upon land, which yields rents and profits, and there is no day of payment mentioned, the legacy ſhall carry intereſt from the teſtator's death, becauſe the land yields profit from that time: Though were it charged on the perſonal eſtate, and the will mentions no time for paying it, there the legacy bears intereſt only from the end of a year, after the death of the teſtator; which is ſaid to be the ſettled difference. 2 Peere Williams 26. It has been decreed in equity, that although a legacy be deviſed to be paid at a certain time, it carries intereſt only from ſuch time as it is demanded: It is otherwiſe of a debt; and in ſuch caſe non-payment at the day, has been held no breach, without demand and refuſal. Preced. Chanc. 161. See Abr. Caſ. Eq. 286. One having a legacy given him, payable within a year, knew nothing of it till a great while afterwards, when the executor publiſhed it in the Gazette; here Chancery would allow no intereſt, but the bare legacy. Preced. Chanc. 11. The aſſent or agreement of the executor is firſt to be obtained before any legacy can be taken; until then the legatee may not meddle with the legacy, becauſe the executor is to pay debts before legacies, &c. Wood's Inſt. 329. And this is the reaſon why no property can be transferred to the legatee, without the executor's aſſent: If the executor refuſes to aſſent to a legacy, he may be obliged to it by a court of equity, or the ſpiritual court. March, Rep. 19.

Of ſuing for legacies.

Legacies being gratuities, and no duties, action will not lie at Common law for the recovery of a legacy; but remedy is to be had in the Chancery or ſpiritual court. Allen 38. The cognizance of a legacy properly belongs to the ſpiritual courts, for ſuch bequeſts were not good by the Common law; but this is to be underſtood, where a legacy is deviſed generally: If it is payable out of the land, or out of the profits of the land, an action on the caſe lies at Common law; but the uſual remedy is in Chancery. Sid. 44. 3 Salk. 223. By Holt Ch. Juſt. A legatee may maintain an action of debt at Common law againſt the owner of land, out of which the legacy is to be paid; and ſince the ſtatute of wills gives him a right, by conſequence he ſhall have an action at law to recover it. 2 Salk. 415. And ſometimes the Common law takes notice of a legacy, not directly, but in a collateral way; as where the executor promiſed to pay the money, if the legatee would forbear to ſue for the legacy, this was adjudged a good conſideration to ground an action; but that it would not lie for a legacy in ſpecie, which would be to deveſt the ſpiritual court of what properly belonged to their juriſdiction, by turning ſuits which might be brought there into actions on the caſe. Raym. 23. If ſecurity is given by bond to pay a legacy, in ſuch caſe an action at law is the proper remedy; by giving the bond, the legacy is as it were extinct, and becomes a debt at Common law, and the legatee can never afterwards ſue for it in the ſpiritual court. Yelv. 39. For the recovery of a debt or ſuch like thing in action, given by way of legacy, it is beſt to make the legatee executor as to that debt, &c. or he muſt have a letter of attorney to ſue in the executor's name. Wood's Inſt. 330.

Of deviſes to creditors, and who capable of being legatees.

Where a teſtator gives his debtee a legacy greater than his debt, it ſhall be taken in ſatisfaction of it: Though where the legacy is leſs, it ſhall not be deemed as any part thereof; but as a legacy is a gift, ſometimes the legatee has been decreed both. 1 Salk. 155. 2 Salk. 508. If a greater legacy is given by a codicil, to the ſame perſon that was legatee in the will, it ſhall not be a ſatisfaction, unleſs ſo expreſſed. 1 Peere Williams 424. The name of a legatee being very falſly ſpelt, it was referred to a maſter in Chancery, to examine who was the perſon intended. Ibid. 425. Some perſons are incapable of taking by legacy, by ſeveral ſtatutes; as the 13 W. 3. c. 6. relating to officers, lawyers, &c. not taking the oaths; and 5 Geo. 1. c. 27. concerning artificers going abroad, &c. A ſum bequeathed out of a debt muſt be paid, though the debt is recovered by the teſtator; otherwiſe of a bequeſt of the debt itſelf. 2 Strange 824. One cannot ſue in the ſpiritual court for a donatio mortis cauſa. 2 Strange 777. See Executor and Wills. New Abr. 3 V. tit. Legacies. And Black. Com. 2 V. 512. 3 V. 98.

Legalis homo, Is uſed for him who ſtands rectus in curia, not outlawed, excommunicated, or infamous; and in this ſenſe are the words probi & legales homines: Hence alſo legality is taken for the condition of ſuch a man. Leg. Ed. Conf. c. 18.

Legatary, (Legatarius) He or ſhe to whom any thing is bequeathed; a legatee. Sir Henry Spelman ſays, it is ſometimes uſed pro legato vel nuncio.

Legate, (Legatus) An ambaſſador or Pope's Nuncio. And there are two ſorts of legates, a legate a latere, and legatus natus; the difference between whom is thus: legatus a latere was uſually one of the Pope's family veſted with the greateſt authority in all eccleſiaſtical affairs over the whole kingdom where he was ſent; and, during the time of his legation, he might determine even thoſe appeals which had been made from thence to Rome: Legatus natus had a more limited juriſdiction, but was exempted from the authority of the legate a latere; and he could exerciſe his juriſdiction in his own province. The Popes of Rome had formerly in England the archbiſhops of Canterbury their legatus natus; and, upon extraordinary occaſions, ſent over legatus a latere.

Legatee, Is the perſon to whom a legacy is bequeathed by a laſt will.

Leswes, or Lelves, Is a word uſed in Domeſday, to ſignify paſtures, as is ſtill uſed in many places of England, and often inſerted in deeds and conveyances. Cowell.

Letare Jeruſalem, Was uſed for the cuſtomary oblations made on Midlent Sunday, when the proper hymn was Lætare Jeruſalem, &c. by the inhabitants within a dioceſe to the mother cathedral church; and theſe voluntary offerings on that day, were by degrees ſettled into an annual compoſition or pecuniary payment, charged on the parochial prieſt, who was preſumed to receive them from the people of his congregation, and obliged to return them to the cathedral church; and this among other burdens was at length thrown on the oppreſſed vicars, as appears by the ordination of the vicarage of Erdele, in the archdeaconry of Huntingdon, anno 1290, where it is provided, Qui quidem vicarius ſolvet ſynodalia, Lætare Jeruſalem, &c. From the aucient cuſtom of proceſſions at that time, began the practice, which is ſtill retained in many parts of England, of Mothering, or going to viſit parents on Midlent Sunday. See Quadrageſimalia,

Letter Miſſive in Chancery. If a peer is a defendant in the court of Chancery, the Lord Chancellor ſends a letter miſſive to him to requeſt his appearance, together with a copy of the bill; if he neglects to appear, then he may be ſerved with a ſubpœna; if he continues ſtill in contempt a ſequeſtration iſſues out immediately againſt his lands and goods, without any of the meſne proceſs of attachments, &c. which are directed only againſt the perſon, therefore cannot affect a lord of parliament. The ſame proceſs iſſues againſt a member of the houſe of commons, except that the Lord Chancellor doth not ſend him any letter miſſive. Black. Com. 3 V. 445.

Letters of Abſolution, (Litera abſolutoriæ) Or abſolvatory letters, were ſuch in former times, when an abbot releaſed any of his brethren ab omni ſubjectione & obedientia, &c. And made them capable of entering into ſome other order of religion. Mon Faverſhamenſi. p. 7.

Letter of Attorney, (Litera Attornati) Is a writing, authoriſing an attorney to do any lawful act in the ſtead of another: As to give ſeiſin of lands; receive debts, or ſue a third perſon, &c. And letters of attorney are either general or ſpecial. Weſt. Symb. par. 1. Stat. 7 R. 2. c. 13. The nature of this inſtrument is to give the attorney the full power and authority of the maker, to accompliſh the act intended to be performed: And ſometimes theſe writings are revokable, and ſometimes not ſo: but when they are revocable, it is uſually a bare authority only; and they are irrevocable when debts, &c. are aſſigned to another, in which caſe the word irrevocable is inſerted.

In caſes of letters of attorney the authority muſt be ſtrictly purſued: If it be to deliver livery and ſeiſin of lands between certain hours, and the attorney doth it before or after; or in a capital meſſuage, and he does it in another part of the land, &c. the act of the attorney to execute the eſtate ſhall be void. Plowd. 475. But notwithſtanding the ancient opinions for purſuing authorities with great ſtrictneſs and exactneſs, yet in caſe of livery and ſeiſin they have been always favourably expounded of later times, unleſs where it hath appeared, that the anthority was not purſued at all; as if a letter of attorney be made to three, two cannot execute it becauſe they are not the parties delegated, and they do not agree with the authority. 2 Mod. Rep. 79. Where the attorney does leſs than the authority mentions, it is void: It is ſaid if he doth more, it may be good for ſo much as he had power to do and void for the reſt; yet both theſe rules have divers exceptions and limitations. vide 1 Inſt. 258. There were two attornies made jointly and ſeverally, to deliver ſeiſin of lands, &c. and one of them delivered ſeiſin of part of the land, and after another attorney being tenant thereof for years, gave livery of the other part of the land: This was held good, though made at ſeveral times. 1 And. 247. And if a man make a deed of feoffment of lands in divers counties, with ſuch a letter of attorney, the livery muſt be at ſeveral times; otherwiſe it cannot be made. Ibid. See 1 Leon. 192, 260.

If a mayor and commonalty make a feoffment of lands, and execute a letter of attorney to deliver ſeiſin; the livery and ſeiſin, after the death of the mayor, will be good, by reaſon the corporation dieth not. 1 Inſt. 52. In other caſes, by the death of the party giving it, the power given by letter of attorney generally determines. A perſon made a letter of attorney to a creditor to receive all his wages and pay due from a ſhip, and afterwards died at ſea; this authority was adjudged to be ſo determined; that all the reſt of the creditors ſhould have a ſhare in his adminiſtration. *Preced. Letter of Licence, Is an inſtrument or writing made by creditors to a man that hath failed in his trade, allowing him longer time for the payment of his debts, and protecting him from arreſts in going about his affairs. Theſe letters of licence give leave to the party to whom granted to reſort freely to his creditors, or any others, and to compound debts, &c. And the creditors ſeverally covenant, that if the debtor ſhall receive any moleſtation or hinderance from any of them, he ſhall be acquitted and diſcharged of his debt againſt ſuch creditor, &c.

Letters of Marque, Are extraordinary repriſals for reparation to merchants taken and deſpoiled by ſtrangers at ſea, grantable by the ſecretaries of ſtate, with the approbation of the King and Council; and uſually in time of war, &c. Lex. Mercat. 173. If a letter of Marque wilfully and knowingly take a ſhip, and goods belonging to another nation, not of that ſtate againſt whom the commiſſion is awarded, but of ſome other in amity, this amounts to a downright piracy. Rol. Abr. 430. See Repriſal.

Letters Patent, (Literæ patentes) Sometimes called letters overt, are writings of the King ſealed with the Great Seal of England, whereby a perſon is enabled to do or enjoy that which otherwiſe he could not; and ſo called, becauſe they are open with the ſeal affixed, and ready to be ſhewn for confirmation of the authority thereby given. 19 H. 7. cap. 7. Sentiments of the antients.

Seneca calls defamatory libels, contumelioſi libelli, and Bracton, carmina famoſa; contumelious libels, and infamous rhimes, which flow from malice; and the Romans would not permit their lives and fame to be ſubject to the injury and ſcandal of poets; for they made an ordinance, that whoſoever ſhould preſume to compoſe any ſuch verſes, were to be puniſhed with death. Treat. of Laws 75.

But in a free ſtate, like that of Great Britain ſuch a law does not, cannot, exiſt.—The moment our legiſlators ſhould be corrupt enough, to give exiſtence to ſuch a law, that moment, liberty would be no more.

Definition of a libel, &c. and againſt whom libels are publiſhed.

It is obſerved in our law, that a libel is the greateſt degree of ſcandal, and does not die like words which may be forgot, an action for which is confined to the perſon; but the cauſe of action for ſcandal in a libel ſurvives. 5 Rep. 125. A libel in a ſtrict ſenſe is a malicious aſperſion of another, expreſſed in printing or writing; and tending either to blacken the memory of one who is dead, or the reputation of one that is alive, and to expoſe him to public hatred, ridicule, or contempt: But, in a larger ſignification, it may be applied to any defamation whatſoever. Ibid. 121. All libels are made againſt private men, or magiſtrates, and public perſons; and thoſe againſt magiſtrates deſerve the greateſt puniſhment: If a libel be made againſt a private man, it may excite the perſon libelled, or his friends, to revenge and break the peace; and if againſt a magiſtrate, it is not only a breach of the peace, but a ſcandal to government, and ſtirs up ſedition. Ibid. It hath been held, that writing a ſeditious libel is not a breach of the peace; and that a member of parliament writing ſuch a libel, is intitled to his privilege from being arreſted for the ſame. Wilſ. par. 2. 159. Tho' a private perſon or magiſtrate be dead at the time of making the libel, yet it is puniſhable; as it tends to a breach of the peace. Hob. 215.

The charge being true, not (in law) a juſtification of a libel, if the party is proſecuted criminally.

With regard to this conſideration, it is far from being a juſtification of a libel, that the contents thereof are true, or that the perſon upon whom made had a bad reputation; ſince the greater appearance there is of truth in any malicious invective, ſo much the more provoking it is. 5 Rep. 125. Moor. 627. It is not material whether the matter be true or falſe, if the proſecution be by information or indictment; but in action on the caſe, one may juſtify that the matter is true. 5 Rep. 125. Hob. 253.

Such is the law. How far it is conſonant to reaſon, we will not attempt to ſay.—The end propoſed, is, to avoid diſturbance, &c. and preſerve the peace.

What the law requires from a ſubject, knowing of a libel &c.

When any man finds a libel, if it be againſt a private perſon, he ought to burn it, or deliver it to a magiſtrate; and where it concerns a magiſtrate, he ſhould deliver it preſently to a magiſtrate. Ibid. If a libel be found in a houſe, the maſter cannot be puniſhed for framing, printing and publiſhing it; but it is ſaid he may be indicted for having it, and not delivering it to a magiſtrate. 1 Vent. 31.

Of puniſhment for printing and publiſhing, &c. of libels.

If a printer print a libel againſt a private perſon, he may be indicted and puniſhed for it; and ſo may he who prints a libel againſt a magiſtrate, and much more one who does it againſt the King and ſtate: Nor can a perſon in ſuch a caſe excuſe himſelf by ſaying they were dying ſpeeches, or the words of dying men; for a man may at his death juſtify his villainy; and he who publiſhes it is puniſhable: And it is no excuſe for the printing or publiſhing a libel, to ſay that he did it in the way of trade, or to maintain his family. State Trials, 1 Vol. 982, 986.

Alſo if bookſellers, &c. publiſh or ſell libels, though they know not the contents of them, they are puniſhable, It has been reſolved, that where perſons write, print, or ſell, any pamphlets, ſcandalizing the public, or any private perſons, ſuch libellous books may be ſeized, and the perſons puniſhed by law; and all perſons expoſing any books to ſale, reflecting on the government, may be puniſhed: Alſo writers of news, (though not ſcandalous, ſeditious, or reflecting on the government, if they write falſe news,) are indictable. State Trials, 2 Vol. 477.

One was indicted for a libel in ſcandalizing the King's witneſſes, and reflecting on the juſtice of the nation, and had judgment of the pillory and fine. Ibid. 3 Vol. 50. A perſon for libelling the Lord Chancellor Bacon, affirming that he had done injuſtice, and other ſcandalous matter, was ſentenced to pay 1000 l. fine, to ride on a horſe with his face to the tail from the Fleet to Weſtminſter, with his fault written on his head, to acknowledge his offence in all the courts at Weſtminſter, ſtand in the pillory, and that one of his ears ſhould be cut off at Weſtminſter, and the other in Cheapſide, and to ſuffer impriſonment during life.

Poph. 135. One who exhibited a libel againſt a Lord Chief Juſtice, directed to the King, calling the Chief Juſtice, traitor, perjured judge, &c. had judment to ſtand in the pillory, was fined 1000 marks, and bound to good behaviour during life. Cro. Car. 125.

The liberty of the preſs is one of the greateſt privileges ſubjects can enjoy in a free ſtate. It is hoped the people of this country will never be deprived of that ineſtimable privilege: But it is with great regret the editor muſt acknowledge, that the public prints of late years have teemed with the moſt ſcandalous libels, many of them reflecting on the beſt and moſt reſpectable perſonages in the ſtate; and he does moſt ſincerely wiſh every one whoſe character is impeached by ſuch infamous publications, would proſecute the publiſhers, unleſs the authors are given up, with the utmoſt ſeverity of the law. It would be the moſt likely means of preſerving the liberty of the preſs: Whereas the ſhameful publications alluded to, may probably tempt thoſe in power to abridge the privilege.

Of petitions to the throne, parliament, &c.

The petition of the Seven Biſhops in the reign of King James 2. againſt the King's declaration, ſetting forth that it was founded on a diſpenſing power, which had been declared illegal in parliament, &c. was called a ſeditious libel againſt the King; and they refuſing to give recogniſances to appear in B. R. were committed to the Tower; but being after tried at bar, were acquitted. 3 Mod. 212. The printing of a petition to a committee of parliament, (which would be a libel againſt the party complained of, were it made for any other purpoſe) and delivering copies thereof to the members of the committee, is not the publication of a libel, being juſtified by the order and courſe of proceedings in parliament. 1 Haw. P. C. 196.

Of libellous matter in legal proceedings.

Scandalous matter in legal proceedings by bill, petition, &c. in a court of juſtice amounts not to a libel, if the court hath juriſdiction of the cauſe. Dyer 285. 4 Rep. 14. But he who delivers a paper full of reflections on any perſon, in nature of a petition to a committee, to any other perſons except the members of parliament who have to do with it, may be puniſhed as the publiſher of a libel. 1 Hawk. 196. And by the better opinion, a perſon cannot juſtify the printing any papers which import a crime in another, to inſtruct counſel, &c. but it will be a libel. Ibid. 414.

Of ſending letters, &c. to the parties charged with any ſcandalous matter.

Sending an abuſive letter to one, without publiſhing it to others, is no libel; but if it be ſent to a third perſon, or any ways diſperſed, it is a publication of the libel: And tho' ſending a ſcandalous letter to the party himſelf is not a libel, nor can any action be brought upon it, becauſe it is no publication; yet it is an high offence. 12 Rep. 34 1 Lev. 139. 2 Brownl. 157. It is an offence againſt the King's peace, puniſhable by indictment; and if copies of it are afterwards diſperſed, it aggravates the crime, or rather makes it a new crime, for which the party may have an action. Poph. 35. Hob. 62. Writing a letter to a man, and abuſing him for his public charities, &c. is a libellous act, puniſhable by indictment. Hob. 215.

Of private libels and obſcenity.

A private libel, for a private matter, as a letter ſcandalizing a perſon courting a woman, is indictable, and fineable to the King. Sid. 270. No writing is eſteemed a libel, unleſs it reflect upon ſome particular perſon; and a writing full of obſcene ribaldry, is not puniſhable by any proſecution at Common law; but the author may be bound to the good behaviour, as a perſon of evil fame. 1 Hawk. 195.

What is, and what is not a libel.

Where a writing inveighs againſt mankind in general, or againſt a particular order of men, this is no libel; it muſt deſcend to particulars and individuals to make it a libel. Trin. 11 W. 3. B. R. But a general reflection on the government is a libel, tho' no particular perſon is reflected on: And the writing againſt a known law is held to be criminal. State Trials, 4 V. 672. 903. According to Holt C. J. ſcandalous matter is not neceſſary to make a libel; it is enough if the defendant induces an ill opinion to be had of the plaintiff, &c. And if a man ſpeak ſcandalous words, unleſs they are put in writing, he is not guilty of a libel; for the nature of a libel conſiſteth in putting the infamous matter into writing. 2 Salk. 417. 3 Salk. 226. A defamatory writing, expreſſing only one or two letters of a man's name, if it be in ſuch a manner, that from what goes before and follows after, it muſt be underſtood by the natural conſtruction of the whole, to ſignify and point at ſuch a particular perſon, is as properly a libel as if the whole name were expreſſed at large. Trin. 12 Ann. 1 Hawk. 194.

Of the wording of a libel.

Printing or writing may be libellous, tho' the ſcandal is not directly charged, but obliquely and ironically; and where a writing pretends to recommend to one the characters of ſeveral great men for his imitation, inſtead of taking notice of what they are generally famous for, pitches on ſuch qualities only which their enemies charge them with the want of; as by propoſing ſuch a one to be imitated for his learning, who is known to be a good ſoldier, but an illiterate man, &c. this will amount to a libel. Ibid.

Of the author, contriver and publiſher.

In the making of libels, if one man dictates, and another writes a libel, both are guilty; for the writing after another ſhews his approbation of what is contained in the libel; and the firſt reducing a libel into writing may be ſaid to be the making it, but not the compoſing: if one repeats, another writes, and a third approves what is written, they are all makers of the libel; becauſe all perſons who concur to an unlawful act are guilty. 5 Mod 167. The making a libel is the genus; and compoſing and contriving is one ſpecies; writing, a ſecond ſpecies; and procuring to be written, a third; and one may be found guilty of writing only, &c. 2 Salk. 419, &c. But obſerve, a mere writing, without a publication, was not in queſtion in Salkeld. It is conceived that for the mere writing of a libel, not publiſhed, no action can be maintained, nor proſecution legally ſupported.

If one writes a copy of a libel, and does not deliver it to others, the writing is no publication: but it has been adjudged, that the copying a libel, without authority, is writing a libel, and he that thus writes it, is a contriver; and that he who hath a written copy of a known libel, if it is found upon him, this ſhall be evidence of the publication; but if ſuch libel be not publicly known, then the mere having a copy is not a publication. 2 Salk. 417. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1122. Writing a copy of a libel is writing of a libel, as it has the ſame pernicious conſequence; and if the law were otherwiſe, men might write copies, and print them with impunity. 2 Salk. 419. And when a libel appears under a man's own hand-writing, and no author is known, he is taken in the manner, and it turns the proof upon him; and if he cannot produce the compoſer, it is hard to find that he is not the very man. Ibid. If one reads a libel, or hears it read, and laughs at it, it is not a publiſhing; for before he reads or hears it read, he cannot know it to be a libel: tho' if he afterwards reads or repeats it, or any part thereof, in the hearing of others, it is a publication of it: yet if part of it be repeated in mirth without any malicious purpoſe of defamation, it is ſaid to be no offence. 9 Rep. 59. Moor 862. Every one convicted of publiſhing a libel ought to be eſteemed the contriver or procurer: the procurer and writer of a libel have been held to be both contrivers; trivers; alſo the procuring another to publiſh it, and the publiſher, are both publiſhers: and the contriver, procurer, and publiſher of a libel, are puniſhable by fine, impriſonment, pillory, or other corporal puniſhment, at the diſcretion of the court, according to the heinouſneſs of the crime, &c. Moor 627. 5 Rep. 125. 3 Inſt. 174. 3 Cro. 17.

Of ſetting forth a libel in law proceedings, according to the tenor.

In informations and law proceedings there are two ways of deſcribing a libel, by the ſenſe, and by the words; the firſt is cujus tenor ſequitur, and the ſecond quæ ſequitur in hæc Anglicana verba, &c. in which the deſcription is by particular words, and whereof every word is a mark; ſo that if there is any variance, it is fatal; in the other deſcription by the ſenſe, it is not material to be very exact in the words, becauſe the matter is deſcribed by the ſenſe of them. 2 Salk. 660. One great intention of the law in prohibiting libels againſt perſons, is to reſtrain men from endeavouring to make themſelves their own judges of complaints, and to oblige them to refer the deciſion thereof to the law &c. And it is of great conſequence to the ſtate, for preſerving peace, order, and good government.

Yet in a free ſtate, ſuch as this is, by the principles of its conſtitution, it is perhaps impoſſible to draw the line with preciſion. The liberty of the preſs is of the utmoſt importance; yet, though not reſtricted by ſtatute, it ſhould be obſerved that the courts of law are always open to puniſh any abuſe of that invaluable privilege.

The declaration for a libel muſt lay it to be of and concerning the plaintiff, otherwiſe there can be no judgment. 2 Strange 934. Books againſt Chriſtianity, and obſcene books, are puniſhable as libels. 2 Strange 788, 834

Libel, in the Spiritual Court. If upon a libel for any eccleſiaſtical matter, the defendant make a ſurmiſe in B. R. to have a prohibition, and ſuch ſurmiſe be inſufficient, the other party may ſhew it to the court, and the judges will diſcharge it. 1 Leon. 10, 128, The libel uſed in eccleſiaſtical proceedings, conſiſts of three parts. 1. The major propoſition, which ſhews a juſt cauſe of the petition. 2. The narration, or minor propoſition. 3. The concluſion, or concluſive petition, which conjoins both propoſitions, &c. and the form of it is as follows:

Libera, A livery or delivery of ſo much graſs or corn to a cuſtomary tenant, who cuts down or prepares the ſaid graſs or corn, and receives ſome part or ſmall portion of it as a reward or gratuity. Cowell.

Libera Batella, Signifies a free boat.——Per liberam batellam, hoc eſt, habere unam Cymbam ad Piſcand. ſubter Pontem Ceſtriæ, &c. & ibidem cum omni genere retium. Plac. in Itin. apud Ceſtriam, 14 H. 7.

Libera Chaſea habenda, Is a judicial writ granted to a perſon for a free chaſe belonging to his manor; after proof made by inquiry of a jury, that the ſame of right belongs to him. Reg. Orig. 36.

Liberam Legum. On trial by battel, if either champion proves recreant, i. e. yields and pronounces the word craven, he is condemned, as a recreant, amittere liberam legem, that is, to become infamous and not be accounted liber et legalis homo, being ſuppoſed by the event to be proved forſworn, and therefore never to be put upon a jury, or admitted as a witneſs in any cauſe. Black. Com. 3 V. 340, 341.

Libera Piſcaria, A free fiſhery, which being granted to one, he hath a property in the fiſh, &c. 2 Salk. 637. See Fiſhing.

Liber Taurus, A free bull. Compertum per jure quod Will. de H. fuit ſeiſitus de libero tauro habendo in, &c. Ideo conſideratum eſt, quod prædictus Will. recuperet damna ſua quæ taxantur per jur. ad iv s. pro imparcatione ejuſdem tauri, &c. Norf. 16 Ed. 1.

Libera Wara. See Wara.

Liberate, Is a writ that lies for the payment of a yearly penſion or ſum of money granted under the Great Seal, and directed to the Treaſurer and Chamberlains of the Exchequer, &c. for that purpoſe. In another ſenſe it is a writ to the ſheriff of a county, for the delivery of poſſeſſion of lands and goods extended, or taken upon the forfeiture of a recogniſance. Alſo a writ iſſuing out of the Chancery directed to a gaoler for delivery of a priſoner that hath put in bail for his appearance. F. N. B. 132. 4 Inſt. 116. This writ is moſt commonly uſed for delivery of goods, &c. on an extent; and by the extent the conuſee of a recognizance hath not any abſolute intereſt in the goods, until the liberate. 2 Lil. 169. It has been adjudged, that where an extent is upon a ſtatute merchant, there needs no liberate, for the ſheriff may deliver all in execution without it, but where an extent is upon a ſtatute-ſtaple, or a recogniſance, there muſt be a return made of ſuch an extent, and then a liberate before there can be a delivery in execution. 3 Salk. 159. See Extent.

Liberatio, Is taken for money, meat, drink, clothes, &c. yearly given and delivered by the lord to his domeſtic ſervants. Blount.

Libertas Eccleſiaſtica. This is a frequent phraſe in our old writers, to ſignify church liberty, or eccleſiaſtical immunities: the right of inveſtiture extorted from our Kings by force of papal power, was at firſt the only thing challenged by the clergy, as their libertas eccleſiaſtica: but by degrees, under weak princes and prevailing factions, under the title of church liberty, they contended for a freedom of their perſons and poſſeſſions from all ſecular power and juriſdiction, as appears by the canons and decrees of the council held by Boniface, Archbiſhop of Canterbury at Merton, A. D. 1258. and at London, A. D. 1260, &c. Cowell.

See Lord Littleton's Hiſt. of Hen. II. and Robertſon's Hiſt. of Emp. C. V.

Libertate probanda, Is an ancient writ that lay for ſuch as being demanded for villeins offered to prove themſelves free; directed to the ſheriff that he ſhould take ſecurity of them for the proving of their freedom before the juſtices of aſſiſe, and that in the mean time they ſhould be unmoleſted. F. N. B. 77. Villeinage, and the appendixes thereof, viz. writs de nativo habendo, liberate probanda, &c. were of old great titles in the books of law, but are now antiquated.

Libertatibus Allocandis, A writ lying for a citizen or burgeſs, impleaded contrary to his liberty, to have his privilege allowed. Reg. Orig. 262. And if any claim a ſpecial liberty to be impleaded within a city or borough, and not elſewhere, there may be a ſpecial writ de libertatibus allocandis, to permit the burgeſſes to uſe their liberties, ties, &c. Theſe writs are of ſeveral forms, and may be uſed by a corporation, or by any ſingle perſon, as the caſe ſhall happen. New Nat. Br. 509, 510. The Barons of the Cinque Ports, &c. may ſue forth ſuch writs, if they are delayed to have their liberties allowed them. Ibid.

Libertatibus exigendis in Itinere, An ancient writ whereby the King commands the Juſtices in Eyre to admit of an attorney for the defence of another man's liberty. Reg. Orig. 19.

Liberties or Franchiſes. Theſe are ſynonymous terms, and their definition is, a royal privilege, or branch of the King's prerogative, ſubſiſting in the hands of a ſubject. The kinds of them are various, and almoſt infinite. See Black. Com. 2 V. 37, &c.

Liberty, (libertas) Is a privilege held by grant or preſcription, by which men enjoy ſome benefit beyond the ordinary ſubject. Bract. But in a more general ſignification, it is ſaid to be a power to do as one thinks fit; unleſs reſtrained by the law of the land: and it is well obſerved, that human nature is ever an advocate for this liberty; it being the gift of God to man in his creation; therefore every thing is deſirous of it, as a ſort of reſtitution to its primitive ſtate. Forteſcue 96. It is upon that account the laws of England in all caſes favour liberty, and which is accounted very precious, not only in reſpect of the profit which every one obtains by his liberty, but alſo in reſpect of the public. 2 Lil. Abr. 169.

According to Monteſq. Liv. 26. c. 20. Liberty conſiſts principally in not being compelled to do any thing, which the law does not require, i. e. becauſe we are governed by civil laws, and therefore we are free, living under thoſe laws. See Infra, at the end of this head.

The people of this kingdom are to enjoy their ancient liberties, without impeachment, by Magna Charta. No freeman ſhall be impriſoned or condemned without trial by his peers, or the law. Mag. Chart. c. 19. Likewiſe no perſon is to be arreſted, &c. without proceſs at law: and matters which concern liberty are to be ſpeedily determined, &c.

Magna Charta, 9 Hen. 3. cap. 29. No freeman ſhall be taken and impriſoned, or diſſeiſed of his freehold, or of his liberties or free cuſtoms, or be outlawed, baniſhed or otherwiſe deſtroyed; nor ſhall the King paſs upon him, but by the lawful judgment of his peers, or by the law of the land. The King ſhall ſell to none, or deny or delay to none, right or juſtice. See 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. cap. 4. and 42 Ed. 3. cap. 3.

Stat. Confirm. Chart. 25 Ed. 1. cap. 2. If any judgment be given contrary to the great charters, it ſhall be undone and holden for nought.

Stat. 2 Ed. 3. cap. 8. It ſhall not be commanded by the Great Seal or the Little Seal, to diſturb or delay common right; and though ſuch commandments come, the juſtices ſhall not ceaſe to do right.

Stat. 5 Ed. 3. cap. 9. No man ſhall be attached by any accuſation, nor forejudged of life or limb, nor ſhall his lands or goods be ſeiſed into the King's hands againſt the great charter and the law of the land.

Stat. 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. cap. 4. None ſhall be taken by petition or ſuggeſtion made to the King or his council, unleſs it be by indictment of lawful people of the neighbourhood, or by proceſs made by writ original at the Common law. And none ſhall be put out of his franchiſes or freehold, unleſs he be duly brought to anſwer, and forejudged by courſe of law; and if any thing be done to the contrary, it ſhall be redreſſed and holden for none.

Stat. 42 Ed. 3. cap. 3. No man ſhall be put to anſwer without preſentment before juſtices, or matter of record of due proceſs, or writ original, according to the ancient law of the land. And if any thing be done to the contrary, it ſhall be void in law, and held for error.

The following we have ſtated pretty fully, as it is an act of great conſequence to the ſubjects of this free ſtate.

Stat. 1 Wil. & Mar. ſt. 2. cap. 2. ſect. 1. Whereas e Lords ſpiritual and temporal, and commons aſſembled at Weſtminſter, repreſenting all the eſtates of the people of this realm, did upon the 13th of February 1688. preſent unto their Majeſties, then Prince and Princeſs of Orange, a declaration, containing that,

The ſaid Lords ſpiritual and temporal, and commons, being aſſembled in a full and free repreſentative of this nation, for the vindicating their ancient rights and liberties, declare,

That the pretended power of ſuſpending of laws, or the execution of laws, by regal authority, without conſent of parliament, is illegal;

That the pretended power of diſpenſing with laws, or the execution of laws, by regal authority, as it hath been aſſumed and exerciſed of late, is illegal;

That the commiſſion for erecting the late court of commiſſioners for eccleſiaſtical cauſes, and all other commiſſions and courts of like nature, are illegal and pernicious;

That levying money for or to the uſe of the crown, by pretence of prerogative, without grant of parliament, for longer time, or in other manner than the ſame is or ſhall be granted, is illegal;

That it is the right of the ſubjects to petition the King, and all commitments and proſecutions for ſuch petitioning are illegal;

That the raiſing or keeping a ſtanding army within the kingdom in time of peace, unleſs it be with conſent of parliament, is againſt law;

That the ſubjects which are proteſtants may have arms for their defence ſuitable to their conditions, and as allowed by law;

That election of members of parliament ought to be free;

That the freedom of ſpeech, and debates or proceedings in parliament, ought not to be impeached or queſtioned in any court or place out of parliament;

That exceſſive bail ought not to be required, nor exceſſive fines impoſed, nor cruel and unuſual puniſhments inflicted;

That jurors ought to be duly impanelled and returned, and jurors which paſs upon men in trials for high treaſon ought to be freeholders;

That all grants and promiſſes of fines and forfeitures of particular perſons before conviction, are illegal and void;

And for redreſs of all grievances, and for the amending, ſtrengthening and preſerving of the laws, parliaments ought to be held frequently;

And they do claim, demand, and INSIST UPON all and ſingular the premiſſes, as their UNDOUBTED RIGHTS AND LIBERTIES; and that no declarations, judgments, doings, or proceeding, to the prejudice of the people in any of the ſaid premiſſes, ought in any wiſe to be drawn hereafter into conſequence or example;

Sect. 6. All and ſingular the rights and liberties aſſerted and claimed in the ſaid declaration are the true, ancient and indubitable RIGHTS and LIBERTIES of the people of this kingdom; and ſo ſhall be eſteemed, allowed, adjudged, and taken to be; and all the particulars aforeſaid ſhall be firmly holden as they are expreſſed in the ſaid declaration; and all officers ſhall ſerve their Majeſties according to the ſame in all times to come.

Sect. 12. No diſpenſation by non obſtante of any ſtatute ſhall be allowed, except a diſpenſation be allowed of in ſuch ſtatute; and except in ſuch caſes as ſhall be ſpecially provided for during this ſeſſion of parliament.

Sect. 13. No charter granted before the 23d of October, 1689. ſhall be invalidated by this act, but ſhall remain of the ſame force as if this act had never been made.

Vide the Stat. 12 & 13 Wil. 3. cap. 2. whereby, amongſt other things, it is enacted, That no perſon who has an office or place of profit under the King, or receives a penſion from the crown, ſhall be capable of ſerving as a member of the houſe of commons.

But the former part of this clauſe has been altered by a ſubſequent law, the acceptance of an office, &c. by a member, only vacating his ſeat, and he may be re-elected, if the electors think proper.

And this may be conſidered as a reaſonable law, otherwiſe the crown might be deprived of the ſervice of ſome of the moſt able men in the ſtate. If an ill uſe is, or ever ſhould be made of this, we can only ſay it is impoſſible for human laws to be perfect, and guard againſt every evil,

According to Monteſquieu, Liv. 11. c. 3. "Liberty is "a right to do whatever the laws permit," If a citizen could do what they forbid, he would no longer be poſſeſſed of liberty, becauſe all his fellow citizens would have the ſame power. See ante, at the beginning of this head. An Engliſhman may add to the preceding idea his right of legiſlation. See Black Com. 1 V. 6, 125.

Liberty to Hold Pleas, Signifies to have a court of one's own; and to hold it before a Mayor, Bailiff, &c. See Franchiſe.

Liblacum, The manner of bewitching any perſon; alſo a barbarous ſacrifice. Leg. Athelſtan, 6.

Librae arſae penſatae & ad numerum: A phraſe which often occurs in the Domeſday-Regiſter, and ſome other memorials of that and the next age.—as Ailesbury in Buckinghamſhire, the King's manor.——In totis valentiis reddit lvi libr. arſas & penſatas, & de thelonio x libr. ad numerum, i. e. in the whole value it pays fifty-ſix pounds burnt and weighed; and for toll ten pounds by tale. For they ſometimes took their money ad numerum by tale in the current coin upon conſent: but ſometimes they rejected the common coin by tale, and would melt it down to take it by weight when purified from the droſs and too great allay; for which purpoſe they had in thoſe times always a fire ready in the Exchequer to burn the money, and then weigh it. Cowell.

Libra penſa, A pound of money in weight; for it was uſual in former days, not only to tell the money, but to weigh it; for ſeveral cities, biſhops, and noblemen had their mints, and coined money, and often very bad, and therefore though the pound conſiſted of twenty ſhillings they weighed it. Thus in Domeſday we read, Reddat nunc 30 libras arſus & penſatas. Gale's Hiſt. of Brit. fol. 761.

Library. Where a library is erected in any pariſh, it ſhall be preſerved for the uſes directed by the founder: and incumbents and miniſters of pariſhes, &c. are to give ſecurity therefore, and make catalogues of the books, &c. None of the books ſhall be alienable, without conſent of the biſhop, and then only where there is a duplicate of ſuch books: if any book ſhall be taken away and detained, a juſtice's warrant may be iſſued to ſearch for and reſtore the ſame: alſo action of trover may be brought in the name of the proper ordinary, &c. And biſhops have power to make rules and orders concerning libraries, appoint perſons to view their condition, and inquire of the ſtate of them in their viſitation. Statute 7 Ann. cap. 14.

Libratae terrae, Contains four oxgangs, and every oxgang thirteen acres. Skene, verb. Bovata terræ. With us, it is ſo much land as is yearly worth twenty ſhillings, for in Henry the Third's time, he that had quindecim libras terræ, was to receive the order of knighthood. See Fardingdale. Some are of opinion, that as money is divided into pounds, ſhillings, pence, half-pence, and farthings, the ſame degrees are to be obſerved in the diviſion of lands; and therefore as quandrans ſignifies a farthing, ſo quandrantata is the fourth part of an acre, oblata is half, and denariata is a whole acre, ſolidata is twelve acres, and librata is twenty times twelve acres, i. e. two hundred and forty. Spelman is of another opinion, who compares an acre to a mark in money; and as in one there are one hundred and ſixty pence, ſo in the other there are one hundred and ſixty perches, which they divide into halves and quarters: ſo that an acre contains three hundred and ſixty denarios; but ſome ſay, that librata terræ is ſo much ground as is worth yearly twenty ſhillings of current money. Cowell.

Licence, (licentia) is a power or authority given to a man to do ſome lawful act: and is a perſonal liberty to the party to whom given, which cannot be transferred over; but it may be made to a man, or his aſſigns, &c. 12 H. 7. 25. There may be a parol licence, as well as by deed in writing; but if it be not for a certain time, it paſſes no intereſt. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1123. And if there be no time certain in the licence; as if a man licence another to dig clay, &c. in his land, but doth not ſay for how long, the licence may be countermanded; though if it be until ſuch a time, he cannot. Poph. 151. If a leſſor licences his leſſee (who is reſtrained by covenant from aliening without licence) to alien, and ſuch leſſor dies before he aliens, this is no countermand of the licence: ſo it is if the leſſor grants over his eſtate. Cro. Jac. 133. But where a lord of a manor for life granteth a licence to a copyhold tenant to alien, and dieth; the licence is deſtroyed, and the power of alienation ceaſeth. 1 Inſt. 52. Copyhold tenants leaſing their copyhold for a longer time than one year, are to have a licence for it; or they incur a forfeiture of their eſtates. 1 Inſt. 63. If any licnece is given to a perſon, and he abuſes it, he ſhall be adjudged a treſpaſſer ab initio. 8 Rep. 146.

A. grants to B. a way over his ground, or licence to go through it to the church, by this none but B. himſelf may go in it; but if one give me licence to go over his land with my plough, or to cut down a tree therein, and take it away: by this I may take what help is needful to do the ſame. So if it be to hunt and kill and carry away deer; not if it to be hunt and kill only. 12 H. 7. 25. 13 H. 7. 8. Rep. 146. By licence a man may practiſe phyſic and ſurgery in London; and do divers other things. Stat. 3 H. 8. c. 7, &c. Vide 15 Abr. tit. Licence.

Licence to alien in Mortmain. Alienations in mortmain to eccleſiaſtical perſons, &c. are reſtrained by ſeveral ſtatutes; but the King may grant licences to any perſon or bodies politic, &c. to alien or hold lands in mortmain. 27 Ed. 1. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 37. See Mortmain.

Licence to ariſe, (licentia ſurgendi) Is a liberty or ſpace of time given by the court to a tenant to ariſe out of his bed, who is eſſoined de malo lecti, in a real action: and it is alſo the writ thereupon. Bracton. And the law in this caſe is, that the tenant may not ariſe or go out of his chamber, until he hath been viewed by knights thereto appointed, and hath a day aſſigned him to appear; the reaſon whereof is, that it may be known, whether he cauſed himſelf to be eſſoined deceitfully or not; and if the demandant can prove that he was ſeen abroad before the view or licence of the court, he ſhall be taken to be deceitfully eſſoined, and to have made default. Bracton, lib. 5. Fleta, lib. 6. cap. 10.

Licence to found a Church, Granted by the King. See Church.

Licence to go to Election of biſhops is by Congé d'Eſlire directed to the dean and chapter to elect the perſon named by the King, &c. Reg. Writs 294. Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 20.

Licence of the King to go beyond ſea may be revoked before the time expires, becauſe it concerns the public good. Jenk. Cent. See Ne exeat Regnum.

Licence of Marriage. Biſhops have power to grant licences for the marrying of perſons; and parſons marrying any perſon without publiſhing the bands of matrimony, or without licence, incur a forfeiture of 100*l.* &c. by ſtatute 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 35. See Marriage.

Licence to erect a Park, Warren, &c. See Park and Warren.

Licentia Concordandi, Is that licence for which the King's Silver is paid on paſſing a fine, mentioned in the ſtatute 12 Car. 2. c. 12.

Licentia ſurgendi, Is the writ whereby the tenant eſſoined de malo lecti, obtaineth liberty to riſe. See Licence to ariſe.

Licentia Transfretandi, Is a writ or warrant directed to the keeper of the port of Dover, or other ſea-port, comanding them to let ſuch perſons paſs over ſea, who have obtained the King's licence thereunto. Reg. Orig. 193.

Lidford Law, Is a proverbial ſpeech, intending as much as to hang a man firſt, and judge him afterwards.

Liege, (Ligeus) Is uſed for Liege Lord, and ſometimes for Liege Man: Liege Lord is he that acknowledgeth no ſuperior; and liege man is he who oweth allegiance to his liege lord. The King's ſubjects are called liege people, becauſe they owe and are bound to pay allegiance to him. Stat. 8 H. 6. c. 10. 14 H. 8. c. 2. But in ancient times, private perſons, as lords of manors, &c. had their lieges. Skene ſaith, that this word is derived from the Ital. Liga, a bond or league; others derive it from Litis, which is a man wholly at the command of the Lord. Blount.

Lieges and Liege-people, (Ligati) The King's ſubjects, anciently ſo called, becauſe they owe and are bound to pay allegiance to him. Stat. 8 Hen. 6. cap. 10. 14 Hen. 8. cap. 2. and divers other ſtatutes. Cowell.

Lien, (Fr.) Is a word uſed in the law, of two ſignifications: perſonal lien, ſuch as bond, covenant, or contract; and real lien, a judgment, ſtatute, recognizance, which oblige and affect the land. Terms de Ley.

Lieu, Inſtead or in place of another thing. And when one thing doth come in the place of another, it ſhall be of the ſame nature as that was; as in caſe of an exchange, &c. 2 Shep. Abr. 359.

Lieu conus, In law proceedings, ſignifies a caſtle, manor, or other notorious place, well known and generally taken notice of by thoſe that dwell about it. 2 Lil. Abr. 641. A venire facias, for a jury to appear, may be from a lieu conus: And a fine or recovery of lands in a lieu conus, is good; but it is ſaid in a ſci. fac. to have execution of ſuch fine, the vill or pariſh muſt be named. 2 Cro. 574. 2 *Mod. Eſtates pur autre vie in caſe there be no ſpecial occupant thereof, of which no deviſe ſhall have been made according to 29 Car. 2. c. 3. or ſo much thereof as ſhall not have been ſo deviſed, ſhall be diſtributed in the ſame manner as the perſonal eſtate of the teſtator or inteſtate.

Life-Rent, A rent which a man receives for term of life, or for ſuſtentation of it. Skene.

Ligeance, (ligeantia) Is the true and faithful obedience of a ſubject to his ſovereign: And is alſo applied to the territory and dominion of the liege lord; as children born out of the ligeance of the King, &c. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. Co. Lit. 129.

Ligeancy, (ligeantia) Is ſuch a duty or fealty, as no man may owe or bear to more than one lord; and therefore it is uſed for that duty and allegiance, which every good ſubject oweth to his liege lord the King. It has been thus defined, Ligeantia eſt vinculum arctius inter ſubditum & regem utroſque invicem connectens; hunc ad protectionem & juſtum regimen, illos ad tributa & debitam ſubjectionem. As there is a mutual connection of dominion and fidelity between lords and tenants, ſo there is a higher and greater connection between the King and ſubject: for the ſubject oweth to the King his faithful obedience, and ought to prefer the ſervice of his Prince and country before the ſafety of his life; and the ſovereign is to protect and defend his ſubjects. Forteſque. See Allegiance.

Lighter-men, (Mentioned in ſtat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 12. Act for cleanſing, &c. the ſtreets of London) Are thoſe that carry away, by water, dung and rubbiſh in lighters, from the city of London.

They are now generally employed in the carrying of goods to and from ſhips, &c. lying in the river Thames.

Light-houſe, A building erected near the ſea ſhore, wherein a fire, or large and ſtrong light, is kept in the night time, for direction to ſhips at ſea. A uſeful light to be placed in a light-houſe erected on the Ediſtone, by the maſter, wardens and aſſiſtants of Trinity-houſe of Debtford-Strond; and maſters of ſhips paſſing by the ſame, are to pay a certain tonnage duty, &c. Stat. 4 Ann. c. 20. 8 Ann. c. 17. The like act concerning the light-houſe built by William Trench, Eſq. on the iſland or rock called Skerries, near Holyhead in the county of Angleſea. 3 Geo. 2. cap. 36.

Lights, Stopping lights of a houſe is a nuſance; but ſtopping a proſpect is not, being only matter of delight, not of neceſſity: And a perſon may have either an aſſiſe of nuſance againſt the perſon erecting any ſuch nuſance, or he may ſtand on his own ground and abate it. 9 Rep. 58. 1 Mod. 54. For any nuſance erected or being on the ſoil of my neighbour, whereby I ſuſtain damage, I may maintain an action on the caſe. If a man has a vacant piece of ground, and builds thereupon a houſe, with good lights, which he ſells or lets to another; and after he builds upon ground contiguous, or lets the ſame to another perſon, who builds thereupon to the nuſance of the lights of the firſt houſe, the leſſee of the firſt houſe may have an action on the caſe againſt ſuch builder, &c. And though formerly they were to be lights of an ancient meſſuage, that is now altered. *Mod. Limitation, (limitatio) Is a certain time aſſigned by ſtatute, within which an action muſt be brought.

We ſhall here conſider,

I. Its nature and origin.
II. The limitation of actions as divided into, real, penal, and perſonal.
III. The time when the right of action accrued, ſo as to be affected by the ſtatutes, and of the courts bound thereby.
IV. The exceptions in 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. what will ſave a bar thereof; and of the manner of pleading.

I. Of the nature and origin, of the limitation of actions.

The time of limitation is two-fold; firſt, in writs, by divers acts of parliament; ſecondly, to make a title to any inheritance, and that is by the Common law. Co. Lit. 114, 115.

It ſeems, that by the Common law there was no ſtated or fixed time to bring actions; for tho' it be ſaid by Bracton, that Omnes actiones in mundo infra certa tempora limitationem habent; yet my Lord Coke ſays, that the limitation of actions was by force of divers acts of parliament; alſo, (ſays he) this general poſition of Bracton's admitted of ſeveral exceptions. Bract. lib. 2. fol. 228. 2 Inſt. 95. Co. Lit. 115. 4 Co. 10, 11.

But by the ancient law there was a ſtated time for the heir of the tenant to claim after the death of his anceſtor, or elſe he loſt his land, according to the feudal text, Præterea ſi quis infeudatus major quatuordecim annis ſua incuria, vel negligentia per ann. & diem ſteterit, quod feudi inveſtituram a proprio domino non peterit, tranſacto hoc ſpatio, feudum amittat & ad dominum redeat. Spelm. Gloſſ. 32.

The fixing upon this period of a year and a day, upon ſeveral other occaſions, ſeems to have been deduced from this ancient rule, and on this occaſion was pitched upon, becauſe the ſervices appointed ſeem to be annually computed; therefore the feud was ordered to be taken up within ſuch time as ſuch annual ſervices became due, or elſe it was loſt and returned to the lord; and the ſame time that was appointed to the tenant to claim from the lord, was alſo appointed to make his claim upon any diſſeiſor; and if no ſuch claim was made, the diſſeiſor dying ſeiſed, caſt the right of poſſeſſion upon the heir; and this was to keep the ſame uniformity in point of time thro' the law, as alſo that the lord might be at a certainty whom he might take for his tenant, and admit upon every deſcent; and ſince the heir of the tenant anciently loſt the whole land, in caſe he did not take it up within time, it was fit the tenant ſhould loſe the right and poſſeſſion, in caſe he did not claim within the ſame time upon the diſſeiſor, that the heir of the diſſeiſor might be in peace, in caſe the perſon that had right did not make his claim upon him, and that from thenceforth the lord might receive him into his feud; and as upon the ancient plan of feudal conſtitution, if the heir did not take up the feud within a year and a day, a deſertion and dereliction was preſumed; ſo alſo if the diſſeiſee did not claim within the ſame time, the right of poſſeſſion was relinquiſhed. Spelm Gloſſ. annus & dies 32, 33.

Before the 32 Hen. 8. c. 2. certain remarkable periods were fixed upon, within which the titles whereon men deſigned to be relieved muſt have accrued; thus in the time of Hen. 3. by the ſtatute of Merton, cap. 8. at which time the limitation in a writ of right was from the time of King Henry 1. by that ſtatute it is reduced to the time of King Henry 2. and for aſſiſes of mort d'anceſtor they were thereby reduced from the laſt return of King John out of Ireland, which was 12 Johannis; and for aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, a prima transfretatione Regis in Normanniam, which was 5 Hen. 3. and which before that had been poſt ultimum redditum Henrici 3. de Britannia; and this limitation was alſo afterwards by the ſtatutes Weſtm. 1. cap. 39. and Weſtm. 2. cap. 46. reduced to a narrower compaſs, the writ of right being limited to the firſt coronation of Rich. 1. But for theſe ancient limitations, ſee Co. Lit. 14. b. 15. a. 2 Inſt. 94, 95. 2 Rol. Abr. 111. Hale's Hiſt. of the Law 122. 2 Keb. 45.

II. Of the limitation of actions, as divided into, real, penal, and perſonal.

1. In real actions:

By 32 H. 8. c. 2. it is enacted, "That no perſon ſhall from thenceforth ſue, have or maintain any writ of right, or make any preſcription, title or claim to or for any manors, lands, tenements, rents, annuities, commons, penſions, portions, corodies, or other hereditaments, of the poſſeſſion of his or their anceſtor or predeceſſor, and declare and alledge any further ſeiſin or poſſeſſion of his anceſtor or predeceſſor, but only of the ſeiſin or poſſeſſion of his anceſtor or predeceſſor, which hath been or now is, or ſhall be ſeiſed of the ſaid manors, lands, tenements, rents, annuities, commons, penſions, portions, corodies, or other hereditaments, within threeſcore years next before the teſte of the ſame writ, or next before the ſaid preſcription, title or claim ſo hereafter to be ſued, commenced, brought, made or had.

And it is further enacted by the ſaid ſtatute, par. 2. "That no manner of perſon ſhall ſue, have or maintain any aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, coſenage, ayle, writ of entry upon diſſeiſin, done to any of his anceſtors or predeceſſors, or any manors, lands, tenements or other hereditaments, of any further ſeiſin or poſſeſſion of his or their anceſtor or predeceſſor, but only of the ſeiſin or poſſeſſion of his or their anceſtor or predeceſſor, which was or hereafter ſhall be ſeiſed of the ſame manors, lands, tenements or other hereditaments, within fifty years next before the teſte of the original of the ſame writ hereafter to be brought.

It is further enacted, par. 3. "That no perſon ſhall ſue, have or maintain any action for any manors, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, of or upon his or their own ſeiſin or poſſeſſion therein, above thirty years next before the teſte of the original of the ſame writ hereafter to be brought.

And further, par. 4. "That no perſon ſhall hereafter make any avowry or cognizance for any rent, ſuit or ſervice, and allege any ſeiſin of any rent, ſuit or ſervice, in the ſame avowry or cognizance in the poſſeſſion of any other, whoſe eſtate he ſhall pretend or claim to have, above fifty years next before the making of the ſaid avowry or cognizance.

And it is further enacted by the ſaid ſtatute, par. 5. "That all formedons in reverter, formedons in remainder, and ſcire facias upon fines of any manors, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, at any time hereafter to be ſued, ſhall be ſued and taken within fifty years next after the title and cauſe of action fallen, and at no time after the fifty years paſt.

Note; This ſtatute hath the uſual ſaving, for infants, feme coverts, perſons in priſons and beyond ſea.

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it hath been holden,

That in a formedon in reverter or remainder, or on a ſcire facias, on a fine of ſuch nature, the demandant need not mention the ſtatute in order to make out his title, but the tenant, if he would take advantage of it, muſt plead it. Dyer 315. b. pl. 101. So in an avowry for rent. Moor 31. pl. 102. 1 Rol. Rep. 50.

It has been held, that this ſtatute being in reſtraint of the Common law, ought to be conſtrued ſtrictly; that therefore it does not extend to a formedon in deſcender, ceſſavit nor reſcous. 4 Co. 8. 1 And. 16. Lit. Rep. 342.

To a bill in Chancery, to be relieved touching a rent-charge upon lands by a will, the defendant pleaded the ſtatute of limitations, and that there had been no demand or payment in forty years; and it was held, that this ſtatute concerns only cuſtomary rents between landlord and tenant, and not any rent that commences by grant, whereof the commencement may be ſhewn. 2 Vern. 235. Collins v. Goadall.

The ſtatute does not extend to the ſervices of eſcuage homage and fealty, for a man may live above the time limited by the act; neither doth it extend to any other ſervice which by common poſſibility may not happen or become due within ſixty years, as to cover the hall of the lord, or to attend the lord in the war, &c. Co Lit. 115. a. 2 Inſt. 95. 4 Co. 10. Bevil's caſe. 8 Co. 65. 3 Lev. 21.

And where the tenure is by homage, fealty and eſcuage uncertain, and by ſuit of court or rent, or any other annual ſervice, the ſeiſin of the ſuit or rent, or any other annual ſervice, is a good ſeiſin of the homage, fealty or eſcuage, or other accidental ſervices, as wardſhip, heriot ſervice, or the like. 2 Inſt. 96. 4 Co. 8. b. Winch. 32. Hutt. 50. 2 Rol. Rep. 392.

By the 1 Mar. cap. 5. it is enacted, " That the 32 Hen. 8. c. 2. ſhall not extend to any writ of right of advowſon, quare impedit, or aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, nor jus patronatus, nor to any writ of right of ward, writ of raviſhment of ward for the wardſhip of the body, or for the wardſhip of any caſtles, honours, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments holden by knight-ſervice, but that ſuch ſuits may be brought as before the making of the ſaid act.

By the 21 Jac. 1. cap. 16. for quieting men's eſtates, and avoiding of ſuits, it is enacted, " That all writs of formedon in deſcender, formedon in remainder, and formedon in reverter, at any time hereafter to be ſued or brought of, or for, any manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, whereunto any perſon or perſons now hath or have any title, or cauſe to have or purſue any ſuch writ, ſhall be ſued and taken within twenty years next after the end of this preſent ſeſſion of parliament; and after the ſaid twenty years expired, no perſon or perſons, or any of their heirs, ſhall have or maintain any ſuch writ of or for any of the ſaid manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments; and that all writs of formedon in deſcender, formedon in remainder, formedon in reverter, of any manors, lands, tenements or other hereditaments whatſoever, at any time hereafter to be ſued or brought by occaſion or means of any title, or cauſe hereafter happening, ſhall be ſued, and taken within twenty years next after the title and cauſe of action firſt deſcended or fallen, and at no time after the ſaid twenty years; and that no perſon or perſons that now hath any right, or title of entry, into any manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, now held from him or them, ſhall thereinto enter, but within twenty years next after the end of this preſent ſeſſion of parliament, or within twenty years next after any other title of entry accrued; and that no perſon or perſons ſhall at any time hereafter make any entry into any lands, tenements or hereditaments, but within twenty years next after his or their right or title, which ſhall hereafter firſt deſcend or accrue to the ſame; and in default thereof ſuch perſons ſo not entering, and their heirs, ſhall be utterly excluded and diſabled from ſuch entry after to be made; any former law, &c.

Provided, That if any perſon or perſons, that is or ſhall be intitled to ſuch writ or writs, or that hath or ſhall have ſuch right or title of entry, be or ſhall be, at the time of the ſaid right or title firſt deſcended, accrued, come or fallen, within the age of one and twenty years, feme covert, non compos mentis, impriſoned, or beyond the ſeas, that then ſuch perſon and perſons, and his and their heir and heirs, ſhall or may, notwithſtanding the ſaid twenty years be expired, bring his action, or make his entry, as he might have done before this act; ſo as ſuch perſon and perſons, or his or their heir and heirs, ſhall within ten years next after his and their full age, diſcoverture, coming of ſound mind, enlargement out of priſon, or coming into this realm, or death, take benefit of and ſue forth the ſame, and at no time after the ſaid ten years.

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it hath been holden,

That the poſſeſſion of one joint-tenant is the poſſeſſion of the other, ſo far as to prevent this ſtatute. 1 Salk. 285.

That a claim of entry to prevent the ſtatute of limitations muſt be upon the land, unleſs there be ſome ſpecial reaſon to the contrary. 1 Salk. 285.

That if a perſon be barred of his formedon, he is not thereby hindered to purſue his right of entry which afterwards accrues to him, no more than a perſon, who has ſeveral remedies, and diſcharges one of them, is excluded thereby from purſuing the others. 1 Lutw. 781. Hunt v. Burne. 1 Salk. 339. 2 Salk. 422. S. C.

If A. has had poſſeſſion of lands for twenty years without interruption, and then B. gets poſſeſſion, upon which A. is put to his ejectment, though A. is plaintiff, yet the poſſeſſion of twenty years ſhall be a good title in him, as if he had ſtill been in poſſeſſion; becauſe a poſſeſſion for twenty years is like a deſcent which tolls entry, and gives a right of poſſeſſion, which is ſufficient to maintain an ejectment. 1 Salk. 421. ſaid to have been twice ſo ruled by Holt.

That if one tenant in common receives the whole profits for twenty years, or more, yet this does not bar his companion; for the ſtatute of limitations never runs againſt a man, but where he is actually ouſted or diſſeiſed. 1 Salk. 423.

It has been ruled, that copyholds are within the ſtatute of limitations, becauſe it is an act made for the preſervation of the public quiet, and no ways tending to the prejudice of the lord or tenant. Moor 410.

But eccleſiaſtical perſons are not bound by any of the ſtatutes of limitations, becauſe it would be a ſide-wind to evade the ſtatutes made to prohibit their alienations. Comp. Incumb. 429.

2. In penal actions.

By the 31 Eliz. cap. 5. par. 5. it is enacted, " That all actions, ſuits, bills, indictments or informations, which ſhall be brought for any forfeiture upon any ſtatute penal, made or to be made, whereby the forfeiture is or ſhall be limited to the Queen, &c. ſhall be brought within two years after the offence; and that all actions, ſuits, bills or informations, which ſhall be brought for any forfeiture upon any penal ſtatute, made or to be made, except the ſtatutes of tillage, the benefit and ſuit whereof is or ſhall be by the ſaid ſtatute limited to the Queen, her heirs or ſucceſſors, and to any other that ſhall proſecute in that behalf, ſhall be brought by any perſon that may lawfully ſue for the ſame within one year next after the offence committed; and in default of ſuch purſuit, that then the ſame ſhall be brought for the Queen's Majeſty, her heirs or ſucceſſors, any time within the two years after that year ended. Where a ſhorter time is limited by any penal ſtatute, the proſecution muſt be that time."

Alſo vide 18 El. c. 5. and 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. the former requiring a memorandum of the day of exhibiting an information, the latter an oath from the informer.

In the conſtruction of theſe ſtatutes it hath been holden, that the 21 Jac. 1. cap. 4. does not extend to any offence created ſince that ſtatute; ſo that proſecutions on ſubſequent penal ſtatutes are not reſtrained thereby, but that ſtatute is to them as it were repealed pro tanto. 1 Salk. 372—3. 5 Mod. 425.

That if an offence prohibited by any penal ſtatute be alſo an offence at Common law, the proſecution of it as of an offence at Common law, is no way reſtrained by any of theſe ſtatutes. Hob. 270. 4 Mod. 144.

That if an information tam quam be brought after the year on a penal ſtatute, which gives one moiety to the informer, and the other to the King, it is naught only as to the informer, but good for the King. Cro. Car. 331. Cro. Jac. 366. and vide Daliſ. 60.

That if a ſuit on a penal ſtatute be brought after the limited time, the defendant need not plead the ſtatute, but may take advantage of it on the general iſſue. 1 Show. 353.

That the party grieved is not within the reſtraint of theſe ſtatutes, but may ſue in the ſame manner as before. Cro Eliz. 645. Noy 71. 3 Leon. 237.

It ſeems doubtful, whether a ſuit by a common informer on a penal ſtatute, which firſt gives an action to the party grieved, and in his default, after a certain time, to any one who will ſue, be within the reſtraint of theſe ſtatutes. 1 Show. 353, 354.

It has been held by three judges, that ſuing out a latitat within the year was a ſufficient commencement of the ſuit to ſave the limitation of time on a penal ſtatute, becauſe the latitat is the original of B. R. and may be continued on record as an original. But Holt held otherwiſe, for the action being for a penalty given by a ſtatute, the plaintiff might have brought an action of debt by original in B. R. becauſe the ſtatute gives the action; and he held, that there was a difference between a civil action, and an action given by ſtatute; for in the firſt caſe, the ſuing out a latitat within the time, and continuing it afterwards, will be ſufficient; but in the other caſe, if the party proceeds by bill, he ought to file his bill within time, that it may appear ſo to be upon the record itſelf. Carth. 232. Culliford v. Blandford. 1 Show. Rep. 353. S. C. Sed qu. If the plaintiff proceeds upon that writ, tho' he does not declare, 'till after the expiration of the year, whether it does not avoid the ſtatute, and whether it is not now every day's practice, as nothing is more common, than to file a bill, long after the writ ſued out. The court of B. R. lately permitted a bill to be filed, to amend the roll by in a qui tam action, after verdict. Gardner qui tam v. Brown.

3. In perſonal actions.

By the 21 Jac. 1. cap. 16. it is enacted, That all actions on the caſe for words ſhall be commenced and ſued within two years NEXT AFTER the words ſpoken, and not after.

In the conſtruction of this branch of the ſtatute it hath been holden,

Than an action of ſcandalum magnatum is not within the ſtatute. Lit. Rep. 342. 3 Keb. 645.

That it extends not to actions for ſlander of title, for that is not properly ſlander, but a cauſe of damage, and the ſlander intended by the ſtatute is to the perſon. Cro. Car. 141. Law v. Harwood, adjudged.

That if the words are of themſelves actionable, without the neceſſity of alledging ſpecial damages, altho' a loſs enſues, yet in this caſe the ſtatute of limitations is a good bar; but if the words at the time of the ſpeaking of them are not actionable but a ſubſequent loſs enſues, which intitles the plaintiff to his action, in ſuch caſe the ſtatute is no bar. 1 Sid. 95. Saunders v. Edwards. Raym. 61. S. C. and ſee 3 Mod. 111. S. C. cited.

That if an action for words be founded upon an indictment, or other matter of record, it is not within the ſtatutes, but ſuch action may be brought at any time. 1 Sid 95. But if in caſe, qu. if it ſhould not be in ſix years?

By the ſame ſtat. it is enacted, that all actions of treſpaſs, of aſſault, battery, wounding, impriſonment, or any of them, ſhall be commenced and ſued within four years NEXT AFTER the cauſe of ſuch actions or ſuits, and not after.

It ſeems, that if a man brings treſpaſs for beating his ſervant, per quod ſervitium amiſit, this is not ſuch an action as is within this branch of the ſtatute, being founded on the ſpecial damage. 1 Salk. 206. 5 Mod. 74.

If to an action of aſſault, battery and impriſonment, the defendant pleads, as to the aſſault and impriſonment, the ſtatute of limitations, without anſwering particularly to the battery otherwiſe than by uſing the words tranſgreſſio prædicta, it is ſufficient, for theſe words are an anſwer to the whole. 1 Lev 31.

By the ſame ſtat. it is enacted, that all actions of treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, all actions of treſpaſs, detinue, action ſur trover and replevin for taking away of goods and chattels, all actions of account, other than ſuch accounts as concern the trade of merchandize between merchant and merchant, their factors or ſervants, all actions on the caſe, (other than for ſlander) all actions of debt grounded upon any lending or contract without ſpecialty, all actions of debt for arrearages of rent within ſix years, NEXT AFTER the cauſe of action.

Proviſion is made for feme-coverts, perſons that are non compos, impriſoned, or beyond ſea.

It hath been adjudged, that an action of debt on the 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 13. for not ſetting out tithes, is not within the ſtatute, the action being grounded on an act of parliament, which is the higheſt record. Cro Car. 513. Talory v. Jackſon. 1 Saund. 38. 2 Saund. 66. 1 Sid. 305, 415. 1 Keb. 95. 2 Keb. 462.

So it hath been adjudged, that an action of debt for rent reſerved on a leaſe by indenture is out of the ſtatute, the leaſe by indenture being equal to a ſpecialty. Hutt. 109. Freeman v. Stacy. 1 Saund. 38. cited.

Alſo it hath been adjudged, that an action of debt for an eſcape is not within the ſtatute, not only becauſe it is founded in maleficio, and ariſes on a contract in law, which is different from thoſe actions of debt on a lending or contract mentioned in the ſtatute, but alſo becauſe it is grounded on the 1 Rich. 2. cap. 12. which firſt gave an action of debt for an eſcape, there being no remedy for creditors before but by action on the caſe. 1 Saund. 37. Jones v. Pope. 1 Lev. 191. S. C. adjudged. 2 Keb. 903. S. C. and 1 Sid. 305. S. C.

So it hath been adjudged, that this ſtatute cannot be pleaded to an action of debt brought againſt a ſheriff for money by him levied on a fieri facias, becauſe the action is founded in maleficio, as alſo upon the judgment on which the fieri facias iſſued, which is a matter of record. 1 Mod. 245. Cockran v. Welby 212. and 2 Show. Rep. 79. S. C.

It hath been adjudged, that an action of debt on an award under the hand and ſeal of the arbitrators, tho' the ſubmiſſion was by parol, is not within the ſtatute. 2 Saund. 64. Sid. 415. 1 Lev. 273. 2 Keb. 462, 496, 533. S. C.

An action of debt for a fine of a copyholder is not within the ſtatute. 1 Keb. 536. 1 Lev. 273.

If a man recovers a judgment or ſentence in France for money due to him, the debt muſt be conſidered here only as a debt by ſimple contract, and the ſtatute of limitations will run upon it. 2 Vern. 540. per curiam.

If the plaintiff be in England at the time the cauſe of action accrues, the time of limitation begins to run, ſo that if he, or (if he dies abroad) his repreſentative does not ſue within ſix years, he is barred by the ſtatute. Wilſ. par. 1. 134. See 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16.

It ſeems that to an aſſumpſit brought by the aſſignees of a bankrupt, for a debt due to the bankrupt, this ſtatute is a good bar; for tho' the aſſignment is by force of an act of parliament, yet the aſſignees ſtand only in the place of the bankrupt, and can have no other right nor remedy than he had. 2 Lev. 166. 3 Keb. 645. Comb. 70.

It ſeems clearly agreed, that tho' the ſtatutes of limitation bind the courts of equity, that yet a truſt is not within theſe ſtatutes. March 129. 2 Salk. 124.

A charity is not barred by length of time, nor within the ſtatute of limitations. 2 Vern. 399.

So it hath been held, that a legacy is not within the ſtatute of limitations. 1 Vern. 256.

It ſeems to be the doctrine of courts of equity, that mortgages are not within the ſtatute of limitations; yet where a man comes in at an old hand, it hath been ſometimes decreed, that the poſſeſſor ſhould account no further than for the profits made in his own time, to diſcourage the ſtirring in ſuch dormant titles; alſo the courts have allowed length of time to be pleaded in bar, where the mortgaged eſtate hath deſcended as a fee without entry or claim from the mortgagor, and where the poſſeſſor would be intangled in a long account; and in theſe caſes the ſtatute of limitations has been mentioned as a proper direction to go by. 1 Chan. Ca. 102. See Mortgage.

III. Of the time when the right of action accrued, ſo as to be affected by the ſtatutes, and of the courts bound thereby.

This ſtatute cannot be a bar unleſs the ſix years are expired, after there hath been complete cauſe of action; as if a man promiſe to pay 10 l. to J. S. when he came from Rome, or when he marries, and ten years after J. S. marries, or comes from Rome, the right of action accrues from the happening of the contingency, from which time the ſtatute ſhall be a bar, and not from the time of the promiſe. Godb. 437.

So in an action on the caſe wherein the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration that he would forbear to ſue the defendant, for ſome ſheep, killed by the defendant's dog, the defendant promiſed to make him ſatisfaction upon requeſt, and that ſuch a time he requeſted, &c. and it was held, that the right of action accrued from the requeſt, not from the time of killing the ſheep; that therefore the defendant could not plead the ſtatute of limitations, the requeſt being within ſix years, tho' the killing the ſheep, and promiſe of ſatisfaction was long before. Godb. 437. Shutford v. Boroughs adjudged. See 1 Lev. 48. Webb v. Martin. 1 Sid. 66. 1 Keb. 177. S. C. But if ſix years had elapſed after requeſt made, the defendant might have pleaded Non accrevit infra ſex annos.

So if a note or bill of exchange is given, payable at a certain time after date, the cauſe of action does not accrue, 'till after the expiration of the time ſpecified, and if an action is brought within ſix years after that time, the ſtatute is not a bar. But if the ſuit is not commenced within ſix years after that time, the defendant may plead that the cauſe of action did not accrue within ſix years, but he muſt not plead that he did not promiſe within ſix years, i. e. if he is the perſon, firſt liable to the payment, becauſe the promiſe is made at the time of making the note, &c. It may be otherwiſe in the caſe of an indorſer, who is not liable 'till default made by the drawer of the note, or accepter of the bill, but in his caſe, Non accrevit infra ſex annos is a ſafe and good plea.

For ſimilar caſes, vide 2 Salk. 422. 1 Vent. 191. 3 Keb. 613. Cro. Car. 245, 6. 333. 1 Jon. 252. 3 Mod. 110, &c. Allen 62. 2 Salk. 420. Comb. 26.

It is clearly agreed, that the ſtatute of limitations is a good plea in a court of equity. March 129. 1 Salk. 424.

But it ſeems to be agreed, that the ſtatute of limitations is no plea in the court of Admiralty, or Spiritual court, where they proceed according to their law, and in a matter in which they have conuzance. 6 Mod. 25, 26. 2 Salk. 424. 3 Keb. 366, 392.

Therefore it hath been agreed, that for a ſuit upon a contract ſuper altum mare, no prohibition ſhould go upon their refuſal of a plea of the ſtatute of limitations. 6 Mod. 26.

So it has been held not to be pleadable to a proceeding in the Spiritual court, pro violenta manuum injectione in clericum, becauſe the proceeding is pro reformatione morum, not for damages. 2 Salk. 424.

It hath been doubted, whether to a ſuit in the Admiralty for mariners wages, this ſtatute is a good plea; becauſe it is ſaid, that this is a matter properly determinable at Common law; and the allowing the Admiralty juriſdiction therein, only a matter of indulgence. 2 Salk. 424. 6 Mod. 25.

But this is now ſettled by the 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16. by which it is enacted, That all ſuits and actions in the court of Admiralty for ſeamens wages, ſhall be commenced and ſued within ſix years next after the cauſe of ſuch ſuits or actions ſhall accrue, and not after.

IV. The exceptions in 21 Jac. 1. c. 16—What will ſave a bar thereof.—And of the manner of pleading.

As to this it hath been adjudged, that the laſt proviſo in the ſtatute not only extends to thoſe actions therein enumerated, but alſo to an aſſumpſit, tho' not mentioned, and to all other actions on the caſe being of equal miſchief, and plainly within the intention of the legiſlature. Cro. Car. 245, 333. 2 Saund 120. 2 Mod. 71. 1 Sid. 455.

1. Exception in relation to infants.

As to this it hath been holden, that the ſtatute being general, infants had been included, had they not been particularly excepted. 1 Lev. 31.

It hath been holden, that if an infant, during his infancy, by his guardian bring an action, the defendant cannot plead the ſtatute of limitations; altho' the cauſe of action accrued ſix years before, and the words of the ſtatute are, that after his coming of age, &c. 2 Saund. 121.

It hath been held in Chancery, that if one receives the profits of an infant's eſtate, and ſix years after his coming of age, he brings a bill for an account, the ſtatute of limitations is as much a bar to ſuch a ſuit, as if he had brought an action of account at Common law; for this receipt of the profits of an infant's eſtate is not ſuch a truſt as, being a creature of the court of equity, the ſtatute ſhall be no bar to; for he might have his action of account againſt him at law, and therefore no neceſſity to come into this court for the account; for the reaſon why bills for an account are brought here, is from the nature of the demand, and that they may have a diſcovery of books, papers, and the party's oath, for the more eaſy taking of the account, which cannot be ſo well done at law; but if the infant lies by for ſix years after he comes of age, as he is barred of his action of account at law, ſo ſhall he be of his remedy in this court. Abr. Eq. 304. Lockey v. Lockey.

2. Exception in relation to merchants accounts.

As to this exception, it hath been a matter of much controverſy, whether it extends to all actions and accounts relating to merchants and merchandize, or to actions of account open and current only; the words of the ſtatute being, That all actions of treſpaſs, &c. all actions of account and upon the caſe, other than ſuch actions as concern the trade of merchants; ſo that by the words, other than ſuch actions, not being ſaid actions of account, it has been inſiſted that all actions concerning merchants are excepted. 1 Jon. 401. 2 Saund. 124, 125. 1 Lev. 287, 298. 2 Keb. 622. 1 Vent. 90. 1 Mod. 270. 2 Mod. 312. 2 Vern. 456.

But it is now ſettled, that accounts open and current only are within the ſtatute; that therefore if an account be ſtated and ſettled between merchant and merchant, and a ſum certain agreed to be due to one of them, if in ſuch caſe he to whom the money is due, does not bring his action within the limited time, he is barred by the ſtatute. Vide the authorities ſupra.

So it hath been adjudged, that by the exception in the ſtatute concerning merchants accounts, no other actions are excepted but actions of account. Carth. 226.

Alſo it hath been adjudged, that bills of exchange for value received, are not ſuch matters of account as are intended by the exception in the ſtatute of limitations, Carth. 226.

An open current account, between tradeſmen or others, is not within the ſtatute, ſuppoſing the laſt article of the debt in the account, was contracted within ſix years, otherwiſe, in ſuch caſe, the ſtatute is a bar.

3. Exception in relation to perſons beyond ſea.

It ſeems to have been agreed, that the exception as to perſons being beyond ſea, extends only where the creditors or plaintiffs are ſo abſent, and not to debtors or defendants, becauſe the firſt only are mentioned in the ſtatute; and this conſtruction has the rather prevailed, becauſe it was reputed the creditor's folly, that he did not file an original, and outlaw the debtor, which would have prevented the bar of the ſtatute. Cro. Car. 245, 333. 1 Jon. 252. 1 Lev. 143. 3 Mod. 311. 2 Lutw. 950. 1 Salk. 420.

But as the creditors being beyond ſea is ſaved by the 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. ſo now by the 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16. it is enacted, That if any perſon or perſons, againſt whom there is or ſhall be any cauſe of ſuit or action for ſeamens wages, or againſt whom there ſhall be any cauſe of action of treſpaſs, detinue, action ſur trover or replevin, for taking away goods or chattels, or of action of account, or upon the caſe, or of debt grounded upon any lending or contract without ſpecialty, of debt for arrearages of rent, or aſſault, menace, battery, wounding and impriſonment, or any of them, be, or ſhall be, at the time of any ſuch cauſe of ſuit or action given or accrued, fallen or come beyond the ſeas; that then ſuch perſon or perſons, who is or ſhall be intitled to any ſuch ſuit or action, ſhall be at liberty to bring the ſaid actions againſt ſuch perſon and perſons after their return from beyond the ſeas, within ſuch times as are limited for the bringing of the ſaid actions by the 21 Jac. 1. c. 16.

4. Where an executor or adminiſtrator is to ſue or be ſued.

A. received money belonging to a perſon who before died inteſtate, and to whom B. after ſuch receipt took out adminiſtration, and brought an action againſt A. to which he pleaded the ſtatute of limitations, the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed that adminiſtration was committed to him ſuch a year, which was infra ſex annos; though ſix years were expired ſince the receipt of the money, yet not being ſo ſince the adminiſtration committed, the action not barred by the ſtatute. 1 Salk. 421. Currey v. Stephenſon. Skin. 555. 4 Mod. 376. Latch. 335. S. C.

It is ſaid in general, that where one brings an action before the expiration of ſix years, and dies before judgment, the ſix years being then expired, this ſhall not prevent his executor. 2 Salk. 424-5.

But if an executor ſues upon a promiſſory note to the teſtator, and dies before judgment, and ſix years from the original cauſe of action are actually expired, and the executor brings a new action in four years after the firſt executor's death, the ſtatute of limitations ſhall be a bar to ſuch action; for though the debt does not become irrecoverable, by an abatement of the action after the ſix years elapſed by the plaintiff's death; yet the executor ſhould make a recent proſecution, to which the clauſe in the ſtatute, that provides a year after the reverſal of a judgment, &c. may be a good direction, or ſhew that he came as early as he could, becauſe there was a conteſt about the will, or right of adminiſtration; for the ſtatute was made for the benefit of the defendants, to free them from actions when their witneſſes were dead, or their vouchers loſt. Trin. 1 Geo. 2. Wilcox v. Huggins.

If there be no executor againſt whom the plaintiff may bring his action, he ſhall not be prejudiced by the ſtatute of limitations. nor ſhall any laches in ſuch caſe be imputed to him. 2 Vern. 695.

5. Where no juriſdiction to ſue in, or where hindred by ſome authority.

It ſeems agreed, that there being no courts, or the courts of juſtice being ſhut, is no plea to avoid the bar of the ſtatute of limitations; as where after the civil war an aſſumpſit was brought, that the defendant pleaded the ſtatute of limitations; to which the plaintiff replied, that a civil war had broke out, and that the government was uſurped by rebels. which hindered the courſe of juſtice, and by which the courts were ſhut up, and that within ſix years after the war ended he commenced his action; and this replication was held ill, for the ſtatute being general, muſt work upon all caſes which are not exempted by the exception. 1 Keb. 157. 1 Lev. 31. Carth. 157. 2 Salk. 420.

It is clearly agreed, that the defendant's being a member of parliament, and intitled to privilege, will not ſave a bar of the ſtatute; becauſe the plaintiff might have filed an original without being guilty of any breach of privilege. 1 Lev. 31, 111. Carth. 136-7.

It is ſaid, that if a man ſues in chancery, and, pending the ſuit there, the ſtatute of limitations attaches on his demand, and his bill is afterwards diſmiſſed, the matter being properly determinable at Common law; in ſuch caſe the court will preſerve the plaintiff's right, and will not ſuffer the ſtatute to be pleaded in bar to his demand. 1 Vern. 73, 74.

If the ſtatute of limitations be pleaded to an action, the plaintiff to ſave his action may reply, that he had commenced the ſuit in an inferior court within the time of limitation, and that it was removed to Weſtminſter by habeas corpus; and this ſhall be allowed by a favourable conſtruction of the ſtatute of limitations; although in ſtrictneſs the ſuit is commenced in the court above, when it is removed by habeas corpus. 1 Sid. 228. 3 Keb. 263. Bevin v. Chapman. 1 Lev. 143. S. C. Alſo vide 2 Salk. 424.

6. Where the ſuing out a writ will ſave a bar of the ſtatute.

It is clearly agreed, that the ſuing out an original will ſave a bar of the ſtatute of limitations, and that thereupon the defendant may be outlawed; and that if beyond ſea at the time of the outlawry, though it ſhall be reverſed after his return, yet the plaintiff may bring another original by journies accounts, and thereby take advantage of his firſt writ. Carth. 136. 1 Salk. 420. 3 Mod. 311.

Alſo it is agreed, that the ſuing out a latitat is a ſufficient commencement of a ſuit, to ſave the limitation of time, becauſe the latitat is the original of B. R. and may be continued on record as an original writ. 1 Sid. 53, 60. Carth. 233. 1 Salk. 421.

Alſo it hath been ruled, that to a plea of the ſtatute of limitations the plaintiff may reply, that he ſued out a latitat, and continued it down by a vicecomes non miſit breve, without concluding prout patet per recordum; for the latitat roll is only for the private uſe of the court, and no record. 2 Keb. 46. Bottle v. Wood.

The ſame is law, as to a bill of Middleſex.

But though the ſuing out an original, or latitat, will be a ſufficient commencement of a ſuit, yet the plaintiff, in order to make it effectual, muſt ſhew that he hath continued the writ to the time of the action brought. Carth. 144. 2 Salk. 420. 1 Lutw. 101, 254. 3 Mod. 33. That the attorney's writing the continuances on the writ in his chambers is ſufficient. 1 Sid. 53. 1 Keb. 140. Alſo vide Carth. 144. 2 Salk. 420. S. C. 1 Salk. 421. The continuances may be entered up, at any time, before the plaintiff replies. The proceſs ſued and filed, and the continuances thereon, muſt be ſet forth by the plaintiff in his replication.

7. Where a debt barred by the ſtatute ſhall be ſaid to be revived.

It is clearly agreed, that if after the ſix years the debtor acknowledges the debt, and promiſes payment thereof, that this revives it, and brings it out of the ſtatute; as if a debtor by promiſſory note, or ſimple contract, promiſes within ſix years of the action brought that he will pay the debt; though this was barred by the ſtatute, yet it is revived by the promiſe; for as the note itſelf was at firſt but an evidence of the debt, ſo that being barred the acknowledgment and promiſe is a new evidence of the debt, and being proved, will maintain an aſſumpſit for recovery of it. 1 Salk. 28, 29. Carth. 470. 5 Mod. 425, 426. 2 Show 126. 2 Vent. 151.

Alſo it hath been adjudged, that a conditional promiſe will revive a debt barred by the ſtatute of limitations; as where to an aſſumpſit by an executor for goods ſold and delivered by the teſtator, the defendant pleaded the ſtatute, and upon evidence it appeared, that the defendant within ſix years, being applied to by the executor for the debt ſaid, If you prove that I have the goods, I will pay you; which being fully proved at the trial, it was held that this conditional promiſe revived the debt; and that though made to the executor, after the death of the teſtator, was ſufficient to maintain the iſſue; becauſe the promiſe did not give any new cauſe of action, but only revived the old cauſe, and was of no other uſe, but to prevent the bar by the ſtatute of limitations. Carth. 470. Heylin v. Haſtings. 1 Salk. 29. S. C. 5 Mod. 425. S. C. cited.

So it hath been held that a bare acknowledgement of the debt within ſix years of the action, is ſufficient to revive it, and prevent the ſtatute, though no promiſe was made. Carth. 470.

But if an indebitatus aſſumpſit for goods ſold, be brought againſt four perſons, who plead the ſtatute of limitations, and it be found that one of them promiſed within ſix years, there can be no judgment againſt him; for the contract being intire, it muſt be found that they all promiſed. 2 Vent. 151.

It ſeems to be the doctrine of the courts of equity, that if a man by will or deed ſubject his lands to the payment of his debts, debts barred by the ſtatute of limitations ſhall be paid, for they are debts in equity, aad the duty remains; and the ſtatute hath not extinguiſhed that, though it hath taken away the remedy. 1 Salk. 154. 2 Vern. 141.

Alſo it hath been ruled in equity, that if a man has a debt due to him by note, or a book debt, and has made no demand of it for ſix years, ſo that he is barred by the ſtatute of limitations; yet if the debtor, or his executor, after the ſix years, puts out an advertiſement in the Gazette, or any other news-paper, that all perſons who have any debts owing to them, may apply to ſuch a place, and that they ſhall be paid; this (though general, and therefore might be intended of legal ſubſiſting debts only) yet amounts to ſuch an acknowledgment of that debt which was barred, as will revive the right, and bring it out of the ſtatute again. Abr. Eq. 305. Andrews v. Brown.

Of pleading.

It ſeems to be admitted, that the ſtatute of limitations muſt be pleaded poſitively by him that would take advantage thereof; and that the ſame cannot be given in evidence, eſpecially in an aſſumpſit, becauſe the ſtatute ſpeaks of a time paſt, and relates to the time of making the promiſe. 1 Lev. 111. 1 Sid. 253. and ſee Cro. Jac. 115.

But in debt for rent, upon nil debet pleaded, the ſtatute of limitations may be given in evidence, for the ſtatute has made it no debt at the time of the plea pleaded, the words being in the preſent tenſe. 1 Salk. 278. Per Holt. Certainly it is otherwiſe in an aſſumpſit, where the general iſſue, viz. Non aſſumpſit, only, is pleaded, the only queſtion is, Did or did not the defendant, ever promiſe?

In replevin the defendant pleaded Not guilty De capt' prædict' infra ſex annos jam ultimo elapſos; and though it was urged, that this was the ſame with pleading non cepit, and if he did not take, he could not be guilty of the detainer; and if this way of pleading were not allowed, the ſtatute would be entirely evaded as to this action; yet the plea was held ill, becauſe he ought to have anſwered to the detainer, as well as to the taking; alſo a thing may be lawfully diſtrained, although unlawfully kept; as by being put into a caſtle, &c. by which means it could not be replevied. 1 Sid. 81. Arundel v. Trevil. 1 Keb. 279. Livery, (Fr. livre, i. e. inſigne geſtamen, or liverer, i. e. tradere) Hath three ſignifications. In one ſenſe, it is uſed for a ſuit of clothes, cloak, gown, hat, &c. which a nobleman or gentleman gives to his ſervants or followers, with cogniſance or without; mentioned in 1 R. 2. c. 7. and divers other ſtatutes: and formerly great men gave liveries to ſeveral, who were not of their family, to engage them in their quarrels for that year; but afterwards it was ordained, that no man of any condition whatſoever, ſhould give any livery, but to his domeſticks, his officers, or counſel learned in the law. By 1 R. 2. it was prohibited on pain of impriſonment; and the 1 Hen. 4. c. 7. made the offenders liable to ranſom at the King's will, &c. which ſtatute was farther confirmed and explained, anno 2 & 7 Hen. 4. and 8 Hen. 6. c. 4. and yet this offence was ſo deeply rooted, that Ed. 4. was obliged to confirm the former ſtatutes, and further to extend the meaning of them, adding a penalty of 5 l. to every one that gives ſuch livery, aud the like on every one retained for maintenance either by writing, oath, or promiſe, for every month. 8 Ed. 4. c. 2. But moſt of the above ſtatutes are repealed by 3 Car. 1. c. 4.

Livery in the ſecond ſignification, was a delivery of poſſeſſion to thoſe tenants who held of the King in capite, or knights ſervice; as the King by his prerogative hath primer ſeiſin of all lands and tenements ſo holden of him. Staundf. Prærog. 12.

In the third ſenſe, livery was the writ which lay for the heir of age, to obtain the poſſeſſion or ſeiſin of his lands at the King's hands. F. N. B. 155. By the ſtatute 12 Car. 2. c. 24. All wardſhips, liveries, &c. are taken away.

Livery of Seiſin, (liberatio ſeiſinæ) Is a delivery of poſſeſſion of lands, tenements and hereditaments, unto one that hath a right to the ſame; being a ceremony in the Common law uſed in the conveyance of lands, &c. where an eſtate of fee-ſimple, fee-tail, or other freehold paſſeth. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 18. Weſt. Symb. par. 1. lib. 2. And it is a teſtimonial of the willing departing of him who makes the livery, from the thing whereof the livery is made; and of the willing acceptance of the other party receiving the livery; firſt invented, that the common people might have knowledge of the paſſing or alteration of eſtates from man to man, and thereby be better able to try in whom the right of poſſeſſion of lands and tenements were, if the ſame ſhould be conteſted, and they ſhould be impanelled on juries, or otherwiſe have to do concerning the ſame. Weſt. Ibid. This livery may be made of a houſe, lands, or any thing corporeal; but not of incorporeal things. Where a houſe and lands are conveyed, the houſe is the principal, and the lands acceſſory; and there the livery muſt be made, and not upon the land. 2 Rep. 31. 4 Leon. 374.

Of livery and ſeiſin there are two kinds.

A livery in deed,
and
Livery in law.

Livery in deed, is when the feoffor taketh the ring of the door, &c. and delivereth the ſame to the feoffee, in the name of ſeiſin. 1 Inſt. 48. 6 Rep. 26. And livery in deed may be either by words and ſome ſolemn act; or by words without any ſolemn act, if the feoffor and feoffee are on the land. Wood's Inſt. 237.

Livery in law, is when the feoffor himſelf being in view of the houſe or land, ſaith to the feoffee, after delivery of the deed, I give to you yonder land, &c. to you and your heirs, go into the ſame and take poſſeſſion accordingly: now if the feoffee enters on the land, during the life-time of the feoffor, it is a good feoffment and livery. 1 Inſt. 48, 52. If a deed of feoffment be delivered upon the land, in the name of ſeiſin of all the lands, it will be a good livery and ſeiſin; but the bare delivery of a deed upon the land, though it may make the deed, it ſhall not amount to livery and ſeiſin, without thoſe words, 1 Inſt, 52, 181. If one makes a feoffment to four perſons, and ſeiſin is delivered to three of them, in the name of all; the eſtate is veſted in all of them. 3 Rep. 26. And if lands lie in divers places in one county, livery and ſeiſin in one parcel in one place, in the name of the reſt is ſufficient; though if the lands lie in ſeveral counties, it is otherwiſe; for then livery and ſeiſin muſt be in every county. Lit. 61.

Precautions to be taken.

No perſon ought to be in the houſe, or upon the land, when livery is made, but the feoffor and feoffee; all others are to be removed from it: if the leſſor, feoffor, makes livery and ſeiſin, the leſſee being upon the land contradicting it, the livery is void. Cro. Eliz. 321. A leſſor enfeoffed a ſtranger, and came to make livery and ſeiſin; the leſſee's wife being in the houſe, the leſſor enters, and by force turns the wife into the backſide, which was part of the land let, and then he makes livery in the houſe, in the name of all the lands let, as the woman was remaining all the while upon the land, and contradicting the livery, the livery was held void: but if ſhe had voluntarily gone out of the houſe, upon part of the land; or the leſſor had turned her into the ſtreet, ſo that ſhe had not been upon any part of the land; it had been good. Daliſ. Rep. 94.

Of enfeoffing, or making of feoffments, &c. and the operation of livery and ſeiſin.

If a man agrees with me to make a feoffment upon condition, and after makes a charter of feoffment without any condition, and then makes livery and ſeiſin, ſecundum formam chartæ, this is abſolute without any condition; for the livery is not made according to the agreement, but according to the charter. 34 Aſſ. 1. But if a perſon enfeoffs another, as a ſecurity for the payment of money, and afterwards makes livery of ſeiſin, to him and his heirs generally; the eſtate hath been holden to be upon condition, ſince the intent of the parties was not changed, but continued at the time of the livery. 1 Inſt 222. And where a charter of feoffment is made, and in the deed there is no condition; but when the feoffor would make a livery of ſeiſin to the feoffee, by force of the deed, he, expreſſing the eſtate, makes livery of ſeiſin, upon condition, the feoffment is of force as if it had not been made. Lit. Sect. 359. 2 Danv. Abr. 13.

Of leaſes, &c. and livery.

A man makes a leaſe for years, remainder to another for life, in tail or in fee: here livery and ſeiſin, in deed muſt be made to the leſſee for years; without which nothing paſſeth to him in remainder, it being for the benefit of him in remainder, and not the leſſee, who hath only a term: and if the leſſee entereth, before livery and ſeiſin, made to him, the livery ſhall be void. Lit. 60. 1 Inſt. 49. Wood's Inſt. 238. A leaſe for years is granted to A. B. with remainder to his right heirs, whereon livery is made; the remainder is void, becauſe there is not any perſon in eſſe, who can preſently take by the livery; and every livery ought to have its operation preſently. 4 Leon. 67. There was a leaſe made to a man and his wife, and their daughter; to hold from Michaelmas next, and the leſſor made livery after Michaelmas; this was adjudged good, being made by the leſſor himſelf; but it had been otherwiſe, if it had been to be done by attorney, or if the leſſor had made livery before Michaelmas. 2 Rol. Rep. 109. Leaſe for twenty years to a man to commence from a time paſt; and after the expiration of the ſaid term, then to him and his wife, and their ſon, for their lives, and the longeſt liver of them, with a letter of attorney to make livery and ſeiſin, &c. It is a good leaſe for years, with remainder for life, if livery and ſeiſin be made by the attorney at the time of executing the leaſe; but if the livery and ſeiſin be made by the attorney ſometime afterwards, in ſuch caſe it is ſaid the livery is void. Moor 14. A man may make a letter of attorney to deliver ſeiſin by force of the deed, which may be contained in the ſame deed; and a letter of attorney may be likewiſe made to receive livery and ſeiſin. 5 Rep. 91. 1 Inſt. 49, 52.

Of the manner of making livery, &c.

The manner of making livery of ſeiſin is thus: the parties to the deed, grantor and grantee, or the attornies by them authoriſed, come to the door of the houſe, or ſome part of the land; and there having declared the cauſe of their meeting, in the preſence of witneſſes, they read the deed or the contents thereof; and if by attorney, the power of attorney; and then, if it be a houſe they take the ring, latch or key of the door, (all the people being out of the houſe) or if it be land, a clod of earth, and a twig or bough of one of the trees thereon; and the ſame ring or key, clod, &c. with the deed they deliver to the grantee or his attorney, ſaying the uſual words, viz. I A. B. do hereby deliver unto you C. D. poſſeſſion and ſeiſin of this meſſuage or tenement, &c. To hold to you, your heirs and aſſigns, according to the true intent and meaning of this indenture, &c. And afterwards, if it be a houſe, the grantee, &c. enters firſt alone, and ſhuts the door; and then he opens it, and lets in others. Accomp. Convey. 2*d edit. vol.* 1.

Livery and ſeiſin indorſed on the deed.

To hold to him, his heirs, &c. according to the contents, and true meaning of the within written indenture, in the preſence of, &c.

If a houſe or lands belong to an office, by grant of the office by deed, the houſe or land paſſeth without livery: and by a fine, which is a feoffment of record; by a leaſe and releaſe; bargain and ſale by deed inrolled; exchange, &c. a freehold paſſeth, without livery; and ſo in a deed of feoffment to uſes, by virtue of the ſtatute of uſes. 1 Inſt. 49. So that livery and ſeiſin is not ſo commonly uſed as formerly; neither can an eſtate be created now by livery and ſeiſin only, without writing. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. See Black. Com. 2 V. 311.

Livery and Ouſter le Main, Is where by inqueſt before the eſcheator, it was found that nothing was held of the King; then he was immediately commanded by writ, to put from his hands, the lands taken into the King's hands. Stat. 29 Ed. 1. 28 Ed. 3. c. 4. Vide Ouſter le Maine.

Livery-Men of London. In the companies of London, livery-men are choſen out of the freemen, as aſſiſtants to the maſters and wardens, in matters of council, and for better government; and if any one of the company refuſe to take upon him the office, he may be fined, and an action

London, The metropolis of this kingdom, formerly called Auguſta, has been built above three thouſand years, and flouriſhed for fifteen hundred years. Its exchange, where merchants of all nations meet, is not to be equalled; and for ſtatelineſs of buildings, extent of bounds, learning, arts and ſciences, traffick and trade, this city gives place to none in the world. Stow.

It is divided into twenty-ſix wards, over each of which there is an alderman; and is governed by a lord mayor, who is choſen yearly, and preſented to the King, or in his abſence to his juſtices, or the barons of the Exchequer at Weſtminſter. Chart. K. Hen. 3.

The lord mayor of London, for the time being, is chief juſtice of gaol delivery; eſcheator within the liberties, and bailiff of the river Thames, &c. London Aſſurance. See Inſurance.

Longellus, Is a word uſed in Thorn's Chronicle, and it ſignifies a coverlet. Cowell.

Longitude of a place, In geography, is an arch of the equator intercepted between the firſt meridian, and the meridian paſſing through the propoſed place; which is always equal to the angle at the pole, formed by the firſt meridian, and the meridian of the place.

The firſt meridian may be placed at pleaſure, paſſing through any place, as London, Paris, Teneriffe, &c. but with us it is generally fixed at London; and the degrees of longitude counted from it, will be either eaſt, or weſt, according as they lie on the eaſt or weſt ſide of that meridian.

In other words, to explain the ſubject in a familiar manner, to thoſe wholly unacquainted with it, as by the latitude we learn the diſtance north or ſouth, ſo by knowing the longitude, we know the diſtance from any given place, eaſt or weſt; allowing for the difference of a degree of longitude at the equator (or middle of the globe) and at the artic circle, &c.

The longitude is, as before deſcribed, in other words, the diſtance of a place, eaſt or weſt, from that imaginary line drawn from north to ſouth, thro' a place fixed on for that purpoſe, and called the firſt meridian, i. e. the meridian or boundary from whence we reckon, eaſt or weſt; ſo that by aſcertaining the latitude and longitude of a place, it's ſituation on the natural or artificial globe, with reſpect to all other places, is known.

For the diſcovery of the longitude at ſea, the Lord Admiral and ſeveral others are appointed commiſſioners, to receive propoſals, &c. and if they are ſatisfied of the probability of ſuch diſcovery, the commiſſioners of the navy have power to make bills for any ſum not exceeding 2000 l. to make the experiment; and the firſt diſcoverer of a method for finding the longitude, is intitled to a reward of 10,000 l. if he determines the ſame to one degree of a circle, 15,000 l. if to two thirds of that diſtance, and 20,000 l. if to one half of a degree, to be paid by the treaſurer of the navy. 12 Ann. Seſſ. 2. c. 15. The commiſſioners for diſcovering the longitude, may apply part of the 2000 l. ordered for experiments, to be laid out in making a ſurvey, and fixing the longitude and latitude of the chief ports, and headlands, of our coaſts, for rendering the diſcovery at ſea uſeful. See Stat. 14 Geo. 2. c. 39. 26 Geo. 9. c. 25.

Loquela, An imparlance.——Petrus de S. debet 20 s. pro habenda loquela in curia domini Regis contra Will. de F. Rot. Pipæ 2 Johann. Linc. And loquela ſine die, was a reſpite in law to an indefinite time. Paroch. Antiq. 210,

Lord, (Dominus) Is a word or title of honour, diverſly uſed, being attributed not only to thoſe who are noble by birth or creation, otherwiſe called Lords of Parliament, and peers of the realm; but to ſuch, ſo called, by the curteſy of England, as all the ſons of a duke, and the eldeſt ſon of an earl; and to perſons honourable by office, as the Lord Chief Juſtice, &c. and ſometimes to a private perſon, that hath the fee of a manor, and conſequently the homage of the tenants within his manor; for by his tenants he is called Lord. In this laſt ſignification, it is moſt uſed in our law books; where it is divided into Lord

Lord Paramount, and Lord Meſne; and Very Lord, &c. Old Nat. Br. 79. See Nobility, Parliament, Peers.

Lord High Admiral. See Admiral.

Lord in groſs, F. N. B. fol. 3. Is he that is lord, having no manor, as the King in reſpect of his Crown, Ibid. fol. 5. and fol. 8. there is a caſe wherein a private man is lord in groſs, viz. A man makes a gift in tail of all the land he hath, to hold of him, and dieth; his heir hath but a ſeigniory in groſs.

Lord of a manor. See Copyhold.

Lord and Vaſſal. In the time of the feodal tenures, the grantor of land was called the proprietor, or lord; being the perſon who retained the dominion or ultimate property of the feud or fee: and the grantee, who had only the uſe of poſſeſſion, according to the term of the grant, was ſtiled the feudatory or vaſſal, which was only another name, for the tenant or holder of the lands; though, on account of the prejudices we have juſtly conceived againſt the doctrines, which were afterwards grafted on this ſyſtem, we now uſe the word vaſſal, opprobriouſly, as ſynonymous to ſlave or bondman. Black. Com. 2 V. 53.

Lords Marchers. See Wales.

Lorimers, (Fr. Lormiers, from the Lat. lorum) Is one of the companies of London, that make bits for bridles, ſpurs, and ſuch like ſmall iron ware, mentioned in the ſtat. 1 R. 2. c. 12.

Loſinga, Signifies a flatterer, or ſycophant. And Godwin, writing of the Biſhop of Norwich ſays of Biſhop Herbert; Surgit in eccleſiâ monſtrum genitore loſinga. Brompt. Chron. pag. 991.

Lot, A contribution, or duty. See Scot.

Lot or Loth, Is the thirteenth diſh, of lead in the mines of Derbyſhire, which belongs to the King. Eſcheat. Ann. 16 Ed. 1.

Lotherwite, or Leyerwit, Is a liberty or privilege to take amends of him that defileth your bond-woman without licence, Raſtall's Expoſition of Words; ſo that it is an amends for lying with a bond-woman. Cowell.

Lotteries. In late reigns ſeveral ſtatutes have been made for raiſing money for the uſe of government, by way of lottery, and the ſubjecting duties on beer and ale, malt, paper, &c. for the repayment thereof: As the 5 & 6 W. 3. c. 7. to raiſe one million, by 10*l.* tickets, and the fortunate adventurers to have annuities, &c. The 10 Ann. cap. 19. for raiſing two millions at 6 per cent. intereſt. The 1 Geo. 1. c. 1. to raiſe and complete 1,400,000*l.* The 5 Geo. 1. c. 4. for raiſing the ſum of 500,000*l.* by 3*l.* tickets; and annuities of 4 l. per cent. to the fortunate. The 7 Geo. 1. cap. 20. for raiſing 700,000 l. by lottery, tickets at 10 l. each And the 8 & 9 Geo. 1. to raiſe the like ſum, &c. The 12 Geo. 1. c. 2. to raiſe one million, the higheſt benefit of fortunate adventurers, to be 20,000*l.* and blanks of 10*l.* tickets to have 7 l. 10 s. attended with annuities at 3 l. per cent. And the 4 Geo. 2. cap. 9. for raiſing 1,200,000 l. by way of lottery on the ſame conditions, &c. Theſe lotteries are publicly drawn by commiſſioners appointed; and the annuities, and intereſt for prizes and blanks, are paid till redemption by parliament.

By the 8 Geo. 1. c. 2. for ſuppreſſion of private lotteries, no perſon ſhall ſet up or keep any office of ſales of houſes, lands, plate, goods, &c. for improvement of ſmall ſums of money, or expoſe to ſale any houſes or goods by way of lottery, lots, tickets or numbers, or publiſh propoſals relating to the ſame, &c. on pain of forfeiting 500*l.* And adventurers in ſuch ſales to forfeit double the ſum contributed. Perſons keeping offices, of places for ſuch ſales of houſes, or goods, &c. by way of lottery, cards or dice, and any game to be determined by the lot or drawing, or by any machine or device of chance; and publiſhing propoſals, or delivering out tickets to that end, ſhall forfeit 200 l. being convicted before a juſtice of peace, leviable by diſtreſs, &c. And juſtices refuſing to do what is required, are liable to 10 l. penalty, by 12 Geo. 2. c. 28.

No perſons ſhall ſell the chance of any ticket, in a public lottery, for leſs than the whole time of drawing; nor any ſhares therein, or receive money on conſideration of repayment, if tickets prove unfortunate, &c. on forfeiture of treble the ſum received; to be recovered in the courts at Weſtminſter, &c. See 5 Geo. 1. c. 9. Laws againſt private lotteries extended to Ireland. 29 Geo. 2. c. 7. 30 Geo. 2. c. 5. Love. Provoking unlawful love, was one ſpecies of the crime of witchcraft, puniſhable by ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. cap. 12.

Lourcurdus, A ram or bell-wether. Cowell.

Lurgulary, Is the caſting any corrupt or poiſonous thing in the water, which was lowrgulary, and felony; and ſome think it a corruption of burglary. Stat. pro Stratis London. Anno 1573.

Lowbellers, Are ſuch perſons as go out in the night-time with a light and a bell, by the ſight and noiſe whereof birds ſitting upon the ground become ſtupified, and ſo are covered and taken with a net: The word is derived from the Sax. low, which ſignified a flame of fire. Antiq. Warwick. p. 4.

Lowbote, A recompence for the death of a man, killed in a tumult, or, as we ſay, by the mob. Cowell.

Ludi de Rege & Regina, Playing at cards, ſo called, becauſe there are Kings and Queens in the pack. Cowell.

Luminare, A lamp or candle, ſet burning on the altar of any church or chapel; for the maintenance whereof lands and rent charges were frequently given to pariſh churches, &c. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Lunatick, Is defined to be a perſon, who is ſometimes of good and ſound memory and underſtanding, and ſometimes not: aliquando gaudet lucidis intervallis; and ſo long as he hath not underſtanding, he is Non compos mentis. As a lunatick, without memory, underſtands not what he does: in criminal caſes, his acts ſhall not be imputed to him; unleſs he kill or offer to kill the King, when by our old books he might be guilty of treaſon, and puniſhed as a traitor; though this is contradicted by the late opinions. 1 Inſt. 247. 3 Inſt. 46. H. P. C. 10, 43. And it is ſaid, if one who has committed a capital offence, become lunatick and non compos before conviction, he ſhall not be tried; and if after conviction, that he ſhall not be executed. 1 Hawk. P. C. 2. Whilſt a man is lunatick, and he doth a criminal act, it is his madneſs, and not his intention, which is the cauſe of the action, and actus non facit reum, niſi mens ſit rea; and for that reaſon his puniſhment could not be an example to others. Plowd. 19. 1 Inſt. 247. But he who incites a madman or lunatick to do a murder, or other crime, is a principal offender, and as much puniſhable as if he had done it himſelf. H. P. C. 43. Keyl. 53.

By the ancient Common law, a dangerous madman may be kept in priſon till he recovers his ſenſes. Bro Coron. 101. And by a late ſtatute, (which vide poſt) lunaticks or madmen wandering may be apprehended by a juſtice's warrant, and locked up and chained if neceſſary; or be ſent to their laſt legal ſettlement; and two juſtices, by order, may charge their eſtates for their maintenance, &c. Stat. 12 Ann. Seſſ. 2. c. 23.

A lunatick cannot lawfully promiſe or contract for any thing; and the grants of lunaticks and infants are parallel. 1 Inſt. 247. 3 Mod. 301. Every deed made by a lunatick, who is non compos, is voidable; though a lunatick, himſelf, making a purchaſe, if he recovers his memory, he may agree to it, and afterwards his heir cannot diſagree to it: but otherwiſe his deeds may be avoided by his heir; except he levy a fine, or do any other act of record, &c. Lit. 405, 406. 4 Rep. 126. The deed of a lunatick ſhall not be avoidable by himſelf; for he ſhall not be allowed to work his own diſability, by making himſelf a madman. 4 Rep. 124.

In equity a lunatick may be relieved againſt his own acts; and where a purchaſe has been obtained of him, at an under-value, or he hath made a ſettlement, &c. the deeds, fines, &c. in ſuch a caſe, have been ſet aſide, on a bill brought by the lunatick and his committee. 2 Vern 678. Abr. Ca. Eq. 278, 279.

If a lunatick ſue an action, it muſt be ſued in his own name; and if an action be brought againſt the lunatick, he is to appear by attorney, if of full age, and by a guardian, if under age. 1 Inſt. 135.

There are commiſſions of lunacy, iſſued out of the Chancery, to examine whether the perſon be lunatick or not; and to make inqueſts of his lands, &c. Though if lands are ſeiſed by the King, by virtue of a commiſſion of lunacy, and he grants the cuſtody of the lunatick, ſine computo reddendo; if he afterwards is of ſound memory, he ſhall have an action of account for the profits. Dyer 25. The King hath the guardianſhip of the lands of lunaticks; but not the ſole intereſt in granting, and the cuſtody of their lands or bodies; as he hath of ideots: And the King, or other guardian of a lunatick, is accountable to him, his executors, &c. 4 Rep. 124.

As a lunatick may recover his underſtanding, and have diſcretion enough to diſpoſe and govern his lands, the King ſhall not have the cuſtody of him and his lands; for after he has recovered his memory and underſtanding, he is to have his eſtate at his own diſpoſal. Dyer 302. 3 Salk. 301.

The ſtatute 17 Ed. 2 cap. 10. ordains, that the King is to provide that the lands of lunaticks be ſafely kept, and they and their families maintained by the profits; and the reſidue ſhall be kept for their uſe, and be delivered to them, when they come to their right mind; the King taking nothing to his own uſe, &c.

A lunatick found by inquiſition, upon a commiſſion of lunacy, whoſe perſon and eſtate are committed to particular truſtees, may not marry before he or ſhe be declared of ſound mind, by the Lord Chancellor, &c. If any ſuch do, the marriage is void, by 15 Geo. 2. c. 30. See 4 Geo. 2. c. 10. and Ideot.

By the ſtatute 17 Geo. 2. c. 5. Two juſtices may by warrant directed to the conſtable, &c. cauſe ſuch, as by lunacy are ſo far diſordered in their ſenſes, that they may be dangerous to be permitted to go abroad, to be apprehended and kept ſafely locked up or ſent to their laſt legal ſettlement. The charges (being proved on oath) of removal, keeping and curing ſuch perſon, to be paid by order of two juſtices out of the lunatick's real or perſonal eſtate; but if he has none, or not more than ſufficient to maintain his family, then to be paid by the pariſh. Lunacy may be given in evidence, on a plea of non eſt factum. 2 Strange 1104. Magna Aſſiſa eligenda, Is a writ directed to the ſheriff, to ſummon four lawful knights before the juſtices of aſſiſe, there upon their oaths to chooſe twelve knights of the vicinage, &c. to paſs upon the great aſſiſe, between A. B. plaintiff, and C. D. defendant, &c. Reg. Orig. 8.

Magna Charta. The great charter of liberties granted in the ninth year of King Hen. 3. It is ſo called, either for the excellency of the laws therein contained, or becauſe there was another charter called the Charter of the Foreſt eſtabliſhed with it, which was the leſs of the two; or in regard of the great troubles in obtaining it, and the remarkable ſolemnity in denouncing excommunication and anathema's againſt the breakers thereof: Spelman calls it, Auguſtiſſimum Anglicarum Libertatum Diploma. & Sacra Anchora.

Edward the Confeſſor granted to the church and ſtate ſeveral privileges and liberties by charter; and ſome were granted by the charter of King Hen. 1. Afterwards Stephen, and Hen. 2. confirmed the charter of Hen. 1. and Rich. 1. took an oath at his coronation to obſerve all juſt laws, which was an implicit confirmation of that charter; and King John took the like oath: this King likewiſe, after a difference between him and the Pope, and being imbroiled in wars at home and abroad, particularly confirmed the aforementioned charter, with further privileges, but ſoon after broke it, and thereupon the barons took up arms againſt him, and his reign ended in wars. To him ſucceeded Hen. 3. who in the 37th year of his reign, after it had been ſeveral times confirmed by him, and as often broken, came to Weſtminſter-hall, and in the preſence of the nobility and biſhops, with lighted candles in their hands, Magna Charta was read; the King all that while laying his hand on his breaſt, and at laſt ſolemnly ſwearing faithfully and inviolably to obſerve all things therein contained, as he was a man, a Chriſtian, a Soldier, and a King: then the biſhops extinguiſhed the candles, and threw them on the ground; and every one ſaid, Thus let him be extinguiſhed, and ſtink in hell, who violates this charter: Upon which the bells were ſet on ringing, and all perſons by their rejoicing approved of what was done.

But, notwithſtanding this very ſolemn confirmation of this charter, the very next year King Henry invaded the rights of his people, till the barons levied war againſt him; and after various ſucceſs, he confirmed this charter, and the Charter of the Foreſt, in the parliament of Marlbridge, and in the 52d year of his reign. His ſon, Edward 1. confirming theſe charters, in the 25th year of his reign made an explanation of the liberties therein granted to the people; adding ſome which are new, called Articuli ſuper Chartas: And Magna Charta was not only then confirmed, but more than thirty times ſince. Co. Lit. 81.

This excellent ſtatute, or rather body of ſtatute law at that time, ſo beneficial to the ſubject, and of ſuch great equity, is the moſt ancient written law of the land: And it is divided into thirty-eight chapters; the 1ſt of which after the ſolemn preamble of its being made for the honour of God, the exaltation of holy church, and amendment of the kingdom, &c. ordains, That the church of England ſhall be free, and all eccleſiaſtical perſons enjoy their rights and privileges. The 2d is of the nobility, knights-ſervice, reliefs, &c. The 3d concerns heirs, and their being in ward. The 4th directs guardians for heirs within age, who are not to commit waſte. The 5th relates to the cuſtody of lands, &c. of heirs, and delivery of them up when the heirs are of age. The 6th is concerning the marriage of heirs. The 7th appoints dower to women, after the death of their huſbands, a third part of the lands, &c. The 8th relates to ſheriffs and their bailiffs, and requires that they ſhall not ſeize lands for debts where there are goods &c. the ſurety not to be diſtrained, where the principal is ſufficient. The 9th grants to London, and all cities and towns, their ancient liberties. The 10th orders, that no diſtreſs ſhall be taken for more rent than is due, &c. By the 11th the court of Common Pleas is to be held in a certain place. The 12th gives aſſiſes for remedy, on diſſeiſin of lands, &c. The 13th relates to aſſiſes of darreign preſentment, brought by eccleſiaſticks. The 14th enacts, that no freeman ſhall be amerced for a ſmall fault, but in proportion to the offence; and by the oaths of lawful men. The 15th, no town ſhall be diſtrained to make bridges, &c. but ſuch as of ancient times have been accuſtomed. The 16th is for repairing of ſea-banks and ſewers. The 17th prohibits ſheriffs, coroners, &c. from holding pleas of the crown. The 18th enacts, that the King's debtor dying, the King ſhall be firſt paid his debt, &c. The 19th directs the manner of levying purveyance for the King's houſe. The 20th concerns caſtleward, where a knight was to be diſtrained for money for keeping his caſtle, on his neglect. The 21ſt forbids ſheriffs, bailiffs, &c. to take the horſes or carts of any perſon to make carriage without paying for it. By the 22d the King is to have lands of felons a year and a day, and afterwards the lord of the fee. The 23d requires wears to be put down on rivers. The 24th directs the writ præcipe in capite, for lords againſt tenants offering wrong, &c. The 25th declares that there ſhall be but one meaſure throughout the land. The 26th, inquiſition of life and member, to be granted freely. The 27th relates to knight's-ſervice, petit-ſerjeanty, and other ancient tenures, (taken away together with wardſhip, &c. by 12 Car. 2.) The 28th directs, that no man ſhall be put to his law, on the bare ſuggeſtion of another, but by lawful witneſſes. The 29th, no freeman ſhall be diſſeiſed of his freehold, impriſoned and condemned, but by judgment of his peers, or by law. The 30th requires that merchant ſtrangers be civilly treated, &c. The 31ſt relates to tenures coming to the King by eſcheat. By the 32d no freeman ſhall ſell land, but ſo that the reſidue may anſwer the ſervices. The 33d, patrons of abbeys, &c. ſhall have the cuſtody of them in the time of vacation. The 34th, a woman to have an appeal for the death of her huſband. The 35th directs the keeping of the county-court monthly, and alſo the times of holding the ſheriff's torn, and view of frank-pledge. The 36th makes it unlawful to give lands to religious houſes in Mortmain. The 37th relates to eſcuage, and ſubſidy, to be taken as uſual. And the 38th ratifies and confirms every article of this great charter of liberties.

By the ſtat. 25 Ed. 1. it is ordained, that the great charter ſhall be taken as the Common law. And all ſtatutes made againſt Magna Charta, are declared to be void by 43 Ed. 3.

Magna precaria, A great or general reap-day. And in 21 R. 2. the lord of the manor of Harrow on the Hill, in Com. Middleſex, had a cuſtom that by ſummons of his bailiff upon a general reap-day, then called Magna precaria, the tenants ſhould do a certain number of days work for him; every tenant that had a chimney, being obliged to ſend a man. Phil. Purvey. p. 145.

Magnus Portus, The town and port of Portſmouth.

Mahomeria, The temple of Mahomet; and becauſe the geſtures, noiſe, and ſongs there, were ridiculous to the Chriſtians, therefore they called antick dancing, and any thing of ridicule a Momerie. Mat. Paris.

Maids. Taking them away unmarried, without conſent of father or mother or their guardians, is puniſhable by ſtat. 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 8.

Maiden Aſſiſes, Is when at any aſſiſes no perſon is condemned to die.

Maiden Rents, A noble paid by every tenant in the manor of Builth, in Com. Radnor, at their marriage; anciently given to the lord for his omitting the cuſtom of Marcheta, whereby he was to have the firſt night's lodging with his tenant's wife; but it was more probably a fine for a licence to marry a daughter.

Maignagium, (Fr. maignen, i. e. faber ærarius) A braſier's ſhop; though ſome ſay it ſignifies a houſe.—— Idem hugo tenebat unum maignagium in foro ejuſdem villæ, &c. Lib. Rameſ. ſect. 265.

Maihem or Mayhem, (maihemium, from the Fr. mehaigne, i. e. membri mutilationem) Signifies a maim, wound, or corporal hurt, by which a man loſeth the uſe of any member, that is or might be of any defence to him: As if a man's ſkull be broke, or any bone broken in any other part of the body; a foot, hand, finger, or joint of a foot, or any member be cut off; if by any wound the ſinews be made to ſhrink; or where any one is caſtrated; or if an eye be put out, any fore-tooth broke, &c. But the cutting off an ear, or noſe, the breaking of the hinder teeth, and ſuch like, was held no maihem; as they were not a weakening of a perſon's ſtrength, but a disfiguring and deformity of the body. Glanv. lib. 4. cap. 7. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. Britton, cap. 25. S. P. C. lib. 1. cap. 41.

By ſtatute, if any one on purpoſe, by malice fore-thought, and lying in wait, ſhall cut of the noſe, put out the eye, diſable the tongue, or cut off or diſable any limb or member of any of the King's ſubjects, with intent to maim or disfigure him, the perſon offending, his aiders, abettors, &c. are guilty of felony, without benefit of clergy; though no attainder of ſuch felony ſhall corrupt the blood, or forfeit the dower of the wife, lands or goods of the offender. Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 1.

In theſe caſes of maiming, a voluntary act, the law judgeth of malice: And if a man attack another, of malice fore-thought in order to murder him with a bill, or any ſuch like inſtrument, which cannot but endanger the maiming him, and in ſuch attack happen not to kill, but only to maim him, he may be indicted of felony on this ſtatute; and it ſhall be left to the jury on the evidence, whether there was a deſign to murder by maiming, and conſequently a malicious intent to maim as well as kill, in which caſe the offence is within the ſtatute. 1 Hawk. P. C. 112.

All maihem by the Common law was felony: And it is ſaid, that anciently a maihem by caſtration was puniſhed with death; and other maihems with the loſs of member for member; but afterwards no maihem was puniſhed in any caſe with the loſs of life or member, but only by fine and impriſonment, and damages to the party. 3 Inſt. 62, 118. S. P. C. 32. H. P. C. 133. For maihem, indictment or an appeal may be had; or, in common caſes, action of treſpaſs, at the plaintiff's election: And maihem ſhall be under the inſpection of the court, to increaſe damages given by the jury, &c. if the court thinks fit. Sid. 108. Maihem was commonly tried by the judges inſpecting the party; and if they doubted whether it were a maihem or not, they uſed to take the opinion of ſome able ſurgeon on the point, Homo mahemiatus, a man maimed or wounded. Maii Inductio, An ancient cuſtom for the prieſt and people of country villages to go in proceſſion to ſome adjoining wood on a May-day morning; and return in a kind of triumph, with a may-pole, boughs, flowers, garlands, and other tokens of the ſpring. This May-game, or rejoicing at the coming of the Spring, was for a long time obſerved, and ſtill is in ſome parts of England; but there was thought to be ſo much heathen vanity in it, that it was condemned and prohibited within the dioceſe of Lincoln, by biſhop Groſthead.——Faciunt etiam, ut audivimus, clerici ludos quos vocant inductionem Maii, & feſtum autumni, &c. quod nullo modo vos latere poſſit: Si veſtra prudentia ſuper hiis diligenter inquireret, &c.

Mail, (macula) A coat of mail, ſo called from the Fr. maille, which ſignifies a ſquare figure, or the hole of a net: So maille de houbergeons was a coat of mail, becauſe the links or joints in it reſemble the ſquares of a net. Mail is likewiſe uſed for the leather bag wherein letters are carried by the poſt, from bulga, a budget.

Maile, Anciently a kind of money; and ſilver halfpence were termed mailes. 9 Hen. 5. By indenture in the mint, a pound weight of old ſterling ſilver was to be coined into three hundred and ſixty Sterlings or pennies, or ſeven hundred and twenty mailes or half-pennies, or one thouſand four hundred and forty farthings. Lownd's Eſſ. on Coin 38.

Mainad, A falſe oath, or perjury.——Si nolit abjurare, emendet ipſum mainad, i. e. Perjurium dupliciter. Leg. Inæ, cap. 34.

Maine-port, (In manu portatum) Is a ſmall tribute, commonly of loaves of bread, which in ſome places the pariſhioners pay to the rector of their church, in recompence for certain tithes. Cowell.

And this mainport bread was paid to the vicar of Blyth, as you may read in the Antiq. of Nottinghamſhire, p. 473.

Mainovre, (from the Fr. main, i. e. manus, and ouvrer, operari) Is handy-work; or ſome treſpaſs committed by a man's hand. 7 R. 2. c. 4. Brit. 62.

Mainour, or Manour, or Meinour, (from the Fr. manier, i. e. manu tractare) In a legal ſenſe denotes the thing that a thief taketh away, or ſtealeth. As to be taken with the mainour, Pl. Cor. fol. 179. is to be taken with the thing ſtolen about him: And again, fol. 194. it was preſented, that a thief was delivered to the ſheriff or viſcount, together with the mainour: And again, fol. 186. If a man be indicted, that he feloniouſly ſtole the goods of another, where, in truth, they are his own goods, and the goods be brought into the court as the mainour; and it be demanded of him, what he ſaith to the goods, and he diſclaim them; though he be acquitted of the felony, he ſhall loſe the goods: And again, fol. 149. If the defendant were taken with the manour, and the manour be carried to the court, they, in ancient times would arraign him upon the manour without any appeal or indictment. Cowell. See Black. Com. 3 V. 71. 4 V. 303.

Mainpernable, That may be let to bail; and what perſons are mainpernable appears by the ſtat. Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 15. See Bail.

Mainpernors, (manucaptores) Are thoſe perſons to whom a man is delivered out of cuſtody or priſon, on their becoming bound for his appearing, &c. which, if he do not do, they ſhall forfeit their recognizances; and they are called manucaptores, becauſe they do as it were manu capere & ducere captivum e cuſtodia vel priſona.

Mainpriſe, (manucaptio, from the Fr. main, i. e. manus & pris, captus) Signifies in our law the taking or receiving of a perſon into friendly cuſtody, who otherwiſe might be committed to priſon, upon ſecurity given that he ſhall be forth-coming, at a time and place aſſigned; as to let one to mainpriſe is to commit him to thoſe that undertake he ſhall appear at the day appointed. Old Nat. Br. 42. F. N. B. 249.

Manwood makes this difference between mainpriſe and bail: He that is mainpriſed is ſaid to be at large, after the day he is ſet to mainpriſe, until the day of his appearance; but where a man is let to bail, by any judge, &c. until a certain day, there he is always accounted by the law to be in their ward for the time; and they may, if they will, keep him in priſon, ſo that he that is ſo bailed ſhall not be ſaid to be at large, or at his own liberty. Manwood, p. 167.

A man under mainpriſe is ſuppoſed to go at large, under no poſſibility of being confined by his ſureties or mainpernors, as in caſe of bail. 4 Inſt. 179. Mainpriſe is an undertaking in a certain ſum; bail anſwers the condemnation in civil caſes, and in criminal, body for body. Sed. qu. If this, as to body for body, is now law? If it is, it is never put in force.

Mainpriſe may be where one is never arreſted, or in priſon; but no man is bailed, but he that is under arreſt, or in priſon, ſo that mainpriſe is more large than bail. H. P. C. 96. Wood's Inſt. 582, 618. Upon a Capias or exigent awarded againſt a man, he ſhall find mainpriſe for his appearance: and if the defendant make default, his manucaptors are to be amerced, &c. And a bill of mainpriſe, acknowledged and put into court, is good though it be not inrolled. Jenk. Cent. 129.

There is an ancient writ of mainpriſe, whereby thoſe who are bailable, and have been refuſed the benefit of it, may be delivered out of priſon; as where perſons are impriſoned on ſuſpicion of larceny, or indicted of treſpaſs, before juſtices of peace, &c. Reg. Orig. 269. F. N. B. 250.

Mainſworn, In the North of England is taken for as much as forſworn. Brownl. 4.

Maintainors, Are thoſe that maintain or ſecond a cauſe depending between others, by diſburſing money, or making friends, for either party, &c. not being intereſted in the ſuit, or attornies employed therein. Stat. 19 Hen. 7. c. 14.

Maintenance, (manutenentia) Signifies the unlawful upholding of a cauſe or perſon, metaphorically drawn from the ſuccouring a young child that learns to go by one's hand; and in law is taken in the worſt ſenſe. 32 H. 8. c. 9. Alſo it is uſed for the buying or obtaining of pretended rights to lands. Stat. Ibid.

Maintenance is either ruralis, in the country; as where one aſſiſts another in his pretenſions to lands, by taking or holding the poſſeſſion of them for him; or where one ſtirs up quarrels or ſuits in the country: Or it is curialis, in a court of juſtice; where one officiouſly intermeddles in a ſuit depending in any court, which no way belongs to him, and he hath nothing to do with, by aſſiſting the plaintiff or defendant with money or otherwiſe, in the proſecution or defence of any ſuch ſuit. Co. Lit. 368. 2 Inſt. 213. 2 Rol. Abr. 115. And he, who fears that another will maintain his adverſary, may, by way of prevention, have an original writ grounded on the ſtatutes, prohibiting him ſo to do. 1 Hawk. P. C. 225. Reg. Orig. 182.

Who are guilty of maintenance.

Not only he who lays out his money to aſſiſt another in his cauſe, but he that by his friendſhip or intereſt ſaves him that expence which he might otherwiſe be put to, is guilty of maintenance. Bro. Mainten. 7, 14, 17, &c. And if any perſon officiouſly give evidence, or open the evidence without being called upon to do it; ſpeak in the cauſe, as if of counſel with the party; retain an attorney for him, &c. or ſhall give any public countenance to another in relation to the ſuit; as where one of great power and intereſt, ſays that he will ſpend twenty pounds on one ſide, &c. or ſuch a perſon comes to the bar with one of the parties, and ſtands by him while his cauſe is tried, to intimidate the jury; if a juror ſolicits a judge to give judgment according to the verdict, after which he hath nothing more to do, &c. theſe acts are maintenance. 1 Hawk. 249, 250. But counſel may ſpeak as amicus curiæ. A man cannot be guilty of maintenance, in reſpect of any money given by him to another, before any ſuit is actually commenced, Nor is it ſuch, to give another advice, as to what action is proper to be brought, what method to be taken, or what counſellor, or attorney to be employed; or for one neighbour to go with another to his counſel, ſo as he do not give him any money: And money may be lawfully given to a poor man, out of charity, to carry on his ſuit, and be no maintenance: Attornies may lay out their money for their clients, to be repaid again; but not at their own expence, on condition of no purchaſe no pay, if they carry the cauſe or loſe it. Fitzh. Mainten. 18. 3 Rol. Abr. 118. 2 Inſt. 564.

It is ſaid that if a man of great power, not learned in the law, tells another who aſks his advice, that he hath a good title, it is maintenance. 1 Hawk. 250. In caſe any perſon who is no lawyer, and that hath no intereſt in the cauſe, ſhall take upon him to do the part of a lawyer; this will be unlawful maintenance. And after a ſuit is begun, no man may encourage either of the parties, or yield them any aid or help, by money, or the like, but he that hath intereſt therein: But to lend another money to maintain his law-ſuit, is not maintenance. 22 H. 6. 6. 19 E. 4. 3. 2 Shep. Abr. 406. If a perſon hath any intereſt in the thing in diſpute, tho' in contingency only, he may lawfully maintain an action relating to it; as if tenant in tail, or for life, be impleaded, he in reverſion or remainder, &c. may maintain the defence of the ſuit, with his own money; and a leſſor may lawfully maintain his leſſee. 2 Rol. Abr. 115. A lord may juſtify maintaining a tenant, in defence of his title; and the tenant may maintain his lord: One bound to warrant lands, may lawfully maintain the tenant impleaded; and a man may maintain thoſe who are enfeoffed of lands in truſt for him, concerning thoſe lands, &c. An heir apparent, or the huſband of ſuch an heir, may maintain the anceſtor in an action concerning the inheritance of the land whereof he is ſeiſed in fee; a maſter may maintain his ſervant, and aſſiſt him with money, but not in a real action, unleſs he hath ſome of his wages in his hands; and a ſervant by reaſon of relation may maintain his maſter in all things, except laying out his own money in the maſter's ſuit. 1 Hawk. 252, 253. 1 Inſt. 368.

Of the ſtatute law on this ſubject.

By the ſtatutes, none of the King's officers ſhall maintain pleas, or ſuits, in the King's court, for lands, &c. under covenant to have part thereof, or any profit therein. And clerks of juſtices are not to take part in quarrels, or delay right, on pain of treble damages. 3 Ed. 1. c. 25. No perſons ſhall take upon them to maintain quarrels, to the let and diſturbance of the Common law, by themſelves, or by any other. 1 Ed. 3. c. 14. and 20 Ed. 3. 4. The King's counſellors, officers or ſervants, or any other perſon whatſoever, ſhall not ſuſtain quarrels by maintenance upon grievous pain, impriſonment and ranſom. 1 R. 2. c. 4. No man may obtain or buy any pretended right or title to any land, unleſs the ſeller hath taken the profits a year, or been in poſſeſſion, on pain of forfeiting the value, &c. And none ſhall unlawfully maintain any ſuit concerning lands, or retain any perſon for maintenance, by letters, rewards or promiſes, under the penalty of 10*l.* for every offence, to be divided between the King and the proſecutor. 32 H. 8. cap. 9.

Of rights and titles within the meaning of the law.

But maintaining ſuits in the Spiritual court, is not within the ſtatutes relating to maintenance. Cro. Eliz. 594. Though maintenance in a court baron, is as much within the purview of the ſtat. 1 R. 2. as maintenance in a court of record. 1 Hawk. 255. A pretended right to copyhold lands ſold, is within the ſtatute of 32 H. 8. c. 9. 4 Rep. 26. If A. be owner of land in poſſeſſion, and another who hath no right granteth the land; altho' the grant upon it be void, yet the grantor and grantee are liable to this ſtatute. 1 Inſt. 369. So where he that hath a pretended right, and none in truth, ſhall get the poſſeſſion wrongfully, and then ſell the land, &c. But a remainder-man in fee, may obtain the pretended title of a ſtranger. 1 Inſt. 369. 2 Inſt. 76, 77. And a perſon who hath good right and title, at the time of the bargain or leaſe, will not be within the above ſtatute, although neither he nor his anceſtors have been in poſſeſſion thereof, &c. for a year before. Plowd. 47. Dyer 74.

Of other acts.

If a perſon make a leaſe to try a title in ejectment, unleſs it be to a great man; it is out of the ſtatute. 1 Inſt. 369. Dyer 374. A leſſor having good right to land, but not in poſſeſſion, made a leaſe of it, and did not ſeal it on the land; it was adjudged within the ſtat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 9. 1 Leon. 166.

Of a choſe in action.

The law will not ſuffer any thing in action, entry, &c. to be granted over; this is to prevent titles being granted to men of ſubſtance, to oppreſs the meaner ſort of people. 1 Inſt. 214. And where a bond was given for performance of covenants in a leaſe, and after the covenants being broken, the leſſee aſſigned both the leaſe and bond to another, and then the aſſignee put the bond in ſuit; this was held maintenance; ſo it would have been if the leſſee had aſſigned the bond and not the leaſe, and afterwards the covenants were broken, and the bond put in ſuit, Godb. 81. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1142.

Of proſecuting offenders.

By the Common law, perſons guilty of maintenance may be proſecuted by indictment, and be fined and impriſoned; or by action, &c. And a court of record may commit a man for an act of maintenance done in the face of the court. Hetl. 79. 1 Inſt. 368.

Majority. The only method of determining the acts of many, is by a majority: The major part of members of parliament enact laws, and the majority of electors chooſe members of parliament; the act of the major part of any corporation, is accounted the act of the corporation; and where the majority is, there, by the law is the whole. Stat. 19 Hen. 7. *Stud. Malt. Bad malt ſhall not be mingled with good, under penalties; malt is to be three weeks in making and drying; except in June, July and Auguſt, and in thoſe months not leſs than ſeventeen days; and half a peck of duſt muſt be taken out of every quarter by ſkreening, &c. before it ſhall be offered to ſale, on pain of forfeiting 20*d. per* quarter. Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 10. Where bad malt is made, or bad malt ſhall be mixed with good, a conſtable, by the direction of a juſtice of peace, may ſearch for the ſame; and order it to be ſold at a reaſonable price, &c. 11 Jac. 1. cap. 28. A duty of 6*d. per* buſhel was granted on malt, by Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 21. which by ſubſequent ſtatutes hath been continued yearly ever ſince; maltſters are, once a month, to make an entry at the exciſe office of all malt made, under the penalty of 10*l.* and to pay the duty in three months, or forfeit double value: and if any maltſters alter their ſteeping veſſels, without giving notice, or ſhall uſe any private ciſtern, they ſhall forfeit 50*l.* And refuſing exciſe-officers entrance into their houſes, &c. forfeit 5*l.* Alſo concealing malt from the ſight of the gager, is liable to a penalty of 10*s per* buſhel: and wetting barley any where but in the ciſtern, incurs a forfeiture of 2*s.* 6*d.* a buſhel, &c. But juſtices of peace have power to mitigate the penalties and forfeitures. 2 Ann. c. 2. 6 Geo. 1. c. 20. Malt made for exportation is diſcharged from duty; yet muſt be entered, and kept ſecrete from other malt, on pain of 50*l.* and when made ſhall be put into ſtore-houſes with two locks, and not delivered out without preſence of an officer, *&c. Manciple, (manceps) A clerk of the kitchen, or caterer; and an officer in the Inner Temple was anciently ſo called, who is now the ſteward there, of whom Chaucer, our ancient poet, ſometime a ſtudent of that houſe, thus writes:

> A manciple there was within the Temple,
> Of which all catours might taken enſample.

This officer ſtill remains in colleges, in the univerſities. Cowell.

Mandamus, Is a writ iſſuing out of the court of King's Bench, ſent by the King to the head of ſome corporation, &c. commanding them to admit or reſtore a perſon into his place or office, &c. 2 Inſt. 40.

It is now an eſtabliſhed remedy, and every day made uſe of, to oblige inferior courts and magiſtrates to do that juſtice, which, without ſuch writ, they are in duty, and by virtue of their offices, obliged to do; and is a writ of right, which the ſuperior court is obliged to iſſue, in the ordinary form, without impoſing any terms on him who demands it. 3 New Abr. 528. See poſt, at the end of this title.

But tho' it be a writ of right, yet the court ſeldom grants it, without giving the party, to whom it is pray'd, a day to ſhew cauſe why it ſhould not iſſue; alſo ſuch matter muſt be laid before the court, by which it may appear, that the party is intitled to it. 3 New Abr. 528.

A mandamus lies to reſtore a mayor, alderman, or capital burgeſs of a corporation; a recorder, town-clerk, attorney turned out of an inferior court, ſteward of a court, conſtable, &c. 11 Rep. 99. Raym. 153. 1 Keb. 549. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1148, 1149.

By ſome opinions it doth not lie, to reſtore a common council-man. 2 Cro. 540. But ſee 1 Ventr. 302. A mandamus may be had to reſtore a freeman; and alſo to admit one to the freedom of the city, having ſerved an apprenticeſhip. Sid. 107. To reſtore a fellow of the college of phyſicians, it lies; though not for a fellow of a college, in the univerſities, if there is a viſitor. 1 Lev. 19, 23.

It hath been reſolved, that a mandamus ſhall not be granted to reſtore a fellow or member of any college of ſcholars or phyſic, becauſe theſe are private foundations. Carthew's Rep. 92. And this writ lieth not for the deputy of an office, &c. yet he who hath power to make ſuch deputy, may have it. Mod. C. 18. 1 Lev. 306. See poſt. It lies not, generally, to elect a man into any office; nor for a clerk of a company, which is a private office; or to reſtore a barriſter expelled a ſociety; a proctor, &c. 2 Lev. 14, 18. 2 Nelſ. 1150, 1151. But a mandamus may lie to remove perſons as well as reſtore them; by virtue of any particular ſtatute, on breach thereof. 4 Mod. 233.

If juſtices of peace refuſe to admit one to take the oaths, to qualify himſelf for any place, &c. mandamus lies; ſo to a biſhop or archdeacon, to ſwear a churchwarden; to grant a probate of a will; and to admit an executor to prove a will, or an adminiſtrator; to a rector, vicar or churchwarden, to reſtore a ſexton. Wood's Inſt. 568. Mandamus lieth to admit a man to take the oath of allegiance, &c. and ſubſcribe according to the act of toleration, in order to be qualified to be a diſſenting miniſter. Mod. Caſ. 310. Alſo a mandamus will lie to the biſhop, to grant a licence for a parſon to preach, where it is denied, and he is in orders for it: and this writ lies to reſtore a perſon to univerſity degrees. 2 Ld. Raym. 1206, 1334. But after a man is reſtored on a peremptory mandamus, he may be diſplaced again, for the ſame matters for which he was before removed, and others. Ib. 1283. In the writ of mandamus, the words are to admit or reſtore, vel cauſam ſignificare quare, etc. And if a corporation have power to disfranchiſe a freeman, and they do it accordingly, if a writ is granted to reſtore him, vel cauſam ſignificare quare, and they certify a ſufficient but falſe cauſe, the court of B. R. cannot reſtore him, but there lies an action for a falſe return; and if then it be found for him, he ſhall have a peremptory mandamus, which is uſually granted after the firſt writ; or if he be impriſoned, he may bring action of treſpaſs and falſe impriſonment, etc. 11 Rep. 99. 5 Mod. 254.

Of judgment on the return.

There is to be judgment upon the return of the writ, before any action on the caſe can be brought for a falſe return of a mandamus. 2 Lev. 238. And returns upon writs of mandamus muſt be certain for the court to judge upon. 11 Rep. 99.

By ſtatute, where any writ of mandamus ſhall iſſue out of B. R. &c. the perſons required by law are to make their return to the firſt mandamus; and on the return made thereto, the perſon ſuing out the writ may plead to, and traverſe all or any of the material facts contained in ſuch return, to which the perſon making the return ſhall reply, take iſſue, etc. And the parties proceed as if action had been brought for a falſe return; and if judgment be given for the plaintiff, he ſhall have damages and coſts, as in action on the caſe, etc. 9 Ann. c. 20.

A caſe has happened, and others of the like kind may happen, where an action could not be brought, nor the return pleaded to, or traverſed under the ſtatute. In ſuch caſe, it may perhaps be adviſable to move the court of King's Bench, for an information, againſt the perſon or perſons, making a falſe return, or ſuch a return, as will lay the party, who moved for the mandamus, under the dilemma mentioned above. Rex v. Pettiward et al. Juſtices of Peace for Surry. 4 Burr. 2452.

All the ſtatutes of jeofails ſhall extend to writs of mandamus, and proceedings thereon. A perſon having a mandamus to be admitted to any office or privilege, ought to ſuggeſt whatever is neceſſary to intitle him to be admitted; and if that be not done, or if it is falſe, it will be good matter to return on the mandamus: and on the return of theſe writs, as well as others of this nature, there are uſually great arguments in favour of liberty, etc. Mod. Ca. 310.

It has been held, that ſeveral perſons cannot have one Mandamus; nor can ſeveral join in an Action on the Caſe for a falſe Return. 2 Salk. 433.

But there has been an inſtance to the contrary, where the circumſtances of the caſe were ſuch, that required a variety of perſons to join in the application, viz. on the late highway act, to compel the juſtices to nominate a ſurveyor out of the liſt, returned by the inhabitants. Rex v. Pettiward et al. Juſtices of Peace for Surry. 4 Burr. 2452.

A writ of mandamus may not be directed to one perſon, or to a mayor and alderman, etc. to command another to do any act; it muſt be directed to thoſe only who are to do the thing required, and obey the writ. 2 Salk. 446, 701. This writ is not to be teſted before granted by the court; and if the corporation to which the mandamus is ſent, be above forty miles from London, there ſhall be fifteen days between the teſte and the return of the firſt writ of mandamus; but if but forty miles, or under, eight days only; and the alias and pluries may be made returnable immediatè: alſo at the return of the pluries, if no return be made, and there is affidavit of the ſervice, attachment ſhall go forth for the contempt, without hearing counſel to excuſe it. Ibid. 434.

A motion was made for an attachment, for not returning an alias mandamus; and by Holt Ch. Juſt. In caſe of a mandamus out of Chancery, no attachment lies till the pluries, for that is in nature of an action to recover damages for the delay; but upon a mandamus out of B. R. the firſt writ ought to be returned though an attachment is not granted without a peremptory rule to return the writ, and then it goes for the contempt, etc. Ibid. 429.

Some modern caſes where a mandamus will lie, and where not.

A mandamus lies to admit, reſtore, or diſcharge a conſtable; for he is a public officer, and one whoſe office relates to the adminiſtration of juſtice. 2 Roll. Rep. 82. 1 Roll. Abr. 535. 1 Salk. 175.

Mandamus to proceed to election, where a clauſe for holding over. Stran. 555.

Mandamus may be granted to go to an election, tho' there is a mayor de facto. Stran. 1003.

Granted to go to an election, notwithſtanding a dubious election de facto. Stran. 1157.

Granted to elect corporation officers, where there were wrongful officers in poſſeſſion. Stran. 1180.

Granted peremptorily on the reverſal of a judgment for the defendant. Stran. 697.

Mandamus for a prebend. Stran. 1082. To admit a prebendary. Stran. 159.

Lies for a chaplain where there is no viſitor. Stran. 797.

To an univerſity to reſtore to degrees. Stran. 557.

To reſtore a ſchoolmaſter. Stran. 58.

For a pariſh clerk, ſexton, ſcavenger. Stran. 59.

To ſwear an ale-taſter. Stran. 608.

To ſwear a director of the amicable aſſurance. Stran. 696.

Mandamus for yeoman of the wood wharf. Stran. 832.

Mandamus to admit a deputy regiſter. Stran. 893.

A principal may have a mandamus to admit his deputy. Stran. 895.

To allow conſtables their expences of carriages for the troops. Stran. 42, 93.

To reimburſe a ſurveyor of highways. Stran. 211.

And this general juriſdiction and ſuperintendency of the King's Bench, over all inferior courts to reſtrain them within their bounds, and to compel them to execute their juriſdiction, whether ſuch juriſdiction ariſes from a modern charter, ſubſiſts by cuſtom, or is created by act of parliament, yet, being in ſubſidium juſtitiæ, has of late been exerciſed in variety of inſtances; as a mandamus granted to the quarter-ſeſſions, to give judgment for abating a nuſance.

So a mandamus was granted, to the court of Sandwich, to give judgment in an aſſault and battery. Mich. 5 Geo. 1.

So a mandamus was granted to the ſheriff's court in London, to give final judgment upon a writ of inquiry. Mich. 7 Geo. 1. Baily v. Brown.

So a mandamus was granted to the bailiff of Andover, to give judgment in a cauſe there depending; but the court in this caſe required an affidavit of their refuſal, or elſe it ſhould be preſumed that the court would do right. Trin. 2 Geo. 2.

So a mandamus was granted to the corporation of Liverpool, to hold an aſſembly for doing the public buſineſs, which was making leaſes. Mich. 8 Geo. 1.

But though theſe kind of writs are daily awarded to judges of courts, to give judgment, or to proceed in the execution of their authority, yet they are never granted to aid a juriſdiction, but only to enforce the execution of it; nor are they ever granted where there is another proper remedy.

Mandamus to a judge in nature of a procedendo. Stran. 113.

To juſtices of peace, to give judgment in an exciſe caſe. Stran. 530.

Granted to commit adminiſtration generally. Stran. 552.

To take ſecurity on articles of the peace. Stran. 835.

Mandamus to the clerk of a company to deliver books. Stran. 879.

To produce the books, at the next aſſembly. Stran. 948.

Granted to attend a court-leet. Stran. 1207.

No mandamus lies for a lecturer. Stran. 1192.

Lies not, to ſwear in one, who has had judgment, on an information againſt him, for an uſurpation. Stran. 625.

To call a veſtry, for the election of churchwardens, refuſed. Stran. 686.

Mandamus lies not, to grant a licence to keep an alehouſe. Stran. 881.

Lies not, for an adminiſtrator durante minori ætate. Stran. 892.

No peremptory mandamus, pending error, on action for falſe return. Stran. 983.

No mandamus lies, to inſert particular perſons in a poor's rate. Stran. 1259.

But though the court of King's Bench be intruſted with this juriſdiction of iſſuing out mandamus's, yet they are not obliged to do ſo in all caſes wherein it may ſeem proper, but herein may exerciſe a diſcretionary power, as well in refuſing as granting ſuch writ; as where the end of it is merely to try a private right; where the granting it would be attended with manifeſt hardſhips and difficulties, etc. ſo even ſince the ſtatute 11 Geo. 1. c. 4. for obliging corporations to elect officers, it hath been held that this court hath a diſcretionary power of refuſing a writ for that purpoſe, but may firſt receive information about the election, and, if diſſatisfied about the right, may ſend the parties to try it in an information. Hill. 8 Geo. 2. The King v. Mayor and Burgeſſes of Tintagel in Cornwal.

Mandamus, Was alſo a writ that lay after the year and day, where in the mean time the writ, called diem clauſit extremum, had not been ſent out to the eſcheator, on the death of the King's tenant in capite, &c. And was likewiſe a writ or charge to the ſheriff, to take into the hands of the King all the lands and tenements of the King's widow tenant, who againſt her oath married without his conſent. *F. Mandatary, (mandatarius) Is he to whom a command or charge is given.

Mandate, (mandatum) Is a commandment judicial of the King, or his juſtices, to have any thing done for the diſpatch of juſtice; of which there is great diverſity. Reg. Judic. And we read of the Biſhop's mandate to the ſheriff, &c. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 9. A mandate may be iſſued by the King's Bench to ſwear a churchwarden, or pariſh clerk, &c. when refuſed to be ſworn by the biſhop's miniſter. March. Rep. 22, 101.

Mandati Dies, (Mandie or Maunday Thurſday) The day before Good Friday, when is commemorated and practiſed the command of our Saviour, in waſhing the feet of the poor, &c. And our Kings of England, to ſhew their humility, long executed the ancient cuſtom on that day, of waſhing the feet of poor men, in number equal to the years of their reign, and giving them ſhoes, ſtockings and money.

Mangonare, Signifies to buy in the market. Leg. Æthelred c. 24.

Mangonellus, A warlike inſtrument made to caſt ſmall ſtones againſt the walls of a caſtle. Cowell.

Manner, (from the Fr. manier, or mainer, i. e. manu tractare,) To be taken with the manner, is where a thief having ſtolen any thing, is taken with the ſame about him, as it were in his hands; which is called flagrante delicto. S. P. C. 179. Such a criminal, as was formerly held, was not bailable by law: but now the court of B. R. bails in moſt caſes. Anciently if one guilty of felony or larceny had been freſhly purſued, and taken with the manner, and the goods ſo found upon him had been brought into court with him, he might be tried immediately, without any appeal or indictment, and this is ſaid to have been the proper method of proceeding in ſuch manors which had the franchiſe of infangtheſe. H. P. C. 201. S. P. C. 28. 2 Hawk. P. C. 211. Sed qu. if this is at preſent law, or agreeable to magna charta, or the principles of our conſtitution, as now fixed?

Manning, (manopera) A day's work of a man; and in ancient deeds there was ſometimes reſerved ſo much rent, and ſo many mannings.

Mannire, Is where one is cited to appear in court, and ſtand to judgment there: it is different from bannire; for though both of them ſignify a citation, one is by the adverſe party, and the other by the judge. Leg. H. 1. c. 10. Du Cange.

Mannopus, (manopera) Goods taken in the hands of an apprehended thief. Cowell.

Mannus, A horſe, a pad or ſaddle horſe. In the laws of Alfred, we find man-theof, for a horſe-ſtealer. Cowell. See Mantheof.

Manor, (manerium) Seems to be derived of the Fr. manoir, habitatio, or rather from manendo, of abiding there, becauſe the lord did uſually reſide there. Eſt feodum nobile partim vaſſalis (quos tenentes vocamus) ob certa ſervitia conceſſum; partim Domino in uſum familiæ ſuæ, cum juriſdictione in vaſſallos, ob conceſſa prædia reſervatum. Quæ vaſſallis conceduntur, terras dicimus tenementales, quæ domino reſervantur dominicales. Totum vero feodum dominium appellatur, olim baronia; unde curia quæ huic præeſt juriſdictioni hodie curia baronis nomen retinet.

Skene de verb. ſignif. ſaith, It is called manerium quaſi manurium, becauſe it is laboured by handy-work: it is a noble ſort of fee, granted partly to tenants for certain ſervices to be performed, and partly reſerved to the uſe of the lord's family, with juriſdiction over his tenants for their farms. That which was granted out to tenants, we call tenementales; thoſe reſerved to the lord, were dominicales: the whole fee was termed a lordſhip, of old a barony; from whence the court, that is always an appendant to the manor, is called The court baron.

Touching the original of manors, it ſeems that in the beginning, there was a circuit of ground, granted by the King to ſome baron or man of worth, for him and his heirs to dwell upon, and to exerciſe ſome juriſdiction more or leſs within that compaſs, as he thought good to grant, performing ſuch ſervices, and paying ſuch yearly rent for the ſame, as he by his grant required; and that afterwards this great man parcelled his land to other meaner men, enjoining them ſuch ſervices and rents as he thought good, and ſo as he became tenant to the King, the inferiors became tenants to him. See Perkin's Reſervations 670. and Horne's Mirror of Juſtices, lib. 1. cap. de Roy Alfred, and Fulbeck, fol. 18. And according to this our cuſtom, all lands holden in fee throughout France are divided into fieffs and arrieri fieffs, whereof the former are ſuch as are immediately granted by the King; the ſecond, ſuch as the King's feudatories do grant to others. Gregorii Syntagm. lib. 6. cap. 5. num. 3.

In theſe days, a manor rather ſignifieth the juriſdiction and royalty incorporeal, than the land or ſite. For a man may have a manor in groſs, (as the law termeth it) that is, the right and intereſt of a court-baron, with the perquiſites thereunto belonging, and another, or others have every foot of the land. Kitchin, fol. 4. Broke, hoc titulo per totum. Bracton, lib. 4. cap. 31. num. 3. divideth munerium into capitale & non capitale. See Fee.

A manor may be compounded of divers things, as of a houſe, arable land, paſture, meadow, wood, rent, advowſon, court-baron, and ſuch like; and this ought to be by long continuance of time beyond the memory of man; for at this day a manor cannot be made, becauſe a court-baron cannot now be made, and a manor cannot be without a court-baron, and ſuitors or freeholders, two at the leaſt; for if all the freeholds, except one, eſcheat to the lord, or if he purchaſe all, except one, there his manor is gone cauſa qua ſupra, although in common ſpeech it may be ſo called. Cowell. Vide Co. Lit. 58, 108. Lit. 73. 2 Rol. Abr. 121.

By a grant of the demeſnes and ſervices, the manor paſſeth: and by grant and render of the demeſnes only, the manor is deſtroyed. becauſe the ſervices and demeſnes are thereby ſevered by the act of the party; though it is otherwiſe, if by act of law, as by partition. 6 Rep. 63. There are two coparceners of a manor; the demeſnes are aſſigned to one, and the ſervices to the other, the manor is gone; but if one die without iſſue, and the manor deſcends to her who had the ſervices, the manor is revived again, for the ſeverance was by act in law. 1 Inſt. 122. 8 Rep. 79. 3 Salk. 25, 40.

A new manor may ariſe and revive by operation of law. 1 Leon. 204.

It may contain one or more villages or hamlets; or only great part of a village, &c. And there are capital manors, or honours, which have other manors under them, the lords whereof perform cuſtoms and ſervices to the ſuperior lords. 2 Inſt. 67. 2 Rol. Abr. 72. There may be alſo cuſtomary manors, granted by copy of court-roll, and held of other manors. 4 Rep. 26. 11 Rep. 17. But it cannot be a manor in law, if it wanteth freehold tenants; nor be a cuſtomary manor, without copyhold tenants. 1 Inſt. 58. Lit. 73. 2 Rol. Abr. 121. But it is ſaid, if there be but one freehold tenant, the ſeigniory continues between the lord and that one tenant. 1 Aud. 257. 1 Nelſ. Abr 524. The cuſtom remains, where tenements are divided from the reſt of the manor, the tenants paying their ſervices; and he who hath the freehold of them, may keep a court of ſurvey, &c. Cro. Eliz. 103. See Copyhold, and 15 Vin. Abr. tit. Manor, and Black. Com. 2 V. 90.

Manſe, (manſa) An habitation, or farm and land. Spelm. See Manſum.

Manſer, A baſtard. Cowell.

Manſion, (manſio a manendo) Among the ancient Romans, was a place appointed for the lodging of the prince, or ſoldiers in their journey; and in this ſenſe we read primam manſionem, &c. It is with us moſt commonly uſed for the lord's chief dwelling houſe within his fee; otherwiſe called the capital meſſuage, or manor place. Skene.

Some ſay it is a dwelling of one or more houſes without a neighbour: and manſion-houſe is taken in law for any houſe of dwelling of another; in caſes of committing burglary, &c. 3 Co. Inſt. 64.

The Latin word manſia, according to Sir Edward Coke, ſeems to be a certain quantity of land: hida vel manſia, and manſa, are mentioned in ſome old writers and charters. Fleta, lib. 6. And that which in ancient Latin authors was termed hida, was afterwards called manſus.—Manſio eſſe poterit conſtructa ex pluribus domibus vel una, quæ erit habitio una & ſola ſine vicino; etiam & ſi alia manſio ſit vicinata non erit villa, quia villa eſt ex pluribus manſionibus vicinata & collata ex pluribus vicinis. Bract. lib. 5. p. 1.

Manſlaughter, (homicidium, from the Sax. manſlyte) Is the unlawful killing a man without any prepenſed malice; as when two perſons meet, and upon ſome falling out, the one kills the other,. It is done in a preſent heat, on a ſudden quarrel, and upon a juſt provocation; and without any deliberate intention of doing miſchief: and it differs from murder only, in that it is not done with foregoing malice; and from chancemedley, having no preſent intent to kill. Staundf. P. C. lib. 1. cap. 9. and Bracton, c. 9. This crime is felony; but for the firſt time admits of clergy: and there can be no acceſſaries to this offence before the fact, becauſe it muſt be done without premeditation. H. P. C. 217.

In the laws of Canutus, the ſame diſtinction was made between murder and manſlaughter, as now; for we find, if a man was killed wilfully and premeditately, then the offender was to be delivered to the kindred of the ſlain, &c. But if, on his trial, the fact was proved not to be wilful, then he was reſigned to the biſhop, &c. Leg. 53.

What it is that conſtitutes manſlaughter, and the difference between that, and murder.

Manſlaughter muſt be upon a ſudden quarrel, where the party guilty does not appear to be maſter of his temper, by talking calmly on the quarrel, or afterwards in other diſcourſe whereby the heat of blood may be preſumed to be cooled. Cromp. 23. Kel. 56. Therefore if two perſons meet together, and, in ſtriving for the wall, one of them kills the other, this is manſlaughter: and ſo it is, if upon a ſudden occaſion, they had gone into the fields and fought; and one had killed the other; for all is one continued act of paſſion, on the firſt ſudden occaſion. 3 Inſt. 51, 55. H. P. C. 48. And if two perſons who have formerly fought on malice are afterwards to all appearance reconciled, and fight again on a freſh quarrel, and one of them is killed, it ſhall not be conſtrued that they were moved on the old grudge, unleſs it appear by the whole circumſtances of the fact. 1 Hawk. P. C. 82. If two men fall out on a ſudden and fight, and one breaks his ſword, and a ſtranger ſtanding by lends him another, with which he kills his adverſary, it is manſlaughter in both. H. P. C. 56. And where a ſtranger to a perſon, a man's ſervant, &c. coming ſuddenly, ſees him fighting with another, and ſides with him and kills the other; this is only manſlaughter: alſo if a man's friend is aſſaulted, and he in vindication of his friend, on a ſudden takes up a miſchievous inſtrument, and kills the enemy of his friend, this is mdnſlaughter: ſo where a perſon in reſcuing another, injuriouſly reſtrained of his liberty, by pretended preſs-maſters, &c kills any of them. H. P. C. 57. Plowd. 101. Kel. 46, 136.

Of officers, &c.

But if the perſon killed were a bailiff, or other officer of juſtice, reſiſted by any one in the due execution of his duty, it would be murder. Keilw. 67, 86. If a maſter go with malice to kill a perſon, and his ſervants being with him know nothing thereof, and then they join in the aſſault and murder, it is but manſlaughter in the ſervants: though if the maſter have malice, and he tells his ſervants of it, and that his intention is to kill the party, and they go with their maſter; if they kill him, it is murder in both maſter and ſervants. Dyer 26. 9 Rep. 66. Plowd. 100.

There were two men in an inner chamber, quarrelling, and together by the ears; a brother of one of them ſtanding at the door, that could not get in, cried to his brother to make him ſure, and preſently after he gave the other a mortal wound; this was held manſlaughter in him that ſtood at the door. Trin. 1 Jac. 1. Shep. Abr. 493. Several perſons having forcible poſſeſſion of a houſe, afterwards killed the perſon whom they had ejected, as he was endeavouring in the night forcibly to regain the poſſeſſion, and to fire the houſe; and they were adjudged only guilty of manſlaughter, notwithſtanding they did the fact in maintenance of a deliberate injury, becauſe the party ſlain was ſo much in fault himſelf: yet if in ſuch, or any other quarrel, whether it were ſudden or premeditated, a juſtice of peace, conſtable, or even a private perſon, be killed in endeavouring to keep the peace, he who kills him is guilty of murder. 1 Hawk. 85.

Of provocation, &c.

It hath been adjudged, that upon a killing on a ſudden quarrel, if a man be ſo far provoked by another, by words or geſtures, as to make a puſh at him with a ſword, or ſtrike at him with any other ſuch weapon as manifeſtly endangers his life, before the other's ſword is drawn, and thereupon a fight enſues, and he who made ſuch aſſault kill the other, it is murder; for by aſſaulting the other in ſuch a manner, without giving him an opportunity to defend himſelf, ſhewed that he intended to kill him: but in caſe he who draws upon another in a ſudden quarrel, make no paſs at him till his ſword is drawn, and then fighting with him kill him, he is guilty of manſlaughter only; becauſe by giving the other time to be on his guard, he ſhews his intent is not ſo much to kill, as to combat with the other, according to the common notions of honour. Kel. 61, 131. 1 Hawk. P. C. 81, 82.

And as to provocations, no treſpaſs, breach of a man's word, or affront by words, &c. will be thought a juſt provocation to excuſe the killing of another. Ibid. 130. Though if upon ill words, as giving the lie, or calling another a ſon of a whore, both parties ſuddenly fight, and one kills the other, this is manſlaughter: and if one upon angry words aſſaults another, by pulling him by the noſe, and he that is aſſaulted draws his ſword and immediately kills the other, this is but manſlaughter; for an indignity was offered to the ſlayer, from whence he might reaſonably apprehend that there might be ſome further deſign upon him. Ibid. 55, 60, 135.

If a man is taken in adultery with another perſon's wife, and the huſband draws his ſword and preſently kills the adulterer; this is a juſt provocation, and makes it manſlaughter. 1 Vent. 158. Raym. 212.

Puniſhment of manſlaughter, as murder, in particular caſes, by ſtatute.

There is manſlaughter puniſhable as murder, by ſtatute: By the 1 Jac. 1. c. 8. If any perſon ſhall ſtab another, not having then a weapon drawn, or not ſtricken firſt, ſo that he dies within ſix months, although it were not of malice afore-thought, it is felony without benefit of clergy: But this doth not extend to perſons ſtabbing others ſe defendendo, or by misfortune, &c. with no intent to commit manſlaughter; and the ſtatute relates to the party only, that actually gave the ſtroke, or ſtabbed the other, and not to thoſe that were aiding or abetting. H. P. C. 58. A blow given, or weapon drawn at any time during the quarrel, before the thruſt or ſtab given, is within the ſtatute; and drawing out a piſtol, and levelling it at the party killing, or throwing a pot, bottle, &c. at him, are within the equity of the words, having a weapon drawn. 5 Lev. 255, 256. So if the party killed have a cudgel in his hand; clergy ſhall be allowed. Godb. 154.

And he that is ouſted of clergy by this ſtatute muſt be ſpecially indicted upon it; though even then, the jury may find manſlaugher generally: for the ſtatute makes no new offence, but only takes away the benefit of the clergy, which was allowed at Common law. H. P. C. 58, 266.

The ſtatute is but a declaration of the Common law; and made to prevent the compaſſion of juries, who oftentimes were perſuaded to believe, that to be a provocation to extenuate the crime of murder, which in law was not. Kel. 55. Upon the ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. c. 8. of Stabbing, it has been uſual to prefer two indictments, one of murder, another upon this ſtatute, and put the priſoner to plead to both; then to charge the jury, firſt, with the indictment for murder, and if they find it not to be that crime, to inquire on the other bill, becauſe if convicted of either, the offender is excluded his clergy. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 468.

Of accidents happening, from two perſons playing together.

Two maſters of defence play at hand-ſword, and one wounds the other, of which he dies, it is only manſlaughter; and it is ſaid not to be felony where they play by the King's command, for that they play by conſent to try their manhood, and may be the better able to do the King ſervice upon occaſion. 3 Inſt. 56, 160. Dalt. 352. Hob. 134. When two perſons play at foils, and one kills the other, it is manſlaughter. H. P. C. 32, 57. Though if one kill another at wreſtling, or ſhooting with bow and arrow at buts, &c. this will not be manſlaughter in the offender. Keilw. 168. Theſe laſt caſes are without an ill intent.

Of inconſiderate acts, without evil intention, from which the death of any one enſues. Et e contra,

If one ſhoots off a gun in a highway, or throws a ſtone over a wall, in a place where people often meet, and a perſon is killed; or at another in play, and kill him; if done without any evil intention, it is manſlaughter. 3 Inſt. 57. But if an unlawful act be done with an ill intent, and the act is deliberate, if death happens, it is murder. H. P. C. 32, 44. 3 Inſt. 56. Kel. 112.

A perſon ſhoots at the tame fowl of another, which is an unlawful act, and kills a ſtander-by, it is murder: if he be ſhooting at a hare, wild fowl, and not qualified to keep a gun, or to kill game, it is manſlaughter: And where he is qualified to keep a gun, it is only chancemedley. 3 Inſt. 59. Though in caſes of this nature, it ought to be conſidered how far the unlawful act doth tend immediately, or by neceſſary conſequence, to the injury of another. H. P. C. 31. Kel. 117.

A man drives his cart careleſly, and it goes over a child in the ſtreet; if he ſee the child, and yet drive upon him, it is murder; but if he ſaw not the child, it is manſlaughter. And if a child runs croſs the way, and the cart runs over him, before it is poſſible to make a ſtop, it is per infortunium. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 476. See Chancemedley and Murder.

Manumiſſion, (Manumiſſio) Is the freeing a villein or ſlave out of bondage; which was formerly done ſeveral ways: Some were manumitted by delivery to the ſheriff, and proclamation in the county, &c. others by charter; one way of manumiſſion was for the lord to take the bondman by the head, and ſay, I will that this man be free, and then ſhoving him forward out of his hands. And there was a manumiſſion implied; when the lord made an obligation for payment of money to the bondman, or ſued him where he might enter without ſuit, &c. The form of manumitting a perſon in the time of Wil. 1. called The Conqueror, is thus ſet down.—Si quis velit ſervum ſuum liberum facere, tradat eum vicecomiti per manum dextram, in pleno comitatu, et quietum illum clamare debet a jugo ſervitutis ſuæ per manumiſſionem, et oſtendat ei liberas portas et vias', et tradat illi libera arma, ſcilicet lanceam et gladium, et deinde liber homo efficitur. Lamb. Ol. c.* 7.

Of the recovery of mariners wages, and other matters, relative thereto.

The Common law hath juriſdiction for mariners wages; and in the Admiralty they may all join. 1 Vent. 146. Perſonating mariners and receiving their wages; and forging letters of attorney, &c. or falſly taking out letters of adminiſtration, for the receipt of ſeamens wages, incurs curs a forfeiture of 200*l.* &c. Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 41.

A late act hath ordained, That no maſter of a ſhip ſhall retain any ſeaman or mariner, without a contract in writing for his wages, on pain of forfeiting 5*l.* And if a mariner refuſe to proceed afterwards on the voyage, he ſhall forfeit his wages; and on complaint to a juſtice of peace, he may commit the offender to the houſe of correction, to be kept to hard labour, not exceeding thirty days, &c. Alſo mariners abſenting from ſhips, incur a forfeiture of two days pay, for every day's abſence, to the uſe of Greenwich hoſpital; and leaving the ſame before diſcharged in writing, forfeit one month's wages: But this ſhall not debar any mariner, belonging to a merchant ſhip, from entering into the King's ſervice, &c. On the arrival of any ſhip, the maſter is to pay his men their wages in thirty days, or at the time of their diſcharge (deducting the penalties impoſed) on pain of 20*s.* Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 36.

No perſons ſhall pay to any mariner or common ſeaman, for a certain time, by any ways or means whatſoever, nor may any ſuch mariner take more wages, than after the rate of 35*s.* a month, on pain of forfeiting treble the value of the ſum agreed; but this extends not to ſeamen hired in voyages, from any parts beyond the ſeas, to other parts there, or to Great Britain, by 14 Geo. 2. c. 38.

Proviſions for ſhipwrecked ſeamen, &c.

Maſters of Britiſh and Iriſh ſhips, trading to the chief ports of Spain, are to pay a certain tonnage duty, to perſons there on the freight of goods and merchandiſe; as a contribution for relief of ſeamen ſhipwrecked; and other diſtreſſed ſubjects, &c. 9 Geo. 2. c. 25.

A like duty to be paid by all maſters of veſſels, &c. going from any part of his majeſty's dominions to Leghorn, for relieving mariners that are ſhipwrecked, and taken in war, by ſtat. 10 Geo. 2. c. 24.

Of exemption from preſſing, and relief of ſeamen's widows and children, &c.

Mariners ſerving in merchant ſhips, exempted from being preſſed into the King's ſervice, for two years from their firſt going to ſea, and apprentices three years, &c. By the ſtat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 38. for the relief and ſupport of maimed and diſabled ſeamen, and the widows and children of ſuch as ſhall be killed, ſlain or drowned in the merchants ſervice, reciting that there is no penſion for ſeamen diſabled, &c. in the merchants ſervice, and that they are willing to allow ſixpence per month out of their wages for the relief of ſuch as ſhall be diſabled, &c. and the widows and children of ſuch as ſhall be killed, &c. a corporation is erected, by the name of the preſident and governors for the relief and ſupport of ſick, maimed and diſabled ſeamen, and of the widows and children of ſuch as ſhall be killed, ſlain, or drowned in the merchants ſervice. This corporation may purchaſe lands for building an hoſpital, and are to provide for diſabled ſeamen therein, and to allow penſions to ſuch as they ſhall think proper, their widows and children. Seamen, who have not ſerved five years in the merchants ſervice, and contributed ſixpence per month, not to have any benefit of this act. Seamen in the merchants ſervice to pay ſixpence per month, and the maſter of the ſhip to retain the ſame, out of their pay, and pay it over to the receiver of the corporation. Mariners in the Eaſt-India company's ſervice, are exempted from the duty, and excluded the benefit of this act. See 13 Geo. 2. c. 17. And ſee Navy.

Mariners, Wandering up and down, and who ſhall not ſettle themſelves to work, or have not a teſtimonial under the hand of a juſtice, ſhewing where they landed, and whither to go, &c. Or having ſuch teſtimonial, if they exceed the time limited more than fourteen days, not being ſick in their paſſage home, &c. it is felony by the ſtatute 39 Eliz. c. 17. But if they cannot work for want thereof, the two next juſtices upon their complaint ſhall make order that they may be provided of work; or otherwiſe may tax the whole hundred, till relief ſhall be had. Stat. ibid. And every pariſh may be charged for relieving mariners, as for maimed ſoldiers; and they ſhall be relieved by the treaſurer of the county, &c. 43 Eliz. c. 3. See Black. Com. 4 V. 165.

Marine Forces, While on ſhore regulated and ſubjected to Martial law, and to be furniſhed with quarters, &c. 28 Geo. 2. c. 11. 29 Geo. 2. c. 6. 30 Geo. 2. c. 11.

Mariſcus, is a word uſed in Domeſday-Book, and ſignifies palus, or locus paludoſus, a marſhy or fenny ground.

Maritagio amiſſo per defaltam, Is a writ for the tenant in frank-marriage, to recover lands, &c. whereof he is deforced by another. Reg. fol. 171.

Maritagium, That portion which is given with a daughter in marriage. See Glanvil: In alio modo accipitur dos ſecundum leges Romanas, ſecundum quas proprie appellatur dos, id quod cum muliere datur viro, quod vulgariter dicitur maritagium. Lib. 2. c. 18.

Maritagium, or marriage, ſtrictly taken, is that right which the lord of the fee had, to marry the daughters of his vaſſals after their death: Others tell us, it was that profit which might accrue to the lord, by the marriage of one under age, who held his lands of him by knight's ſervice. This ſeems plain by the ſtatute of Merton, c. 7. Maritagium ejus qui infra ætatem eſt, de vero jure pertinet ad dominum feodi.

Maritagium habere, To have the free diſpoſal of an heireſs in marriage, a favour granted by the Kings of England, while they had the cuſtody of all wards or heirs in minority. Cowell.

Maritime, (maritimus) Signifies ſea affairs: any thing belonging to the ſea.

Maritima Angliæ, The profit and emolument ariſing to the King from the ſea, which anciently was collected by ſheriffs; but it was afterwards granted to the lord Admiral.——Richardus de Lucy dicitur habere maritimam Angliæ. Pat. 8 H. 3. m. 4.

Mark, (marca, Sax. mearc.) Of ſilver, is now thirteen ſhillings and fourpence: Tho' in the reigh of Hen. 1. it was only ſix ſhillings and a penny in weight; and ſome were coined, and ſome only cut in ſmall pieces; but thoſe that were coined, were worth ſomething more than the others. In former times, money was paid, and things valued oftentimes by the mark; Aſſignavimus Regin. pro dote ſua mille marcas argenti annuatim, 13*s.* 4*d.* computatis pro marca. Patm. 3 Joh. m. 17. We read of a mark of gold of eight ounces, of 6*l.* in ſilver; or as others write 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* Stow's Annal. 32. Rot. Mag. Pipæ, Ann. 1 Hen. 2.

Mark to Goods, Is what aſcertains the property or goodneſs thereof, &c. And if one man ſhall uſe the mark of another, to the intent to do him damage, action upon the caſe lieth. 2 Cro. 471. (but he muſt be injured, to enable him to ſupport an action.) A penalty is inflicted in this caſe, by 23 Eliz. c. 8.

Market, (mercatus, from mercando, buying and ſelling Is the liberty by grant or preſcription, whereby a town is enabled to ſet up and open ſhops, &c. at a certain place therein, for buying and ſelling, and better proviſion of ſuch victuals as the ſubject wanteth: it is leſs than a fair; and uſually kept once or twice a week. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 24. 1 Inſt. 220. And, according to Bracton, one market ought to be diſtant from another Sex leucas (vel milliar) et dimidiam, et tertiam partem dimidiæ: If one hath a market by charter or preſcription, and another obtains a market near it, to the nuſance of the former; the owner of the former may avoid it. 1 Inſt. 406. Alſo where a man has a fair or market, and one erects another to his prejudice, an action will lie: And ſo it is ſaid of a ferry. 2 Rol. 140. 1 Mod. 69.

The fair or market is taken for the place where kept: And formerly it was cuſtomary for fairs and markets to be kept on Sundays; but by ſtatute 27 H. 6. c. 5. no fair or market to be kept upon any Sunday, or upon the feaſts of the Aſcenſion, Corpus Chriſti, Good Friday, All Saints, &c. except for neceſſary victuals, and in time of harveſt: And they ought not to be held in church-yards, by 13 Ed. 1. c. 6. All fairs are markets: And there may be a market without an owner; though where there is an owner a butcher cannot preſcribe to ſell meat in his own houſe upon a market day; for the market muſt be in an open place, where the owner may have the benefit of it. 4 Inſt. 272. No market ſhall be held out of the city of London within ſeven miles: Though all butchers, victuallers, &c. may hire ſtalls and ſtandings in the markets there, and ſell meat and proviſions, on four days in a week, &c. Cit. lib. 101.

In the country, things ſold in the markets are to be in the uſual place appointed for the ſale: But in London every ſhop is a market overt, for ſuch goods as are put there to be ſold, by the trade of the owner; though if the ſale be in a ware houſe, and not publicly in the ſhop, the property is not altered. 5 Rep. 83. Moor 300.

Sale upon a Sunday, though in a fair or market, will not alter the property of the thing ſold. This means as to goods ſtolen, and not the property of the perſon ſelling, and which he hath not any legal authority to ſell. See Infra.

Perſons that dwell in the country, may not ſell wares by retail in a market town, but in open fairs: But countrymen may ſell goods in groſs there. Stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 7.

All contracts for any thing vendible in markets, &c. ſhall be binding, and ſales alter the property, if made according to the following rules, viz. 1. The ſale is to be in a place that is open, ſo that any one that paſſeth by may ſee it, and be in a proper place for ſuch goods. 2. It muſt be an actual ſale, for a valuable conſideration. 3. The buyer, is not to know, that the ſeller hath a wrongful poſſeſſion of the goods ſold. 4. The ſale muſt not be fraudulent, betwixt two, to bar a third perſon of his right. 5. There is to be a ſale, and a contract, by perſons able to contract. 6. The contract muſt be originally, and wholly in the market overt. 7. Toll ought to be paid, where required by ſtatute, &c. 8. The ſale is not to be in the night, but between ſun and ſun; (though if the ſale be made in the night it may bind the parties.) A ſale thus made ſhall bind the parties, and thoſe that are ſtrangers, who have a right. 5 Rep. 83.

But it ſhall not bind the King, for any of his goods ſold in market overt; though regularly it bindeth infants, feme coverts, men beyond ſea, and in priſon, perſons Non compos, &c. 2 Inſt. 713. And yet if a ſale be made by an infant, or feme covert, where they appear, or are known to be ſuch, (except by a woman covert for ſuch things as ſhe uſually trades for, by her huſband's conſent) it bindeth not. 5 Rep. 83.

Sale of goods ſtolen in London to brokers, &c. alters not the property. 1 Jac. 1. c. 21. And the ſtatutes which ordain, that toll-takers ſhall be appointed in markets and fairs, to enter in their books the names of the buyers, ſellers, vouchers, and prices of horſes ſold, and deliver a note thereof to the buyer, &c. ſecure the property of ſtolen horſes to the owner, although ſold in a fair or market, if he repays what was bona fide paid for the horſe. 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 7. and 31 Eliz. c. 12.

Every one that hath a market, ſhall have toll for things ſold, which is to be paid by the buyer, and by ancient cuſtom may be paid for ſtanding of things in the market, though nothing be ſold; but not otherwiſe: A piepowder court is incident as well to a market as a fair; and proprietors of markets ought to have a pillory, and tumbrel, &c. to puniſh offenders. 1 Inſt. 281. 2 Inſt. 221. 4 Inſt. 272. Keeping a fair or market, otherwiſe than it is granted, as by keeping them upon two days, when only one is granted; or on any other day than appointed; extorting toll or fees where none are due, &c. are cauſes of forfeiture. Finch 164. And if a perſon erects ſtalls in a market, and does not leave room for the people to ſtand and ſell their wares, ſo that they are thereby forced to hire ſuch ſtalls, the taking money for the uſe of them, in that caſe, is extortion. 1 Ld. Raym. 149.

Market-Towns, Penalty on perſons living in the country, and ſelling by retail in market-towns. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 7.

Marketzeld, or Marketgeld, Signifies toll of the market; the word Zeld denoting a payment——Et valent per ann. le ſtreteward et le marketzeld. xviii's in omni terra pertinen. ad honorem de Haulton. Ex Cod. MS. in Bibl. Cotton.

Marle, (marla, from the Sax. margel, i. e. medulla) Otherwiſe called Malin, is a kind of earth or mineral; which in divers counties of this kingdom is uſed to fertilize land. 17 Ed. 4. cap. 4.

Marque, (from the Saxon mearc, ſignum) We uſe the word in the ſame ſenſe to this day, when we ſay, Give ſuch a thing a mark or ſign; but in our ancient ſtatutes it ſignifies as much as repriſals, as in ſtat. 4 H. 5. cap. 7. where marque and repriſals are uſed as ſynonyma; and letters of marque are found, in the ſame ſignification, in the ſame chapter. Cowell.

Marqueſs, or Marquis, (Marchio) Is now a title of honour before an Earl, and next to a Duke: And by the opinion of Hotoman, the name is derived from the German March, ſignifying originally Cuſtos Limitis, or Comes et præfectus limitis. In the reign of King Rich. 2. came up firſt the title of Marquis, which was a governor of the marches; for before that time, thoſe that governed the marches were called commonly Lords Marches, and not Marqueſſes, as judge Doderidge has obſerved in his law of Nobility and Peerage. Selden's Mare clauſ. lib. 2. c. 19. A Marquis is created by patent; and anciently by cincture of ſword, mantle of ſtate, &c.

Marriage, (maritagium) Is a civil and religious contract, whereby a man is joined and united to a woman, for the ends of procreation; and ſignifies not only the lawful joining of a man and wife, but alſo the intereſt of beſtowing a ward or widow in marriage, in our ancient law. Mag. Chart. c. 6.

Maritagium is likewiſe applied to land given in marriage; and that portion which the huſband receives with his wife. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 34. Glanv. lib. 7. c. 1. In this ſenſe there are divers writs, De maritagio, &c. Reg. 171.

There is further a term called Duty of Marriage, ſignifying an obligation on women to marry; who formerly held lands, charged with perſonal ſervices, in order to render them by their huſbands. Cowell.

Marriage is generally the conjunction of man and woman, in a conſtant ſociety, and agreement of living together; until the contract is diſſolved by death or breach of faith, or ſome notorious miſbehaviour, deſtructive of the end for which it was intended. It is one of the rights of human nature; and was inſtituted in a ſtate of innocence, for preſervation thereof: And nothing more is requiſite to a compleat marriage, by the laws of England, than a full, free, and mutual conſent between parties, not diſabled to enter into that ſtate, by their near relation to each other, infancy, precontract, or impotency. Precontract, will not render void a marriage, in other reſpects legally ſolemnized, by Stat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 33.

As to the ſolemnization of marriage, this is regulated by the laws and cuſtoms of the nation where we reſide; and every ſtate allows ſuch privileges to the parties as it deems expedient, and denies legal advantages to thoſe who refuſe to ſolemnize their marriage, in the manner the ſtate requires; but they cannot diſſolve a marriage celebrated in another manner, marriage being of divine inſtitution, to which only a full and free conſent of the parties is neceſſary. Before the time of Pope Innocent III. there was no ſolemnization of marriage in the church; but the man came to the houſe where the woman inhabited, and led her home to his own houſe, which was all the ceremony then uſed. See 1 Roll. Abr. 359. 1 Sid. 64.

Marriages by Romiſh Prieſts, whoſe orders are acknowledged by the church of England, are deemed to have the effects of a legal Marriage in ſome inſtances; but marriages ought to be ſolemnized according to the rites of the church of England, to intitle to the privileges attending legal marriage, as dower, thirds, &c. And by the ſtatute, popiſh recuſants convict, married otherwiſe than according to the orders of the church of England, by a miniſter lawfully authoriſed, and in ſome open church, &c. ſhall be diſabled, the man to be tenant by the curteſy, and the woman to claim her dower, jointure, or widow's eſtate, &c. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5,

Marriage at Common law, is either in right, or in poſſeſſion; and marriage de facto, or in reputation, as among Quakers, &c. is allowed to be ſufficient to give title to a perſonal eſtate. 1 Leon. 53. Wood's Inſt. 59. But in the caſe of a Diſſenter, married to a woman by a miniſter of the congregation, who was not in orders; it was held that when a huſband demands a right to himſelf as huſband, by the Eccleſiaſtical law, he ought to prove himſelf a huſband by that law, to intitle him to it: And notwithſtanding the wife, and the children of this marriage, may intitle themſelves to a temporal right by ſuch marriage; yet the huſband ſhall not, by the reputation of the marriage, unleſs he hath a ſubſtantial right: And this marriage is not a mere nullity, becauſe by the law of nature the contract is binding; for tho' the poſitive law of man ordains marriage to be made by a prieſt, that law only makes this marriage irregular, and not expreſly void. 1 Salk. 119. But this is, in ſome caſes, altered by the marriage act, viz. 26 Geo. 2. c. 33. The ſubſtance of which ſee infra. Marriages contracted between lawful perſons, being ſolemnized in the face of the church, and conſummated, were declared valid, notwithſtanding any pre-contract, not conſummated, by Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 38. But this was repealed by 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 23. All marriages ſolemnized by juſtices of peace during Oliver's uſurpation, were ordained to be good and valid, as if ſolemnized according to the rites and ceremonies of the church. Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 33.

The marriages that are made in an ordinary courſe, are to be by aſking in the church, and other ceremonies appointed by the book of common prayer. 23 Ed. 6. c. 21. By the ordinances of the church, when perſons are to be married, the banns of matrimony ſhall be publiſhed in the church where they dwell three ſeveral Sundays or holydays, in the time of divine ſervice; and if, at the day appointed for their marriage, any man do alledge any impediment; as pre-contract, conſanguinity, or affinity, parents not conſenting, where under age, &c. why they ſhould not be married, (and become bound with ſufficient ſureties to prove his allegation,) then the ſolemnization muſt be deferred until the truth is tried. Rubrick. And no miniſter ſhall celebrate matrimony between any perſons without a faculty or licence, except the banns of marriage have been firſt publiſhed as directed, according to the book of Common Prayer, on pain of ſuſpenſion per triennium; nor ſhall any miniſter, under the like penalty, join any perſons in marriage, who are ſo licenſed, at any unſeaſonable times, or in any private place, &c. Canon 62. Alſo on the granting of licences, bond is to be taken, that there is no impediments of pre-contract, conſanguinity, &c. Nor any ſuit or controverſy depending in any Eccleſiaſtical court, touching any contract of marriage of either of the parties, with any other; that neither of them are of better eſtate, than is ſuggeſted; and that the marriage be openly ſolemnized in the pariſh church where one of the parties dwelleth, or the church mentioned in the licence, between the hours of eight and twelve in the morning: Oath is to be likewiſe made before one of the Doctors of the Commons, that the man and woman live at ſuch a place, are willing to marry, and as to there being no impediment, &c. Licences to the contrary ſhall be void; and the parties marrying are ſubject to puniſhment as for clandeſtine marriages. Can. 102.

But notwithſtanding the canons aforementioned, marriages, eſpecially of perſons of quality, are frequently in their own houſes, out of canonical hours, in the evening, and often ſolemnized by others in other churches, than where one of the parties lives, and out of time of divine ſervice, &c.

Parſons, vicars or curates, marrying any perſons, or employing other miniſters to do it, without publiſhing the banns of matrimony according to law, or without a licence for the marriage firſt had and obtained, ſhall forfeit 100*l.* the perſon ſo married 10*l.* and pariſh clerks, &c. aſſiſting, knowing it to be ſo, 5*l.* Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 35. And by a ſubſequent act, the preceding ſtatute is confirmed; and extends to privileged places; ſo that if a parſon offending be a priſoner in any place, on conviction he ſhall be removed to the county gaol, there to remain in execution charged with the ſaid penalty of 100 l. &c. 10 Ann. c. 19. Before theſe ſtatutes, an information was exhibited againſt certain perſons for combination in procuring a clandeſtine marriage in the night, without banns or licence, between a maid-ſervant and a young gentleman who was heir to an eſtate, the perſon being in liquor; and they were fined 100 marks, and ordered to be committed till paid; but it doth not appear that the marriage could be made void. Cro. Car. 557.

Marriages are prohibited in Lent, and on faſting days, becauſe the mirth attending them is not ſuitable to the humiliation and devotion of thoſe times; yet perſons may marry with licences in Lent, altho' the banns of marriage may not then be publiſhed. And formerly, in popiſh times, prieſts were reſtrained from marriage, and their iſſue accound baſtards, &c. But, on the Reformation, laws were made declaring that the marriage of prieſts ſhould be lawful, and their children legitimate; tho' the preambles to thoſe ſtatutes ſet forth, that it would be better for prieſts to live chaſte, and ſeparate from the company of women, that they might with the more fervency attend the miniſtry of the goſpel. 2 & 3, and 5 & 6 Ed. 6.

All perſons of the age of conſent to marry, (viz. a man of fourteen and a woman at twelve) who are not prohibited by the Levitical degrees, or otherwiſe by God's law, may lawfully marry; i. e. ſubject to the regulations of 26 Geo. 2. c. 33. but marriages made within the degrees, are inceſtuous and unlawful. 1 Inſt. 24. 2 Inſt. 684. Marriage is forbidden to thoſe who are of kindred lineally; alſo between ſuch as are kin in the tranſverſe or collateral line, until the fourth degree be paſt. So in reſpect of affinity, which ariſes betwixt thoſe that are married and the kindred of one of them, as between the huſband and the relations of the wife; but this prohibits marriage only to the perſons contracted, &c. for the couſins of conſanguinity to my wife, are of affinity to me only, and not to my brothers, or children by a former wife. 2 Shep. Abr. 414. The ſon of a father by another wife, and daughter of a mother by another huſband, couſin germans, &c. may marry with each other: a man may not marry his brother's wife, or wife's ſiſter; an uncle his niece, an aunt her nephew, &c. But if a man take his ſiſter to wife, they are baron and feme, and the iſſue are not baſtards, till a divorce. Levit. c. 18, 20. 2 Inſt. 683. 1 Rol. Abr. 340, 357. 5 Mod. 448.

A libel was exhibited againſt a perſon for marrying his wife's ſiſter; the defendant ſuggeſted for a prohibition, that his wife was dead, and he had a ſon by her, to whom an eſtate was deſcended as heir to his mother; yet the eccleſiaſtical court proceeded to annul the marriage, and to baſtardiſe the iſſue: but a prohibition was granted quoad the annulling the marriage, and baſtardiſing the iſſue, and giving leave to proceed to puniſh the inceſt. 2 Salk. 548. 4 Mod. 182. A perſon may not marry his ſiſter's daughter: and a ſiſter's baſtard daughter is ſaid to be within the Levitical law of affinity; it being morally as unlawful to marry a baſtard as one born in wedlock, and 'tis ſo in nature; and if a baſtard doth not fall under the prohibition ad proximum ſanguinis non accedas, a mother may marry her baſtard ſon. 5 Mod. 168. 2 Ne'ſ. Abr. 1161.

There are perſons within the reaſon of the prohibition of marriage, tho' not mentioned, and muſt be prohibited; as the father from marrying his daughter, the grandſon from marrying the grandmother, &c. 2 Nelſ. ibid. Vaugh. 321.

The temporal courts by the Stat. 28 H. 8. c. 7. are to determine what marriages are within or without the Levitical degrees; and prohibit the ſpiritual courts if they impeach any perſons, for marrying within theſe degrees, Vaugh. 206. 2 Ventr. 9. And it is ſaid, were it not for that ſtatute, we ſhould be under no obligation to obſerve the Levitical degrees. Ibid. When there is a perpetual impotency; fear or impriſonment, ſo that there can be no conſent; or where perſons are pre-contracted; a man or a woman have a wife or huſband living, &c. in ſuch caſes the marriages are to be adjudged void, as prohibited by God's law. 1 Inſt. 235. 2 Inſt. 687.

The marriage of a lunatic, or one not of ſound mind, is alſo now void. 15 Geo. 2. c. 30. And altho' matrimonial cauſes have been for a long time determinable in the eccleſiaſtical courts, they were not ſo from the beginning, for as well cauſes of matrimony as teſtamentary, were civil cauſes, and appertained to the juriſdiction of the civil magiſtrate, until Kings allowed the clergy cogniſance of them. Davis's Rep. 51. If perſons married are infra annos nubiles, the eccleſiaſtical judges are to judge as well of the aſſent, whether ſufficient, &c. as of the firſt contract; and where they have cogniſance, the Common law judges ought to give credit to their ſentences, as they do to our judgments. 7 Rep 23.

Loyalty or lawfulneſs of marrage is always to be tried by the biſhop's certificate; or inquiſition taken before him, on examination of witneſſes. &c. Dyer 303. If the right of marriage come naturally in queſtion, as in dower, &c. the lawfulneſs of marriage is to be tried by the biſhop's certificate; but in perſonal action, where the right of marriage is not in queſtion, it is triable by a jury at Common law. 1 Lev. 41. Whether a woman is married, or ſhe is the wife of ſuch a perſon, is triable by a jury: and in perſonal actions it is right to lay the matter upon the fact of the marriage, to make it iſſuable and triable by a jury, and not upon the right of the marriage, as in real actions and appeals. 1 Inſt. 112. 3 Salk. 64. If the marriage of the huſband is in queſtion, marriage in right ought to be, and that ſhall be tried by certificate. 1 Leon. 53. But if on covenant to do ſuch a thing to another upon the marriage of a man's daughter, the party alledges that he did marry her, &c. this ſhall be tried per pais; for the marriage is only in iſſue, and not whether he was lawfully eſpouſed. Cro. Car. 102.

Conditions againſt marrying generally, are void in law: and if a condition is annexed to a legacy; as where money is given to a woman, on condition that ſhe marries with conſent of ſuch a perſon, &c. ſuch a condition is void by the Eccleſiaſtical law, becauſe the marriage ought to be free without coercion; yet it is ſaid it is not ſo at the Common law. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1162. Poph. 58, 59. 2 Lill. 192:

If perſons are married before the age of conſent, they may at that age diſagree and marry again, without any divorce: tho' if they once give conſent when at age, they cannot afterwards diſagree; and when they are married before, there needs not a new marriage, if they agree at that age. 1 Inſt. 33. 2 Inſt. 182. A man at the age of conſent, and the woman not; or the woman of age, and the man not; he or ſhe may diſagree to the marriage at the other's coming of age to conſent, as well as the other, for there is a mutual power of diſagreement. 3 Inſt. 88. 6 Rep. 22. 1 Danv. Abr. 699. A woman cannot diſagree within her age of twelve years, till which the marriage continues; and before her diſagreement is void. 1 Danv. 699. Tho' if a man marries a woman under that age, and afterwards ſhe within her age of conſent, diſagrees to the marriage, and at her age of twelve years marries another; now the firſt marriage is abſolutely diſſolved, ſo that he may take another wife; for altho' the diſagreement within the age of conſent, was not ſufficient, yet her taking another huſband at the age of conſent, and cohabiting with him affirms the diſagreement, and ſo the firſt marriage is avoided. Moor 575, 764. If after diſagreement of the parties, at the age of conſent they agree to the marriage, and live together as man and wife, the marriage hath continuance, notwithſtanding the former diſagreement; but if the diſagreement had been before the ordinary, they could not afterwards agree again to make it a good marriage. 1 Danv. Abr. 699.

If either party be under ſeven years of age, contracts of marriage are abſolutely void; but marriages of Princes made by the ſtate in their behalf, at any age, are held good; tho' many of thoſe contracts have been broken through. Swinb. Matrimon. Contr.

All the ancient common law doctrine relative to contracts of marriage, whether per verba preſenti, or de futuro, is now rendered uſeleſs, by the following ſtatute; tho' actions at law may be maintained to recover damages, for the breach of marriage promiſes.

Of the new ſtatute relative to marriage.

By the Stat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 33. All marriages are to be either in purſuance of banns publiſhed, of a licence, or of a ſpecial licence. A marriage in purſuance of banns muſt be ſolemnized in one of the churches or chapels, where the banns were publiſhed. A marriage in purſuance of a licence (except a ſpecial licence) muſt be ſolemnized in ſuch church or chapel in which the licence ſhall be granted; all marriages ſolemnized in any other place than a church or ſuch chapel, unleſs by ſpecial licence, or without publication of banns or a licence of marriage from a perſon having authority to grant the ſame, ſhall be void; and all marriages ſolemnized by licence, where either of the parties not being a widower or widow, ſhall be under the age of twenty-one years, which ſhall be had without the conſent of father, guardian, &c. ſhall be void. No parſon, vicar, &c. ſhall be obliged to publiſh banns of matrimony, unleſs the perſons to be married ſhall ſeven days before the time required for the firſt publication, deliver to him a notice in writing of their true names, and of the houſe or houſes of their reſpective abode, within ſuch pariſh, &c. and of the time they have dwelt in ſuch houſe or houſes. All banns ſhall be publiſhed upon three Sundays next preceding the marriage in the pariſh church, &c. where the perſons to be married ſhall dwell. If they dwell in divers pariſhes, then in the pariſh church, &c. where each of them ſhall dwell; if in an extraparochial place, then in the pariſh church, &c. adjoining.

After ſolemnization of any marriage under a publication of banns, it ſhall not be neceſſary in ſupport of ſuch marriage, to give any proof of the actual dwelling of the parties in the reſpective pariſhes, &c. wherein the banns of marriage were publiſhed, nor ſhall any evidence be received to the contrary, in any ſuit touching the validity of ſuch marriage.

By this clauſe trips to Scotland, &c. are rendered unneceſſary, where the parties can prevail on the clergyman to publiſh banns, without delivery of the notice mentioned in the preceding clauſe, or in fact, where the clergyman does not give himſelf the trouble of enquiring into the truth of the notice.

No licence of marriage ſhall be granted by any archbiſhop, biſhop, &c. to ſolemnize any marriage in any other church, &c. than in the pariſh church, &c. within which, the uſual place of abode of one of the parties ſhall have been, for four weeks immediately before the granting ſuch licence. If both or either of the parties ſhall dwell in an extraparochial place, then in ſome pariſh church adjoining: nothing herein contained ſhall extend to prevent the archbiſhop of Canterbury from granting ſpecial licences.

Where any marriage is by licence, it ſhall not be neceſſary to give any proof, that the uſual place of abode of one of the parties, for four weeks as aforeſaid, was in the pariſh, &c. where the marriage was ſolemnized; nor ſhall any evidence be received to the contrary, in any ſuit touching the validity of ſuch marriage. All marriages by licence, where either of the parties, not being a widower, or widow, ſhell be under the age of twenty-one years, which ſhall be had without the conſent of his or her father if living, or if dead, of his or her guardian, and if no guardian, of his or her mother if living and unmarried; and if no mother living and unmarried, then of the guardian appointed by the court of Chancery, ſhall be void. (If guardian or mother be non compos mentis, beyond ſea, or refuſes to conſent, and the Lord Chancellor ſhall declare it to be a proper marriage, that ſhall be as effectual as if the guardian or mother had conſented.)

All marriages ſhall be ſolemnized in the preſence of two or more witneſſes beſides the miniſter. No miniſter, &c. ſolemnizing marriage between perſons, both or one of whom ſhall be under the age of twenty-one years, after banns publiſhed, ſhall be puniſhable by eccleſiaſtical cenſure for ſolemnizing ſuch marriage, without conſent of parents or guardians, whoſe conſent is required by law, unleſs ſuch parſon, &c. ſhall have notice of ſuch diſſent. And in caſe ſuch parent or guardian ſhall openly declare in the church, &c. at the time of ſuch publication, his diſſent to ſuch marriage, ſuch publication of banns ſhall be void.

If any perſon ſhall ſolemnize matrimony in any other place than a church, &c. where banns have been uſually publiſhed, unleſs by ſpecial licence, or ſhall ſolemnize matrimony without publication of banns, unleſs licence of marriage be firſt had and obtained, from ſome perſon having authority to grant the ſame, every ſuch perſon knowingly ſo offending, ſhall be tranſported for fourteen years. The proſecution to be within three years.

No ſuit ſhall be in any eccleſiaſtical court to compel a celebration of marriage, by reaſon of any contract whether per verba de preſenti, or de futuro. This act not to extend to Jews, Quakers, or Scotland, nor to the marriages of any of the Royal Family.

Of the effect of marriage, by operation of law.

By marriage with a woman, the huſband is intitled to all her eſtate real and perſonal; and the effects of marriage are, that the huſband and wife are accounted one perſon, and he hath power over her perſon as well as eſtate, &c. 1 Inſt. 357.

As to the real eſtate the intereſt of the huſband is only for her life, unleſs he has iſſue by her born alive that might inherit, and then he will be tenant by the curteſy, for his own life, if he ſurvive her.

The marriage of two perſons doth knit them ſo faſt together, that the huſband cannot give any thing to his wife by deed, during the coverture; but by will and deviſe he may. 2 Ann. 11. But notwithſtanding marriage, in ſome caſes the huſband and wife are conſidered as divers perſons; and ſo one of them may perform an act to another: as when they do it in auter droit, where a feoffment is made to one of them, and letter of attorney to the other to give livery to the feoffee, &c. Perk. Sect. 169. And it is the ſame, if the wife have power to ſell land by will; ſhe may ſell the ſame to her huſband; and being an executrix, may pay a legacy to him. 1 Inſt. 187. All the goods and chattels perſonal of the wife, are by the marriage given to the huſband by law; ſo that he may diſpoſe of, ſell or keep them whilſt he lives, and give them away when he dies: and that whether he ſurvives her, or not. 1 Inſt. 299. And all the chattels real, ſhe hath in poſſeſſion in her own right, by the intermarriage the man ſhall have, and theſe by act executed in his life-time he may give, grant, etc. and in caſe he ſurvives her, he will have them abſolutely. 2 Shep. Abr. 419. Co. Lit. 46. b. 300. a. 351. a.

But the huſband cannot deviſe a chattel real, which he had in right of his wife. Co. Lit. 351. a. 1 Rol. 344. l. 15. Pl. Com. 418. b. R. Poph. 5.

If the huſband does not diſpoſe of the chattel real, of his wife, and ſhe ſurvive him, ſhe ſhall have it. Co. Lit. 46. b. 351. a. 1 Rol. 349. c. So of choſe in action, if it remains in the ſame ſtate at his death.

The wife ſhall have dower in her huſband's lands, after the death of the huſband, etc. Litt. 35, 36. Alſo as the wife doth partake of the name, ſo of the nature and condition of the huſband by the marriage; for if ſhe be an Earl's wife, ſhe is a Counteſs, if a Knight's wife, a Lady; and if he be an alien and made a denizen, the wife is ſo likewiſe. 39 H. 6. 45. 4 H. 7. 31. Bro. 499.

There being divers advantages by marriage, to the man and the woman; therefore on promiſe of marriage, damages may be recovered, if either party refuſe to marry; but the promiſe muſt be mutual on both ſides, to ground the action. 1 Salk. 24. And if there be reciprocal promiſes of marriage, as the woman's promiſe to the man is a good conſideration to make his obligatory; ſo his promiſe to her is a ſufficient conſideration to make hers binding: and though no time for marriage be agreed on, if the plaintiff prove tender and offer to marry defendant, and refuſal by defendant, or if defendant marry another, whereby performance of the promiſe, is, in law, rendered impoſſible, action lies, and damages are recoverable, Carthew 467.

If a man and a woman make mutual promiſes of intermarriage, and the man gives the woman 100*l.* which ſhe accepts, in ſatisfaction of his promiſe of marriage, it is a good diſcharge of the contract. Mod. Caſ. 156. By Statute 29 Car. 2. c. 3. No action ſhall be brought upon any agreement on conſideration of marriage, except it be put in writing, and ſigned by the party to be charged, &c. And where an agreement relating to marriage muſt be in writing after a year; and when it need not, vide Skinn. 353. Obſerve the words, they are upon any agreement on conſideration of marriage,—which is eſſentially different from mutual promiſes of the parties, to marry each other. —And which latter, are not within the ſtatute. A promiſe of a father by letter to give money in marriage with his daughter, is a ſufficient promiſe in writing, within the ſtatute. 2 Vent. 361. Where a perſon promiſes to give his daughter wedding clothes on the marriage, ſhe ſhall have two ſuits, one for the wedding day, and the other for the time of feaſting afterwards, according to the dignity of the perſon. Cro Car. 53.

Contracts and bonds for money to procure marriage between others, have been held void in equity; and wherever a parent or guardian inſiſts upon private gain, on the marriage of children; covenant or obligation for it, ſhall be ſet aſide in Chancery as extorted. 3 Lev. 41. 1 Salk. 156.

If a man before marriage gives bond and judgment to the wife, to leave her worth 1000*l.* at his death, in conſideration of a marriage portion, this ſhall be made good out of the huſband's eſtate, and be ſatisfied before any debts; provided a judgment be not obtained againſt him, with her conſent. An intended huſband, in conſideration of a marriage, covenanted with the intended wife, that if ſhe would marry him, and ſhe ſhould happen to ſurvive him, he would leave her worth 500*l.* The marriage took effect, and the wife ſurvived, and he did not leave her worth that money; ſhe married a ſecond huſband, and he brought an action of debt againſt the adminiſtrator of the firſt huſband for the 500*l.* To which it was objected, that this being a perſonal action, it was ſuſpended by the marriage, which was a releaſe in law, and ſo extinct; but the plaintiff had judgment, for the action is not ſuſpended, becauſe during the coverture, there was no cauſe of action: Nothing in this caſe is due whilſt the coverture takes place, and the debt ariſes by the death of the huſband. Palm. 99. 2 Sid. 58.

A bond was given by a man, reciting, he was to marry A. S. and that if the marriage took effect, and he did ſurvive her, then, within three months after her deceaſe, he would pay to the obligee 300*l.* for ſuch uſes as the ſaid A. S. by any writing under hand and ſeal, ſubſcribed and publiſhed in the preſence of two witneſſes, ſhould direct and appoint; this marriage bond was adjudged good. 3 Cro. 376. Yelv. 226, 227. A man and a woman intending to intermarry, he enters into articles with her before their marriage, by which he agreed to ſettle ſuch lands upon her, &c. And in purſuance of thoſe articles ſhe marries him; if he dies before any ſettlement made, the widow in equity ſhall have the articles executed, and hold the lands for life, &c. 2 Ventr. 243.

In caſe articles are entered into before marriage, and afterwards a ſettlement is made different therefrom, the court of Chancery will ſet up the articles againſt it; but where both are finiſhed before the marriage had, at a time when all parties are at liberty, ſuch ſettlement will be taken as a new agreement between them: This is the general rule, unleſs the deed of ſettlement is expreſſly mentioned to be made in purſuance of the marriage articles, &c. whereby the intent may ſtill appear to be the ſame. Talbot's Caſ. 20. Articles of marriage were made for ſettling lands on the huſband and wiſe, and the heirs male and female of the body of the huſband by the wife, &c. and a ſettlement was drawn contrary to theſe articles, long after which the huſband ſuffered a recovery, and deviſed the land to others; it was here held to be no bar to the heirs female, who were decreed to have the land. 2 P. Williams 349, 355. Yet it is ſaid, where relief is to be given in Equity on a ſettlement, it muſt be only to the perſons who claim as purchaſers, as the firſt and other ſons; and all remainders after to the husband's heirs of his body, or his right heirs, are voluntary and not to be aided. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 385.

Tho' a term to raiſe daughters portions, payable at the age of eighteen or day of marriage in a marriage ſettlement is limited in remainder, to commence after the death of the father generally; or if it be in caſe he die without iſſue male of his wife, and ſhe dies firſt without ſuch iſſue, leaving a daughter, &c. In equity the term is ſaleable during the life-time of the father, when the daughter is eighteen years old, or married; becauſe every thing hath happened and is paſt which is contingent, for it is impoſſible there ſhould be iſſue male of the wife when ſhe is dead; and as to the father's death, that is not contingent, but certain, by reaſon all men muſt die: But if there is a contingency not yet happened, as if the daughters are to be unmarried, or not provided for at the time of the father's death, &c. it is otherwiſe. 1 Salk. 159.

Upon marriages, the ſettlements generally made of the eſtate of the husband, &c. are to the husband for life, after his death to the wife for life for her jointure, and to their iſſue in remainder, with limitations to truſtees to ſupport contingent uſes, and leaſes, to truſtees for terms of years, to raiſe daughters portions, &c. And they are made ſeveral ways, by leaſe and remainder, fine and recovery, covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to uſes, &c. Accomp. Conv. 143.

See the form of a compleat marriage ſettlement, in the appendix to Blackſtone's Analyſis, with other uſeful forms relative thereto: See the ſame alſo, in the Appendix to the ſecond volume of his Commentaries.

Theſe ſettlements the law is ever careful to preſerve, eſpecially that part of them which relates to the wife; of which ſhe may not be diveſted, but by her own fine: And if a woman about to marry, to prevent her husband's diſpoſal of her land, conveys it to friends in truſt, and they with the husband after marriage make ſale of the ſame; The court of Chancery will decree the purchaſer to reconvey to her. Tothil. 43.

Where a woman on marriage, by the man's conſent makes over her eſtate, to be at her own diſpoſal, the product or increaſe thereof, ſhe can alſo diſpoſe of: And if the wife has a ſeparate maintenance ſettled on her by the husband; ſhe may by writing in the nature of a will, give away what ſhe ſaves, if ſhe dies before the husband; and ſhall have the ſame herſelf, in caſe ſhe outlives him, and it ſhall not be liable to his debts. Preced. Canc. 255, 44. But where a ſettlement is made on the wife, in conſideration of her whole fortune and equivalent to it; here the wife's portion, tho' it be out on bonds, &c. which upon the death of the husband by law ſurvive to the wife, ſhall in equity be ſubject to the husband's bond-debts, after his deceaſe, to eaſe the real eſtate of the heir. Ibid. 63. And it has been likewiſe held, that if after the wife's death, debts of her's appear; the husband ſhall be anſwerable for the debts of the wife, ſo far as he had any money or eſtate of hers. Ibid. 256.

If a man in mean circumſtances, marry a woman of fortune, upon ſuggeſtion and proof of lunacy in the wife by her friends, the court will order her eſtate to be ſo ſettled, that ſhe may not be wrought on by her husband to give it to him from her children, by him or any other husband, &c. Skin. 110.

N. B. She cannot give it to her husband by will. It muſt be by deed, aided by a fine, or common recovery.

Marriage is diſſolved by the natural death of the husband or wife, or by divorce; and where a marriage is diſſolved by the death of the husband, dower, etc. ſurvives to the wife, where no ſettlement is made of the husband's lands, etc. See Baron and Feme, and Chancery.

By ſtatute, to ſteal or take away any woman, having an eſtate in lands or goods, or that is heir apparent, againſt her will, and marry or defile her, is felony. 3 Hen. 7. cap. 2. And if any perſons married, do marry any other perſon, the former huſband or wife being alive, it is felony: But where a husband or wife are abroad beyond ſea, etc. ſeven years, the one not knowing the other to be living; or there is a divorce of the husband and wife, etc. they are excepted out of the act 1 Jac. 1. c. 11. A husband being abſent ſeven years in New England or Ireland, this is beyond the ſeas, and within the words of the exception of the act, yet in the King's dominions: And if the husband, or wife, be abroad ſeven years, tho' the party marrying here hath notice, that he or ſhe is alive, it is no felony; but if the abſent perſon be living in England, Wales, or Scotland, and the other party hath notice, it is felony by the ſtatute. Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 693. In the caſe of any ſuch felonious marriage, as is mentioned above, the firſt and true wife, is not allowed as a witneſs againſt the husband, but the ſecond wife may be admitted to prove the ſecond marriage; for ſhe is not in law his wife. Ibid. If the firſt marriage were beyond ſea, and the latter in England, the party may be indicted for it here: the latter marriage making the crime: Tho' if the firſt marriage be in England, and the latter beyond ſea, the offender cannot be indicted here. 1 Sid. 171. Kel. 80. If a married man pretend himſelf to be a ſingle perſon, and make love to a ſingle woman and marry her; for this injury in the loſs of her credit, etc. as to the marriage of any other man, action lies. Skinner's Rep. 119. Marrow, Was a lawyer of great account in Henry VIIth's days, whoſe learned readings are extant, but not in print. Lamb. Eirenarch, lib. 1. cap. 10.

Marſhal, (mareſcallus) Is a French word, ſignifying as much as Tribunus militum, with the ancient Romans; and mareſcallus may alſo come from the German marſchalk, i. e. Equitum magiſter, which Hotoman in his feuds under verb. Marchalcus derives from the old word march, which ſignifies a horſe; and others make it of the Sax. mar i. e. Equus et ſcalch, præfectus.

In France there are Marſhals of the Camp, called Marſhals of France: There are alſo Marſhals of the nobility and diets, in Poland, etc.

With us there are ſeveral officers of this name; the chief whereof is the Earl Marſhal of England, mentioned in the ſtat. 1 Hen. 4. c. 7. and 13 R. 2. c. 2. &c. whoſe office conſiſts eſpecially in matter of war and arms, as well in this kingdom as in other countries; this office is very ancient, having formerly greater power annexed to it than now; it has been long hereditary in the family of the Duke of Norfolk. Vide Lupanus de Magiſtratibus Franciæ, lib. 1. c. Mariſhallus, and Tilius, lib. 2. c. De Conſtabili Mariſcallo, &c.

The next is the Marſhal of the King's Houſe, otherwiſe called Knight Marſhal; his authority is exerciſed in the King's palace, in hearing and determining all pleas of the crown, and ſuits between thoſe of the King's houſe and other perſons within the verge, and puniſhing faults committed there, etc. 18 Ed. 3. c. 7. 27 Ed. 3. Stat. 2. c. 6. and 2 H. 4. c. 13. *Cromp. There are other inferior officers called Marſhal, as Marſhal of the Juſtice in Eyre. Anno 13 Ed. 1. cap. 19. Marſhal of the King's Bench, Stat. 5 Ed. 3. c. 8. who hath the cuſtody of the priſon called the King's Bench Priſon in Southwark. Martial Law, Is the law of war, that depends upon the juſt but arbitrary power and pleaſure of the King, or his lieutenant; for though the King doth not make any laws but by common conſent in parliament, yet in time of war, by reaſon of the neceſſity of it to guard againſt dangers that often ariſe, he uſeth abſolute power, ſo that his word is a law. Smith de Repub. Angl. lib. 2. c. 4. But this power is given him by act of parliament.

But the Marſhal Law, (according to Chief Juſtice Hale) is, in reality, not a law, but ſomething indulged rather than allowed as a law; and it relates only to members of the army, being never intended to be executed on others, who ought to be ordered and governed by the laws to which they are ſubject, though it be a time of war. Hale's Hiſt. L. 39. And the exerciſe of Martial Law, whereby any perſon might loſe his life or member, or liberty, may not be permitted in time of peace; when the King's courts are open for all perſons to receive juſtice. Ibid. 40. Alien enemies invading the kingdom, &c. ſhall be dealt with and executed by Martial Law. H. P. C. 10, 15. Alſo ſoldiers are puniſhed for deſertion, &c. in a court Martial by various ſtatutes. Maſons. To plot confederacies amongſt maſons, is declared felony by an old ſtatute; and ſuch as aſſemble thereon ſhall ſuffer impriſonment, and make fine and ranſom. Stat. 3 H. 6. c. 1. This was when the nature and ſecrets of maſonry were known only to few. They are now known to many thouſands, who are members of the ſociety, and diſperſed all over the Chriſtian world.

Many of the principal men of this and other countries, are of the fraternity. And maſons, taken priſoners, by the French, in the late war, met with great indulgencies, from their brethren, in foreign parts, though enemies, in a national reſpect, as maſons, they were friends.

Maſs-Prieſt. In former times ſecular prieſts, to diſtinguiſh them from the regulars, were called Maſs-Prieſts, and they were to officiate at the maſs, or in the ordinary ſervice of the church: Hence Meſſe Preoſt in many of our Saxon canons, for the parochial miniſter; who was likewiſe ſometimes called Meſſe Thegne, becauſe the dignity of a prieſt in many caſes was thought equal to that of a Thein or lay lord. But afterwards the word Maſs-Prieſt was reſtrained to ſtipendiaries retained in chantries, or at particular altars, to ſay ſo many maſſes for the ſouls of the dead.

Maſter, (magiſter) Signifies in general a governor, teacher, &c. And alſo in many caſes an officer. See Servant.

Maſter and ſervant. The relation between a maſter and a ſervant, from the ſuperiority and power which it creates on the one hand, and duty, ſubjection, and, as it were, allegiance on the other, is, in many inſtances, applicable to other relations, which are in a ſuperior and ſubordinate degree; ſuch as lord and bailiff, principal and attorney, owners and maſters of ſhips, merchants and factors, and all others having authority to enforce obedience to their orders, from thoſe whoſe duty it is to obey them, and whoſe acts, being conformable to their duty and office, are eſteemed the acts of their principals.

If a man gives money to his ſervant to buy goods, and the ſervant buys upon credit, the maſter is chargeable. This can only mean, where the ſervant hath been uſed to buy on credit, and the maſter hath diſcharged the debts he contracted. But where the maſter never ſent his ſervant to buy on credit, nor ever diſcharged a debt contracted by him, I cannot conceive he is liable to pay a debt contracted by the ſervant, without his privity, when he had given him money to pay.

So, a promiſory note of a ſervant will charge his maſter, if the money came to the maſter's uſe, though he was not intruſted to give ſuch note. Ld. Raym. 225.

A maſter is indictable for a nuſance done by his ſervant. Ib. 264.

Maſter of the Armory, (Magiſter Armorum et Armaturæ Regis) Is an officer who hath the care of his Majeſty's arms and armory, mentioned in the ſtat. 39 Eliz. c. 7.

Maſter of the Ceremonies, (Magiſter Admiſſionum) Is one who receives and conducts ambaſſadors and other great perſons to audience of the King, &c. This office was inſtituted by King James 1. for the more magnificent reception of ambaſſadors and ſtrangers of the greateſt quality.

Maſter of, or, in Chancery, (Magiſter Cancellariæ) In the Chancery there are Maſters, who are aſſiſtants to the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, and Maſter of the Rolls: Of theſe there are ſome ordinary, and ſome extraordinary; the Maſters in ordinary are twelve in number, of whom the Maſter of the Rolls is chief; and ſome ſit in court every day, during term, and have referred to them interlocutory orders for ſtating accounts, computing damages, and the like; they alſo adminiſter oaths, take affidavits, and acknowledgments of deeds and recogniſances: The extraordinary Maſters are appointed to act in the country, in the ſeveral counties of England, beyond ten miles diſtance from London; by taking affidavits, recogniſances, acknowledgments of deeds, &c. for the eaſe of the ſuitors of the court.

By the ſtat. 13 Car. 2. ſt. 1. in the Appendix, a public office was ordained to be kept near the Rolls, for the Maſters in Chancery; in which they, or ſome of them, are conſtantly to attend, for the adminiſtring oaths, caption of deeds, and diſpatch of other buſineſs: And their fees for taking affidavits, acknowledgment of deeds, exemplifications, reports, certificates, &c. are aſcertained by that act; and to take more, incurs diſability for ſuch Maſter to execute his office, and a forfeiture of 100*l.* &c.

To impower the high Court of Chancery, to lay out upon government ſecurities, a ſum of money therein mentioned, out of the common and general caſh in the Bank of England, belonging to the ſuitors of the ſaid court; and to apply the intereſt ariſing therefrom, towards augmenting the incomes of the maſters of the ſaid court, 5 Geo. 3. c. 28.

Maſter of the Court of Wards and Liveries, Was the chief officer of that court, aſſigned by the King; to whoſe cuſtody the ſeal of the court was delivered, &c. as appears by the ſtat. 33 H. 8. c. 33. But as this court was aboliſhed by ſtat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. this office of courſe dropped with it.

Maſter of the Faculties, (Magiſter facultatum) Is an office under the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who grants licences and diſpenſations, &c.

Maſter of the Horſe, Is he who hath the ordering and government of the King's ſtables; and of all horſes, racers, and breeds of horſes belonging to his Majeſty: He has the charge of all revenues appropriated for defraying the expence of the King's breed of horſes; of the ſtable, letters, ſumpter-horſes, coaches, &c. and has power over the equerries and pages, grooms, coachmen, farriers, ſmiths, ſadlers, and all other artificers working for the King's ſtables, to whom he adminiſters an oath to be true and faithful: But the accounts of the ſtables, of liveries, wages, &c. are kept by the avener; and by him brought to be paſſed and allowed by the court of Green Cloth.

The office of Maſter of the Horſe is of high account, and always beſtowed upon ſome great nobleman; and this officer only has the privilege of making uſe of any horſes, footmen, or pages belonging to the King's ſtables: At any ſolemn calvalcade he rides next to the King, with a led horſe of ſtate. He is the third great officer of the King's houſhold; being next to the Lord Steward, and Lord Chamberlain; and is mentioned in the ſtatute 39 Eliz. c. 7. and 1 Ed. 6. c. 5.

Maſter of the Jewel Office, An officer of the King's houſhold, having the charge of all plate uſed for the King or Queen's table, or by any great officer at court; and alſo of all the royal plate remaining in the Tower of London, and of chains and jewels not fixed to any garment. 39 Eliz. c. 7.

Maſter of the Houſhold, (Magiſter Hoſpitii Regis) Otherwiſe called Grand Maſter of the King's Houſhold, now ſtiled Lord Steward of the Houſhold, which title this officer hath born ever ſince Anno 32 H. 8. But under him there is a principal officer ſtill called Maſter of the Houſhold, who ſurveys the accounts, and has great authority.

Maſter of the King's Muſters, Is a martial officer in the King's armies, to ſee that the forces are compleat, well armed and trained; and to prevent frauds, which would otherwiſe waſte the Prince's treaſure, and weaken the forces, &c.

Maſter of the Mint, Is an officer who receives the ſilver of the goldſmiths, and pays them for it, and overſees every thing belonging to the Mint; he is at this day called Warden of the Mint.

Maſter of the Ordnance, A great officer, to whoſe care all the King's ordnance and artillery is committed. 39 Eliz. c. 7.

Maſter of the Poſts, Was an officer of the King's court, who had the appointing, placing, and diſplacing of all ſuch through England, as provided poſt-horſes, for the ſpeedy paſſing of the King's meſſages, letters, pacquets, and other buſineſs; and was to ſee that they kept a certain number of good horſes of their own, and upon occaſion that they provided others for furniſhing of thoſe perſons who had a warrant from him to take and uſe poſt-horſes, either from or to the ſeas, or other places within the realm, he likewiſe paid their wages, ſettled their allowances, &c. 2 Ed. 6. c. 3.

The ſtat. 12 Car. 2. c. 34. for erecting one General Poſt-Office in London, ordains, that there ſhall be a Maſter of the Poſt-Office, appointed by the King, by letters patent, (and of late this office is executed by two jointly) who, and his agents, and the perſons employed by them, have the ſending and carriage of all letters at certain rates; and the poſt-maſter is to continue conſtant poſts, and provide perſons riding poſt with poſt-horſes, under penalties, taking 3*d.* per mile for the horſe, and 4*d.* for the guide, every ſtage, &c. Vide Stat. 9 Ann. c. 10. By the Stat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 25. Any perſon may let to hire chaiſes, or furniſh horſes for chaiſes at any ſtage upon any poſt-road notwithſtanding ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 10. See Poſt.

Maſter of the Revels, An officer to regulate the diverſions of dancing and maſking, uſed in the palaces of the King, Inns of court, &c. and in the King's court is under the Lord Chamberlain.

Maſter of the Rolls, (Magiſter Rotulorum) Is an aſſiſtant to the Lord Chancellor in the High court of Chancery, and in his abſence heareth cauſes there, and alſo at the chapel of the Rolls, and makes orders and decrees. Crompt. Juriſd. 41. His title in his patent is, Clericus parvæ Bagæ, Cuſtos Rotulorum, &c. And he has the keeping of the Rolls of all patents and grants which paſs the Great Seal, and the records of the Chancery. He is called Clerk of the Rolls, ſtat. 12 R. 2. c. 2. and in Forteſcue, c. 24. and no where Maſter of the Rolls, until the 11 H. 7. c. 20. In which reſpect, Sir Tho. Smith ſays, he may not unfitly be ſtiled Cuſtos Archivorum. Maſter of the Rolls enabled to grant leaſes of the houſes belonging to the Rolls. 12 Car. 2. c. 36. Conſtruction of the power, 20 Geo. 2. c. 34. His judicial authority confirmed, 3 Geo. 2. c. 30. In his diſpoſition are the offices of the ſix clerks, and the clerks of the petty bag, examiners of the court, and clerks of the chapel. 14 & 15 H. 8. c. 1. See Stat. 23 Geo. 2. c. 25. Whereby 1200 l. per Annum is directed to be paid to the Maſter of the Rolls.

Maſter of the Temple. The founder of the order of the Knights Templers, and his ſucceſſors, were called Magni Templi Magiſtri; and probably from hence he was the ſpiritual guide and director of the Temple. The Maſter of the Temple here was ſummoned to parliament Anno 49 H. 3. And the chief miniſter of the Temple Church in London, is now called Maſter of the Temple. Dugd. Warw. 706.

Maſter of the Wardrobe, (Magiſter Garderobæ) Is a conſiderable officer at court, who has the charge and cuſtody of all former Kings and Queens ancient robes remaining in the Tower of London; and all hangings, bedding, &c. for the King's houſes: He hath alſo the charge and delivery out of all velvet or ſcarlet cloth allowed for liveries, &c. And of this officer mention is made in the Stat. 39 Eliz. c. 7. The Lord Chamberlain has the over-ſight of the officers of the wardrobe.

Matter in Deed, and Matter of Record, Are often mentioned in law proceedings, and differ thus: The firſt ſeems to be nothing elſe but ſome truth or matter of fact to be proved by ſome ſpecialty, and not by any record; and the latter is that which may be proved by ſome record: For example; If a man be ſued to an exigent, during the time he was abroad in the ſervice of the King, &c. this is matter in deed, and he that will alledge it for himſelf, muſt come before the ſcire facias for execution be awarded againſt him; but after that, nothing will ſerve but matter of record, that is, ſome error in the proceſs appearing upon the record. There is alſo a difference between matter of record, and matter in deed, and nude matter; the laſt being a naked allegation of a thing done, to be proved only by witneſſes, and not either by record or ſpecialty. Old Nat. Br. 19. Kitch. 216.

Maugre, (From the Fr. Mal, and gre, i. e. Animo iniquo) Signifies as much as to ſay with an unwilling mind, or in deſpight of another; as where it is ſaid, that the wife ſhall be remitted, maugre the huſband, that is, whether the huſband will or not. Lit. Sect. 672.

Maxims in law, Are poſitions and theſes, being concluſions of reaſon, and univerſal propoſitions, ſo perfect, that they may not be impugned or diſputed. For principia probant, non probantur, therefore contra negantem principia non eſt diſputandum. Cowell. Co. Lit. 343.

A maxim is a ſure foundation or ground of art, and a concluſion of reaſon, ſo called quia maxima eſt ejus dignitas et certiſſima authoritas, atque quod maxime probetur, ſo ſure and uncontrolable as that it ought not to be queſtioned: and what is elſewhere called a principle, and is all one with a rule, a common ground, poſtulatum or axiom. Co. Lit. 10. b. 11. a.

Maxims are the foundations of the law, and concluſions of reaſon; therefore ought not to be impugned, but always to be admitted; but they may by reaſon be conferred and compared the one with the other though they do not vary, or it may be diſcuſſed by reaſon which thing is neareſt the maxim, and the mean between the maxims, and which is not; but the maxims can never be impeached or impugned, but ought always to be obſerved, and held as firm principles and authorities of themſelves. Pl. C. 27. b.

The alterations of any of the maxims of the Common law are dangerous. 2 Inſt. 210.

The laws of all nations are doubtleſs raiſed out of the Civil law, as all governments are ſprung out of the ruins of the Roman empire, and it muſt be owned, that the principles of our law are borrowed from the Civil law, therefore grounded upon the ſame reaſon in many things. 12 Mod. 482.

Maxims are principles and authorities, and part of the general cuſtoms or Common law of the land; and are of the ſame ſtrength as acts of parliament, when the judges have determined what is a maxim; which belongs to the judges. and not a jury. Terms de Ley. Doct. & Stud. Dial. 1. c. 8. A maxim in law is ſaid to be a propoſition of all men confeſſed and granted, without argument or diſcourſe. Maxims of the Law are holden for law; and all other caſes that may be applied to them, ſhall be taken for granted. 1 Inſt. 11, 67. 4 Rep.

The maxims in our books, which are many and various, are ſuch as the following, viz. It is a maxim, That land ſhall deſcend from the father to the ſon, &c. It is a maxim, That as no eſtate can be veſted in the King, without matter of record, ſo none can be deveſted out of him but by matter of record; for things are diſſolved as they are contracted. Rep. 1. Cholmey's caſe. Another, that an obligation, or other matter in writing, cannot be diſcharged by an agreement by word. And Argumentum ab authoritate fortiſſimum eſt in lege. Co. Lit. 141.

It is alſo a maxim, That if a man have iſſue two ſons by divers venters, aud the one of them purchaſe lands in fee, and die without iſſue, the other brother ſhall never be his heir, &c.

Mayor, (Præfectus urbis, anciently meyr, comes from the Brit. miret, i. e. cuſtodire, or from the old Engliſh word maier, viz. poteſtas, and not from the Lat. major) Is the chief governor or magiſtrate of a city or town; as the Mayor of London, the Mayor of Southampton, &c. King Rich. 1. anno 1189, changed the bailiffs of London into a mayor; and from that example King John made the bailiff of King's Lynn a mayor, anno 1204. Though the famous city of Norwich obtained not this title for its chief magiſtrate, till the ſeventh year of King Hen. 5. anno 1419, ſince which there are few towns of note, but have had a mayor appointed for government. Spelm. Gloſſ.

Mayors of corporations are juſtices of peace pro tempore, and they are mentioned in ſeveral ſtatutes; but no perſon ſhall bear any office of magiſtracy concerning the government of any town, corporation, &c. who hath not received the ſacrament, according to the church of England, within one year before his election; and who ſhall not take the oaths of ſupremacy, &c. Stat. 13 Car. 2. cap. 1. The 10 Ann. cap. 2. prohibited mayors and officers of corporations from going to conventicles, under the penalty of forty pounds, &c. But this is altered by 5 Geo. 1. cap. 6. though the gown, mace, or other enſigns of magiſtracy, may not be worn or carried to a conventicle, on pain of diſability to enjoy any office, &c. If any one intrudes into, and thereupon executes, the office of mayor, a quo warranto information may be brought againſt him; and he ſhall be ouſted and fined, &c. And no perſon who hath been or ſhall be in an annual office in any corporation for one year, ſhall be choſen into the ſame office the next year, and obſtructing the choice of a ſucceſſor incurs the penalty of 100*l.* Stat. 9 Ann. c. 20.

Alſo if no mayor be elected in a corporation, on the day appointed by charter, by the proper officers, the next in place is to hold a court, and elect one the day following, &c. or, in default thereof, the court of King's Bench may compel the electors to chooſe one, &c. by writ of mandamus, requiring the members who have a right to vote, to aſſemble themſelves on a day prefixed, and proceed to election, or ſhew cauſe to the contrary; and mayors, &c. voluntarily abſenting on the day of election, ſhall be impriſoned ſix months, and be diſabled to hold any office in the corporation. 11 Geo. 1. c. 4.

The authority of mayors is contained in the following particulars: The ſtatute 2 Ed. 3. c. 3. gives power to mayors to arreſt perſons carrying offenſive weapons in fairs, markets, &c. to make affrays, and the diſturbance of the peace.

By Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 4. Mayors, &c. have power to ſet the price of ale and beer: And they are authoriſed to convict perſons ſelling ale without licence; and alſo to levy penalties on the offender by diſtreſs, &c. 3 Car. 1. c. 3. And they are to cauſe quart and pint pots for the ſelling of ale, to be examined whether they hold their full meaſure; and to mark them, under the penalty of 5*l.* 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 15. Mayors, bailiffs, and lords of leets, are to regulate the aſſiſe of bread, and examine into the goodneſs thereof: and if bakers make unlawful bread, they may give it to the poor, and pillory the offenders, &c. 5 Hen. 3. ſt. 6. And the 8 Ann. c. 18. and 1 Geo 1. c. 26. direct, that mayors and chief magiſtrates of towns, &c. may in the day-time enter into any houſe, ſhop, bakehouſe or warehouſe, of any baker or ſeller of bread, to ſearch for, view, and try all or any of the bread there found; and if the bread be wanting in goodneſs, deficient in baking, under weight, or not truly marked; or ſhall conſiſt of any other ſort than what is allowed, the ſame bread ſhall be ſeiſed and diſtributed to the poor: And the former ſtatute impoſes a penalty of 40*s.* for want of weight, or not being marked as appointed, &c. but this is made 5*s.* for every ounce wanting in weight, and 2*s.* 6*d.* if under an ounce, (complaint being made, and the bread weighed before a magiſtrate within twenty-four hours) by the 1 Geo. 1. c. 26. And bakers ſelling their large bread at a higher price than ſet by mayors, &c. ſhall forfeit 10*s.* to the informer, to be levied by diſtreſs, &c. See 31 Geo. 2. c. 29.

Mayors, &c. are empowered to make enquiry into offences committed againſt the Stat. 1 Eliz. c. 2. which requires that the common prayer be read in churches; and that the churchwardens do their duty in preſenting the names of ſuch perſons as abſent themſelves from church on Sundays, &c. Head officers of corporations are to appoint and ſwear overſeers or ſearchers to examine into defects of northern cloth, &c. and the overſeers ſhall fix a ſeal of lead to cloths, expreſſing the length and breadth; and if they find any faulty, or ſealed with a falſe ſeal, &c. they are to preſent the ſame at the next quarter-ſeſſions. Mayors, &c. neglecting their duty, are liable to a penalty of 5*l.* 39 Eliz. cap. 20. Mayors may determine whether coin offered in payment be counterfeited or not; and tender an oath to determine any queſtion relating to it. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 21. Chief magiſtrates of ports, where goods are conveyed away, which are liable to cuſtoms, before entry made, and the duties agreed, are to grant their warrants for the apprehenſion of the offender, &c. 12 Car. 2. c. 4.

By 23 Eliz. c. 9. Mayors, &c. may call before them and examine dyers, ſuſpected to uſe logwood in dying; and, if they find cauſe, may bind them over to the quarter-ſeſſions, where, on conviction, they are liable to a forfeiture of 20*l.* But ſee Stat. 14 Car. 2. c. 11. and by the late act 13 Geo. 1. c. 24. Mayors and head officers of corporations, are to puniſh drunkenneſs, by impoſing a fine of 5*s.* on view, confeſſion, or proof by one witneſs, or cauſe the offender to be put in the ſtocks for ſix hours, 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. 21 Jac. 1. c. 7. And perſons ſitting tipling in an alehouſe, inn, &c. are liable to puniſhment by mayors, who may levy 3*s.* 4*d.* on ſuch offenders, for every offence, for the uſe of the poor, or cauſe them to be ſet in the ſtocks four hours; and the alehouſe-keepers, &c. ſuffering tipling in their houſes, are ſubject to a penalty of 10*s.* Ibid.

Head officers and juſtices of peace in corporations, may inquire of forcible entries, commit the offenders, and cauſe the tenements to be ſeiſed, &c. within their franchiſes, in like manner as juſtices of peace in the county. 8 H. 6. c: 9.

Mayors, &c. ſhall enquire into unlawful gaming, againſt the Stat. 33 Hen. 8. c. 9. They are to ſearch places ſuſpected to be gaming-houſes, and levy penalties, &c. and they have power to commit perſons playing at unlawful games.

Horſes ſtolen, found in a corporation, may be redeemed by the owner, making proof before the head officer of the corporation of the property, &c. 31 Eliz. c. 12.

Mayors and head officers in corporate and market-towns, and lords of liberties and their ſtewards, are to appoint and ſwear two ſkilful perſons yearly, to be ſearchers and ſealers of leather; and they are to appoint tryers of inſufficient leather, and of leather wares: Searchers not doing their duty to forfeit 40*s.* and triers 5*l.* 1 Jac. 1. cap. 22.

Perſons robbing orchards, hedge-breakers, &c. are puniſhable by mayors; and a perſon on conviction by the oath of one witneſs, ſhall pay to the perſon injured ſuch damage as the mayor, &c. ſhall think fit, or be whipped. 43 Eliz. c. 7.

Mayors, &c. on receipt of precepts from ſheriffs, (when writs are iſſued for elections) requiring them to chooſe burgeſſes or members of parliament, by the citizens, &c. are to proceed to election, and make returns by indenture between them and the electors; and making a falſe return, ſhall forfeit 40*l.* to the King, and the like ſum to the party choſen, not returned, &c. 23 H. 6. c. 14. See the Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 24.

In time of ſickneſs, a tax may be laid on inhabitants of corporations, for relieving ſuch perſons as have the plague, by mayors, &c. who are to appoint ſearchers and buriers of the dead: And if any infected perſons ſhall go abroad with ſores upon them, after an head officer hath commanded them to keep at home, it is felony; and if they have no ſores about them, they are puniſhable as vagrants. 1 Jac. 1. c. 31. The Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. which directs that the father, grandfather, mother, grandmother, and children, of every poor perſon, ſhall be aſſeſſed towards their relief by juſtices, and which impowers juſtices of peace to order a poor's rate or tax, and overſeers of the poor, &c. to place forth apprentices, and ſets forth the office of overſeers; gives the like authority to the head officers in corporate towns, as juſtices of peace have in their counties; which ſaid juſtices are not to intermeddle in corporations for the execution of this law.

Mayors, bailiffs, and other head officers of corporate towns, &c. are to make proclamation for rioters to diſperſe as follows: Our Sovereign Lord the King charges and commands all perſons aſſembled, immediately to diſperſe themſelves, and peaceably depart to their habitations, upon pain of impriſonment, &c. And if the rioters, being twelve in number, do not diſperſe within an hour after, it is felony without benefit of clergy, &c. 1 Geo. 1. ſt. 2. c. 5.

Matters relating to ſervants, and apprentices, may be determined by mayors; who have power to compel perſons to go to ſervice, &c. 5 Eliz. c. 4. Mayors may arreſt ſoldiers departing without licence: And they are to be preſent at muſters; quarter and billet ſoldiers, &c. 18 Hen. 6. c. 18. 1 Geo. 1. c. 47, &c. Perſons uſing games on a Sunday forfeit 3 s. and 4 d. to the uſe of the poor; carriers, &c. travelling on that day 20 s. and perſons doing any worldly labour thereon 5 s. all leviable by warrant from mayors and head officers of corporations, as well as other juſtices. 1 Car. 1. c. 1. 3 Car. 1. c. 2. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. And by 3 Car. 1 c. 4. If any perſon ſhall profanely ſwear or curſe in the preſence of a mayor, &c. or be convicted thereof before him, by the oaths of two witneſſes, he ſhall forfeit for every offence 1 s. to the uſe of the poor, or be ſet in the ſtocks three hours: but the ſtatute 6 & 7 W. 3, confines the forfeiture of 1 s. to ſervants, labourers &c. other perſons being ordered to pay 2 s. and double, treble, &c. on repeating the offence.

Vagrants, or other idle and diſorderly perſons, blind, lame, &c. or pretending to be ſo, begging in ſtreets, a mayor or conſtable may cauſe them to be whipped. 12 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 23. By former ſtatutes, mayors are empowered to make paſſes of vagrants; and juſtices in liberties and corporations are to iſſue warrants to conſtables, &c. to make a ſearch for and apprehend vagrants before the quarter-ſeſſions. Mayor's are to ſet the rates and prices of coopers veſſels; and appoint ſearchers and gaugers of veſſels for fiſh, &c. 11 H. 7. c. 4. 8 Eliz. c. 9.

In every city, town, &c. there is to be a common balance, and ſealed weights, under divers penalties; there is alſo to be a common buſhel ſealed. 8 Hen. 6. c. 5. 11 H. 6. c. 8. And mayors, &c. are to provide a mark for the ſealing of weights and meaſures, being allowed 1 d. for ſealing every buſhel and hundred weight; and a half-penny for every other meaſure and half-hundred weight, etc. Mayors and head officers of corporations, etc. ſhall view all weights and meaſures once a year, and puniſh offenders uſing falſe weights; and they may break or burn ſuch weights and meaſures, and inflict penalties, etc. If they permit perſons to ſell by meaſures not ſealed, they ſhall forfeit 5 l. Sealing weights not agreeable to the ſtandard, is liable to the ſame penalty; and refuſing to ſeal weights and meaſures, ſubjects them to a forfeiture of 40 s. 7 H. 7. See 31 Geo. 2. c. 17. ſ. 9. Mayors, etc. are to inſpect and order the ſize of faggot, billet, tale wood, &c. 43 Eliz. c. 14. See Corporation, and Juſtices.

Mead and Metheglin, Pay 11 d. exciſe in all by the ſtatutes 12 Car. 2. c. 23, 24. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 5. 1 W. & M. c. 3. 5 W. & M. c. 20. 4 Ann. c. 6. 8 Ann. c. 7.

Meal, May be exported duty-free. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 20. How many ſacks of meal may be carried at one load in London and Weſtminſter. 6 Geo. 1. c. 6.

Meal-Rents, Certain rents heretofore paid in meal by the tenants of the honour of Clun, to make meat for the lord's hounds; they are now payable in money.

Meals. The ſhelves of land, or banks on the ſea coaſts of Norfolk, are called the Meals and the Males. Cowel.

Mean, (medius) Signifies the middle between two extremes; and that either in time or dignity. In time it is the interim betwixt one act and another; and applied to mean profits of lands between a diſſeiſin and recovery, etc. As to dignity, there is a lord mean or meſne, that holds of another lord; and mean tenant, etc. Meſne likewiſe ſignifieth a writ, which lies where there is lord meſne and tenant; and the tenant is diſtrained by the ſuperior lord; for the rent or ſervice of the mean, (or meſne,) who ought to acquit him to the other lord, then the tenant ſhall have his writ of meſne; and if the mean lord appear not, he ſhall loſe the ſervice of the tenant, and be fore-judged of his ſeigniory, and the tenant ſhall immediately become tenant to the chief lord. Alſo in ſuch caſe, the tenant by writ may recover damages if he be diſtrained; and the mean lord be compelled to pay the rent, and do the ſervices. F. N. B. 135. 13 Ed. 1. c. 9. If a man bring a writ of meſne where he is not diſtrained, yet it is maintainable, but then he ſhall not have damages; for it is brought only to be acquitted, etc. And tenant for life, where the remainder is over in fee, ſhall have this writ againſt the meſne. 7 H. 4. 12. 15 H. 6. New Nat. Br. 330 One brought a writ of meſne againſt a man, becauſe he did not acquit the plaintiff of a rent-charge demanded, &c. when he by his deed bound himſelf and his heirs to warrant and acquit him; and it was held good: And if a man have judgment to recover in this writ, if he be not afterwards acquitted, he may have a diſtringas ad acquietandum againſt the meſne; and ſcire facias againſt the lord. Meaſe, (meſſuagium) A meſſuage or dwelling-houſe. Kitchin, 139. and F. N. B. 2. Stat. Hiberniæ, 14 H. 3. and 21 H 8. 13. Alſo a meaſure of herrings, containing five hundred; the half of a thouſand is called meaſe or meſe. Merch. Dict.

Meaſon-due, In French Maiſon de Dieu, Domus Dei; a houſe of God, a monaſtery, religious houſe or hoſpital; the word is mentioned 2 & 3 P. & M. cap. 23. 39 El. 5. and 15 Car. 2. 7.

Meaſure, (menſura) Is a certain quantity or proportion of any thing ſold; and, in many parts of England, is one buſhel.

The learned Blackſtone, in treating of the King's prerogative, ſays, "the regulation of weights and meaſures, for the advantage of the public, ought to be univerſally the ſame throughout the kingdom; being the general criterions which reduce all things to the ſame or an equivalent value. But, as weight and meaſure are things in their nature arbitrary and uncertain, it is therefore expedient that they be reduced to ſome fixed rule or ſtandard: which ſtandard it is impoſſible to fix by any written law, or oral proclamation; for no man can, by words only, give another an adequate idea of a foot-rule, or a pound weight. It is therefore neceſſary to have recourſe to ſome viſible, palpable, material ſtandard; by forming a compariſon with which, all weights and meaſures may be reduced to one uniform ſize; and the prerogative of fixing this ſtandard, our ancient law veſted in the crown; as in Normandy it belonged to the Duke. (Gr. Couſtom. c. 16.) This ſtandard was originally kept at Wincheſter: and we find in the laws of King Edgar, (cap. 8.) near a century before the conqueſt, an injunction that the one meaſure, which was kept at Wincheſter, ſhould be obſerved throughout the realm. Moſt nations have regulated the ſtandard of meaſures of length by compariſon with the parts of the human body; as the palm, the hand, the ſpan, the foot, the cubit, the ulna, (or arm) the pace, and the fathom. But, as theſe are of different dimenſions in men of different proportions, our ancient hiſtorians (Will. Malmſb. in vita Hen. 1. Spelm. Hen. 1. apud Wilkins 299.) informs us, that a new ſtandard of longitudinal meaſure was aſcertained by King Henry the Firſt; who commanded that the ulna or ancient ell, which anſwers to the modern yard, ſhould be made of the exact length of his own arm. And, one ſtandard of meaſures of length being gained, all others are eaſily derived from thence; thoſe of greater length by multiplying, thoſe of leſs by ſubdividing, that original ſtandard. Thus, by the ſtatute called compoſitio ulnarum et perticarum, five yards and a half make a perch: and the yard is ſubdivided into three feet, and each foot into twelve inches; which inches will be each of the length of three grains of barley.

Superficial meaſures are derived by ſquaring thoſe of length; and meaſures of capacity by cubing them.—The ſtandard of weights was originally taken from corns of wheat, whence the loweſt denomination of weights we have is ſtill called a grain; thirty-two of which are directed by the ſtatute called compoſitio menſurarum, to compoſe a penny-weight, whereof twenty make an ounce, twelve ounces a pound, and ſo upwards. And upon theſe principles the firſt ſtandards were made; which, being originally ſo fixed by the crown, their ſubſequent regulations have been generally made by the King in parliament. Thus, under King Richard I. in his parliament holden at Weſtminſter, A. D. 1197, it was ordained that there ſhould be only one weight and one meaſure throughout the kingdom, and that the cuſtody of the aſſiſe or ſtandard of weights and meaſures ſhould be committed to certain perſons in every city and borough; (Hoved. Matth. Paris.) from whence the ancient office of the King's aulnager ſeems to have been derived, whoſe duty it was, for a certain fee, to meaſure all cloths made for ſale, till the office was aboliſhed by the ſtat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 20.

In King John's time this ordinance of King Richard was frequently diſpenſed with for money; (Hoved. A. D. 1201.) which occaſioned a proviſion to be made for inforcing it, in the great charters of King John and his ſon. (9 Hen. 3. c. 25) Theſe original ſtandards were called pondus regis, and menſura domini regis; and are directed by a variety of ſubſequent ſtatutes to be kept in the Exchequer, and all weights and meaſures to be conformable thereto. But, as Sir Edward Coke obſerves, (2 Inſt. 41.) tho' this hath ſo often by authority of parliament been enacted, yet it could never be effected; ſo forcible is cuſtom with the multitude," Black. Com. 1 V. 274, &c. and ſee the Preceptor, Vol. 2. p. 384, &c.

Magna Charta, c. 25. ordains, " that there ſhall be but one meaſure, throughout England, according to the ſtandard in the Exchequer:" Which ſtandard, was formerly kept in the King's palace, and in all cities, market-towns and villages, it was kept in the churches. 4 Inſt. 273. By 17 Car. 1. c. 19. there is to be one weight and meaſure, and one yard according to the King's ſtandard; and whoever ſhall keep any other weight or meaſure, whereby any thing is bought or ſold, ſhall forfeit for every offence 5 s. And by 22 Car 2. c. 8. Water meaſure, as to corn or grain, or ſalt, is declared to be within the ſtat. 17 Car. 1. c. 19. And if any ſell grain, or ſalt, &c. by any other buſhel, or meaſure, than what is agreeable to the ſtandard in the Exchequer, commonly called Wincheſter Meaſure; he ſhall forfeit 40*s.* &c. Notwithſtanding theſe ſtatutes, in many places and counties, there are different meaſures of corn and grain; and the buſhel in one place is larger than in another; but the lawfulneſs of it is not well to be accounted for, ſince cuſtom or preſcription is not allowed to be good againſt a ſtatute. Dalt. 250.

We have three different meaſures, viz. one for wine, one for ale and beer, and one for corn: in the meaſure of wine, eight pints make a gallon, eight gallons a firkin, ſixteen gallons a kilderkin, half barrel or rundlet, four firkins a barrel, two barrels a hogſhead, two hogſheads a pipe, and two pipes make a tun. 15 R. 2. cap. 4. 11 H. 7. c. 4. 12 H. 7. c. 5.

In meaſure of corn eight pounds or pints of wheat make the gallon, two gallons a peck, four pecks a buſhel, four buſhels a ſack, and eight buſhels a quarter, &c.

And in other meaſure; three barley corns in length make an inch, twelve inches a foot, three feet a yard, three feet and nine inches an ell, and five yards and a half, which is ſixteen feet and a half, make the perch, pole or rod. 27 Ed. 3. c. 10.

Selling by falſe meaſures, being an offence by the Common law, may be puniſhed by fine, &c. upon an indictment at Common law, as well as by ſtatute. See the Stat. 11 Hen. 7. cap. 4. which inflicts particular fines for offences, pillory, &c.

Medianus, Is a word uſed for middle ſize; medianus homo, A man of middle fortune.

Mediators of Queſtions, Were ſix perſons authoriſed by ſtatute, who, upon any queſtion ariſing among merchants, relating to unmercatable wool, or undue packing, &c. might before the mayor and officers of the ſtaple upon their oath certify and ſettle the ſame; to whoſe order and determination therein, the parties concerned were to give entire credence and ſubmit. 27 Ed. 3. ſt. 2. c. 24.

Medietas Linguæ, or, Medietate Linguæ, Jury de, Signifies a jury or inqueſt impanelled, whereof the one half conſiſts of natives, and the other ſtrangers; and is uſed in pleas wherein the one party is a ſtranger, the other a denizen: And this manner of trial was firſt given by the Stat. 27 Ed. 3. cap. 8. Before which, this was obtained by the King's grant. Staundf. P. C. lib. 3. cap. 7. He that will have the advantage of trial per medietatem linguæ, muſt pray it; for (it is ſaid) he cannot have the benefit of it by way of challenge. S. P. C. 158. 3 Inſt. 127. In petit treaſon, murder and felony, medietas linguæ is allowed; but for high treaſon, an alien ſhall be tried by the Common law, and not per medietatem linguæ. H. P. C. 261. And a grand jury ought not to be de medietate linguæ, in any caſe. Wood's Inſt. 263. Ægyptians are excluded from this trial, 1 & 4 P. & M. c. 4. But we read, That Soloman de Standford, a Jew, had a cauſe tried before the ſheriff of Norwich, by a jury Sex probos et legales homines, et ſex legales Judæus de Civitate Norwici, &c. Melius Inquirendum, Is a writ that lieth for a ſecond inquiry, where partial dealing is ſuſpected; and particularly of what lands or tenements a man died ſeiſed, on finding an office for the King. F. N. B. 255. It has been held, that where an office is found againſt the King, and a melius inquirendum is awarded, and upon that melius &c. it is found for the King, if the writ be void for repugnancy, or otherwiſe, a new melius inquirendum ſhall be had; But if upon the firſt melius, it had been found againſt the King, in ſuch caſe he could not have a new melius, &c. for then there would be no end of theſe writs: And if an office be found for the King, the party grieved may traverſe it; and if the traverſe be found againſt him, there is an end of that cauſe; and if for him, it is concluſive. 8 Rep. 169. 2 Nelſ. 1008. If there is any defect in the points which are found in an inquiſition, there may not be a melius inquirendum; but if the inquiſition finds ſome parts well, and nothing is found as to others, that may be ſupplied by melius inquirend'. 2 Salk. 469. A melius inquirendum ſhall be awarded out of B. R. where a coroner is guilty of corrupt practices; directed to ſpecial commiſſioners. 1 Vent. 181. Vide Mod. 82. Mich. 22 Car. 2. *B. R. Mercennarius, A hireling or ſervant. Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. p. 115.

Merchant, (mercator) Is one who buys and trades in any thing: And as merchandiſe includes all goods and wares expoſed to ſale in fairs or markets; ſo the word merchant formerly extended to all ſorts of traders, buyers and ſellers. But every one who buys and ſells is not at this day under the denomination of a merchant; only thoſe who traffick in the way of commerce, by importation or exportation, or carry on buſineſs by way of emption, vendition, barter, permutation or exchange, and who make it their living to buy and ſell, by a continued aſſiduity, or frequent negotiation, in the myſtery of merchandiſing, are eſteemed merchants. Thoſe who buy goods, to reduce them by their own art or induſtry, into other forms, and then to ſell them, are artificers, not merchants: Bankers, and ſuch as deal by exchange, are properly called merchants. Lex Mercat. 23.

Merchants were always particularly regarded by the Common law; tho' the municipal laws of England, or indeed of any one realm, are not ſufficient for the ordering and determining the affairs of traffick, and matters relating to commerce; merchandiſe being ſo univerſal and extenſive that it is impoſſible; therefore of the Law Merchant (ſo called from its univerſal concern) all nations take ſpecial knowledge; and the common and ſtatute laws of this kingdom leave the cauſes of merchants in many caſes to their own peculiar law. Ibid.

The law of England, as a commercial country, pays a very particular regard to foreign merchants in innumerable inſtances. By Magna Charta, c. 30. it is provided, That all merchants (unleſs publicly prohibited beforehand) ſhall have ſafe conduct to depart from, to come into, to tarry in, and to go thro' England, for the exerciſe of merchandize, without any unreaſonable impoſts, except in time of war; and, if a war breaks out between us and their country, they ſhall be attached (if in England) without harm of body or goods, till the King or his chief juſticiary be informed how our merchants are treated in the land with which we are at war; and, if ours be ſecure in that land, they ſhall be ſecure in ours.

This ſeems to have been a common rule of equity among all the northern nations; for we learn from Stiernhook, (de jure Sueon. l. 3. c. 4.) that it was a maxim among the Goths and Swedes, "quam legem exteri nobis poſure, eandem illis ponemus." But it is ſomewhat extraordinary, that it ſhould have found a place in Magna Charta, a mere interior treaty between the King and his natural-born ſubjects: which occaſions the learned Monteſquieu to remark with a degree of admiration, "that the Engliſh "have made the protection of foreign merchants one of "the articles of their national liberty." But indeed it well juſtifies another obſervation which he has made, "that the Engliſh know better than any other people "upon earth, how to value at the ſame time theſe "three great advantages, RELIGION, LIBERTY, and "COMMERCE." Black. Com. 1 V. 260.

In the reign of King Ed. 4. a merchant ſtranger made ſuit before the King's Privy Council, for ſeveral bales of ſilk feloniouſly taken from him, wherein it was moved, that this matter ſhould be determined at Common law; but was anſwered by the Lord Chancellor, that as this ſuit was brought by a merchant, he was not bound to ſue according to the law of the land. 13 Ed. 4. In former times it was conceived, that thoſe laws that were prohibitory againſt foreign goods, did not bind a merchant ſtranger: but it has been a long time ſince ruled otherwiſe; for in the leagues that are now eſtabliſhed between nation and nation, the laws of either kingdom are excepted; ſo that as the Engliſh in France or any other foreign country in amity are ſubject to the laws of that country where they reſide; ſo muſt the people of France, or any other kingdom, be ſubject to the laws of England when reſident here. 19 Hen. 7.

Engliſh merchants are not reſtrained to depart the kingdom without licence, as all other ſubjects are; they may depart, and live out of the realm, and the King's obedience, and the ſame is no contempt, they being excepted out of the ſtatute 5 R. 2. c. 2. And by the Common law, they might paſs the ſeas without licence; tho' not to merchandiſe. Mich. 12 and 13 Eliz. Dyer 206.

If any diſturbance or abuſe be offered them, or any other merchant in a corporation, and the head officer there do not provide a remedy, the franchiſe ſhall be ſeized; and the diſturber ſhall anſwer double damages and ſuffer one year's impriſonment, &c. by Stat. 9 Ed. 3. c. 1. All merchants (except enemies) may ſafely come into England with their goods and merchandiſe. 14 Ed. 3. Merchant ſtrangers may come into this realm, and depart at their pleaſure; and they are to be friendly entertained. 5 R. 2. c. 1. And merchants alien ſhall be uſed in this kingdom, as denizens are in others, by the ſtatute 5 Hen. 4. cap. 7.

If a difference ariſe between the King and any foreign ſtate, alien merchants are to have forty days notice, or longer time, to ſell their effects and leave the kingdom. 27 Ed. 3. cap. 17. All merchants may buy merchandiſes of the ſtaple: And any merchant may deal in more merchandiſes than one; he may buy, ſell, and tranſport all kinds of merchandiſe. 27 Ed. 3. c. 3. and 38 Ed. 3. c. 2.

All the King's ſubjects are to have a free trade to and from France, Spain, and Portugal. 3 Jac. 1. c. 6. It ſhall be lawful for merchants to tranſport iron, armour, piſtols, muſkets, ſaddles, ſwords, bridles, &c. Stat. 2 Car. 2. c. 4. Merchants, &c. corrupting or adulterating wine, or ſelling the ſame adulterated, are liable to penalties, by 1 W. & M. Seſſ. 1. c. 34. On importation of tobacco, merchants have an allowance of 8 per cent. &c. 12 Ann. cap. 8. Vide Cuſtom of Merchants.

Various reſtraints are laid on merchants, eſpecially to prevent their carrying of gold and ſilver out of the nation, &c. by the ſtatute law, vide 18 Ed. 2. c. 21. 4 H. 4. c. 15. 5 H. 4. c. 9. 8 H. 6. c. 24. 3 H. 7. c. 8. 1 R. 3. c. 9. 1 Eliz. c. 11.

If a perſon, who is otherwiſe no merchant, being beyond ſea, takes up money and draws a bill upon a merchant, he cannot, in an action brought upon this bill againſt him as the drawer thereof, plead that he was no merchant; for the very taking up the money and drawing the bill makes him a merchant to this purpoſe. Comb. 152.

Merchant includes all ſorts of traders as well and as properly as merchant adventurers. D. 279. b. cites Spelm. Guilda. A merchant taylor is a common term; per Holt Ch. J. 2 Salk. 445.

The cuſtom of merchants is part of the Common law of this kingdom, of which the judges ought to take notice; and if any doubt ariſe about the cuſtom, they may ſend for merchants to know the cuſtom; per Hobart Ch. J. Winch. 24.

The Lex mercatoria is allowed, for the benefit of trade, to be of the utmoſt validity in all commercial tranſactions: for it is a maxim of law, that "cuilibet in ſua arte credendum eſt." Black. Com. 1 V. 75. See 3 New Abr. tit. Merchants.

There are companies of Merchants in London for carrying on conſiderable joint trades to foreign parts, viz. The merchant adventurers, the company eſtabliſhed in England for the improvement of commerce; which was erected by patent by King Ed. 1. merely for the exportation of wool, &c. before we knew the value of that commodity, and at a time when we were in a great meaſure ſtrangers to trade. The next company was that of the Barbary merchants, incorporated in the reign of King Hen. 7. A company of merchants trading to the north, called the Muſcovy or Ruſſia Company, was eſtabliſhed by King E. 6. and encouraged with additional privileges, by Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, &c. The Barbary merchants decaying towards the latter end of Queen Elizabeth's reign, out of their ruins aroſe the Levant or Turkey Company; who firſt trading with Venice, and then with Turkey, furniſhed England that way with the Eaſt-India commodities: This company hath very conſiderable factories, at Conſtantinople, Smyrna, Aleppo, &c. From the flouriſhing ſtate of the Levant or Turkey Company, in the reign likewiſe of Queen Eliz. ſprung the Old Eaſt-India Company, who having fitted out ſhips of force, brought from thence at the beſt hand, the Indian commodities, formerly ſold to England by diſtant Europeans; and they having obtained many charters, and grants from the crown, in their favour, were ſole maſters of that advantageous traffick; until at laſt a new company was incorporated by King Will. Anno 9 W. 3. on their lending government two millions of money; and both theſe companies, after the expiration of a certain term, were by articles united.

In the 21ſt year of Queen Elizabeth, the Eaſtland Company of Merchants was erected; and in King Charles the Second's time, that company was confirmed, with full power to trade in Norway, Sweden, Poland, and other Eaſtland countries. The Royal African Company had their charter granted them in the 14th year of King Char. 2. And by 9 & 10 W. 3. they are to maintain all forts, &c. King Charles 2. alſo by commiſſion under the Great Seal of England, conſtituted his Royal Highneſs James Duke of York, (afterwards King Jam. 2.) Edward Earl of Clarendon, and others, to be a council for the Royal Fiſhery of England, and declared himſelf to be the protector of it; and in the 29th year of his reign, he incorporated them into a company. King Will. 3. in the fourth year of his reign, eſtabliſhed a Greenland Company.

By ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 21. to pay the debts of the army, navy, &c. amounting to near ten millions, the South-Sea Company of Merchants was erected; who having advanced that money, the duties upon wines, vinegar, tobacco, &c. were appropriated as a fund for payment of the intereſt, after the rate of 6 l. per cent. &c. The company is to have the ſole trade to the South-Seas; and others trading thither ſhall forfeit their ſhips and goods, and double value: and the corporation is to continue for ever; but the funds are ſubject to redemption by parliament. This company had their capital ſtock very much enlarged in the reign of King Geo. 1. And to raiſe money lent, were empowered to make calls or take in ſubſcriptions, &c. as they thought fit; and on this foundation, the late South-Sea ſcheme was executed: but, to retrieve credit, afterwards part of the ſtock of the South-Sea company was ingrafted into the capital ſtock of the Eaſt-India company and the Bank of England; and after that, half the ſtock was converted into annuities at 4 l. per cent. Since which a farther reduction thereof hath been made.

This ſhort hiſtory of our Companies of Merchants, which have ever had many and great privileges, and are at length become of double uſe, i. e. to enlarge commerce, and ſupply the neceſſities of the ſtate, in ſome meaſure, ſhews the progreſs and increaſe of our trade, and the wealth of the nation: tho' we muſt nevertheleſs obſerve, that they are a kind of monopolies erected by law; and if the power granted them is abuſed, are of fatal conſequence; for which we need only inſtance the ever memorable year 1720, when the ſub-governor and directors of the South-Sea company incurred a forfeiture of their eſtates by ſtatute, and were diſabled to hold any offices, &c. for their vile conduct, which tended to the ruin of the public.

Over and above theſe companies, there are the Dutch Merchants; thoſe who trade to the Weſt Indies; the Canary Merchants; Italian Merchants, who trade to Leghorn, Venice, Sicily, &c. The French and Spaniſh Merchants, &c.

Merchenlage, (Merciorum Lex) Was the law of the people here called the Mercians. Cambden in his Britannia ſays, That in the year 1016, this kingdom was divided into three parts; whereof the Weſt Saxons had one, governing it by the laws called Weſt Saxon-lage, which contained Kent, Suſſex, Surry, Berks, Hampſhire, Wilts, Somerſet, Dorſet, and Devon: The Danes had the ſecond, containing York, Derby, Nottingham, Lieceſter, Lincoln, Northampton, Bedford, Bucks, Hertford, Eſſex, Middleſex, Norfolk, folk, Suffolk, Cambridge and Huntington; which was governed by the laws called Dane-lage: And the third part was in the poſſeſſion of the Mercians, whoſe law was called Merchenlage; and contained Glouceſter, Worceſter, Hereford, Warwick, Oxford, Cheſter, Salop and Stafford: from which three, King Wil. 1. choſe the beſt, and with other laws ordained them to be the laws of the kingdom. Camd. Brit. 94. See Molmution laws.

Merchet, (Merchetum) A fine or compoſition paid by inferior tenants to the lord, for liberty to diſpoſe their daughters in marriage. No baron, or military tenant, could marry his ſole daughter and heir, without ſuch leave purchaſed from the King, pro maritando filia. And many of our ſervile tenants could neither ſend their ſons to ſchool, nor give their daughters in marriage, without expreſs licence from the ſuperior lord. See Kennet's Gloſſary in Maritagium. See Marchet.

Mercia, Is uſed in many places in the Monaſtic. for amerciament.

Merger, Is where a leſſer eſtate in lands, &c. is drowned in the greater: as if the fee comes to tenant for years, or life, the particular eſtates are merged in the fee: but an eſtate-tail cannot be merged in an eſtate in fee; for no eſtate in tail can be extinct, by the acceſſion of a greater eſtate to it. 2 Rep. 60, 61. If a leſſor, who hath the fee, marries with the leſſee for years; this is no merger, becauſe he hath the inheritance in his own, and the leaſe in right of his wife. 2 Plowd. 418. And where a man hath a term in his own right, and the inheritance deſcends to his wife, ſo as he hath a freehold in her right, the term is not merged or drowned. Cro. Car. 275. Vide 15 *Vin. Meſſenger, Is a carrier of meſſages, particularly imployed by the Secretaries of State, &c. and to theſe commitments may be made of ſtate priſoners; for though regularly no one can juſtify the detaining a perſon in cuſtody out of the common gaol, unleſs there be ſome particular reaſon for it; as if the party be ſo dangerouſly ſick, that it would hazard his life to ſend him thither, &c. yet it is the conſtant practice to make commitments to meſſengers; but it is ſaid, it ſhall be intended only in order to carrying the offenders to goal. 1 Salk. 347. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118. An offender may be committed to a meſſenger, in order to be examined before committed to priſon; and though ſuch commitment to a meſſenger is irregular, it is not void; and a perſon charged with treaſon, eſcaping from the meſſenger is guilty of treaſon, &c. Skin. 599.

Meſſengers of the Exchequer, Are officers attending that court; they are four in number, and in nature of purſuivants to the Lord Treaſure.

Military Offences. By our annual acts for puniſhing mutiny and deſertion, if any officer or ſoldier ſhall excite, or join any mutiny, or, knowing of it, ſhall not give notice to the commanding officer: or ſhall deſert or liſt in any other regiment, or ſleep upon his poſt, or leave it before he is relieved, or hold correſpondence with a rebel or enemy, or ſtrike or uſe violence to his ſuperior officer, or ſhall diſobey his lawful commands: ſuch offender ſhall ſuffer ſuch puniſhment as a court martial (eſtabliſhed by the act) ſhall inflict, though it extend to death itſelf.

Excluſive of the before mentioned ſtatutes, deſertion from the King's armies in time of war, whether by land or ſea, in England or in parts beyond the ſeas, is, by the ſtanding laws of the land, and particularly by Stat. 18 H. 6. c. 19. and 5 Eliz. c. 5. made felony, but not without benefit of clergy. But by the Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 2. clergy is taken away from ſuch deſerters, and the offence is made triable by the juſtices of every ſhire. The ſame ſtatutes puniſh other inferior military offences with fines, impriſonment and other penalties. For more on this ſubject, vide Black. Com. 1 V. 414. 4 V. 101, &c.

Military power of the Crown, The King is conſidered as the generaliſſimo, or firſt in military command within the Kingdom. And in this capacity, by Stat. 13 Car. 2. c. 6. the power of raiſing and regulating fleets and armies is declared to be in him alone. For more on this ſubject, vide Black. Com. 1 V. 262, &c. and tit. Prerogative.

Mine-Adventurers, A company eſtabliſhed by ſtatute, governed by the Duke of Leeds, &c. Vide 9 Ann. c. 24.

Mines, (mineræ) Quarries or places whereout any thing is dug; they are likewiſe the hidden treaſure dug out of the earth. The King by his prerogative hath all mines of gold and ſilver to make money; and where gold and ſilver mines is of the greater value; they are called Royal mines. Plowd. But by ſtatute, no mine of copper or tin ſhall be adjudged a Royal mine, though ſilver be extracted. 1 W. & M. c. 30. And perſons having mines of copper, tin, lead, &c. ſhall enjoy the ſame, although claimed to be royal mines; but the King may have the ore, (except in Devon and Cornwall) paying to the owners of the mines, within thirty days after it ſhall be raiſed, and before removed, 16*l.* per tun for copper ore, waſhed and made merchantable; for lead ore, 9*l.* per tun; tin or iron, 40*s.* &c. Stat. 5 W. & M. c. 6. If a man hath lands where there are ſome mines open and others not, and he lets the land with the mines therein, for life or years, the leſſee may dig in the open mines only, which is ſufficient to ſatisfy the words in the leaſe; and hath no power to dig the mines unopened: but if there be no open mine, and the leaſe is made of the lands, together with all mines therein, there the leſſee may dig for mines and enjoy the benefit thereof; otherwiſe thoſe words would be void. 1 Inſt. 54. 5 Rep. 12. 2 Lev. 184. To dig mines is waſte, where leſſees are not authoriſed by their leaſes; though a mine is not properly ſo called till it is opened; being but a vein of iron or coals, &c. before. 1 Inſt. 54. v. 2 Mod. 193.

For relief of the creditors of the company of mine-adventurers. See 9 Ann. c. 24. If any perſon maliciouſly ſet on fire any mine, or pit of coal, he ſhall ſuffer death as a felon, by Stat. 10 Geo. 2. c. 32. And damaging ſuch mines, or any coal-works, by conveying water therein, or obſtructing ſewers from draining them, &c. ſhall forfeit treble damages. 13 Geo. 2. c. 21. 24 Geo. 2. c. 57. Mines how taxable, 30 Geo. 2. c. 3.

A man opens a mine in his land, and digs till he digs under the ſoil of another; he may follow his mine there; but if the owner digs there alſo he may ſtop his farther progreſs; and ſaid to be the uſe in Cornwall. 2 Vent. 342. per Wilde J. on a caſe referred to him by Lord Bridgman, 22 Car. 22.

It was ſaid by the Solicitor General, that there was a great difference between pits and mines; for if a mine be opened, he that may work the mine is not obliged to purſue the vein of ore under ground; but he may ſink pits in purſuit of it which are neceſſary to come at the ore, and as many as he thinks proper; and Lord Chancellor ſaid, it had been ſo reſolved before Powell J. on great conſideration, and conſulting and examining the moſt able miners. Caſes in Equity in Lord King's time, 79. Nov. 10, 1729. Clavering v. Clavering.

If a man demiſes lands for life or years, in which there is a coal mine open, the leſſee may dig in it; for the mine being open, it ſhall be intended, by his demiſing all the land, that his intent is as general as his demiſe; but if the mine was not opened at the time of the demiſe, the leſſee by leaſe of the land is not impowered to make new mines; but in ſuch caſe if he leaſes his land and all mines therein, the leſſee may dig for mines there; reſolved, 5 Rep. 12 Trin. 41 Eliz. C. B. Saunder's caſe.

A queſtion was, if copyholder of inheritance may dig mines in his land? The court ſeemed to think he might; for that otherwiſe, mines there would never be opened; as in the caſe of a glebe of a parſon. Sid. 152. Trin. 15 Car. 2. B. R. in the caſe of Rutland (Lord) v. Gie.

It was uſual for theſe minſtrels, not only to divert princes, and the nobility, with ſports, but alſo with muſical inſtruments, and with flattering ſongs, in praiſe of them and their anceſtors. The office and power of the King of the minſtrels, is mentioned in the Monaſtic. 1 tom. 355. Cowell. See Vagrants. and Black. Com. 2 V. 96.

Mint, (officina monetaria, monetarium) Is the place where the King's money is coined; which is at preſent and long hath been in the Tower of London, though it appears by divers ſtatutes, that in ancient times the Mint has alſo been at Calais, and other places. 2 R. 2. c. 16. and 9 H. 5. c. 5. The Mint-maſter is to keep his allay, and receive ſilver at the true value, &c. 2 H 6. c. 12. And gold and ſilver delivered into the Mint is to be aſſayed, coined, and given out, according to the order and time of bringing in; and perſons ſhall receive the ſame weight of coin, or ſo much as ſhall be finer or coarſer than the ſtandard, &c. Stat. 18 Car. 2. c. 5. All ſilver and gold extracted by melting and refining of metals, ſhall be employed for the increaſe of monies, and be ſent to the Mint, where the value is to be paid, 1 W. & M. c. 30. By the Stat. 18 Car. 2. 3000*l.* a year was granted out of certain duties on wine, beer, &c. imported, to defray the expence of the Mint; but this was increaſed by the Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 22. and much augmented by 1 Geo. 1. c. 43. by which ſtatute it may be a ſum not exceeding 15,000*l.* per ann. for England and Scotland, &c.

The officers belonging to the Mint have not always been alike; they are now the following, viz. the warden, who is the chief of the reſt, and is by his office to receive the ſilver and bullion of the goldſmiths to be coined, and take care thereof, and he hath the overſeeing of all the other officers. The maſter worker receives the ſilver from the warden, and cauſes it to be melted, when he delivers it to the moniers, and taketh it from them again after made into money. The comptroller, who is to ſee that the money be made to the juſt aſſiſe, and controul the officers if the money be not made as it ought. The maſter of the aſſay, who weigheth the ſilver, and examineth whether it be according to the ſtandard. The auditor takes account of the ſilver, &c. The ſurveyor of the melting, who is to ſee the ſilver caſt out, and that it be not altered after the aſſay maſter hath made trial of it, and it is delivered to the melters. The clerk of the irons, who ſeeth that the irons be clean and fit for working. The graver, whoſe office is to engrave the ſtamps for the money. The melters, who melt the bullion, &c. The blanchers do anneal and cleanſe the money. The moniers, who are ſome to ſhear the money, others to forge and beat it broad, ſome to round, and ſome to ſtamp or coin it. The provoſt to provide for all the monies, and overſee them, &c. Vide Coin, money.

Mint, A pretended place of privilege in Southwark, near the King's Bench, put down by ſtatute. If any perſons within the limits of the Mint ſhall obſtruct any officer in the ſerving of any writ or proceſs, &c. or aſſault any perſon therein, ſo as he receives any bodily hurt, the offenders ſhall be guilty of felony, and tranſported to the plantations, &c. Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 28. See Privileged Places.

Minuere, To let blood; minutio, blood-letting. This was a common old practice among the regulars, and the ſecular prieſts or canons, who were the moſt confined and ſedentary men. In the Regiſter of ſtatutes and cuſtoms belonging to the cathedral church of St. Paul's in London, collected by Ralph Boldock, dean, about the year 1300, there is one expreſs chapter De minutione. Cowell.

Minute Tithes, (minutæ ſive minores decimæ) Small tithes, ſuch as uſually belong to the vicar, as of wool, lambs, pigs, butter, cheeſe, herbs, ſeeds, eggs, honey, wax, &c. See 2 Inſt. 649. and Udal and Tindal's caſe. Hil. 22 Jac. where the tithe of wood was adjudged minuta decima. Cro. Miracula, A ſuperſtitious ſport or play, practiſed by the popiſh clergy for gain and deceit; prohibited by biſhop Groſthead in the dioceſe of Lincoln. Cowell.

Mis: This ſyllable added to another word ſignifies ſome fault or defect; as, miſpriſion, miſdicere, i. e. to ſcandalize any one; miſdocere, i. e. to teach amiſs. Si preſbyter populum ſuum miſdoceat. Cowell.

Miſa, A compact or agreement, a form of peace, or compromiſe. Id. ib.

Miſadventure, (Fr. miſadventure, i. e. infortunium) Has an eſpecial ſignification for the killing a man, partly by negligence and partly by chance. S. P. C. lib. 1. c. 8. And Britton diſtinguiſhes between adventure and miſadventure; the firſt he makes to be mere chance; as if a man, being upon or near the water, be taken with ſome ſudden ſickneſs, and ſo fall in and is drowned; or into the fire, and is burnt; miſadventure he ſays is, where a perſon comes to his death by ſome outward violence, as the fall of a tree, the running of a cart-wheel, ſtroke of a horſe, or ſuch like. Brit. c. 7. Staundford conſtrues miſadventure more largely than Britton underſtands it; and ſays, it is where one, thinking no arm, careleſly throws a ſtone, wherewith he kills another, &c. Weſt defines miſadventure to be, when a man is ſlain by mere fortune, againſt the mind of the killer; and he calls it homicide by chance mixed, when the killer's ignorance or negligence is joined with the chance. Weſt. Symb. ſect. 48, 49. See Chancemedley, Homicide, and Black. Com. 4 V. 182.

Miſcaſting or Miſcomputing. Aſſumpſit to pay 12 l. Jury found a promiſe to pay 7 l. the judgment was reverſed; becauſe it is not the ſame aſſumpſit. Dyer 219. b. Marg. pl. 11.

Miſcogniſant, Ignorant or not knowing, in the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 9. againſt champerty, and maintenance, it is ordained that proclamation ſhall be made twice in the year of that act, to the intent no perſon ſhould be ignorant or miſcogniſant of the penalties therein contained, &c.

Miſcomputing, In covenant for payment of rent, the miſcaſting of the ſum due doth not make it ill; and if more be laid, it ſhall be abated as ſurplus: but it is otherwiſe in debt for rent Dyer 55.

Miſcontinuance, Signifies the ſame with diſcontinuance. Kitch. 231. Though it is generally ſaid to be, where a continuance made by undue proceſs. Jenk. Cent. 57.

Miſdemeſnor, or Miſdemeanor. This word in the laws of England, ſignifies a crime.—Every crime is a miſdemeanor, yet the law hath made a diſtinction between crimes of an higher and a lower nature, the latter being denominated miſdemeanors, the former felonies, &c. For the underſtanding of which diſtinction, we ſhall give the following definition from Mr. Juſtice Blackſton's Commentaries, 4 V. 5.

A crime or miſdemeanor, is an act committed or omitted, in violation of a public law, either forbidding or commanding it. This general definition comprehends both crimes and miſdemeanors; which, properly ſpeaking, are mere ſynonimous terms; though in common uſage, the word "crimes," is made to denote ſuch offences as are of a deeper and more attrocious dye; while ſmaller faults, and omiſſions of leſs conſequence, are compriſed under the gentler name of "miſdemeanors" only.

And as he farther obſerves in the ſame page, in making the diſtinction between public wrongs and private, between crimes and miſdemeanors, and civil injuries: "Public "wrongs, or crimes and miſdemeanors, are a breach and "violation of the public rights and duties, due to the "whole community, conſidered as a community in its ſocial "aggregate capacity."

This term may be conſidered as, and in fact is, a genus, which contains under it a great number of ſpecies, almoſt as various in their nature as human actions; and which, to enumerate, would be a work of infinite labour: we are inadequate to that labour, nor will the nature and compaſs of this work admit of ſuch an enumeration.—We muſt therefore refer the reader to our ſeveral codes of criminal juriſprudence, particularly to Hale's Hiſtory of the Pleas of the Crown, and Hawkin's Pleas of the Crown, for further ſatisfaction, on this very extenſive ſubject. Vide tit. Miſpriſon.

Miſe, (a French word, written in Latin miſſum, and ſometimes miſa) Is a law term ſignifying expences, and it is ſo commonly uſed in the entries of judgments, in perſonal actions; as when the plaintiff recovers, that recuperet damna ſua to ſuch a value, and pro miſis et cuſtagiis, for coſts and charges ſo much, &c. This word hath alſo another ſignification in the uſe made of it by law; which is where it is taken for a word of art, appropriated to a writ of right, ſo called becauſe both parties have put themſelves upon the mere right, to be tried upon the grand aſſiſe, ſo that what in all other actions is called an iſſue, in a writ of writ is termed a miſe; but if in the writ of right, a collateral point be tried, there it is called an iſſue. To join the miſe upon the meer right, is as much as to ſay, to join the miſe upon the clear right, i. e. to join upon this point, which hath the more right, the tenant or demandant. 1 Inſt. 294. 37 Ed. 3. c. 16. See Black. Com. 3 V. App. v.

Miſes, Are taken for taxes or tallages, &c. An honorary gift or cuſtomary preſent, from the people of Wales to every new King and Prince of Wales, anciently given in cattle, wine and corn, but now in money, being 5000 l. or more, is denominated a miſe: ſo was the uſual tribute or fine of 3000 marks, paid by the inhabitants of the county palatine of Cheſter, at the change of every owner of the ſaid earldoms for enjoying their liberties. And at Cheſter they have a miſe-book, wherein every town and village in the county is rated what to pay towards the miſe. The 27 Hen. 8. c. 26. ordains, that "Lords ſhall have all ſuch miſes and profits of their lands as they had in times paſt, &c." And miſe is ſometimes corruptly uſed for meaſe in Law French mees, a meſſuage; as a miſe place in ſome manors is ſuch a meſſuage or tenement as anſwers the lord a heriot at the death of its owner. 2 Inſt. 528.

Miſelli, Leprous perſons. Cowell.

Miſe-money, Was money given by way of contract or compoſition to purchaſe any liberty, &c. Blount. Ten. 162.

Miſerere, The name and firſt word of one of the Penitential Pſalms, and is moſt commonly that which the ordinary gives to ſuch guilty malefactors as are admitted to the benefit of clergy; being therefore called the Pſalm of Mercy.

Miſericordia, Is, in law, uſed for an arbitrary or diſcretionary amerciament impoſed for an offence; and where the plaintiff or defendant in any action is amerced, the entry is ideo in miſericordia, &c. Bract. lib. 4. tract. 5. cap. 6. Kitch. 78. It is called miſericordia becauſe it ought to be but ſmall, and rather leſs than the offence, according to Magna Charta, c. 14. Sometimes miſericordia is to be quit of all manner of amerciaments. Cromp. Jurdiſd. 196.

If a man be unreaſonably amerced in a court not of record, as in a court baron, &c. there is a writ called moderata miſericordia, directed to the lord, or his bailiff, commanding them that they take moderate amerciaments according to the quality of the fault. Sometimes miſericordia is to be quit and diſcharged of all manner of amerciaments that a man may fall into, in the foreſt. See Cromp. Jur. 196. See Amerciament, Fines for Offences, Mercy, and Moderata Miſericordia. He ſhall be in the great mercy of the King. Weſtm. 1. cap. 15.

Miſericordia in cibis & potu, Exceedings, or over-commons, or any gratuitous portion of meat and drink given to the religious above their ordinary allowance.—Hic quoque procuravit—ut deteſtabiles ingurgitationes miſericordiarum (in quibus præfecto non erat miſericordia) prohiberentur. Mat. Par. Vit. Abb. S. Albani, pag. 71. In ſome convents they had a ſtated allowance of theſe over-commons upon extraordinary days, which were called miſericordiæ regulares, as——In minutionibus vero & miſericordiis regularibus duo & duo unam juſtam de cellario tam ad prandium quam ad cœnam.——Monaſt. Angl. tom. 1. pag. 149. b.

Miſericordia communis, Is when a fine is ſet on the whole county, or hundred. Mon. Angl. 1 tom. pag. 976. Ac de murdro ac de communi miſericordia quando contigerit, videlicet, comitatus & hundredi coram nobis vel aliquibus juſticiariis noſtris, &c.

Miſevenire, To ſucceed ill; as, where a man is accuſed of a crime, and fails in his defence or purgation. Et ſi compellatio ſit & emendando miſeveniet, ſit in epiſcopi poteſtat'. Lex Canut. 78. apúd Brompton.

Misfeaſance, A miſdeed or treſpaſs.———Jury to inquire of all purpreſtures and misfeaſance. Cro. Car. 498.

Misfeaſor, Is a treſpaſſer. 2 Inſt. 200.

Misfortune, or Chance, A deficiency of the will, or committing of an unlawful act, by misfortune or chance, and not by deſign. In ſuch caſe the will obſerves a total neutrality, and does not co-operate with the deed, which therefore wants one main ingredient of a crime. See Black. Com. 4 V. 26.

Miskenning, (miſkenninga) Is derived from mis, and San. cennan, i. e. citare. Leg. H. 1. c. 12. Iniqua vel iujuſta in jus vocatio; inconſtanter loqui in curia, vel invariare. It is mentioned among the privileges granted and confirmed to the monaſtery of Ramſey by S. Edward the Confeſſor. Mon Angl. tom. 1. p. 237. Et in Civitate London in nullo Placito miſkennagium. Chart. H. 2.

Miskering. Hoc eſt quietus eſſe pro querelis coram quibuſcunque in tranſumptione probata, MS. LL. in Bibl. Cotton, fol. 262.

Miſnomer, compounded of the Fr. mes, ſignifying amiſs, and nomer, i. e. nominare) Is the uſing one name for another, a miſnaming. Nomen eſt quaſi rei notamen, and was invented to make a diſtinction between perſon and perſon; and where a perſon is deſcribed, ſo that he may be certainly diſtinguiſhed and known from other perſons, the omiſſion or in ſome caſes the miſtake of the name ſhall not avoid the grant. 11 Rep. 20, 21. A grant to a man by a wrong name may be good, ſi conſtat de perſona, but the demonſtratio de perſonæ muſt appear upon the face of the grant. Ld. Raym. 304. Yet a grant to a Knight by the name of Eſquire, is void. Ib. 303. And if the name of a party is miſtaken, the judges ought to mould a ſmall miſtake therein, to make good a contract, &c. and ſo as to ſupport the act of the party by the law. Hob. 125. But the Chriſtian name ought always to be perfect; and the law is not ſo preciſe as to ſurnames, as it is of Chriſtian names. Poph. 57. 2 Lil. Abr. 199. Miſpriſions of clerks in names are amendable: and Peter and Piers have been adjudged one and the ſame name. 2 Cro. 67, 425. 1 Leon. 146. And ſo Saunder and Alexander; and Garret and Gerald are but one name: but Ranulph and Randolph; Iſabel and Sybil, &c. are ſeveral names, and muſt be named right. 1 Rol. Abr. 135. 1 And. 211.

Where a Chriſtian name is quite miſtaken, as John for Thomas, &c. it may be pleaded, that there was no ſuch man in rerum natura. Dyer 349. Or, he may plead his having been chriſtened by the name of Thomas and always called and known by that name; and traverſe his being called or known by the name of John. If a perſon pleads, that he never was called by ſuch a name, it is ill; for this may be true, and yet he might be of that name of baptiſm. 1 Salk. 6. One whoſe name is Edmund is bound in a bond by the name of Edward; tho' he ſubſcribes his true name, that is no part of the bond. 2 Cro. 640. Dyer 279. If a perſon be bound by the name of W. R. he may he ſued by the name of W. R. alias dictus W. B. his true name; not W. B. alias dictus W. R. 3 Salk. 238. If a perſon be indicted by two chriſtian and ſurnames, it will be quaſhed; for he cannot have two ſuch names. 1 Ld. Raym. 562. A lady, wife to a private perſon, ought to be named according to the name of her huſband, or the writ ſhall abate; ſo if the ſon of an Earl, &c. be ſued as a Lord, and not as a private perſon by the name of his family. Dyer 76. 2 Salk. 451.

Miſnomer of corporations may be pleaded in abatement. 1 Leon. 159. 5 Mod. 327. 2 Salk. 451. And if there be any miſtake in the name of a corporation, that is material in their leaſes and grants; they will be void. 2 Bendl. 1. Anderſ. 196. Judgment againſt a corporation by a wrong name is void. Ld. Raym. 119. A defendant may avoid an outlawry, by pleading a miſnomer of name of baptiſm or ſurname; or miſnomer as to additions of eſtate, of the town, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 460.

Tho' miſnomer of a ſurname may not be pleaded on an indictment; in an appeal it may: And any other miſnomers, and defective additions, are as fatal in an indictment as an appeal. Ibid. 130. A miſnomer muſt be pleaded by the party himſelf who is miſnamed. 1 Lutw. 35. Plea of miſnomer by attorney may be refuſed, but it is no cauſe of demurrer. Ld. Raym. 509. If defendant omits to plead a miſnomer, he may be taken in execution by the wrong Chriſtian name. 2 Strange 1218. What words in a plea of miſnomer ſhall be conſidered as a ſpecial imparlance, ſee Wilſ. par. 1. 261.

If iſſue is joined on a plea in abatement for a miſnomer in an action upon the caſe on promiſes, and found againſt the defendant, the judgment ſhall be peremptory, therefore the jury ought to aſſeſs the damages. Wilſ. par. 2. 367.

What foundation will ſupport a name by reputation, ſee Ld. Raym. 301, 304,—Note, names of perſons not chriſtened are ſurnames only. Ib. 305. See Abatement and Addition.

It may not be improper, (for the information of the ſtudent,) to obſerve that for the addition or omiſſion of a letter or two, not making any material alteration in the ſound, it is not proper to plead a miſnomer. The courts of law diſcourage, (and that juſtly,) dilatory pleas, as much as they can, as tending to the delay of juſtice. However, the curious reader, who chooſes to purſue his enquiries on this ſubject, will find it fully treated of by Comyns, in the firſt Vol. of his Digeſt, tit. Abatement. Alſo vide 2 Hawk. P. C. 230, &c. 3 New Abr. tit. Miſnomer and Addition.

Miſpleading. If, in pleading, any thing be omitted, that is eſſential to the action or defence, as if the plaintiff does not merely ſtate his title in a defective manner, but ſets forth a title that is wholly defective in itſelf, or if to an action of debt (i. e. on bond, contract, &c.) the defendant pleads Not guilty inſtead of nil debet, theſe cannot be cured by a verdict for the plaintiff, in the firſt caſe, or for the defendant in the ſecond. Salk. 365. Cro. Eliz. 778. Black. Com. 3 V. 394, &c.

When an iſſue is joined on an immaterial point, or ſuch a point, as, after trial, the court cannot give judgment, the court regularly awards a repleader. See New Abr. 4 V. 126. And Comyn's Digeſt, 5 V. 136.

Miſpriſion, (miſpriſio, from the Fr. meſpris, contemptus) Signifies a neglect or overſight: As for example; miſpriſion of treaſon, is a negligence in not revealing treaſon where a perſon knows it to be committed. Staundf. P. C. lib. 1. c. 19. If a man knoweth of any treaſon or felony and conceals the ſame, it is miſpriſion: In a larger ſenſe, miſpriſion is taken for many great offences, which are neither treaſon nor felony, or capital, but very near them; and every great miſdemeanor, which hath no certain name appointed by the law, is ſometimes called miſpriſion. 3 Inſt. 36. H. P. C. 127. Wood 406, 408.

When one knows another hath committed treaſon, and doth not reveal it to the King or his Privy Council, or ſome magiſtrate, that the offender may be ſecured and brought to juſtice, it is high treaſon by the ancient Common law; for delay in diſcovering treaſon was deemed an aſſent to it, and conſequently high treaſon: But there muſt now be an actual aſſent to ſome outward act to make it treaſon. Bracton 118. S. P. C. 37. 3 Inſt. 138, 140. And by ſtat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 10. a bare concealment of any high treaſon, ſhall be only miſpriſion of treaſon.

A perſon having notice of a meeting of conſpirators againſt the government, goes into their company and hears their treaſonable conſultation, and conceals it, this is treaſon; ſo where one has been accidentally in ſuch company and heard ſuch diſcourſe, if he meets ſuch company a ſecond time; for in theſe caſes the concealment is attended with circumſtances which ſhew an approbation thereof. H P. C. 127. Kel. 17, 21.

And a man who hath knowledge of a treaſon cannot ſecure himſelf by diſcovering generally that there will be a riſing, without diſcloſing the perſons intending to riſe; nor can he do it by diſcovering theſe to a private perſon, who is no magiſtrate. S. P. C. H. P. C. 127. But where one is told in general, that there will be a riſing or rebellion, and doth not know the perſons concerned in it, or the place where, &c. this uncertain knowledge may be concealed, and it ſhall not be treaſon or miſpriſion. Kel. 22. 1 H. P. C. 36. If high treaſon is diſcovered to a clergyman in confeſſion, he ought to reveal it; but not in caſe of felony. 2 Inſt. 629. This was law, when the Roman Catholic religion was profeſſed here as the religion of the land, the ſame may ſtill be law.

Concealers of Bulls of abſolution from Rome are guilty of miſpriſion of treaſon. 13 Eliz. c. 2. There is a miſpriſion of treaſon in counterfeiting the Great Seal; forging and uttering counterfeit money brought from another kingdom, &c. 14 Eliz. c. 3. And miſpriſion being included in every treaſon or felony, where a man hath committed treaſon or felony, the King may cauſe him to be indicted and arraigned of miſpriſion only, if he pleaſe. S. P. C. 32. But if a perſon is indicted of miſpriſion as for treaſon; tho' he be found guilty, the judges ſhall not give judgment thereon, he not being indicted of the miſpriſion. Jenk. Cent. 217. Information will not lie for miſpriſion of treaſon, &c. but indictment, as for capital crimes: And there muſt be two witneſſes upon indictments as well as trials of miſpriſion of treaſon, by the ſtatute 7 W. 3. c. 3. 2 Hawk. P. C. 258, 260. In all caſes of miſpriſion of treaſon, the offender ſhall be impriſoned for life; and forfeit all his goods and chattels, and the profits of his lands during life. H. P. C. 128. 3 Inſt. 36, 218. See Black. Com. 4 V. 120.

Miſpriſion of Felony, Is not only where a man knows of any felony committed, and concealeth or procures the concealment thereof; but under this title of miſpriſion, that of theftbote may be reduced; which is where one, knowing of a felony, takes his goods again, or amends for the ſame. 3 Inſt. 134, 139. H. P. C. 130. Tho' the bare taking goods again which have been ſtolen is no offence, unleſs ſome favour be ſhewn the thief. 1 Hawk. P. C. 125 The ſtat. 3 H. 7. c. 1. provides againſt concealments of felonies by ſheriffs, coroners and bailiffs, &c. And for miſpriſion of felony, the offenders ſhall be puniſhed by fine and impriſonment, and remain in priſon till the fine is paid. See Black. Com. 4 V. 121.

Miſpriſions at large, Are when perſons contemn the King's prerogative, by refuſing to aſſiſt the King according to law; or by ſpeaking or writing againſt his perſon or government; receiving a penſion from a foreign prince, without his leave; refuſing to take the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy; and contempts againſt the King's palace; or the courts of juſtice, &c. H. P. C. 3 Inſt. 139, 149. See Black. Com. 4 V. 119.

Miſpriſions of Clerks, Relate to their neglects in writing, or keeping records; and here miſpriſion ſignifies a miſtaking. 14 Ed. 3. c. 6.

Miſrecital of deeds or conveyances, will ſometimes hurt a deed, and ſometimes not. Hob. 18. 19, 129.

If a thing is referred to time, place and number, and that is miſtaken, all is void. Arg. Pl. C. 392. b. Trin. 13 Eliz in the caſe of the Earl of Lieceſter v. Heydon.

Miſrecital in an immaterial point, and where it is only an additional flouriſh in things circumſtantial, ſhall not avoid a grant; as where the huſband has a term in right of his wife, and this term is recited as made to the huſband. Per Archer J. Cart. 149. Mich. 18 Car. 2. C. B. in the caſe of Foot v. Berkley.

A miſrecital in the beginning of a deed, which goes not to the end of a deed, ſhall not hurt, but if it goes to the end of a ſentence, ſo that the deed is limited by it, it is vitious. Per Archer J. Cart. 149 in caſe of Foot v. Berkley. See Leaſe.

Miſſa, The maſs, at firſt uſed for the diſmiſſion or ſending away of the people: And hence it came to ſignify the whole church ſervice or Common Prayer; but more particularly the communion ſervice, and the office of the ſacrament, after thoſe who did not receive it were diſmiſſed. Litt. Dict.

Miſſal, miſſale, The maſs-book, containing all things to be daily ſaid in the maſs. Lindw. Provincial. lib. 3. cap. 2.

Miſſaticus, A meſſenger. Cowell. Domeſday in Chenth.

Miſſæ Presbyter, Signifies a prieſt in orders. Blount.

Miſſura, Singing the Nunc Dimittis, and performing other ceremonies to recommend and diſmiſs a dying perſon. And in the ſtatutes of the church of St. Paul in London, (collected by Ralph Baldock, dean about the year 1295. in the chapter de Frateria, of the fraternity or brotherhood, who were obliged to a mutual communication of all religious offices,) it is ordained——Ut fiat commendatio & miſſura & ſepultura omnibus ſociis coadunantibus & aſtantibus. Liber Stat. Eccleſ. Paulinæ, M. S. fol. 25.

Miſſurium, A diſh for ſerving up meat to a table; whence a meſſe, or portion of any diet;—But Voſſius tells us it is called meſs, quia dono Mitti ſoleat a principibus. Thorn's Chron. pag. 1762.

Miſtake. It was pleaded, that A. the huſband of B. died the 20th of February, 39 Eliz. and that afterwards, viz. the 21ſt of November, 39 Eliz. B. did marry C. ſo that the (afterwards) is ſufficient. Arg. Bridg. 45. Mich. 13 Jac. in the caſe of Smallman v. Agborrow.

Summons to appear Tueſday the 17th of April, (where Friday was the 17th) before juſtice of peace on a penal ſtatute, the time being impoſſible, it was as if no ſummons had been. 1 Salk 181. Trin. 2 Ann. B. R. Queen v. Dyer.

The words of a deed were, that “ after the death, &c. “ the tenements aforeſaid ſhall revert,” inſtead of “ remain” to J. S. yet it is a good remainder; becauſe, as it ſeems, every one's deed ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf. Br. Faits, pl. 26. cites 21 Ed. 3. 49.

Reſtrain for diſtrain.—If a man leaſe land to another, proviſoe, if the rent be behind, it ſhall be lawful for him to reſtrain; and not being ſufficient, the ground to re-enter into the premiſes, and the ſame to have again in his former eſtate: This is no good condition, for the words are not, that he ſhall reſtrain the goods upon the tenement; nor is it known what is intended by the word ſufficient, ſcilicet, ſufficient reparation, rent, &c. and the words the ground to re-enter into the premiſes, are inſenſible. Moody v. Garnon. 1 Rol. Rep. 330, 367. 1 Bulſt. 153. Moor 848. Cro. Jac. 390. S. C. and ſaid per Coke that reſtrain was the ſame as diſtrain except in the caſe of a condition.

But there are miſtakes of other kinds, i. e. of manual acts, committed unintentionally, or affecting one perſon, when intending to affect another, &c. According to Blackſtone, ignorance or miſtake is a defect of the will: As when a man intending to do a lawful act, does that which is unlawful. For here the deed and the will acting ſeparately, there is not that conjunction between them which is neceſſary to form a criminal act. But this muſt be an ignorance or miſtake of fact, and not an error in point of law. See the Commentaries, 4 V. 27.

Miſterium, for Miniſterium. Mon. Angl. 3 tom. pag. 102.

Miſtrial, A falſe or erroneous trial; where it is in a wrong county, &c. 3 Cro. 284. And conſent of parties cannot help ſuch a trial, when paſt. Hob. 5. See Trial.

Miſuſer, Is an abuſe of any liberty or benefit; as he ſhall make fine for his miſuſer. Old. Nat. Br. 149. By miſuſer, a charter of a corporation may be forfeited: So alſo an office, &c. See Black. Com. 2 V. 153.

Mitred Abbots, Were thoſe governors of religious houſes, who obtained from the Pope the privilege of wearing the mitre, ring, gloves, and croſier of a biſhop. The mitred Abbots, ſays Cowell, were not the ſame with the conventual prelates, who were ſummoned to parliament as ſpiritual lords, tho' it hath been commonly ſo held; for the ſummons to parliament, did not any way depend on their mitres, but on their receiving their temporals from the hands of the King. See Abbot.

Mitta, (from the Sax. mitten, menſura) An ancient Saxon meaſure; its quantity doth not certainly appear, but it is ſaid to be a meaſure of ten buſhels. Domeſday. Tit. Wirecſcire. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. p. 262. And mitta, or mitcha, beſides being a ſort of meaſure for ſalt and corn, is uſed for the place where the caldrons were put to boil ſalt——Calderias quoque ad ſal confi:iendum cum propriis ſedibus quæ vulgo mitchæ vocantur. Gale's Hiſt. Brit. 767.

Mittendo manuſcriptum pedis Finis, Was a judicial writ directed to the Treaſurer and Chamberlains of the Exchequer, to ſearch for, and tranſmit, the foot of a fine, acknowledged before juſtices in Eyre, into the Common Pleas, &c. Reg. Orig. 14.

Mittimus, A writ for removing and transferring of records from one court to another; as out of the King's Bench into the Exchequer, and ſometimes by Certiorari into the Chancery, and from thence into another court: But the Lord Chancellor may deliver ſuch record with his own hand. Stat. 5 R. 2. c. 15. 28 & 29 H. 8. Dyer 29, 32. Mittimus is alſo a precept in writing, under the hand and ſeal of a juſtice of peace, directed to the gaoler, for the receiving and ſafe keeping of an offender until he is delivered by law. 2 Inſt. 590. One muſt be committed by lawful mittimus; or breach of priſon will not be felony, &c.

Mittre a large, Is generally to ſet or put at liberty. Law Fr. Dict. And there is a mitre le eſtate, and de droit, mentioned by Littleton; in caſe of releaſes of lands by jointenants, &c. which may ſometimes paſs a fee, without words of inheritance. 1 Inſt. 273, 274. As to mittre le droit. See Black. Com. 2 V. 325. And as to mitter le eſtate. Id. 324.

Mixed Actions, Suits partaking of the nature of real, and perſonal, wherein ſome real property is demanded, and alſo perſonal damages for a wrong ſuſtained.

Mixed Larceny, or compound larceny, is ſuch as hath all the properties of ſimple larceny, but is accompanied with one, or both, or the aggravations of a taking from one's houſe or perſon.

Mixed Tithes, Are thoſe of cheeſe, milk, and young beaſts, &c. 2 Inſt. 649. See Tithes. And Black. Com. 2 V. 24.

Mixtilio. See Meſtilo.

Mixtum. This word is often mentioned by our Monkiſh hiſtorians; it ſometimes ſignifies a breakfaſt, but always a certain quantity of bread and wine. Cowell.

Mockadoes, Stuffs made in England, and other countries; mentioned in the Stat. 23 Eliz. c. 9.

Moderata miſericordia, A writ (founded on Magna Charta) which lies for him who is amerced in a court not of record, for any tranſgreſſion, beyond the quality or quantity of the offence: It is directed to the lord of the court or his bailiff, commandiug them to take a moderate amerciament of the parties. If a man be amerced in a Court-Baron, on preſentment by the jury, where he did not any treſpaſs, he ſhall not have this writ, unleſs the amerciament be exceſſive and outrageous: And if the ſteward of the court, of his own head, will amerce any tenant or other perſon without cauſe, the party ought not to ſue for his writ of moderata miſericordia, if he be diſtrained for that amerciament; but he ſhall have action of treſpaſs. New Nat. Br. 167. When the amerciament which is ſet on a perſon is affeered by his peers, this writ of moderata miſericordia doth not lie; for then it is according to the ſtatute. See F. N. B. 76. 4to edit. 176.

Modiatio, Was a certain duty paid for every tierce of wine. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. p. 994.

Modius, A meaſure, uſually a buſhel; but various according to the cuſtoms of ſeveral countries.

Modius Terræ vel Agri. This phraſe was much uſed in the ancient charters of the Britiſh Kings, and probably ſignified the ſame quantity of ground as with the Romans, viz. One hundred foot long, and as many broad.——Sciendum eſt quod dedit illas pedum quatuor modiorum, agri cum omni cenſu ſuo, &c. Mon. Angl. tom. 3. p. 200.

Modo & forma, Are words of art in law pleadings, &c. and particularly uſed in the anſwer of a defendant, whereby he denies to have done the thing laid to his charge, modo & forma declarata. Kitch. 232.

Where modo et forma are of the ſubſtance of the iſſue, and where but words of form, this diverſity is to be obſerved; where the iſſue taken goeth to the point of the writ or action, there modo et forma are but words of form, as in the caſe of the writ of entry in caſu proviſo. But otherwiſe it is, when a collateral point in pleading is traverſed; as if a feoffment be alledged by two, and this is traverſed modo et forma, and it is found the feoffment of one, there modo et forma is material. So if a feoffment be pleaded by deed, and it is traverſed abſque hoc quod feoffavit modo et forma, upon this collateral iſſue modo et forma are ſo eſſential as the jury cannot find a feoffment without deed. Co. Lit. 281. b. See Br. Labourers, pl. 46. cites 38 H. 6. 22. So in breach of covenant, as for ploughing meadow land, a licence in writing, by ſeveral, intitled at the time to the reverſion with the appurtenant, (or land-lords pro tempore,) may be traverſed modo et forma, and a licence by parol, or by one or two, &c. and not by all, will not ſupport the iſſue.

Modo et forma do not put the day nor place in iſſue; but only the matter and ſubſtance of the plea. Reg. Plac. 188. a. 5.

Where a traverſe is with a modo et forma, &c. that will put the manner, as well as the matter in iſſue, where the manner is material, as the time, the fact, and other circumſtances, when they are the effect of the iſſue. Reg. Plac 189. c. 5.

Modus Decimandi, Is when lands, tenements, or ſome certain annual ſum, or other profit, hath been given time out of mind to a parſon and his ſucceſſors, in full ſatisfaction and diſcharge of all tithes in kind, in ſuch a place. 2 Rep. 47. And ſee 2 Inſt. 490. And it may be paid in cities and towns, as in London, for houſes in lieu of the tithe of the lands on which the houſes were built: And there may be a modus decimandi for perſonal tithes. 2 Inſt. 657, 659. A modus ought to be for the benefit and advantage of the parſon; and is ſuppoſed to be of the full value of the tithes, at the time of the original compoſition; and if it doth not now come up to that value, it ſhall be intended that the tithes are improved, or that money is become of leſs value than it was at the time of the modus agreed on. 13 Rep. 152. Hob. 40.]

But one tithe muſt not be paid in conſideration of another; it is to be ſomething different from the thing that is due. where the tithes are due of common right; and not by cuſtom only; and it muſt be ſomething as certain and durable as the tithe: All which are neceſſary to make a good preſcription. 1 Roll. Abr. 650. 1 Cro. 276, 446, 475. Hob. 40.

A modus ariſes either by compoſition, cuſtom or preſcription; a compoſition is an agreement entered into by deed, executed under hand and ſeal, that ſuch and ſuch lands ſhall be diſcharged of tithes, paying ſome annual payment, or doing ſomething for the benefit and advantage of the parſon. &c. which is a legal exemption from payment of tithes for ever, if made before the ſtat. 13 Eliz. c. 10.

Cuſtom is what gives a right to a whole county, city, town or pariſh, and muſt be common to all within the limits, where it is averred to be; and preſcription is that which gives a right to ſome particular perſon, with reſpect to ſome particular houſe, farm, &c. And the Eccleſiaſtical laws allow forty years to make a good cuſtom and preſcription; but, by the Common law, it muſt be beyond the memory of man. 1 Roll. Abr. 653. Count Parſ. Comp. 159. A Layman, Lord of a manor, may preſcribe de modo decimandi, for himſelf and tenants; alſo a private perſon for his own lands, or part thereof, &c. Tho' in caſes of preſcription, it is only to be diſcharged of a particular ſort of tithes; for a preſcription de non decimando generally, would undo the clergy, therefore it is not good where there is not ſufficient left for their maintenance; as it may be where there is a competent livelihood for the parſon. 2 Rep. 47. 1 Cro. 784. 1 Rol. Abr. 653.

A layman cannot preſcribe by the Common law de non decimando; but he may be diſcharged of tithes for lands in his own hands, by grant from parſon, patron and ordinary 2 Rep. 44. A pariſh, &c. may not preſcribe de non decimando, though it may preſcribe de modo decimandi. 1 Rol. Abr. 653. But tithes due by cuſtom only, are not within the rule againſt preſcription in non decimando by laymen; for by the like cuſtom perſons may be diſcharged from the payment of ſuch tithes. Wood's Inſt. 179. And ſpiritual perſons and corporations may preſcribe de non decimando, to be diſcharged abſolutely of tithes, and pay nothing in lieu thereof; ſo alſo may their tenants. 2 Rep. 44. 1 Roll. Abr. 653, 654. 1 Cro. 512.

A parſon may ſue in the Spiritual court for a modus decimandi, or rate tithe; but if the modus is denied, or a cuſtom is to be tried, it muſt be tried in the Common law courts: And where a modus is pleaded in the Spiritual court to a demand of tithes in kind, a prohibition lies upon ſuppoſition that the Spiritual court will not admit of any plea againſt tithes. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 13. Wood 178. Where land is converted to other uſes, as hay ground to tillage, &c. or the thing is altered or deſtroyed; as when a fulling-mill is made a corn-mill, or a corn-mill is come to ruin, &c. a modus made on good conſideration may be diſcharged, and then tithes ſhall be paid in kind. 1 Danv. Abr. 607, 608. So by the non-payment of the conſideration; or by payment of tithes in kind, for ſo long time, that the preſcription for a modus decimandi cannot be proved: Tho' ſhort interruption it is ſaid ſhall not deſtroy it. 1 Rol. 932. Hob. 43. A payment of different ſums, is evidence that there is no modus. A cuſtom of paying tithe of wool by the pound, and not by the fleece, is no modus. 2 Strange 783. See Black. Com. 2 V. 29.

Molendinum, A mill of divers kinds. See Mill.

Molendum, Signifies corn ſent to a mill, a griſt. Chart. Abbat. de Rading, MS. fol. 116.

Molitura, Was commonly taken for the toll or multure paid for grinding corn at a mill, and ſometimes called molta, Fr. moulta, molitura libera, free grinding or liberty of a mill, without paying toll; a privilege which the lord generally reſerved to his own family——Salva mihi & hæredibus meis molitura libera familiæ noſtræ quieta in dicto molendino. Paroch Antiq. 236.

Molliter manus impoſuit. Several juſtifications in treſpaſs, i. e. actions of aſſault, are called by this name, from the words gently laid his hands upon him uſed in the plea; as where the defendant juſtifies an aſſault by ſhewing that the plaintiff was unlawfully in the houſe of defendant, making a diſturbance, and being requeſted to ceaſe ſuch diſturbance, and depart, he refuſed and continued therein, making ſuch diſturbance, he, the defendant, gently laid his hands on the plaintiff, and removed him out of the houſe. So in various other inſtances, as for ſeparating two perſons, fighting, in order to preſerve the peace, ſo in the legal exerciſe of an office, &c. See Black. Com. 3 V. 121.

Monetagium, Signified a certain tribute paid by tenants to their lord every third year, that he ſhould not change the money which he had coined, formerly when it was lawful for great men to coin money current in their territories; but not of ſilver and gold: It was abrogated by the Stat. 1 Hen. 1. c. 2. The word monetagium is likewiſe uſed for a mintage, and the right of coining or minting money. Jus & artificium cudendi monetas.

Money, (moneta) Is that metal, be it gold or ſilver, which receives authority by the prince's impreſs to be current; for as wax is not a ſeal without a print, ſo metal is not money without impreſſion. Co. Litr. 207. Money is ſaid to be the common meaſure of all commerce, thro' the world, and conſiſts principally of three parts; the material whereof it is made, being ſilver or gold; the denomination or extrinſick value, given by the King, by virtue of his prerogative; and the King's ſtamp thereon. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. H. 188.

It belongs to the King only, to put a value, as well as the impreſſion on money; which being done, the money is current for ſo much as the King hath limited. 2 Inſt. 575. Any piece of money coined is of value as it bears a proportion to other current money, and that without proclamation; and tho' there is no act of parliament, or order of ſtate for guineas, as they are taken; yet being coined at the mint, and having the King's inſignia on them, they are lawful money, and current at the value they were coined and uttered at the mint. 2 Salk. 446. But it has been obſerved, that guineas were originally coined for 20*s.* according to the twenty ſhilling pieces of money, and that legally, no more ought to be demanded for them: Alſo that in legal proeeedings, they ſhould be mentioned as pecias auri, vocat. guineas, valoris, &c. 5 Mod. 7. If an action is brought for damages, the value of guineas may be given in evidence to the jury: but if the action be for ſo many guineas, the value ought to be ſet forth in the deelaration, to aſcertain the debt. Carthew. 255.

Gold and ſilver coin, &c. is not to be exported without licence, on pain of forfeiture. Stat. 9 Ed. 3. cap. 1. And money of ſilver melted down, is to be forfeited, and double value. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 51. But by old ſtatutes, foreign money may be melted down; and no money ſhall be current but the King's own, &c. 27 Ed. 3. cap. 14. 17 R. 2. c. 1. See Coin and Exchange, and Stat. 27 Geo. 2. c. 11. See the Table to the Statutes, tit. Money, Coin, &c. See Black. Com. 1 V. 276. 4 V. 84, 88.

Money, lending it abroad. The King by proclamation may at any time prohibit all his ſubjects, not exceeding ing one year, to lend or advance money to any foreign prince or ſtate, without licence under the Great or Privy Seal; and if any perſon knowingly offend in the premiſſes, he ſhall forfeit treble the value of the money lent, &c. two-thirds to the King, and the other to the informer: but perſons may deal in foreign ſtocks, or be intereſted in any bank abroad, eſtabliſhed before iſſuing his Majeſty's proclamation. Stat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 5.

Money in Court. In law proceedings, money demanded is oftentimes brought into court, either by a rule of court, or by pleading a profert in curiam of the money on a tender; and then, if the money is not paid into court, the plea will not be received; for money is not allowed to be paid into court, after plea pleaded. Wilſ. par. 1. 157. The money muſt be brought into court, upon a plea of tender: And the defendant may at any time, pending an action on bond with a penalty, bring the money and coſts into court, and it ſhall be a good ſatisfaction and diſcharge, by ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. If a defendant pay money, or part, into court, and it is ſtruck out of the declaration, though the plaintiff is nonſuit, he ſhall not take the money out of court, for by paying into court, the defendant admitted that ſo much was due; but if the defendant brings money into court, upon a tender and uncore priſt, and the plaintiff takes iſſue upon the tender, and it is found againſt him, then the defendant ſhall have the money out of court. 2 Salk. 597.

Money may be brought into court upon an action of debt for rent: in replevin, when the defendant avows for ſo much rent arrear, the plaintiff hath been admitted to bring it into court: And in covenant, &c. where a breach is aſſigned for non-payment of rent, the defendant may bring the money due into court. Ibid. In a quantum meruit it hath been denied; tho' it was granted in ſuch caſe, Paſch. 5 Ann. In trover the defendant cannot bring the goods and coſts into court. Wilſ. par. 1. c. 23.

If an action for the meſne profits after a recovery in ejectment, the defendant ſhall not have leave to pay money into court. Ib. Par. 2. 115.

Monger, A little ſea veſſel which fiſhermen uſe. Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 11. And when a word ends with monger, as ironmonger, &c. it ſignifies merchant, from the Sax. manger, i. e. Mercator.

Moniers, or Moneyers, Monetarii, Are miniſters of the Mint, who make and coin the King's money. Reg. Orig. 262. and 1 Ed. 6. 15. It appears in ancient authors, that the Kings of England had Mints in ſeveral counties; and in the Tract in the Exchequer, written by Oakham, we find, that whereas ſheriffs were uſually obliged to pay into the King's Exchequer the King's ſterling money, for ſuch debts as they were to anſwer; thoſe of Cumberland and Northumberland were admitted to pay in any ſort of money, ſo it were ſilver: And the reaſon there given is, becauſe thoſe two ſhires Monetarios de antiqua inſtitutione non habent; quod abbas & monachi prædicti habeant unum monetarium & unum cuneum apud Rading ad monetam ibidem, tam ad obolos & ſterlingos quam ad ſterlingos prout moris eſt fabricand. & faciend. Memorand. Scac. de Anno 20 Ed. 3. inter record de Trin. Rot. Of later days the title of moniers hath been given to bankers, that is, ſuch as make it their trade to deal in monies upon returns. Cowell.

Monk, (Monachus) From the Gr. Μόνος, ſolus qui ſoli, i. e. Separati ab aliorum conſortio vivant, becauſe the firſt monks lived alone in the wilderneſs. They were after divided into three ranks; Cœnobitarum, i. e. a ſociety living in common in a monaſtery, &c. under the government of a ſingle perſon; and theſe were under certain rules, and afterwards called Regulars, Anachoretæ, or Eremitæ, thoſe monks who lived in the wilderneſs on bread and water. And Sarabitæ, monks living under no rule, that wandered in the world. St. Jerom tells us, that of the Anachoretæ Paulus fuit Auctor, Antonius illuſtrator, Johannes Baptiſta princeps.

Monopoly, (From Μόνος unus & πωλέω vendo) Is an allowance of the King by his grant, commiſſion or otherwiſe, to any perſon or perſons, for the ſole buying ſelling, making, working, or uſing of any thing, by which other perſons are reſtrained of any freedom or liberty that they had before, or hindered in their lawful trade. 3 Inſt. 181. It is defined to be where the power of ſelling any thing is in one man alone; or where one ſhall ingroſs and get into his hands ſuch a merchandiſe, &c. as none may ſell or gain by them but himſelf. 11 Rep. 86.

And a monopoly hath three incidents miſchievous to the public: 1. The raiſing of the price. 2. The commodity will not be ſo good. 3. The impoveriſhing of poor artificers. Ibid. All monopolies are againſt the ancient and fundamental laws of the realm: A by-law, which makes a monopoly, is void; ſo is a preſcription for a ſole trade to any one perſon or perſons, excluſive of all others. Moor 591. Monopolies by the Common law are void, as being againſt the freedom of trade and diſcouraging labour and induſtry; and putting it in the power of particular perſons to ſet what prices they pleaſe on a commodity. 1 Hawk. P. C. 231. Upon this ground it hath been held, that the King's grant to any corporation of the ſole importation of any merchandiſe, is void. 2 Rol. Abr. 214. 3 Inſt. 182. The grant of the ſole making, importing and ſelling of playing cards, was adjudged void. 11 Rep. 84. Moor 671. And the King's grant of the ſole making and writing of bills, pleas, and writs in a court of law, to any particular perſon, hath been reſolved to be void. 1 Jones 231. 3 Mod. 75.

The King may grant to particular perſons the ſole printing of the holy ſcriptures, and law books. 1 Hawk. 231. All matters of this nature ought to be tried by the Common law, and not at the council-table, or any other court of that kind; and the making uſe of or procuring any unlawful monopoly, is puniſhable by fine and impriſonment at Common law. 3 Inſt. 181, 182.

By ſtatute, all monopolies, grants, letters patent, and licences, for the ſole buying, ſelling, and making of goods and manufactures, are declared void, except in ſome particular caſes; and perſons grieved by putting them in uſe, ſhall recover treble damages and double coſts, by action on the ſtatute; and delaying ſuch action, before judgment, by colour of any order, warrant, &c. or delaying execution after, incurs a præmunire: But this does not extend to any grant or privilege granted by act of parliament; nor to any grant or charter to corporations or cities, &c. or to grants to companies or ſocieties of merchants, for enlargement of trade; or to inventors of new manufactures, who have patents for the term of fourteen years; grants or privileges for printing; or making gunpowder, caſting ordnance, &c. 21 Jac. 1. c. 3.

As to inventors of new manufactures, &c. it has been adjudged on this ſtatute, that a manufacture muſt be ſubſtantially new, and not barely an additional improvement of any old one to be within the ſtatute; it muſt be ſuch as none other uſed at the granting the letters patent; and an old manufacture in uſe before, cannot be prohibited in any grant of the ſole uſe of any ſuch new invention. 3 Inſt. 184. Yet a grant of monopoly may be to the firſt inventor, by the Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 3. notwithſtanding the ſame thing was practiſed before beyond ſea; becauſe the ſtatute mentions new manufactures within the realm, and intended to encourage new devices uſeful here; and it is the ſame thing whether acquired by experience or travel abroad, or by ſtudy at home. 2 Salk. 447. It is ſaid, a new invention to do as much work in a day by an engine, as formerly uſed to employ many hands, is contrary to the ſtatute; by reaſon it is inconvenient, in turning ſo many men to idleneſs. 3 Inſt. 184. Sed. qu. As it tends to leſſen the price of manufactures, and enables to underſell foreigners, both at home and abroad? See Black. Com. 4 V. 115, 159, 429.

Monſter, One who hath not human ſhape, and yet is born in lawful wedlock: And ſuch may not purchaſe or retain lands; but a perſon may be an heir to his anceſtor's lands, though he be deformed in ſome part of his body. Co. Lit. 7.

A monſter ſhewn for money is a miſdemeanor. 2 Chan. Ca. 110. Trin. 34 Car. 2. Harring v. Walrond. It was a child that had four legs, and four arms and two heads and but one belly, where the two bodies were conjoined; the child died and was embalmed to be kept for ſhew, but was ordered by Lord Chancellor to be buried in a week. Ibid.

Monſtrans de Droit, Is a ſhewing a right, and ſignifies a writ out of Chancery to be reſtored to lands and tenements that are a man's in right, though by ſome office found to be in the poſſeſſion of one lately dead; by which office the King would be intitled to the ſaid lands, &c. It is given by the Stat. 34 Ed. 3. c. 14. and 36 Ed. 3. 13. Staundf. prærog. c. 21. 4 Co. Rep. 54. Leſſee of an outlaw, cannot maintain treſpaſs, but muſt be relieved by Monſtrans de droit. Ld. Raym. 307. See Traverſe.

Monſtrans de faits ou records, Shewing of deeds or records is thus; upon an action of debt brought upon an obligation, after the plaintiff hath declared, he ought to ſhew his obligation; and ſo it is of records. And the difference between monſtrans de fait and oyer de faits, is this; he that pleads the deed or record, or declares upon it, ought to ſhew the ſame; and the other againſt whom ſuch deed or record is pleaded, may demand oyer of the ſame. Cowell.

Where a man pleads a deed, which is the ſubſtance of his plea or declaration, if he doth not plead it with a profert in curia, his plea or declaration is bad upon a ſpecial demurrer, ſhewing it for cauſe: And if he doth plead it with a profert in curia, if the other party demands a ſight of it, he cannot proceed till he hath ſhewn it, and when the defendant hath had a ſight of it, if he demands a copy of the ſame, the plaintiff may not proceed until a copy is delivered unto him. Stat. 4. 5 Ann. c. 16. 2 Lil. Abr. 201, 202. Vide Profert in Curia.

Monſtraverunt, Is a writ which lies for tenants in ancient demeſne, who hold land by free charter, when they are diſtrained to do unto their lords other ſervices and cuſtoms than they or their anceſtors uſed to do: Alſo it lieth where ſuch tenants are diſtrained for the payment of toll, &c. contrary to their liberty, which they do or ſhould enjoy. F. N. B. 14. 4 Inſt. 269. This writ is directed to the ſheriff, to charge the lord that he do not diſtrain them for ſuch unuſual ſervices, &c. And if the lord nevertheleſs diſtrains his tenants, for other ſervices than of right they ought to do, the ſheriff may command the neighbours, who dwell next the manor, or take the power of the county, to reſiſt the lord, &c. And the tenants in ſuch caſe may likewiſe ſue an attachment againſt their lord, returnable in C. B. or B. R. to anſwer the contempt and recover damages. New Nat. Br. 32.

But the lord ſhall not be put to anſwer the writ of attachment ſued againſt him upon the monſtraverunt, before the court is certified by the treaſurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer, from the book of Domeſday, whether the manor be ancient demeſne; ſo that it is requiſite that the plaintiff in the monſtraverunt, do ſue forth a ſpecial writ for the certifying of the ſame. Ibid. 35. The writ of monſtraverunt may be ſued for many of the tenants, without naming any of them by their proper names, but generally monſtraverunt nobis homines de, &c. But in the attachment againſt the lord the tenants ought to be named; though one tenant may ſue it in his own name, and the name of the other tenants by general words, Et homines, &c. 2 H. 6. 26. See Ne injuſte vexes. Sed qu? If action of treſpaſs is not preferable.

Month, or Moneth, Sax. Monath, (Menſis à menſione, lunæ curſis) Signifies the time the ſun goes through one ſign of the zodiac, and the moon through all twelve; properly the time from the new moon to its change, or the courſe or period of the moon, whence it is called month from the moon. Lit. Dict. A month is a ſpace of time containing by the week twenty-eight days; by the kalendar ſometimes thirty, and ſometimes thirty-one days: And Julius Cæſar divided the year into twelve months, each month into four weeks, and each week into ſeven days. The month by the Common law is but twenty-eight days; and in caſe of a condition for rent, the month ſhall be computed at twenty eight days; ſo in the caſe of inrolment of deeds, and generally in all caſes where a ſtatute ſpeaks of months: But where the ſtatute accounteth by the year, half year, or quarter of a year, then it is to be reckoned according to the kalendar. 1 Inſt. 135. 6 Rep. 62. Cro. Jac. 167.

A twelvemonth in the ſingular number includes the whole year, according to the kalendar: But twelve months, ſix months, &c. in the plural number, ſhall be accounted after twenty-eight days to every month; except in caſe of preſentations to benefices, to avoid lapſe, &c. which ſhall be in ſix kalendar months. 6 Rep. 61. Cro. Jac. 141. But if an agreement is to pay fifty ſhillings for the intereſt of one hundred pounds at the end of ſix months, it is ſaid the computation muſt be by kalendar months; becauſe, if it was by lunar months, the intereſt would exceed the rate allowed by the ſtatute. Wood's Inſt. 433.

Mortarium, A light or taper ſet in churches to burn over the graves or ſhrines of the dead.—Tenet duas acras terræ, &c. ad inveniendum unum mortarium ardentem in eccleſia de Chepin. Farindon. Conſuetud. Dom. Farendon, MS. fol. 48.

Mort-danceſtor, A writ now ſeldom uſed, mentioned in the ſtatutes 53 H. 3. and 6 Ed. 1. See Aſſiſe of Mort-danceſtor, and Black. Com. 3 V. 185.

Mortgage, (Mortgagium, vel mortuum vadium) Is compounded of two French words, viz. mort, i. e. mors, and gage, i. e. pignus, and ſignifies a pawn of land or tenement, or any thing immoveable, laid or bound for money borrowed, to be the creditor's for ever, if the money be not paid at the day agreed upon; and the creditor holding land and tenement upon this bargain, is called tenant in mortgage. Of this we read in the Grand Cuſtomary of Normandy, cap. 113. which ſee. Glanvill likewiſe, lib. 10. cap. 6. defineth it thus; Mortuum vadium dicitur illud, cujus fructus vel redditus interim percepti in nullo ſe acquietant. So that it is called a dead gage, becauſe whatſoever profit it yieldeth, yet it redeemeth not itſelf by yielding ſuch profit, except the whole ſum borrowed be paid at the day. See Skene de verb. ſignif. verbo mortgage. He who pledgeth this pawn or gage, is called the mortgagor, and he who taketh it the mortgagee. Weſt. Symbol. part. 2. tit. Fines, ſect. 145. This, if it contain exceſſive uſury, is forbidden by 37 H. 8. cap. 9. But it is called mortgage, becauſe, if the money is not paid at the day, the land moritur to the debtor, and is forfeited to the creditor, Cowell.

1. Of the original and ſeveral kinds of mortgages.

1. Of the original and ſeveral kinds of mortgages.

The notion of mortgaging and redemption ſeems to be of Jewiſh extraction, and from them derived to the Greeks and Romans; the plan of the Moſaick law conſtitutes a juſt and equal agrarian, that the lands may continue in the ſame tribes and families, and the people might not be diverted by any exotick acts and inventions from the exerciſe of agriculture, in which innocent employment they were to be continually educated; therefore whoever were compelled by want to ſell, could transfer no eſtate in the lands, farther than to the next general jubilee, which returned once in fifty years; wherefore they computed till the jubilee, that, according to the diſtance from thence, ſuch was the intereſt that could be transferred to the buyer; but the vendor had power at any time to redeem, paying the value of the lands to the jubilee; but though he did not redeem it at the year of jubilee, yet the lands came back again free to the vendor and his heirs. Cumæus 11, 12.

But our notion of mortgaging and redemption ſeems to have come more immediately from the Civil law, therefore it will be neceſſary herein to conſider the diſtinctions in that law between pledges and things hypothecated. Juſtin. 592.

The pignus or pledge was, when any thing was obliged for money lent, and the poſſeſſion paſſed to the creditor.

The hypotheca was, when the thing was obliged for money lent, and the poſſeſſion remained with the debtor. Now, in caſe of goods pignorated, the creditor was obliged to the ſame diligence in keeping them, as he uſed about his own; ſo that if the goods were loſt by the negligence of the creditor, an action lay as for a depoſite; for the property being transferred to the creditor for a particular purpoſe, he was to keep them as his own. See Bailment: Alſo ſee the caſe of Coggs and Bernard, 2 L. Raym. 909, &c. where the caſe of bailment, is very fully and learnedly handled, and its ſeveral ſpecies ſhewn in a very judicious manner.

If the debtor did not redeem the thing pledged, the creditor was to forecloſe the redemption of the debtor; and if the money was not paid, the creditor had his actio pignoritia, or hypothecaria, which, when he had purſued, and obtained ſentence thereon, he might ſell as his own property; but there was this difference between the actio pignoritia and hypothecaria; that the actio pignoritia was only againſt the perſon of the debtor to forecloſe him, becauſe the pignus was already in the poſſeſſion of the creditor; but the actio hypothecaria was tam in rem, quam in perſonam, and was given ad pignus proſequendum, contra quemcunque poſſeſſorem; becauſe herein the creditor had not the poſſeſſion of the pledge, but it remained to the debtor; and until ſentence was obtained in theſe actions, the creditor could not obtain the property of the pledge; and if the money was paid before ſentence, the pledge was ſubject to redemption; and where the ſame thing was pledged to ſeveral, thoſe were ſaid to be potiores in pignore, to whom the things were firſt hypothecated. Digeſt. lib. 20. tit. 6. Corvin. 269, 270, 271.

If the money was tendered or paid to the creditor, the contract of pignoration was diſſolved, and the debtor might have the pledge back, as a thing lent; which ſeems to have introduced the notion among us of the debtor's right to redemption, and with them the uſucaption, or the right of preſcription, did not extinguiſh the pledge, unleſs a ſtranger had held it for thirty years, or the debtor had held it for forty years. Digeſt. lib. 20. tit. 6.

In the feudal law the rule was, Feudalia, invito domino, aut agnatis, non recte ſubjiciuntur hypothecæ, quamvis fructus poſſe eſſe receptum eſt; and the reaſon of this rule was, becauſe the feud was filled with a tenant from the lord's original bounty, on whom he depended for his perſonal ſervice in war and peace; therefore the feudatory could not obtrude a tenant on him without his leave, who might be leſs capable of thoſe ſervices; for which reaſon as the tenant could not originally aliene without licence, ſo he could not mortgage. Corvin. 268.

But when a licence of alienation was given about the time of Hen. 3. and it became a maxim in law, that the purity of a fee-ſimple imported a power of diſpoſing of it as the owner pleaſed; there were two ways of mortgaging lands introduced, which Littleton diſtinguiſhes by the names of vadium vivum and vadium mortuum. 9 H. 3. 32. 18 Ed. 1.

The vadium vivum is, where a man borrows 100 l. of another, and makes an eſtate of lands to him, until he hath received the ſaid ſum of the iſſues and profits of the lands; and it is called vadium vivum; becauſe neither the money nor the land dieth; for the lands are conſtantly paying off the money, and the lands are not left as a dead pledge, in caſe the money be not paid. This ſeems to be the ancient way of pledging lands; for they held, that lands could not be hypothecated; therefore they uſed to ſubject the uſufructus, which continued originally during the life of the feudatory; but when there was a free liberty given of alienation, then the feudatory could pledge the uſufructus of the land at pleaſure; but becauſe, by this way of pledging, the lender received his money by degrees, and in ſmall parcels, which was very troubleſome; and thoſe that lend money to uſury, are generally willing to receive the whole in a groſs ſum; therefore this way of pledging is now out of uſe. Co. Lit. 205. See Madd. Formal. 136.

The vadium mortuum is ſo called by Littleton, becauſe it is doubtful, whether the feoffor will pay the money at the day limited or not; and if he do not pay, then the land, which is but in pledge upon condition, for the payment of the money, is taken from him for ever, and ſo dead to him; and if he do pay it, then the pledge is dead to the tenant of the land. Lit. ſect. 332. Co. Lit. 205. But vide Diviſion 3.

Of theſe mortgages there are again two ſorts; 1ſt, Of the freehold and inheritance; and 2dly, Of terms for years. Maddox 318, 319.

1ſt, Of the freehold and inheritance, and here the ancient way was to make a charter of feoffment, on condition that if the feoffor or his heirs paid the ſum to the feoffee or his heirs, he ſhould re-enter and re-poſſeſs; and ſometimes the condition was contained in the charter of feoffment, and ſometimes it was defeazanced by another charter, as may be ſeen in the old forms. Maddox 318, 319.

For as a man might annex a condition to his feoffment, for cujus eſt dare, ejus eſt diſponere, ſo he might annex a condition by another deed, bearing date, and executed at the ſame time; for, being executed at the ſame time, it is really but one and the ſame diſpoſition, quæ incontinenti fiunt ineſſe videntur; but a defeaſance or condition annexed after the feoffment executed comes too late; becauſe the livery coram paribus atteſting the infeudation, in which there is no condition; the tenant muſt hold the land according to the tenure of the inveſtiture: but rents, annuities or warranties that are things executory, may be defeated by defeazances made at the time of their creation, or any time after; becauſe there is not any neceſſity of the notoriety of livery to make an inveſtiture; therefore being created by deed only, they may be defeated or deſtroyed by deed alone. Co. Lit. 226, 227.

Theſe ſorts of conveyances were ſubject to ſome inconveniencies; as if the money were not paid at the day, ſo that the eſtate became abſolute, the eſtate was thenceforth ſubject to the dower of the feoffee, and all other his real charges and incumbrances; for though if the feoffor performed the condition, then he might re-enter, and re-poſſeſs himſelf in his former eſtate, and conſequently was in above all the charges and incumbrances of the feoffee; yet if he did not literally perform the condition by payment of the money at the day, then the eſtate was legally ſubject to the charges and incumbrances of the feoffee, though the money was afterwards paid, and the eſtate reconveyed to the feoffee. Co. Lit. 221, 222.

But the courts of equity, as they grew in power have ſet this matter right, and have maintained the right of redemption, not only againſt tenant in dower, and the perſons who come in under the feoffee, but even againſt the tenant by the curteſy, and lord by eſcheat, that are in the poſt; becauſe the payment of the money doth, in the conſideration of equity, put the feoffor in ſtatu quo, ſince the lands were originally only a pledge for the money lent. Hard. 465.

2d, As to mortgages by way of creating terms, this was formerly by way of demiſe and re-demiſe. As for example; A. borrowed money of B. thereupon A. would demiſe the lands to B. for a term of 500, &c. years abſolutely, with common covenants againſt incumbrances, and for farther aſſurance, and then B. would the day after re-demiſe to A. for 499 years, with condition to be void on non-payment of the money at the day to come; this manner of mortgaging came in after the 21 H. 8. for falſifying recoveries, when there was a fixed intereſt ſettled in terms for years; and was eſteemed beſt for the mortgagor, to avoid all manner of pretenſion from the incumbrances and dower of the feoffee in mortgage; and was reputed beſt for the mortgagee, to avoid the wardſhip and feudal duties of the tenure, and was only inconvenient in this; that if the ſecond deed were loſt, there appeared to be an abſolute term in the mortgagee. 3 New Abr. 633.

And this is now the common method, viz. by a demiſe of the land for a term, under a condition to be void on the payment of the mortgage money and intereſt; and a covenant is inſerted at the end of ſuch deeds, that till the default ſhall be made in the payment of the money, that the mortgagor ſhall receive the rents, iſſues and profits without account. 3 New Abr. 633.

This has been ruled to create a tenancy at will to the mortgagor; but if the mortgagor dies, the tenancy at will is determined till there is a receipt of intereſt from the heir, which ſeems to make him alſo tenant at will to the mortgagee. Raym. 147.

3d, But now the laſt and beſt improvement of mortgages ſeems to be, that in the mortgage deed of a term for years, or in the aſſignment thereof, the mortgagor ſhould covenant for himſelf and his heirs, that if default be made in the payment of the money at the day, that then he and his heirs will, at the coſts of the mortgagee and his heirs, convey the freehold and inheritance of the mortgaged lands to the mortgagee and his heirs, or to ſuch perſon or perſons (to prevent merger of the term) as he or they ſhall direct and appoint; for the reverſion, after a term of years, that reverſion being of little worth, and yet the mortgagee for want thereof continuing but a termor, and ſubject to forfeiture, &c. and not capable of the privileges of a freeholder; therefore where the mortgagor cannot redeem the land, it is but reaſonable the mortgagee ſhould have the whole intereſt and inheritance of it, to diſpoſe of as abſolute owner. 3 New Abr. 633.

2. What ſhall be deemed a mortgage, or an eſtate redeemable; and of the diſtinct intereſts of mortgagor and mortgagee.

Herein we may obſerve in general, that whatever clauſes or covenants there are in a conveyance, though they ſeem to import an abſolute diſpoſition or conditional purchaſe; yet if, upon the whole, it appears to have been the intention of the parties, that ſuch conveyance ſhould only be a mortgage, or paſs an eſtate redeemable, a court of equity will always conſtrue it ſo. 1 Vern. 183, 268, 394.

As where the condition of a mortgage is, that the mortgagor ſhould redeem during his life, or that the mortgagor, and the heirs of his body, ſhould redeem, yet equity will admit the general heir of ſuch mortgagor to a redemption; becauſe this can be no purchaſe, ſince there is a clauſe of redemption; and when the land was originally only a pledge for money, if the principal and intereſt be offered, the land is free; and it would be very hard, that it ſhould be in the power of the ſcrivener, or griping uſurer, by ſuch impertinent reſtrictions, to elude the juſtice of the court. 1 Vern. 33, 190. 2 Chan. Ca. 147. S. C. Howard v. Harris.

But if a man borrows money of his brother, and agrees to make him a mortgage, and that, if he has no iſſue male, his brother ſhould have the land; ſuch an agreement; made out by proof, will be decreed in equity. 1 Vern. 193. per North Lord Keeper.

A. in conſideration of 1000*l.* made an abſolute conveyance to B. of the reverſion of certain lands after two lives, which, at that time, were worth little more; and by another deed, of the ſame date, the lands are made redeemable any time during the life of the grantor only, on payment of 1000*l.* and intereſt; A. died not having paid the money; and it was held by Lord K. Nottingham, that his heir might redeem, notwithſtanding this reſtrictive clauſe, and that it was a rule, once a mortgage, and always a mortgage, and that B. might have compelled A. to redeem in his life-time, or have foreclosed him; but, on a re-hearing, Lord North reverſed the decree on the circumſtance of this caſe; for it appeareth by proof, that A. had a kindneſs for B. and that he married his kinſwoman, which made it in the nature of a marriage ſettlement; he likewiſe held, that B. could not have compelled A. to redeem during his life, which made it the more ſtrong. 1 Vern. 7, 214, 232. Newcomb. v. Bonham. 2 Vent. 364. S. C. where it is ſaid, that Lord North's decree was affirmed in the houſe of Lords.

If A. mortgage lands to B. worth 15 l. per annum, for ſecuring 200*l.* and at the ſame time B. enters into a bond conditioned, that if the 200 l. and intereſt is not paid within a year, then he to pay A. his executors or adminiſtrators, the further ſum of 78 l. in full for the purchaſe of the premiſſes, &c. and A. dies within the year, and the money is paid the next day after, the mortgage is forfeited to his adminiſtrator; yet A.'s heir may redeem, paying the 200 l. and likewiſe the 78 l. that was paid to the adminiſtrator. 1 Vern. 488. Willet ver. Winnel.

So where A. for 550*l.* made an abſolute aſſignment of a church leaſe for three lives to B. and B. by writing under his hand agreed, that if A. paid 600 l. at the end of the year, B. would convey; B. died, leaving C. his ſon and heir; two of the lives died, and the leaſe was twice renewed by C. and his father; and tho' it was near twenty years ſince the conveyance was made, yet the Maſter of the Rolls decreed a redemption on payment of 550*l.* and the two fines. 2 Vern. 84. Manlove v. Ball.

A. lends money to B. to carry on certain buildings, and takes a mortgage from him to ſecure 1600 l. with intereſt; and by another deed executed at the ſame time, takes a covenant from B. that he ſhould convey to him, if he thought fit, ground-rents to the value of 1600 l. at the rate of 20 years purchaſe; and, on a bill brought to redeem, the Maſter of the Rolls decreed a redemption on payment of principal, intereſt and coſts, without regard to that agreement, but ſet aſide the ſame as unconſcionable; for a man ſhall not have intereſt for his money, and a collateral advantage beſides for the loan of it, or clog the redemption with any bye-agreement. 2 Vern. 520. Jennings v. Ward.

But tho' theſe and ſuch like reſtrictions are relieved againſt, to make them anſwer the primary intention of the parties; yet if A. on a mortgage, lends money at 5 l. per cent. but agrees in the deed, that if the money were paid within three months after it became due, that he would accept of 4 l. per cent. and the mortgagor neglects to pay the intereſt within the time, equity will not relieve him, but he muſt pay 5 l. per cent. for tho' the court relieves againſt unreaſonable penalties, yet this is not ſo, for the mortgagee might have refuſed to lend his money under 5 l. per cent. Preced. Chan. 160. Jory v. Cox. 1 P. W. 653.

So if the mortgagee deviſes that the mortgagor ſhould be remitted part of his mortgage money, provided he pays the principal and intereſt within three days after his deceaſe; if the condition be not performed, the remittance is loſt; becauſe being a voluntary bounty, and not ex debito juſtitiæ, the party muſt take it as it is limited, for cujus eſt dare, ejus eſt diſpenere; and the court cannot relieve in this caſe after the day. 1 Chan. Ca. 52.

But where in a mortgage there was a proviſo, that if the intereſt was behind ſix months, that then the intereſt ſhould be accounted principal, and carry intereſt; this by Lord Cowper was decreed to be a vain clauſe, and of no uſe; and he ſaid, that no precedent had ever carried the advance of intereſt ſo far, and that an agreement made at the time of the mortgage, will not be ſufficient to make future intereſt principal; but, to make intereſt principal, it is requiſite that intereſt be firſt grown due, and then an agreement concerning it may make it principal. 2 Salk. 499.

The mortgagor before forfeiture, and whilſt it remains uncertain, whether he will perform the condition at the time limited or not, hath the legal eſtate in him; alſo after forfeiture he hath an equity of redemption; ſo that he is ſtill conſidered as owner and proprietor of the eſtate, until the equity of redemption be foreclоſed; therefore may make leaſes or any ſettlement thereof, which will bind his equity of redemption. (But they will not bind the mortgagee.)

It is ſaid, that a tenant in tail of an equity of redemption may deviſe it for payment of debts. 1 Vern. 41. Turner v. Gwim.

If a man mortgages his land, and, (as is uſual,) ſtill continues in poſſeſſion, and levies a fine, and five years paſs, yet the mortgagee is not barred; for tho' the mortgagee be in reality out of poſſeſſion, yet when that is done by conſent of both parties, and the nature of the contract requires it ſhould be ſo while the intereſt is paid, it is againſt the original deſign of the contract, that any act of the mortgagor, (except the payment of the money,) ſhould deprive the mortgagee of his ſecurity, and is no leſs than fraud, which the law will not countenance. 1 Sid. 460. 1 Vent. 82. Carth. 101, 414. 2 Keb. 522.

As the mortgagor, being conſidered only as tenant at will to the mortgagee, cannot, by his act, defeat the intereſt of the mortgagee, otherwiſe than by payment of the mortgage money; ſo neither can the mortgagee defeat the mortgagor of his equity of redemption; therefore if a mortgagee in fee ſuffers a recovery, this, even at law, ſhall not bind the mortgagor's right of entry, upon performance of the condition; but if the mortgagor had been a party to the recovery, then his right had been bound, not only on account of the recompence in value, but becauſe he is eſtopped by the recovery to claim the land againſt the recoveree or his heirs, when he was called in before the judgment given to defeat his title, and could not do it. Palm. 135. Cro. Jac. 593.

So if a mortgagee be diſſeiſed, and the diſſeiſor levies a fine, and five years paſs after the proclamations, tho' the mortgagee is hereby barred, yet if the mortgagor pays or tenders his money, he has five years to proſecute his right, by the ſecond ſaving in the ſtatute 4 Hen. 7. cap. 24. becauſe his title did not accrue 'till payment of the money. Plow. 373. a.

And as the mortgagor, 'till the equity of redemption be foreclоſed, is conſidered as owner of the land, it was ruled, where a bill for a redemption was brought againſt a mortgagee in poſſeſſion, and a decree accordingly, that the mortgagee before the account taken, having preſented to a church that became void, ſhould revoke his preſentation, and preſent ſuch a perſon as the mortgagor or his vendee (he having contracted to ſell) ſhould appoint. Preced. Chanc. 71. 2 Vern. 401.

By the 7 W. & M. cap. 25. it is enacted, "That no perſon or perſons ſhall be allowed to have any vote in election of members to ſerve in parliament, for or by reaſon of any truſt eſtate or mortgage; unleſs ſuch truſtee or mortgagee be IN ACTUAL POSSESSION, or receipt of the rents and profits of the ſame, but that the mortgagor, or ceſtui que truſt in poſſeſſion, ſhall and may vote for the ſame, notwithſtanding ſuch mortgage or truſt.

And by the 9 Ann. cap. 5. which requires, that knights of the ſhire ſhould have 600*l.* per ann. and every other member 300 l. per ann. it is enacted, "That no perſon ſhall be qualified to ſit in the Houſe of Commons, within the meaning of the act, by virtue of any mortgage, whereof the equity of redemption is in any other perſon, unleſs the mortgagee ſhall have been in poſſeſſion of the mortgaged premiſſes for ſeven years before the time of election.

3. Of the equity of redemption and foreclоſure; and of the manner of redeeming and foreclоſing.

Altho', after breach of the condition, an abſolute fee-ſimple is veſted at Common law in the mortgagee; yet a right of redemption being ſtill inherent in the land, till the equity of redemption be foreclоſed, the ſame right ſhall deſcend to and is veſted in ſuch perſons as have a right to the land, in caſe there had been no mortgage or incumbrance whatſoever; and as an equitable performance as effectually defeats the intereſt of the mortgagee, as the legal performance doth at Common law, the condition ſtill hanging over the eſtate, till the equity is totally foreclоſed; on this foundation it hath been held, that a perſon who comes in under a voluntary conveyance, may redeem a mortgage; and tho' ſuch right of redemption be inherent in the land, yet the party claiming the benefit of it, muſt not only ſet forth ſuch right, but alſo ſhew that he is the perſon intitled to it. Hard. 465. 1 Vern. 182, 193.

As the heir at law is regularly intitled to the benefit of redemption, he is alſo intitled to the aſſiſtance of the perſonal eſtate of the mortgagor for that purpoſe; according to the doctrine eſtabliſhed in the courts of equity, that the perſonal eſtate, in the hands of the executor, ſhall be employed in eaſe of the heir, by whatever means the heir becomes indebted as heir; for the perſonal eſtate having received the benefit by contracting the debt, and the real conſidered only as a pledge for it; according to the common rule, Qui ſentit commodum ſentiri debet & onus. Prec. in Chanc. 477.

And on this foundation it hath been frequently held, that if a man mortgage lands, and covenants to pay the money, and dies, the perſonal eſtate of the mortgagor ſhall, in favour of the heir, be applied in exoneration of the mortgage. 2 Salk. 449.

Alſo it is held by ſome opinions, that this benefit ſhall not only extend to the heir at law, or hæres natus, but alſo to an hæres factus, from a preſumption, that it is the intention of the teſtator, that he ſhould have all the privileges of the hæres natus: and ſome even held, that an ordinary deviſee ſhall have this benefit; but as to this laſt point it hath been held otherwiſe; and that if a man mortgages his land, and deviſes it to J. S. or A. for life, the remainder in fee, to B. that there the charge doth paſs with the eſtate, there appearing no intention of the teſtator, that he ſhould have it diſcharged. 2 Chan. Ca. 84. 1 Vern. 36. 1 Chan. Ca. 271. Sed qu. if B. is not, as hæres factus, to have the benefit of the perſonal eſtate, unleſs it clearly appears by the will, that he ſhould take it, cum onere?

So if the mortgagor conveys away the equity of redemption, the purchaſer ſhall not have the benefit of the perſonal eſtate, but muſt take it cum onere. 2 Salk. 450. 1 Vern. 37.

It has likewiſe been held, that the heir of the mortgagor ſhall have the benefit of the perſonal eſtate to pay off the mortgage, tho' there be no covenant in the mortgage-deed for the payment thereof; becauſe the mortgage-money is a debt, whether there be any expreſs covenant for the payment of it or not. 2 Salk. 449. 1 Vern. 436. Preced. Chan. 61. 3 Preced. 360. Becauſe the perſonal eſtate received the benefit.

But where a mortgage in fee was made redeemable at Mich. 1702, or any other Mich. day following on ſix months notice; and there was no covenant for payment of the mortgage money; it was held by Lord Chancellor Cowper, that the mortgagor having deviſed his perſonal eſtate to his wife and daughter, and having during his life paid the intereſt of the mortgage, the perſonal eſtate ſhould not be applied in eaſe and exoneration of the real eſtate for the benefit of the heir at law; for, being no covenant for paying of the money, there was no contract at all between them, neither expreſs nor implied; nor would any action lie againſt the mortgagor to ſubject his perſon, to compel him to pay this money; but this was in nature of a conditional purchaſe, ſubject to be defeated on payment by the mortgagor or his heirs, of the ſum ſtipulated between them, at any Mich. day, at the election of the mortgagor, or his heirs; for here was an everlaſting ſubſiſting right of redemption, deſcendible to the heirs of the mortgagor, which could not be forfeited at law like other mortgages; therefore there could be no equity of redemption, or any occaſion for the aſſiſtance of this court; but the plaintiffs might even at law defeat the conveyance, by performing the terms and conditions of it; which were not limited to any particular time, but might be performed on any Michaelmas day, to the end of the world; and ſince there was no covenant or contract, either expreſs or implied, to charge the perſonal eſtate of the mortgagor, he thought there was no reaſon to lay the load of this debt upon that which was given to other perſons. Preced. Chan. 423. 2 Vern. 701.

By the Stat. 4 & 5 W. 3. cap. 16. it is enacted, That if any perſon ſhall borrow any money, or for any other valuable conſideration for the payment thereof voluntarily give, acknowledge, permit or ſuffer to be entered againſt him or them, a judgment, ſtatute or recognizance, to any perſon a creditor, and if the borrower, or debtor, ſhall afterwards take up or borrow any other ſum of any other perſon, or for other valuable conſideration become indebted to ſuch perſon, and for ſecuring the repayment and diſcharge thereof ſhall mortgage his lands, &c. or any part thereof, to the ſecond lender, &c. or to any other in truſt for or to the uſe of ſuch ſecond lender, &c. and ſhall not give notice to the ſaid mortgagee, of the ſaid judgment, &c. in writing under his hand, before the execution of the ſaid mortgage or mortgages; unleſs ſuch mortgagor or his heirs, upon notice given by the mortgagee, his heirs, &c. in writing, &c. atteſted by two witneſſes, of any ſuch former judgment, &c. ſhall within ſix months pay off the ſaid judgment, &c. and all intereſt and charges, and procure the ſame to be vacated, &c. then the mortgagor or his heirs, &c. ſhall have no benefit or remedy againſt the ſaid mortgagee or his heirs, &c. in equity or elſewhere, for redemption; but the mortgagee ſhall hold the lands, &c. for ſuch eſtate and term as was granted to the mortgagee againſt the mortgagor and all perſons lawfully claiming under him, freed from equity of redemption, &c.

And it is further enacted, That if any perſon ſhall mortgage any lands to any perſon, for ſecurity of any money or for other valuable conſiderations; and if the mortgagor ſhall again mortgage the ſame lands or any part thereof, to any other perſon for valuable conſiderations, (the former mortgage being in force and not diſcharged,) and ſhall not diſcover to the ſecond mortgagee, the former mortgage, in writing under his hand; that then, the mortgagor, his heirs, &c. ſhall have no relief or equity of redemption, againſt the ſecond or after mortgagee, &c. but ſuch mortgagee ſhall hold and enjoy ſuch more than once mortgaged lands, for ſuch eſtate as was granted by the mortgagor againſt him, freed from equity of redemption, &c. If there be more than one mortgage at the ſame time made, of the ſame lands, the ſeveral late or under mortgages ſhall have power to redeem any former mortgage, upon payment of the principal debt, intereſt, and coſts of ſuit, to the proper mortgagee, &c.

But not to bar any widow of any mortgagor from her dower and right in or to the lands, who did not legally join with her huſband in ſuch mortgage, or otherwiſe lawfully bar or exclude herſelf from ſuch her dower or right.

It hath been held, that if a man mortgages certain lands to one man, and mortgages thoſe lands with ſome others to another, tho' this ſeems to be a caſe omitted out of the above ſtatute againſt clandeſtine mortgages; yet if it appears to be a contrivance to evade it, as if an acre or two of land were only added, this will not exempt it; alſo a perſon, who will take advantage of the ſtatute, muſt be an honeſt mortgagee; therefore, if a man has uſed any fraud or practice in obtaining a ſecond mortgage, he ſhall not have the benefit of the ſtatute. 2 Vern. 589, 590.

The methods of redemption and foreclosing being dilatory, expenſive, and inconvenient, not only to the mortgagee but alſo to the mortgagor, the ſame ſeem now remedied by the 7 Geo. 2. cap. 20. which enacts, That where any action ſhall be brought on any bond for the payment of the money ſecured by ſuch mortgage, or performance of the covenants therein contained; or where any action of ejectment ſhall be brought by any mortgagee, &c. for the recovery of the poſſeſſion, and no ſuit ſhall be then depending in equity, for foreclosing or redeeming ſuch mortgaged lands; if the perſon having right to redeem ſhall appear and become defendant in ſuch action, ſhall, at any time pending ſuch action, pay unto ſuch mortgagee, or in caſe of his, her, or their refuſal, ſhall bring into court, where ſuch action ſhall be depending, all the principal money and intereſt due on ſuch mortgage, and alſo all ſuch coſts as have been expended in any ſuit at law or in equity upon ſuch mortgage, (ſuch money for principal, intereſt and coſts, to be aſcertained and computed by the court where ſuch action is or ſhall be depending,) the monies ſo paid, &c. ſhall be deemed and taken to be in full ſatisfaction and diſcharge of ſuch mortgage; and the court ſhall diſcharge every ſuch mortgagor or defendant of and from the ſame accordingly; and ſhall, by rule of the ſame court, compel ſuch mortgagee at the coſts of ſuch mortgagor to aſſign, ſurrender or re-convey ſuch mortgaged lands, and deliver up all deeds, &c. relating to the title.

And that where any bill or ſuits ſhall be filed, or brought, in equity by any perſon having or claiming any eſtate, right or intereſt in any lands, &c. by virtue of any mortgage to compel the defendant or to pay the plaintiff the principal money and intereſt together with any ſum due on any incumbrance or ſpecialty, charged or chargeable on the equity of redemption; and in default of payment to foreclose ſuch defendant's right of equity of redeeming ſuch mortgaged lands, &c. upon his admitting the right and title of the plaintiff, ſuch court of equity ſhall, at any time before ſuch ſuit ſhall be brought to hearing, make ſuch order or decree therein, as it might or could have made therein, in caſe the ſame had been regularly brought to hearing; and all parties to ſuch ſuit ſhall be bound by ſuch order or decree, to all intents and purpoſes, as if the ſame had been made at or ſubſequent to the hearing of the cauſe.

This act not to extend to any caſe, where the perſon againſt whom the redemption ſhall be prayed, ſhall (by writing under his hand, or the hand of his attorney, &c. to be delivered before the money ſhall be brought into court at law, to the attorney or ſolicitor for the other ſide) inſiſt either that the party praying a redemption has not a right to redeem, or that the premiſſes are chargeable with other or different principal ſums than what appear on the face of the mortgage, or ſhall be admitted on the other ſide; nor to any cauſe where the right of redemption to the mortgaged lands ſhall be controverted or queſtioned, by or between different defendants in the ſame cauſe, nor ſhall be any prejudice to any ſubſequent mortgagee, or ſubſequent incumbrancer.

We have been very full under this head, as it is a title of great uſe.

Mortgagor, Is he who mortgages or pawns the lands; and he to whom the mortgage is made is called the mortgagee.

Mortmain, (manus, mortua, compounded of two French words, mort i. e. mors, & maine, i. e. manus) Signifies an alienation of lands and tenements to any guild, corporation or fraternity, and their ſucceſſors, as biſhops, parſons, vicars, &c. which may not be done without the King's licence, and the lord of the manor, or of the King alone, if it be immediately holden of him. The reaſon of the name may be deduced from hence, becauſe the ſervices, and other profits due, for ſuch lands as eſcheats, &c. ſhould not without ſuch licence come into a dead hand, or into ſuch a hand as it were dead, and ſo dedicated unto God, or pious uſes, as to be abſtractedly different from other lands, tenements or hereditaments, and is never to revert to the donor, or any temporal or common uſe. Magna Charta, cap. 36. and 7 Ed. 1. commonly called The ſtatute of mortmain, and 18 Ed. 3. cap. 3. and 15 Rich. 2. cap. 5.

Polydore Virgil, in the ſeventeenth book of his Chronicles, mentions this law, and gives this reaſon of the name, Et legem hanc manum mortuam vocarunt, quod res ſemel datæ collegiis ſacerdotum, non utique rurſus venderentur velut mortuæ, hoc eſt, uſui aliorum mortalium in perpetuum adeptæ eſſent. Lex diligenter ſervatur, ſic, ut nihil poſſeſſionum ordini ſacerdotali a quoquam detur, niſi regis permiſſu: but the fore-mentioned ſtatutes are in ſome manner abridged by 39 Eliz. cap. 5. by which the gift of lands, &c. to hoſpitals is permitted, without obtaining licences in mortmain. But ſee poſt.

Hottoman, in his Commentaries De verbis Feudalibus, verbo Manus mortua, hath theſe words; Manus mortua locatio eſt, quæ uſurpatur de iis, quorum poſſeſſio (ut ita dicam) immortalis eſt, quia nunquam hæredem habere deſinunt: Qua de cauſa res nunquam ad priorem dominum revertitur, nam manus pro poſſeſſione dicitur mortua per antiphraſin pro immortali, &c. Petrus Belluga in ſpeculo Principum, fol. 76. Jus amortizationis eſt licentia capiendi ad manum mortuam: To the ſame effect read Caſſan. de Conſuet. Burgund. p. 348, 387, 1183, 1185, 1201, &c. Skene de verb. Signif. ſaith, Dimittere terras ad manum mortuam eſt idem atque dimittere ad multitudinem ſive univerſitatem, quæ nunquam moritur, idque per antiphraſin, ſeu a contrario ſenſu, becauſe commonalties never die. Cowell.

William the Conqueror demanding the cauſe why he conquered the realm by one battle, which the Danes could not do by many; Frederick, abbot of St. Alban's, anſwered, that the reaſon was, becauſe the land, which was the maintenance of martial men, was given and converted to pious imployments, and for the maintenance of holy votaries: To which the Conqueror ſaid, that if the clergy be ſo ſtrong, that the realm is infeebled of men for war, and ſubject by it to foreign invaſion, he would aid it. Therefore he took away many of the revenues of the abbot, and of others alſo. Speed. 418. b.

It is proper here to obſerve, that becauſe the Lords had nothing from the alienees; for by alienation in mortmain they loſt their eſcheats, and many ſervices which were heretofore due to them, as bodies politic never die, nor can perform perſonal ſervice, commit treaſon or felony, &c. this occaſioned the ſtatutes of mortmain, by virtue whereof the King, or other Lord of whom the land is holden, may enter into lands ſo aliened. 1 Inſt. 2. 2 Inſt. 75.

The foundation of all the ſtatutes of mortmain was Magna Charta. By the 9 H. 3. c. 36. it is declared, "That it ſhall not be lawful for any to give his lands to any religious houſe, and to take the ſame land again to hold of the ſame houſe, &c. upon pain that the gift ſhall be void, and the land ſhall accrue to the lord of the fee." This ſtatute is interpreted to extend to lands, which a religious houſe kept in their own hands, tho' they gave them not back again to hold of the ſame houſe. 2 Inſt. 75.

But eccleſiaſtical perſons found means to creep out of the ſtatute, by purchaſing lands holden of themſelves, or by making leaſes for a long term of years, &c. wherefore by 7 Ed. 1. commonly called the Statute of Mortmain, or de Religioſis, no perſons religious, or others whatſoever, ſhall buy or ſell any lands or tenements, or under the colour of any gift or leaſe, or by reaſon of any other title, receive the ſame, or by any other craft ſhall appropriate lands in any wiſe to come into mortmain, on pain of forfeiture; and within a year after the alienation, the lord of the fee may enter; and if he do not, then the next immediate lord, from time to time may enter in half a year; and for default of all the lords entring, the King ſhall have the lands ſo alienated for ever, and may enfeoff others by certain ſervices, &c.

As this ſtatute extended only to gifts, alienations, &c. made between eccleſiaſticks and others, they found out an evaſion alſo of this ſtatute; for pretending a title to the land, which they meant to gain, they brought a feigned action againſt the tenant of the land, and he by conſent and colluſion was to make default, and thereupon they recovered the land, and entered by judgment of law: ſo that the Stat. Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 32. was thought neceſſary; by which it is to be inquired by the country whether the demandant had a juſt title to the land; and if ſo, then he ſhall recover ſeiſin; but if otherwiſe, the lord of the fee ſhall enter, &c.

And by 34 Ed. 1. Lands ſhall not be alienated in mortmain, where there are mean lords, without their conſent declared under hand and ſeal; nor ſhall any thing paſs where the donor reſerves nothing to himſelf.

Notwithſtanding all theſe ſtatutes, eccleſiaſtical perſons (not being able to get lands, by purchaſe, gift, leaſe, or recovery) procured lands to be conveyed by feoffment, or in other manners, to divers perſons and their heirs, to the uſe of them and their ſucceſſors, whereby they took the profits. 2 Inſt. 75. To bar this, the Stat. 15 R. 2. c. 5. was made, which ſtatute enacts, "That no feoffment, &c. of any lands and tenements, advowſons or other poſſeſſions, to the uſe of any ſpiritual perſons, or whereof they ſhall take the profits, ſhall be made without licence of the King, and of the Lords, &c. upon pain of forfeiture." And by 23 H. 8. c. 10. againſt ſuperſtitious uſes, forfeitures, fines, recoveries, grants, deviſes, &c. of lands, in truſt to the uſe of any pariſh church, or to have perpetual obits, or a continual ſervice of a prieſt for ever, or for ſixty years, &c. to the prejudice of the King and other lords, as in caſe of lands alienated in mortmain, ſhall be void: tho' this laſt act extends not to corporations, where there is a cuſtom to deviſe lands in mortmain; as in London, a freeman that pays ſcot and lot, may deviſe all his lands in the city in mortmain, without licence. 1 Rol. Abr. 556.

And notwithſtanding this, or any of the ſtatutes, any man at this day may give lands, tenements, &c. to any perſons and their heirs, for finding a preacher, maintenance of a ſchool, reparation of churches, relief of the poor, &c. or for any like charitable uſes: tho' it is good policy on every ſuch eſtate to reſerve a ſmall rent to the feoffor and his heirs, when the feoffees ſhall be ſeiſed to their own uſe, and not to the uſe of the feoffor; or if a conſideration of a ſmall ſum be expreſſed, the 23 H. 8. cannot by any pretence make void the uſe. 1 Rep. 24. 11 Rep. 70. Wood's Inſt. 303. but ſee poſt.

By the Stat. 39 Eliz. cap. 5. The gift of lands, &c. to hoſpitals is permitted without obtaining licences of mortmain. Owners of impropriations may annex them to the parſonage or vicarage where they lie, or ſettle them in truſt for the curates, where the parſonage is impropriate, and no vicarage endowed, without licence of mortmain: and if the ſettled maintenance of any benefice with cure ſhall not amount to 100*l. per annum*, the incumbent may purchaſe to him and his ſucceſſors, &c. without licence in mortmain. 17 Car. 2. c. 7. By ancient ſtatutes, the King's licence may be had for authorizing of lands, and the writ of ad quod damnum is to iſſue out of Chancery to inquire concerning the ſame. 27 Ed. 1. ſt. 2. Prelates, clerks, &c. ſhall not be impeached for purchaſing lands in mortmain, on producing the King's charter of licence. 18 E. 3. ſt. 3. c. 3. And it is declared lawful for the King to grant to any perſon, body politic or corporate, their heirs and ſucceſſors, licence to alien in mortmain; and purchaſe and hold in mortmain in perpetuity, &c. without incurring any forfeiture, by Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 37.

A grant of an advowſon in fee, or an appropriation of an advowſon, hath been adjudged a mortmain; but an appropriation of tithes, which are things meerly ſpiritual, or a grant of an annuity, that chargeth the perſon only, cannot be mortmain, to be forfeited. 1 Inſt. 2, 304. 2 Inſt. 361. 5 Rep. 56. 9 Rep. 96. A late ſtatute has ordained, that no manors, lands, &c. ſhall be given, granted to, or ſettled on any perſons, bodies politic or corporate, for any eſtate whatſoever, or charged in truſt for charitable uſes, unleſs done by deed indented, and ſealed at leaſt twelve months before the death of the donor or grantor, and inrolled in Chancery within ſix months after executed, &c. and except the ſame be to take effect in poſſeſſion immediately; and without any power of revocation, &c. And if otherwiſe made, ſhall be void: but not to extend to purchaſes for a valuable conſideration; nor to the two univerſities, or colleges of Eaton, Wincheſter, &c. Statute of Mortmain, 9 Geo. 2. c. 36.

Mortuary, (Mortuarium, mortarium.) Is a gift left by a man at his death to his pariſh church, for the recompence of his perſonal tithes and offerings not duly paid in his life-time. A mortuary is not properly and originally due to eccleſiaſtical incumbents from any, but thoſe only of his own pariſh, to whom he miniſters ſpiritual inſtruction, and hath right to their tithes. But by cuſtom in ſome places of this kingdom, they are paid to the parſons of other pariſhes, as the corps paſſes thro' them.

See the ſtatute 21 H. 8. c. 6. before which ſtatute mortuaries were payable in beaſts; the beſt to the lord for a heriot, the ſecond for a mortuary. Nor was it only de meliori averio, ſed de meliori re.

Mortuarium (ſays Lindewood) ſic dictum eſt quia relinquitur eccleſiæ pro anima defuncti. Cuſtom did ſo prevail, that mortuaries being held as due debts, the payment of them was enjoined as well by the ſtatute De circumſpecte agatis, in 13 Ed. 1. ſt. 4. as by ſeveral conſtitutions, &c.

A mortuary was anciently called Sauleſceat, which ſignifies pecunia ſepulchralis, or ſymbolum animæ. After the conqueſt it was called a cors-preſent, (becauſe the beaſt was preſented with the body at the funeral,) and ſometimes a principal; of which ſee a learned diſcourſe in the Antiquities of Warwickſhire, fol. 679. and ſee Selden's Hiſtory of Tithes, pag. 287.

There is no mortuary due by law, but by cuſtom. 2 Inſt. 491. See Spelm. de Council. tom. 2. 390. This is likewiſe proved out of Fleta, lib. 2. c 600. par. 30. Item ſi rector petat mortuarium ubi dari conſuevit. See Nonagium, Principal, and Pretium ſepulchri. In the Iriſh canons it is called Pretium ſepulchri, and Sedatium, viz. Omne corpus ſepultum habet in jure ſuo vaccam & equum & veſtimentum & ornamenta lecti ſui, &c. Canon. Hibern. lib. 19. c. 6. And in another place, Rogat principem loci, i. e. the biſhop, ut baſilicum ejus foderit, &c. & reddat amicus pretium ejus & ſedatium commune.

The word mortuarium was ſometimes uſed in a civil as well as an eccleſiaſtical ſenſe, and was payable to the lord of the fee, as well as to the prieſt of the pariſh.—Debentur domino (i. e. mannerii de Wrechwyke) nominibus heriotti & mortuarii duæ vaccæ pret. xii ſol. Paroch Antiqu. pag. 470. Cowell.

Mr. Selden tells us, that the uſage anciently was, bringing the mortuary along with the corps when it came to be buried, and to offer it to the church as a ſatisfaction for the ſuppoſed negligence and omiſſion the defunct had been guilty of in not paying his perſonal tithes, and from thence it was called a corſe preſent. Watſ. Comp. Incumb. 8*vo.* 1053. cap. 53. cites Selden's Hiſt. of Tithes 287.

Stat. 13 Ed. 1. ſt. 4. enacts, That a prohibition ſhall not lie for mortuaries, in places where mortuaries uſed to be paid.

By the 21 H. 8. c. 6. Mortuaries are to be paid as follows, viz. He who dies poſſeſſed of moveable goods to the value of 40 l. or above, (his debts firſt paid) is to pay 10 s. He that dieth poſſeſſed of goods of 30*l.* value and under 40*l.* is to pay 6 s. 8 d. And dying poſſeſſed of goods to the value of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. and under 30*l.* to pay 3 s. 4 d. But if the goods are under 6*l.* 3 s. 4 d. value, no mortuary is to be paid; and no mortuary is to be paid by any feme-covert or child, perſons not keeping houſe, &c.

If one happens to die in a place where he does not reſide, by this ſtatute the mortuary ſhall be paid in the place where he had his uſual abode; no perſon ſhall pay mortuaries in more places than one, or more than one mortuary; and no mortuary ſhall be demanded of any but in ſuch places where mortuaries are due by cuſtom, and have uſed to have been paid: Alſo there is a proviſo in the ſtatute, that in places where mortuaries have been of leſs value than as aforeſaid, no perſon ſhall pay any more than has been accuſtomed.

If a parſon, vicar, &c. take or demand more than is allowed by the ſtatute for a mortuary, he ſhall forfeit all he takes beyond it, and 40 s. more to the party grieved, to be recovered by action of debt, &c. Stat. Ibid. Since this ſtatute, whereby mortuaries are reduced to a certainty, an action of debt will lie upon the ſaid ſtatute in the courts of Common law, for recovery of the ſum due for a mortuary, being by cuſtom as aforeſaid, altho' before that ſtatute they were recoverable only in the Spiritual court: But as ſuch actions have never been brought, it is ſaid, they are ſtill recoverable in that court only. Watſ. Clergym. Law 475. Count. Parſ. Compan. 140.

Where by cuſtom a mortuary hath not been uſually paid, if a perſon be libelled in the Spiritual court, he ſhall have a prohibition by virtue of the ſtatute 21 H. 8. c. 6. And upon a prohibition the cuſtom may be tried, &c. 2 Lutw. 1066. 3 Mod. 268. Mote, (Mota, Sax. gemote, curia, placitum, conventus) As Mota de Hereford, i. e. Curia vel placita comitatus de Hereford. In the charter of Maud the Empreſs, daughter of King Henry the Firſt, we read thus; Sciatis me feciſſe Milonem de Glouceſt. Comitem de Hereford, & deaiſſe ei motam Herefordiæ cum toto caſtello, &c. Hence Burgemote, curia vel conventus burgi; Swainmote, curia vel conventus miniſtrorum, ſcil. foreſta, &c. From this alſo we draw our word mote and moot, to plead. The Scots ſay, to mute, as the Mute-hill at Scone, i. e. Mons placiti de Scona.

We commonly apply the word moot to that arguing of caſes uſed by young ſtudents in the Inns of Court and Chancery. In the charter of peace between King Stephen and Duke Henry, afterwards King, it is taken to ſignify a fortreſs, as Turris de London, & mota de Windſor, the tower of London, and fortreſs of Windſor. Mote alſo ſigfies a ſtanding pool of water to keep fiſh in.

It likewiſe ſignifies a great ditch encompaſſing a caſtle or dwelling-houſe.—Hæc indentura, &c. teſtatur quod prædict' Rogerus tradidit præfato Thomæ tria ſtagna & unam motam piſcariam exiſten. intra manerium, &c. Habend. &c. cum tota piſcatione in eiſdem & cum incremento piſcium in eiſdem cum libero ingreſſu & egreſſu, &c. Motion in Court, According to Blackſtone, is "an occaſional application to the court by the parties or their counſel, in order to obtain ſome rule or order of court, which becomes neceſſary in the progreſs of a cauſe; and it is uſually grounded upon an affidavit, (the perfect tenſe of the verb affido) being a voluntary oath before ſome judge or officer of the court, to evince the truth of certain facts upon which the motion thrown is grounded." Vide his Commentaries, 3 V. 304.

Where any motion is made in Chancery, that is not of courſe, generally an affidavit of the facts alledged muſt be read in court: And if motions are founded on the general rules or uſage of the court, and are not of courſe, but granted or denied as the court thinks fit, on hearing counſel on both ſides, notice is to be given in writing to the ſolicitor of the other party, or his clerk in court, expreſſing every thing to be moved for, which muſt be ſerved two days at leaſt before the day on which the motion is to be made, whereof affidavit muſt alſo be made. Practiſ. Solic. 17.

In B. R. one ought not to move the court for a rule for a thing to be done, which by the common rules of practice may be done without moving the court: Nor ſhall the court be moved for doing what is againſt the practice of the court: One ought not to move for ſeveral things in one motion; and where a motion hath been denied, the ſame matter may not be moved again by another counſel, without acquainting the court thereof, and having their leave for the ſame: But every perſon who makes a ſolemn argument at the bar is allowed by the court a motion for his argument. 2 Lil. Abr. 209, 210. But counſel cannot move for his argument in a matter of courſe in the paper, in B. R. Wilſ. par. 1. 76.

If there be divers rules of court made in a cauſe, and the party intends to move thereon, he muſt produce the rule laſt made in the cauſe, and move upon that: But it is neceſſary to have all the rules and copies of the affidavits, to ſatisfy the court how the cauſe hath been proceeded in, and how it ſtands in court; though the laſt rule is the moſt material; and where a motion is made to ſet aſide a rule grounded on an affidavit, a copy of the affidavit muſt be produced, that the court may be informed upon what grounds the rule was made, and judge whether there be cauſe ſhewn upon the motion ſufficient to ſet aſide the rule. Paſch. 13 Car. B. R. Hil. 1649.

If any thing be moved to the court upon a record, the record is to be in court, or the court will make no rule upon ſuch motion. Hil. 22 Car. B. R. One party ought not to ſurpriſe another by a motion in court, but to move in convenient time, that the other party may have time to be heard. Paſch 23 Car. It is againſt the practice of the court t move for an attachment, or any matters in law, upon the laſt day of the term, except the caſe is peremptory.

Monday is a ſpecial day for motions in B. R. by the ancient courſe; but they are made upon any day, as the buſineſs of the court will permit. 2 Lil. 208, 210.

The courts of law generally on motions which are not of courſe, grant rules to ſhew cauſe at a future day, why the thing aſked for ſhould not be granted, a copy of which being ſerved on the attorney of the adverſe party, counſel may ſhew cauſe on the day expreſſed in the rule, which if not done, the party on whoſe behalf the rule niſi was obtained, may, by counſel on the ſubſequent day, move to make that rule abſolute, which motion being made, counſel on the other ſide may oppoſe it by ſhewing cauſe. See farther as to the practice of B. R. relative to motions, 1 Burr. 9, 57, 58, 334, 651. 2 V. 250, 259, 801.

In the Chancery, during term, every Thurſday is a day for ſealing, and motions; and Tueſdays and Saturdays are days for motions, as are the firſt and laſt days of the term: In vacation, only ſeal days appointed by the Lord Chancellor, are days of motion. Practiſ. Solic. 17.

After motion in arreſt of judgment, no motion ſhall be for a new trial, but after motion for a new trial, one may move in arreſt of judgment. 2 Salk. 647. Turbervill v. Stamp.

Each motion muſt be within four days; but where motion is made for a new trial, the court will generally give leave to move in arreſt, after the expiration of the four days, if the motion for the new trial ſhould not be determined within the four days, and a new trial ſhould be denied. It was lately hinted by the court of B. R. that the party hath a right to move in arreſt of judgment, after a new trial is refuſed, though more than four days are elapſed; and this ſeems conſonant to reaſon: for till the determination of the motion for a new trial, it would be nugatory to move in arreſt of judgment, as, ſhould a new trial be granted and had, judgment may be for the party moving, and he will have his coſts; whereas, on arreſting judgment, he pays his own coſts.

One ought not to move the court for a thing againſt which they have delivered their opinions. Trin. 22 Car. B. R. But ought to reſt ſatified with the judgment of the court, and ſubmit thereunto. 2 L. P. R. 208. See 15 Vin. Abr tit. Motion.

Municipal law, According to Blackſtone in his Commentaries, 1 V. 44, &c. is, firſt, a rule: not a tranſient ſudden order from a ſuperior to or concerning a particular perſon, but ſomething permanent, uniform and univerſal. Therefore a particular act of the legiſlature to confiſcate the goods of Titius, or to attaint him of high treaſon, does not enter into the idea of a municipal law: for the operation of this act is ſpent upon Titius only, and has no relation to the community in general; it is rather a ſentence than a law. But an act to declare that the crime of which Titius is accuſed ſhall be deemed high treaſon; this has permanency, uniformity, and univerſality, and therefore is properly a rule. It is alſo called a rule, to diſtinguiſh it from advice or counſel, which we are at liberty to follow or not, as we ſee proper, and to judge upon the reaſonableneſs or unreaſonableneſs of the thing adviſed: whereas our obedience to the law depends not upon our approbation, but upon the maker's will. Counſel is only matter of perſuaſion, law is matter of injunction; counſel acts only upon the willing, law upon the unwilling alſo.

It is alſo called a rule, to diſtinguiſh it from a compact or agreement; for a compact is a promiſe proceeding from us, law is a command directed to us. The language of a compact is, "I will, or will not, do this;" that of a law is, "thou ſhalt, or ſhalt not, do it." It is true there is an obligation which a compact carries with it, equal in point of conſcience to that of a law; but then the original of the obligation is different. In compacts, we ourſelves determine and promiſe what ſhall be done, before we are obliged to do it; in law we are obliged to act, without ourſelves determining or promiſing any thing at all. Upon theſe accounts, law is defined to be "a rule."

Municipal law is alſo "a rule of civil conduct:" This diſtinguiſhes municipal law, from the natural, or revealed; the former of which is the rule of moral conduct, and the latter not only the rule of moral conduct, but alſo the rule of faith. Theſe regard man as a creature, and point out his duty to God, to himſelf, and to his neighbour, conſidered in the light of an individual. But municipal or civil law regards him alſo as a citizen, and bound to other duties towards his neighbour, than thoſe of mere nature and religion: duties, which he has engaged in by enjoying the benefits of the common union; and which amount to no more than that he do contribute, on his part, to the ſubſiſtence and peace of the ſociety.

It is likewiſe "a rule preſcribed;" becauſe, a bare reſolution, confined in the breaſt of the legiſlator, without manifeſting itſelf by ſome external ſign, can never be properly a law. It is requiſite that this reſolution be notified to the people who are to obey it. But the manner in which this notification is to be made, is matter of very great indifference. It may be notified by univerſal tradition and long practice, which ſuppoſes a previous publication, and is the caſe of the Common law of England. It may be notified, viva voce, by officers appointed for that purpoſe, as is done with regard to proclamations, and ſuch acts of parliament as are appointed to be publicly read in churches and other aſſemblies: It may laſtly be notified by writing, printing, or the like, which is the general courſe taken with all our acts of parliament. Yet, whatever way is made uſe of, it is incumbent on the promulgators to do it in the moſt public and perſpicuous manner; not like Caligula, who (according to Dio Caſſius wrote his laws in a very ſmall character, and hung them up upon high pillars; the more effectually to enſnare the people. There is ſtill a more unreaſonable method than this, which is called making of laws ex poſt facto; when, after an action (indifferent in itſelf) is committed, the legiſlator then for the firſt time declares it to have been a crime, and inflicts a puniſhment upon the perſon who has committed it. Here it is impoſſible that the party could foreſee that an action, innocent when it was done, ſhould be afterwards converted to guilt by a ſubſequent law; he had therefore no cauſe to abſtain from it, and all puniſhments for not abſtaining, muſt of conſequence be cruel and unjuſt. (Such laws, among the Romans, were denominated privilegia, or private laws, of which Cicero (de leg. 3. 19. and in his oration pro domo, 17.) thus ſpeaks: Vetant leges ſacratæ, vetant duodecem tabulæ, leges privatis hominibus irragari; id enim eſt privilegium. Nemo unquam tulit, nihil eſt crudelius, nihil pernicioſius, nihil quod minus hæc civitas ferre poſſit.) All laws ſhould be therefore made to commence in futuro, and be notified before their commencement, which is implied in the term "preſcribed." But when this rule is in the uſual manner notified, or preſcribed, it is then the ſubject's buſineſs to be thoroughly acquainted therewith; for, if ignorance of what he might know, were admitted as a legitimate excuſe, the laws would be of no effect, but might always be eluded with impunity.

But farther: municipal law is "a rule of civil conduct preſcribed by the ſupreme power in a ſtate." For legiſlature, as was before obſerved, is the greateſt act of ſuperiority that can be exerciſed by one being over another. Wherefore, it is requiſite to the very eſſence of a law, that it be made by the ſupreme power. Sovereignty and legiſlature are indeed convertible terms, one cannot ſubſiſt without the other.

Muniment-houſe, Munimen:) In cathedral and collegiate churches, caſtles, colleges, or ſuch, is a houſe or little room of ſtrength purpoſely made for keeping the ſeal, evidences, charters, &c. of ſuch church, college, &c. ſuch evidences being called muniments, corruptly miniments, from munio, to defend; becauſe inheritances and poſſeſſions are defended by them. 3 Inſt. 170.

Murage, (Muragium) Is a reaſonable toll, to be taken of every cart and horſe coming laden through a city or town, for the building or repairing the public walls thereof, due either by grant or preſcription: It ſeems to be a liberty granted to a town by the King, for the collecting of money towards walling the ſame. 3 Ed. 1. c. 30. 2 Inſt. 222. The ſervice of work and labour done by inhabitants and adjoining tenants in building or repairing the walls of a city or caſtle, was called murorum operatio; and when this perſonal duty was commuted into money, the tax ſo gathered was called Murage. Paroch. Antiq. 114. And, in the city of Cheſter, there are two ancient officers called Murengers, being two of the principal aldermen, yearly choſen to ſee the walls kept in good repair; for the maintenance of which they receive certain tolls and cuſtoms.

Murder, (Murdrum, from the Sax Morth, whence, (as it is ſaid) comes the barbarous Latin Mordrum, & Murdrum; in French Meurdre, though the word Murdrare, evidently comes from the Latin Morti dare) Is a word in uſe long before the reign of King Canutus, which ſome would have to ſignify a violent death; and ſometimes the Saxons expreſſed it by morthdæd & morthweorc, a deadly work: But the Sax. morth relates generally to mors.

See Black. Com. 3 V. 321. upon this word murdrum, where he juſtly obſerves, that it was neceſſarily framed to expreſs a particular offence, ſince no other word in being was ſufficient to expreſs the intention of the criminal, or quo animo the act was perpetrated.

Anciently, murder ſignified only the private killing of a man, as appears by the laws of King Hen. 1. And it was not murder, except the party ſlain was an Engliſhman, and no foreigner; though by the ſtat. 14 Ed. 3. c. 4. the killing of any Engliſhman or foreigner, living under the King's protection, through malice prepenſe, and whether committed openly or ſecretly, is declared to be murder, S. P. C. lib. 1. c. 1. And doubtleſs the makers of the ſtatute of 23 H. 8. c. 1. which excludes all wilful murder from the benefit of clergy, intended to include open, as well as private homicide within the word murder. 1 Hawk. P. C. 78.

By murder at this day, we underſtand the wilful and felonious killing of any man whatſoever, upon malice forethought; ſo as the party wounded or hurt die within a year and a day after the fact: And if one dies in that time, through diſorderly living, it ſhall be no excuſe, the wound will be judged the principal cauſe of his death; but if one wounded die after that time, the law will preſume he died a natural death. 3 Inſt. 53. H. P. C. 55. Kel. 26. If a man receive a wound that is not mortal; but either for want of help, or by neglect, it turns to a fever, &c. which cauſes the party's death, it is murder: So it is, where a man has ſome diſeaſe, which poſſibly would terminate his life in half a year, and another wounds him, that it haſtens his end, &c. But if, by ill applications of the party, or thoſe about him, of unwholeſome medicines, the wounded perſon dies; if this plainly appears, it is not murder, by Hale. Hiſt. P. C. 428.

Murder may be committed by weapon, poiſon, cruſhing, bruiſing, ſmothering, ſtrangling, ſtarving, &c. And where a perſon having malice to another, ſtrikes or ſhoots at him, but miſſeth him and kills one not intended; or if one lays poiſon to kill a perſon, and another takes it, and dies, theſe are murder: Alſo if a ſick man be laid in the cold, whereof he dieth, or an infant is laid under leaves or trees, &c. and ſuffered to be deſtroyed by vermin, it is a killing. 3 Inſt. 51. 9 Rep. 81. If a perſon ſtir up a dog accuſtomed to bite, knowing it to be ſuch, and it kill a perſon; and if a man have an ox, or horſe, which he knows to be miſchievous, by being uſed to gore or ſtrike at thoſe who come near them, and do not tie them up, if they kill a man, (according to ſome opinions) the owner may be indicted, as having himſelf feloniouſly killed him. Pult. 122. H. P. C. 53. 1 Hawk. P. C. 79.

Anciently it was holden, that the cauſing an abortion, by giving a potion to, or ſtriking a woman big with child, was murder: But it is ſaid now to be a great miſpriſion only, and not murder, unleſs the child be born alive, and die thereof. 1 Hawk. 80. If the death of a baſtard child newly born be concealed, it ſhall be ſuppoſed to be murdered; if the mother doth not prove it was born dead. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 27. And if one by dureſs of impriſonment compel a man to accuſe an innocent perſon, who, on his evidence, is condemned and executed; in judgment of law it is killing of the compeller, &c. S. P. C. 36. 3 Inſt. 91.

All the above caſes ſhew malice; ſo where a priſoner, by dureſs of the gaoler, comes to an untimely end; if one is executed contrary to the direction of the law; or if a perſon kill a man adjudged to death; or one who hath no authority ſhall execute the judgment; if a perſon ſentenced to be whipped, is whipped with that rigour that he dieth of it, &c. But one under the age of diſcretion, or non compos mentis, cannot be guilty of murder; though if it appears by circumſtances, that the infant did hide the body, &c. it is felony. H. P. C. 43. 3 Inſt. 4, 6, 54.

See the caſe of William York, at Bury, Summer aſſiſes in 1748. Foſter's Rep. 70, &c. before referred to in this work under Infant.

If an infant under twelve years old, hath an extraordinary wit, that it may be preſumed he knows what he does, and he kill another, it may be felony and murder; otherwiſe it ſhall not. 3 H 7. 13. Plowd. 191.

See the caſe of William York before referred to. Foſter 70, &c. It is malice makes the crime of murder, which is either expreſs or implied; it is expreſs, when it may be evidently proved there was formerly ſome ill will, and the killing is with a ſedate mind, and formed deſign of doing it: And implied, where one kills another ſuddenly, having nothing to defend himſelf; as going over a ſtile, or the like. 3 Inſt. 51. H. P. C. 47.

Murder occaſioned through an expreſs purpoſe to do ſome perſonal injury to him who is ſlain, is properly ſaid to be of expreſs malice: Such as happens in the execution of an unlawful action, principally intended for ſome other purpoſe, and not expreſſed in its nature to do a perſonal injury to him in particular that is killed, is moſt properly malice implied. Kel. 129, 130. He who doth a cruel and voluntary act, whereby death enſues, doth it of malice prepenſed in the eſteem of the law: And if a perſon in cool blood, maliciouſly and deliberately beats another in ſuch a manner, beyond any apparent intent of chaſtiſement, that he dieth, it is murder by expreſs malice, although he did not deſign to kill him. H. P. C. 49, 50. Kel. 64, 127, 135.

But if a perſon on any provocation beat another ſo, that it may plainly appear he meant not to kill, but only to chaſtiſe him; or if he reſtrains himſelf till the other hath put himſelf on his guard, and then in fighting with him killeth him, he will not be guilty of murder, but manſlaughter. 1 Hawk. P. C. 82. See Foſter's Rep. 262.

When one executes his revenge, upon a ſudden provocation, in ſuch a cruel manner, with a dangerous weapon, as ſhews a malicious intention to do miſchief; and death enſues, it is expreſs malice and murder from the nature of the fact. Kel. 55, 61, 65, 130. A man chided his ſervant, and upon ſome croſs anſwer given, he having a hot iron in his hand ran it into the ſervant's belly, of which he died, this was adjudged murder. Kel. 64.

If a perſon is treſpaſſing upon another, by breaking his hedges, &c. and the owner upon ſight thereof take up a hedge-ſtake, and give him a ſtroke on the head, whereof he dies, this is murder, becauſe it is a violent act beyond the proportion of the provocation. H. P. C. And where a boy was upon a tree in a park cutting of wood, and the keeper bid him come down, which he did; and then the keeper ſtruck him ſeveral blows with a cudgel, and afterwards with a rope tied him to his horſe's tail, and the horſe ran away with him and killed him; this was held to be murder out of malice, the boy having come down at the keeper's command. Cro. Car. 139. H. P. C.

A man's ſon was beaten, and complaining of it to his father, the father in anger beat the other boy with a cudgel whereof he died; the law ſhall adjudge it to be upon that ſudden occaſion, and ſtirring of blood, that he made the aſſault, and not upon malice unleſs it be found; and if the diſtance of the place where his ſon complained was a mile, it is not material, being all upon one paſſion. Cro. Jac. 296. And it is the ſame in caſe of a brother, couſin, ſervant, &c. it is only manſlaughter, not murder. 2 Lil. 211.

If two having malice fight, and the ſervant of one of them, not knowing of the malice, killeth the other, this is murder in the maſter, and manſlaughter in the ſervant: Though if there be a conſpiracy to kill a man, but no malice againſt his ſervant; if the ſervant be ſlain, the malice againſt the maſter ſhall be conſtrued to extend to his ſervant: and the killing the ſervant is murder. Dyer 128. 1 Moor. If two perſons meet and fight, in cool blood on a precedent quarrel, and one is killed: or if a perſon in a ſudden quarrel appears to be maſter of his temper, and kills another, it is murder. 1 Hawk. P. C. 81. For where two perſons fight, after a former quarrel, it may be preſumed to be out of malice; and when two men fall out in the morning, and meet and fight in the afternoon, if one of them is killed, this is murder; their after-meeting is of malice. Plowd. 474.

If a man upon a quarrel with another, tells ſuch other that he will not ſtrike him, but will give him a pot of ale to ſtrike firſt, and thereupon the other ſtrikes him, and he kills the other, he is guilty of murder; this being only a cover to his malicious intention. H. P. C. 48. And where a perſon kills another, it ſhall be intended of malice; if he prove not the contrary. Kel. 27. A man aſſaults another perſon with malice, although he be afterwards driven by the other to the wall, and kill him there in his own defence, he is guilty of murder, in reſpect of his firſt intent. H. P. C. 47. Kel. 58, 129. But if the party aſſaulted fly to the wall, and being ſtill purſued, kills the other, it is only manſlaughter in his own defence. Bract. 3 Ed. 3. If one reſolves to kill the next man he meets, and doth kill him, it is murder; here malice is implied againſt all mankind. Kel. 27.

By poiſoning, and where one killeth another without provocation, malice is implied; as where any magiſtrate or miniſter of juſtice is killed in the execution of his office; a ſheriff, conſtable or watchman, doing their duty; or any other that comes in aid of the King's officer; and if a watchman be killed in ſtaying of night-walkers, it is ſaid to be murder. 3 Inſt. 51. Cro. Jac. 280. Kel. 60, 128. In theſe caſes, it is a very high contempt of the laws, for a perſon to execute his revenge againſt thoſe who have no way offended him but by doing their duty; and he cannot come off by alledging that what he did was in a ſudden affray, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 84.

And if a baliff is killed in executing a lawful warrant, &c. it is murder: Nor is it any excuſe to the perſon, that the proceſs was erroneous; or that the arreſt was in the night; that the officer did not tell him for what cauſe he arreſted him; or that he did not ſhew his warrant, &c. being a bailiff commonly known. 9 Rep. 68, 69. Cro. Jac. 280, 486. But if a bailiff who is not executing his office is killed, it is not murder; for he ought to be duly executing his office, by ſerving the proceſs of the law, wherein he is aſſiſted cum poteſtate Regis & Legis. Cro.

Car. 537. 2 Lill. Abr. 212. Therefore where the warrant by which he acts gives him no authority to arreſt the party; as where a bailiff arreſts a wrong perſon, or J. S. a baronet, by force of a warrant to arreſt J. S. knight; or if a good warrant is executed in an unlawful manner; as if a bailiff be killed in breaking open a door, or window, to arreſt a man; or perhaps if he arreſt one on a Sunday; ſince the ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. by which all ſuch arreſts are made unlawful, and he is ſlain; malice ſhall not be implied to make it murder, but ſhall be manſlaughter only. H. P. C. 46. Cro. Car. 372. 12 Rep. 49. 1 Hawk. 86. If bailiffs come to a houſe to arreſt a perſon, and the houſe being locked they attempt to break in, whereupon the ſon of the perſon intended to be arreſted, ſhoots and kills one of them, it is not murder. Jones 429. See Foſter's Rep. 135, 138, 270, 308, 312, 318, 321.

A perſon was arreſted, and another not knowing the cauſe of the ſtruggle, but ſeeing ſwords drawn, and to prevent miſchief, came and defended the party arreſted, and in the ſcuffle the bailiff was killed; it was reſolved to be no murder in the perſon doing it, but that all that were preſent and aſſiſting, knowing of the arreſt, were principal murderers. Kel. 86. Tho' it has been held in ſuch a caſe, that the perſon offending is guilty of murder, whether he knew that the perſon ſlain were an officer or not; for all fighting is unlawful, and he who, ſeeing perſons engaged in it, takes part with one ſide, and fights in the quarrel without knowing the cauſe of it, eſpecially where the fight is begun in oppoſition to the juſtice of the nation, ſhews a readineſs to break thro' the laws on a ſmall occaſion, and muſt at his peril take heed what he doth. 1 Sid. 160. Noy 50. 1 Hawk. 85.

If one attack another to rob him, and by the reſiſtance of the party kills him, this is murder. 3 Inſt. 52. Dalt. 344. A perſon ſtands by and encourages or commands another to murder a man; or if he come with others on purpoſe to kill him, and ſtand by while the other perſons commit the fact: It will be murder in them all. Plowd. 98. 11 Rep. 5. And if two or more perſons come together to do an unlawful act, as to beat a man, rob a park, &c. and one of them kills a perſon, this is murder in all preſent, aiding or aſſiſting, or that were ready to aid and aſſiſt: All will be ſaid to intend the murder. 3 Inſt. 56. Dalt. 347. H. P. C. 31. And ſuch perſons will be judged to be preſent who are in the ſame houſe, tho' in another room, or in the ſame park, altho' half a mile off, &c. H. P. C. 47. Kel. 87, 116, 127.

Several perſons having conſpired to enter the King's park, and to hunt and carry away deer, with deſign of killing any one that ſhould oppoſe] them; tho' the keeper's ſervant began the aſſault, and required them firſt to ſtand, whereupon they fled, and one of the keeper's men diſcharged a piece at them, and they continued their flight until he laid violent hands upon one of the offenders, and then, and not before, they killed one of the keeper's ſervants, this was held to be murder; as they were doing an unlawful act, the law implies malice, and they ought not to have fled, but to have ſurrendered themſelves. Roll. Rep. 20.

By ſtatute murder ſhall not be adjudged where it is found by miſadventure, but when it is done with a felonious intent. 52 H. 3. c. 25. Offenders for murder and acceſſaries being indicted, may be arraigned at any time within the year at the King's ſuit, and if the principal or acceſſary be acquit, yet the juſtices ſhall not ſuffer them to go at large, but either remand them to priſon, or let them be bailed, until the year and day be out, allowed for an appeal. 3 H. 7. c. 1. All trials for murder muſt be in the county where the fact was committed, by the Common law. Cro. Car. 247. But if a perſon be wounded by a ſtroke given in one county, and he dieth in another county, the indictment may be found in the county where the party dies, which ſhall be as well as if the ſtroke had been given in the ſame county. Statute 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 24. The killing muſt be in ſome county; for if the murder be done out of the realm, it cannot be determined by the Common law, but muſt be determined by the conſtable and marſhal, &c. 3 Inſt. 48. H. P. C. 54. See the ſtatute 2 Geo. 2. c. 21. for trial of murders, where either the ſtroke or death happens in England.

Murder is to be expreſly found, not by intendment, &c. And where the matters on the finding of the jury, are no more than weak evidence thereof, the court ought not to give judgment on that, but upon the facts ariſing from it. Fitzgib. 187. Mich. 4 Geo. 2. When one is murdered in the day-time, and the murderer eſcapes untaken, the townſhip, that ſuffers it, ſhall be amerced. 3 H 7. c. 1. If one who ſees a murder done, does not his beſt endeavours to apprehend the murderer: Or if where two are fighting, and others looking on do not endeavour to part them, if one is killed, the lookers on may be indicted and fined. 3 Inſt. 53. Noy 50. And killing any perſon endeavouring to part others fighting, tho' without any evil intention againſt him, is murder.

Where a murder is committed abroad the principal may be ſued in any county in England, by commiſſioners appointed by the King. 33 H. 8. c. 23.

Murder, or homicide juſtifiable. There is a killing that is juſtifiable; as if a perſon attempts to commit murder, robbery or other felony, a man or any of his ſervants may lawfully kill him. 2 Inſt. 316. See ſtatute 24 H. 8. c. 5. If a perſon in defence of the poſſeſſion of a room in a public houſe kill another who attempts to turn him out of it, killing the aſſailant hath been holden to be juſtifiable. Kel. 51. 1 Hawk. 83. In the defence of the poſſeſſion of a man's goods, againſt him that would wrongfully take them away, killing cannot be juſtified; except he be a thief. Wood's Inſt. 361. If a woman kills a man attempting to raviſh her, it is juſtifiable. H. P. C. 39.

Thoſe who are engaged in a riot, or forcible entry, &c. ſtanding in oppoſition to a juſtice's command, or lawful warrant: Or if treſpaſſers in a foreſt or park, will not ſurrender, but defend themſelves: If a felon will not ſuffer himſelf to be arreſted, and refuſing to obey any arreſt on lawful warrant, defends himſelf; or if one either with or without a warrant purſues a felon upon hue and cry, and he flies for it: If a priſoner aſſaults thoſe who conduct him to gaol, or his gaoler, in endeavouring to eſcape; or a perſon arreſted, reſiſt the ſheriff, &c. the killing theſe is juſtifiable; but a ſheriff cannot kill one who flies from the execution of a civil proceſs: And as no private perſon hath this authority, upon an arreſt in a civil matter, as he hath upon an arreſt for felony; ſo neither hath the ſheriff this power in criminal caſes, but upon a neceſſity; as when an offender cannot be taken without killing, &c. for if he might be taken without killing him, it will be eſteemed murder. 3 Inſt. 56, 221. H. P. C. 37. Dalt. 150, 355. Kel. 28.

When one in danger of drowning, thruſts another from a plank, whereby he is drowned; this is juſtifiable. Bac. Max. 25. And there is a homicide or killing excuſable, where a man kills another merely in his own defence, called ſe defendendo. A perſon indicted for intending to murder the Maſter of the Rolls, Term. Mich. 16 Car. 2. and for offering a ſum of money to another perſon to do it, ſaying at the ſame time, that "if he would not perpetrate the crime, he would do it himſelf;" upon his conviction, the court declared that this was a heinous offence, and not only indictable, but fineable, and the offender was fined one thouſand marks, committed to priſon for three months, and ordered to find ſureties for his good behaviour during life. 1 Lev. 146.

Firing a piſtol out of a chaiſe into the ſtreet, and by accident, death enſuing, held manſlaughter. Strange 481. A defendant arreſted, ſtrikes at the officers, they afterwards kill him, held manſlaughter. Strange 499.

By Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 37. Perſons found guilty of wilful murder ſhall be executed on the day next but one after ſentence paſſed, unleſs the ſame happen on a Sunday, and then on the Monday. The body, (if executed in London or Middleſex,) to be delivered to the ſurgeons company pany to be anatomized, if in any other county, to ſuch ſurgeon as the judge ſhall direct for that purpoſe. The ſentence to be pronounced in open court immediately after conviction with the time for execution and the marks of infamy hereby directed.

If there be reaſonable cauſe, the judge may ſtay execution. The judge may order the body of the murderer to be hung in chains, but in no caſe to be buried, unleſs after diſſection. After conviction the priſoner to be confined ſeparate and apart from other priſoners, and no perſon but the gaoler, &c. to have acceſs to the priſoner without licence from the judge, ſheriff or under-ſheriff. Where the judge ſhall ſee cauſe to reſpite execution, he may relax the ſaid reſtraints. And after ſentence until execution the priſoner to be fed with bread and water, except on receiving the ſacrament, and in caſe of violent wounds or ſickneſs, &c. Vide Homicide. Under that head ſome of the caſes cited under murder will be found, but as it is a title of conſequence, the reader may not diſapprove a repetition.

Mutare, To mew up hawks, in the time of their molting or caſting their plumes. In the reign of King Ed. 2 the manor of Broughton in Com. Oxon. was held ——Per ſerjeantiam mutandi unum hoſtricum domini regis, &c. Paroch. Antiq. 560. Mutatus accipiter is a mewed hawk: And hence the Mews (Muta Regia) near Charing-Croſs, London, now the King's ſtables, was formerly the falconry or place for the King's hawks.

Mutatorius, Change of apparel. Mat. Par. Ann. 1107.

Mutatus accipiter, A mewed hawk. Cowell.

Mute, (Mutus) One dumb, who cannot or refuſes to ſpeak. And by our law a priſoner may ſtand mute two ways:

1. When he ſpeaks not at all, and it ſhall be enquired whether he ſtand mute out of malice, or by the act of God; and if by the latter, then the judge ought to enquire whether he be the ſame perſon, and of all pleas which he might have pleaded in his defence, if he had not been mute.

2. When the priſoner pleads not directly, or will not put himſelf upon the inqueſt to be tried; and a perſon feigning himſelf mad, and refuſing to anſwer, ſhall be taken as one who ſtands mute. 2 Inſt. H. P. C. 226.

Alſo if a priſoner on his trial peremptorily challenge above the number of jurors allowed by law, this being an implied refuſal of a legal trial, he ſhall be dealt with as one who ſtands mute, and according to ſome opinions be hanged. H. P. C. 259. Kel. 36. 2 Hawk. 327. A felon obſtinately ſtanding mute is to be put to the penance of paine forte & dure: In caſe of high treaſon where the offender ſtands mute, he ſhall have judgment and forfeit lands and goods, as if he had been attainted; likewiſe in the caſe of felony and petit treaſon, if a perſon by ſtanding mute do not avoid being attainted for ſuch crimes, he ſhall forfeit his lands and goods in the ſame manner as on other attainders: tho' whenever a perſon ſtanding mute is adjudged to his penance for felony, and thereby prevents that attainder which otherwiſe he might have incurred, he forfeits his chattels only, and not his lands. 2 Hawk. P. C. 330, 331.

It is ſaid by Sir Matth. Hale, that an appellee of felony ſtanding mute ſhall be executed, and not have judgment of penance; but the contrary hath been held by others. H. P. C. 226. S. P. C. 150. 2 Inſt. 178. Kel. 37. One who ſtands mute ſhall have the benefit of clergy, unleſs it be otherwiſe ſpecially provided by ſome ſtatute. And altho' it be enacted by 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9. That if any perſon ſhall be indicted of any offence, for which by virtue of any former ſtatute, he is excluded from the benefit of his clergy, if he had been thereof convicted by verdict or confeſſion, if he ſtand mute he ſhall not be admitted to the ſame; yet appeals, and offences excluded from the benefit of clergy, by ſubſequent ſtatutes, ſeem not within that act: And a ſtatute taking away the benefit of clergy generally from thoſe who are convicted of a crime, doth not take it away from thoſe who ſtand mute on an indictment or appeal. 2 Hawk. 332. But ſee the ſtatutes 25 H. 8. c. 3. and 5 & 6 Ed. 3. c. 10. Whereby it is enacted that thoſe who are indicted of offences for which the benefit of clergy is not to be allowed, ſhall not have their clergy if they ſtand mute, &c.

Hawkins ſays, that the manner of inflicting this puniſhment may be beſt found from the books of entries and other law books, all of which generally agree, that the priſoner ſhall be remanded to the place from whence he came, and put into ſome low dark room, and there laid on his back without any manner of covering, except for the privy parts, and that as many weights be laid upon him as he can bear, and more, and that he ſhall have no manner of ſuſtenance but the worſt bread and water, and that he ſhall not eat the ſame day in which he drinks, nor drink the ſame day on which he eats, and that he ſhall ſo continue till he die. But that it is ſaid that anciently the judgment was not, that he ſhould continue until he ſhould die, but until he ſhould anſwer, and that he might ſave himſelf from the penance by putting himſelf upon his trial, which he cannot do at this day after judgment of penance once given. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 330. cap. 30. ſ. 16.

And there in the margin, the ſerjeant, as to the remanding him to the place whence he came, cites H. P. C. 227. S. P. C. 150. (E). Keilw. 70. a. 4 Ed. 4. 11.

And as to the words in ſome low dark room, he ſays, that this clauſe is omitted in Keilw. 70. a. 4 Ed. 4. 11. pl. 18. But is mentioned in all the other books above cited, but with this difference, that 14 Ed. 4. 11. pl. 17. ſays only he ſhall be put in a chamber, without adding that it ſhall be low or dark.

And as to the words there laid on his back, etc. he ſays, that in this all the books above cited ſeem to agree. And 14 Ed. 4. 8. pl. 17. and S. P. C. 150. (E), and 2 Inſt. 178. add, that he ſhall lie without any litter or other thing under him, and that one arm ſhall be drawn to one quarter of the room with a cord, and the other to another, and that his feet ſhall be uſed in the ſame manner. But that theſe clauſes are wholly omitted in all the other books above cited, except H. P. C. which takes notice of the latter of them only. And Ra. Ent. 385. pl. 2. adds, that an hole ſhall be made for the head. And Keilw. 70. a. ſays, that the head ſhall not touch the earth; but none of the other mention either of theſe clauſes.

And as to the words, that as many weights ſhall be laid upon him as he can bear, and more, etc. he ſays, that in this all the books above cited agree.

And as to the word bread, he ſays that 14 Ed. 4. 8. pl. 17. S. P. C. 150. (E), and 2 Inſt. 178. are, that he ſhall have three morſels of barley bread a day. Keilw. 70. a. that he ſhall have only rye bread, and Ra. Ent. 385. pl. 2. and 2 Hen. 4. 1. pl. 2. generally, that he ſhall have the worſt bread.

And as to the word water, he ſays, that in 14 Ed. 4. 8. pl. 17. S. P. C. 150. (E), 2 Inſt. 178. and 8 Hen. 4. 1. pl. 2. and Keilw. 70. a. are, that he ſhall have the water next the priſon, ſo that it be not current; but Ra. Ent. 385. pl. 5. is general, that he ſhall have the worſt water.

And as to the words, not eat the ſame day in which he drinks, nor drink the ſame day on which he eats, etc. he ſays, this is omitted in Keilw. 70. a. and in 8 Hen. 4. 1. pl. 2.

And as to the words till he die, he ſays, this is omitted in none of the books above cited, except 14 Ed. 5. [4.] 11. and H. P. C. 227. But that neither of theſe books give the whole judgment at large. Hawk. Pl. C. 330, 331. cap. 3.

By 12 Geo. 3. c. 20. Every perſon, who being arraigned for felony or piracy, ſhall ſtand mute, or not anſwer directly to the offence, ſhall be convicted of the ſame; and the ſame judgment and execution (with all their conſequences in every reſpect) ſhall be thereupon awarded, as if the perſon had been convicted by verdict or confeſſion of the crime. And, as obſerved by Blackſtone, ſtanding mute in all caſes, now amounts to a conſtructive confeſſion. Com. 4 V. 329.

To adviſe a priſoner to ſtand mute, is an high miſpriſion, a contempt of the King's court, and puniſhable by fine and impriſonment. Black. Com. 4 V. 126.

National Debt, the money owing by government, for which it pays intereſt, part to our own people, part to foreigners, and which forms our national funds. In January 1765, the national debt amounted to upwards of 145,000,000 l. and the annual intereſt to about four millions and three quarters.

In order to take a clear and comprehenſive view of the nature of this national debt, it muſt firſt be premiſed, that after the revolution, when our new connections with Europe introduced a new ſyſtem of foreign politics, the expences of the nation, not only in ſettling the new eſtabliſhment, but in maintaining long wars, as principals, on the continent, for the ſecurity of the Dutch barrier, reducing the French monarchy, ſettling the Spaniſh ſucceſſion, ſupporting the houſe of Auſtria, maintaining the liberties of the Germanic body, and other purpoſes, increaſed to an unuſual degree; inſomuch that it was not thought adviſable to raiſe all the expences of any one year by taxes to be levied within that year, leſt the unaccuſtomed weight of them ſhould create murmurs among the people. It was therefore the policy of the times to anticipate the revenues of their poſterity, by borrowing immenſe ſums for the current ſervice of the ſtate, and to lay no more taxes upon the ſubject than would ſuffice to pay the annual intereſt of the ſums ſo borrowed: by this means converting the principal debt into a new ſpecies of property, transferrable from one man to another at any time and in any quantity. A ſyſtem which ſeems to have had its original in the ſtate of Florence, A. D. 1344. which government then owed about 60000 l. ſterling: and, being unable to pay it, formed the principal into an aggregate ſum, called metaphorically a mount or bank, the ſhares whereof were transferrable like our ſtocks, with intereſt at 5 l. per cent. the prices varying according to the exigencies of the ſtate. [pro tempore, pro ſpe, pro commodo, minuitur eorum pretium atque augeſcit. Aretin. See Mod. Un. Hiſt. xxxvi. 116.] This laid the foundation of what is called the national debt: for a few long annuities created in the reign of Charles II. will hardly deſerve that name. And the example then ſet has been ſo cloſely followed during the long wars in the reign of Queen Anne, and ſince, that the capital of the national debt (funded and unfunded) amounted in January 1771 to above 140,000,000 l. to pay the intereſt of which, and the charges for management, amounting annually to upwards of four millions and an half, the extraordinary revenues juſt now enumerated (excepting only the land-tax and annual malt-tax) are in the firſt place mortgaged, and made perpetual by parliament. Perpetual, I ſay; but ſtill redeemable by the ſame authority that impoſed them: which, if it at any time can pay off the capital, will aboliſh theſe taxes which are raiſed to diſcharge the intereſt.

By this means the quantity of property in the kingdom is greatly increaſed in idea, compared with former times; yet, if we cooly conſider it, not at all encreaſed in reality. We may boaſt of large fortunes, and quantities of money in the funds. But where does this money exiſt? It exiſts only in name, in paper, in public faith, in parliamentary ſecurity: and that is undoubtedly ſufficient for the creditors of the public to rely on. But then what is the pledge, which the public faith has pawned for the ſecurity of theſe debts? The land, the trade, and the perſonal induſtry of the ſubject; from which the money muſt ariſe that ſupplies the ſeveral taxes. In theſe therefore, and theſe only, the property of the public creditors does really and intrinſically exiſt: and of courſe the land, the trade, and the perſonal induſtry of individuals, are diminiſhed in their true value juſt ſo much as they are pledged to anſwer. If A.'s income amounts to 100 l. per annum; and he is ſo far indebted to B. that he pays him 50 l. per ann. for his intereſt; one half of the value of A.'s property is transferred to B the creditor. The creditor's property exiſts in the demand which he has upon the debtor, and no where elſe: and the debtor is only a truſtee to his creditor for one half of the value of his income. In ſhort, the property of a creditor of the public conſiſts in a certain portion of the national taxes: by how much therefore he is the richer, by ſo much the nation, which pays theſe taxes, is the poorer.

The only advantage, that can reſult to a nation from public debts, is the increaſe of circulation by multiplying the caſh of the kingdom, and creating a new ſpecies of currency, aſſignable at any time and in any quantity; always therefore ready to be employed in any beneficial undertaking, by reaſon of this it's transferrable quality; and yet producing ſome profit even when it lies idle and unemployed. A certain proportion of debt ſeems therefore to be highly uſeful to a trading people; but what that proportion is, it is not for me to determine. Thus much is indiſputably certain, that the preſent magnitude of our national incumbrances very far exceeds all calculations of commercial benefit, and is productive of the greateſt inconveniencies. For, firſt, the enormous taxes, that are raiſed upon the neceſſaries of life for the payment of the intereſt of this debt, are a hurt both to trade and manufactures, by raiſing the price as well of the artificer's ſubſiſtence, as of the raw material, and of courſe, in a much greater proportion, the price of the commodity itſelf. Nay the very increaſe of paper circulation itſelf, when extended beyond what is requiſite for commerce or foreign exchange, has a natural tendency to increaſe the price of proviſions as well as of all other merchandize. For, as its effect is to multiply the caſh of the kingdom, and this to ſuch an extent that much muſt remain unemployed, that caſh (which is the univerſal meaſure of the reſpective values of all other commodities) muſt neceſſarily ſink in its own value, [Black. Com. 1 V. 276.] and every thing grow comparatively dearer. Secondly, if part of this debt be owing to foreigners, either they draw out of the kingdom annually a conſiderable quantity of ſpecie for the intereſt; or elſe it is made an argument to grant them unreaſonable privileges in order to induce them to reſide here. Thirdly, if the whole be owing to ſubjects only, it is then charging the active and induſtrious ſubject, who pays his ſhare of the taxes, to maintain the indolent and idle creditor who receives them. Laſtly and principally, it weaken the internal ſtrength of a ſtate, by anticipating thoſe reſources which ſhould be reſerved to defend it in caſe of neceſſity. The intereſt we now pay for our debts would be nearly ſufficient to maintain any war that any national motives could require. And if our anceſtors in King William's time had annually paid, ſo long as their exigencies laſted, even a leſs ſum than we now annually raiſe upon their accounts, they would in the time of war have borne no greater burdens, than they have bequeathed to and ſettled upon their poſterity in time of peace; and might have been eaſed the inſtant the exigence was over. Black. Com. 1 V. 326.

Nativi de Stipite. In the ſurvey of the dutchy of Cornwall, there is mention of native de ſtipite, and nativi conventionarii; the firſt were villeins or bondmen, by birth or ſtock; the other by contract or agreement. *LL. Nativity, (nativitas) Birth, or the being born in a place. The caſting the nativity, or by calculation ſeeking to know how long the Queen ſhould live, &c. was made felony, by 23 Eliz. cap. 2. Nativitas was anciently taken for ſervitude, bondage, or villeinage. Leg. Wil. 1.

Nativo habendo, A writ that lay to the ſheriff for a lord who claimed inheritance in any villein, when his villein was run away, for the apprehending and reſtoring him to the lord: and the ſheriff might ſeize the villein, and deliver him unto his lord, if he confeſſed his villeinage; but if he alledged that he was a freeman, then the ſheriff ought not to ſeize him, but the lord was to ſue forth a pone to remove the plea before the juſtices of C. B. &c. And if the villein purchaſed a writ de libertate probanda before the lord had taken out the pone, it was a ſuperſedeas to the lord, that he proceeded not on the writ of nativo habendo. Reg. Orig. 7, 8. F. N. B. 77. New Nat. Brev. 171, 172.

This writ nativo habendo was in nature of a writ of right, to recover the inheritance in the villein; upon which the lord was to purſue his plaint, and declare thereupon, and the villein to make his defence ſo as the freedom was to be tried. New Nat. Br. 171, 173.

Nativus. He who is born a ſervant, and ſo differs from him who ſuffers himſelf to be ſold, of which ſervants there were three ſorts, bondmen, natives, and villains; bondmen were thoſe who bound themſelves by covenants to ſerve, and took their name from the word bond; natives we ſpoke of juſt before; and villains were ſuch who belonged to the land, tilled the lord's demeſnes, nor might depart thence without the lord's licence. Spelman's Gloſſ. See *Chart. Natural Affection, (naturalis affectio) Is a good conſideration in a deed; and if one, without expreſſing any conſideration, covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of his wife, child, or brother, &c. Here the naming them to be of kin, implies the conſideration of natural affection, whereupon ſuch uſe will ariſe. Cart. 138. See Conſideration.

Naturalization, (Naturalizatio) Is where a perſon who is an alien, is made the King's natural ſubject by act of parliament; whereby one is a ſubject to all intents and purpoſes, as if he were born ſo: for, by naturalization, a perſon's iſſue, before the naturalization, ſhall inherit. 1 Inſt. 8, 129. A ſtranger naturalized by act of parliament, may have lands by deſcent, as heir at law, as well as have them by purchaſe: But until naturalized or made denizen, a ſtranger is not generally under the King's protection, to have the benefit of the law; alſo no perſon is to be naturalized, until he has received the ſacrament, and taken the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy, &c. And ſtrangers, when naturalized, are diſabled to be of the Privy Council, to hold offices, &c. 7 Jac. 1. cap. 2. 12 W. 3. cap. 2. but ſee 1 G. 1. cap. 4.

By the ſtat. 7 Ann. cap. 5. it was declared, that all perſons born out of the King's allegiance, taking the oaths, &c. ſhould be deemed natural born; though this was repealed, but not to prejudice perſons naturalized, or children of natural-born ſubjects, born out of allegiance, by 10 Ann. c. 5. And all children born out of the ligeance of the crown, whoſe fathers were, or ſhall be natural ſubjects of Great Britain, at the time of their birth, are adjudged to be natural-born ſubjects of this kingdom, except children of parents attainted of treaſon, or in the actual ſervice of foreign princes in enmity with England, &c. by the 4 Geo. 2. c. 21.

All foreigners who ſhall live ſeven years, or more, in any of our American plantations, and not be abſent therefrom above two months at one time, ſhall, on taking the oaths be deemed natural ſubjects, as if they had been born here; but not be capable of enjoying any place of truſt, &c. 13 Geo. 2. c. 7.

This, by the ſtat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 44. is extended to proteſtants who ſcruple the taking an oath, upon their making and ſubſcribing the declaration of fidelity, and taking and affirming the effect of the abjuration oath, and making and ſubſcribing the profeſſion of their Chriſtian Belief, appointed by the ſtat. 1 Geo. 1. c. 4, &c.

Great numbers of foreigners are every year naturalized by private acts of parliament. And vide 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 2. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 20. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 6. 13 Geo. 2. c. 3. 22 Geo. 2. c. 45. and 25 Geo. 2. c. 39. See Alien.

None but the contractors with the commiſſioners of the navy, ſhall make any ſtores of war, naval ſtores, &c. with the marks commonly uſed to his majeſty's ſtores, upon pain of forfeiting two hundred pounds. And perſons in whoſe cuſtody ſuch ſtores ſhall be found concealed, are liable to the ſame penalty. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 41.

The Stat. 3 Ann. c. 10. was made for the encouragement of the importation of naval ſtores, from the plantations in America, and for preſervation thereof in thoſe countries; inflicting penalties for cutting down pine, or pitch trees, under ſuch and ſuch ſizes, &c. To the like purpoſe, and for the making the ſame more effectual, is the Stat. 8 Geo. 1. cap. 12.

Navy, Signifies the fleet or ſhipping of a prince or ſtate; or an armament at ſea. The navy of Englana, it has been obſerved, excels all others for three things, viz. beauty, ſtrength, and ſafety; for beauty our ſhips of war are ſo many floating palaces; for their ſtrength ſo many moving caſtles; and for ſafety, they are the moſt defenſive walls of the land: and as our naval power gains us authority in the moſt diſtant climates, ſo the ſuperiority of our fleet above other nations, renders the Britiſh monarch the arbiter of Europe.

The Kings of England in ancient times commanded their fleets in perſon; and the renowned King Arthur (famous for his warlike atchievements) vindicated the dominion of the ſeas, making ſhips of all nations ſalute our ſhips of war by lowering the topſail, and ſtriking the flag, as in like manner they ſhall do to the forts upon land, by which ſubmiſſion they are put in mind that they are come into a territory, wherein they are to own a ſovereign power and juriſdiction, and receive protection from it: and this duty of the flag, which hath been conſtantly paid to our anceſtors, ſerves to imprint reverence in foreigners, and adds new courage to our ſeamen; and reputation abroad, is the principal ſupport of any government at home.

King Edgar, ſucceſſor to Arthur, ſtiled himſelf ſovereign of the narrow ſeas; and having fitted out a fleet of four hundred ſail of ſhips, in the year 937, ſailing about Britain with his mighty navy, and arriving at Cheſter, was there met by eight Kings and Princes of foreign nations, come to do him homage; who, as an acknowledgment of his ſovereignty, rowed this monarch in a boat down the river Dee, himſelf ſteering the boat; a marine triumph which is not to be paralleled in the hiſtories of Europe.

Canutus, (Edgar's ſucceſſor) laid the ancient tribute called Danegeld, for guarding the ſeas, and ſovereignty of them; with the following emblem expreſſed, viz. Himſelf ſitting on the ſhore in his royal chair, while the ſea was flowing, ſpeaking, Tu meæ ditionis es, & terra in qua ſedeo eſt, &c.

And Egbert, Althred and Elthred kept up the dominion and ſovereignty of their predeceſſors; nor did the ſucceeding princes, of the Norman race, waive this great advantage, but maintained their right to the four adjacent ſeas ſurrounding the Britiſh ſhore: the honour of the flag King John challenged, not barely as a civility, but a right to be paid cum debita reverentia, and the perſons refuſing, he commanded to be taken as enemies: and the ſame was ordained not only to be paid to whole fleets, bearing the royal ſtandard, but to thoſe ſhips of privilege that wear the Prince's enſigns or colours of ſervice; this decree was confirmed and bravely aſſerted by a fleet of five hundred ſail, in a royal voyage to Ireland, wherein he made all the veſſels which he met with in his way, in the eight circumfluent ſeas, to pay that duty and acknowledgment, which has been maintained by our Kings to this day, and was never conteſted by any nation, unleſs by thoſe who attempted the conqueſt of the intire empire.

Trade gave occaſion to the bringing mighty fleets to ſea; and on the increaſe of trade, ſhips of war were neceſſary in all countries for the preſervation of it, in the hands of the juſt proprietors.

In ancient times the ſeveral counties of England were liable to a particular taxation for building ſhips of war, and fitting out fleets, every one in proportion to their extent and riches; ſo that the largeſt counties were each of them to furniſh a firſt rate man of war, and the others every one to build one in proportion; but this method has been long diſuſed, and the fitting out our navy for many ages has been always thrown into the public charge.

King Edw. 3. in his wars with France, had a fleet of ſhips before Calais, ſo numerous, that they amounted to ſeven hundred ſail: but King Hen. 6. it is ſaid, was the firſt who began to build a royal navy in England; he built a ſhip called the Great Henry of one thouſand tuns, the largeſt ſhip that had been then ſeen in this kingdom, (though now our firſt rate ſhips of war contain at leaſt two thouſand tuns, are mounted with above one hundred canon, and carry above one thouſand men.) He fitted out a royal fleet, conſtituted a Navy Office, &c. And in this King's reign; and the reign of Queen Elizabeth, our navy was in a moſt flouriſhing condition, being moſtly commanded by our valiant nobility; and it is remarkable, that there are liſts of the fleets of Queen Elizabeth, which make it appear there was but one private gentleman a captain, all the reſt being Lords and Knights: ſo high was the eſteem for ſervice at ſea in thoſe days, when our Princes ruled with the moſt conſummate glory: but the opinion of ſerving at ſea in later times having been very much leſſened, it has ſince been declined by the nobility and gentry.

The navy is at this time in a very flouriſhing ſtate; for number of ſhipping, and ſtrength of force of the ſhips, it was never, perhaps, more formidable than now; and when compleat, is divided into three ſquadrons, diſtinguiſhed by the different colours of the ſeveral flags, viz. red, white, and blue; the principal commander whereof bears the title of Admiral, and each has under him a Vice-Admiral, and a Rear-Admiral, who are likewiſe flag officers. There are belonging to his Majeſty's navy, ſix great yards, Chatham, Deptford, Woolwich, Portſmouth, Sheerneſs, and Plymouth; fitted with ſeveral docks, and furniſhed with ſtore of timber, maſts, anchors, cables, &c. And for the management of the royal navy, there are ſeveral officers of truſt and authority, beſides the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty; as the Treaſurer, Controller, Surveyor, Commiſſioners of the Navy, Commiſſioners of the Victualling-Office, &c. the principal whereof hold their offices by patent under the Great Seal. By Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 37. the ſum of five hundred and ſeventy thouſand pounds was appropriated for the building of twenty-ſeven ſhips of war, with their guns, rigging, &c.

And the 6 Ann. c. 13. enacts, That over and above the ſhips for the line of battle, forty-three ſhips of war ſhall be employed as cruiſers and convoys, for the better preſerving ſuch ſhips as ſhall be made uſe of in the trade of Great Britain; four of theſe ſhips are to be third-rates, and ſixteen fourth-rates, and the reſt of ſufficient force to guard our commerce: they are to attend in certain ſtations; and the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty may direct the Commiſſioners of the Navy, or ſome one or more perſons reſident at ſuch places as his Majeſty ſhall appoint, to ſuperintend and overſee every thing relating to thoſe cruiſers; alſo the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty have power to order any of the ſaid ſhips to be employed in the line of battle, in caſe of neceſſity.

This ſtatute likewiſe empowers the commiſſioners of the Admiralty, during war, to grant commiſſions to privateers and commanders of ſhips, for the taking and ſeizing ſhips and goods of enemies. For the furniſhing of mariners for the Fleet; by 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 21. it is enacted, That all ſeamen, watermen, &c. above the age of eighteen years, and under fifty, capable of ſea ſervice, who ſhall regiſter themſelves voluntarily for the King's ſervice in the royal navy, to the number of thirty thouſand, ſhall have paid to them the yearly ſum or bounty of forty ſhillings, beſides their pay for actual ſervice, and that whether they be in ſervice or not; and none but ſuch mariners, &c. as are regiſtred, ſhall be capable of preferment to any commiſſion, or be warrant officers in the navy: and ſuch regiſtred perſons are exempted from ſerving on juries, pariſh offices, &c. alſo from ſervice aboard after the age of fifty-five years, unleſs they go voluntarily; and when by age, wounds, or other accidents, they are diſabled for future ſervice at ſea, they ſhall be admitted into Greenwich hoſpital, and there be provided for, during life: and the widows of ſuch ſeamen as ſhall be ſlain or drowned, not of ability to provide for themſelves, ſhall be likewiſe admitted into the hoſpital; and their children educated, &c. But if any regiſtred ſeaman ſhall withdraw himſelf from the King's ſervice, in his ſhips or navy; or if any ſuch mariner relinquiſh the ſervice, without conſent of the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, he ſhall for ever loſe the benefit of the act, and be compelled to ſerve in his Majeſty's fleet ſix months without pay. See 9 Ann. c. 21. ſ. 23. The 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 21. as to regiſtring ſeamen, is repealed by 9 Ann. c. 21. ſ. 64. By a ſubſequent ſtatute, 4 Ann. c. 19. ſ. 18. Watermen plying on the Thames between Graveſend and Windſor, on notice given by the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty to the company of watermen, are to appear before the ſaid company, to be ſent to his Majeſty's fleet, or, on refuſal, they ſhall ſuffer one month's impriſonment, and be diſabled working on the Thames for two years: The regiſtring ſeamen is the grand nurſery for the fleet; but there are other means of ſupplying mariners for the royal navy, and training up perſons in the ſea ſervice: for the Stat. 2 Ann. c. 6. provides, That poor boys, whoſe parents are chargeable to the pariſh, may by church-warden and overſeers of the poor, with conſent of two juſtices of peace, be placed out apprentices to the ſea ſervice, until the age of twenty-one years, they being thirteen years old, at the time of their placing forth: thoſe at eighteen years of age may be impreſſed for ſervice in the fleet, when the owners or maſters of ſuch of them as ſhall prove qualified, ſhall have able ſeamen's wages; and all maſters and owners of ſhips, from thirty to fifty tuns burden, are required to take one ſuch apprentice, one more for the next fifty tun, and one more for every hundred tun above the firſt hundred, under the penalty of ten pounds. Maſters of apprentices placed out by the pariſh may, with the conſent of two juſtices, turn over ſuch apprentices to maſters of ſhips for the remainder of their terms: lewd and diſorderly ſervants, vagrants, &c. are to be taken up and ſent to his majeſty's fleet; and poor priſoners for debt, who were to have the benefit of 4 & 5 Ann. appearing on their releaſement to be able bodied ſeamen, were to enter themſelves in the ſervice. Thus is the navy recruited with mariners; not to mention particularly the manner of preſſing in cities and populous towns, on extraordinary occaſions.

By a late ſtatute, encouragement is given to ſeamen to enter into his Majeſty's ſervice voluntarily: volunteers entring their names with any commiſſion officer of the fleet, and forthwith proceeding towards their ſhips, on certificate thereof ſhall be intitled to wages from the date of the certificate, and be allowed the uſual conduct money, and alſo be paid an advance of two months wages, &c. And if any volunteer is turned over to another ſhip, he ſhall receive, over and above his wages due, the like advance of two months pay, and not ſerve in a lower degree than he did before. Perſons liſted on board ſhips of war, are not to be taken thereout by any proceſs at law, unleſs it be for a criminal matter; or where the debt amounts to 20 l. When ſeamen die on board, the commander of the ſhip ſhall, as ſoon as may be, make out tickets for their pay, which ſhall be paid to their executors, &c. without tarrying for the ſhip's return: and ſeamens pay ſhall not be bargained and ſold; but tickets may. Governors and conſuls in foreign parts, are to provide for ſhipwrecked mariners at 6 d. per diem each, and put them on board the firſt ſhips of war, &c. and on ſending bills of diſburſements with vouchers to the Commiſſioners of the Navy, they ſhall be paid. 1 Geo. 2. c. 12.

Alſo the pay and wages of one man in a hundred, of every ſhip of war, and value of his victuals, ſhall be applied for relieving poor widows of officers of the navy, by the 6 Geo. 2. c. 25. A late ſtatute has ordained, that able ſeamen who voluntarily enter on board ſhips of war, ſhall receive 5 l. beſides their wages, and ordinary ſeamen 3 l. And if any ſeaman, under a commiſſion or warrant officer, who enters into the ſervice, be killed or drowned, his widow, on certificate to the commiſſioners of the Navy that ſhe is ſuch, is to have, by way of bounty, one year's wages, according to the pay for which he ſerved. 14 Geo. 2. c. 38.

The Commiſſioners of the Navy, &c. have power to examine and puniſh all perſons who make any diſturbance, fighting or quarrelling in the yards, and offices, &c. of the navy: and in the 13th year of King Charles II. an act paſſed for the regulating the government of the fleet; and alſo an act 22 Geo. 2. c. 33. which contains the particular excellent articles and orders following.

1. Officers are to cauſe public worſhip, according to the liturgy of the church of England, to be ſolemnly performed in their ſhips, and take care that prayers and preaching by the chaplains be performed diligently, and that the Lord's Day be obſerved.

2. Perſons guilty of profane oaths, curſing, drunkenneſs, uncleanneſs, &c. to be puniſhed as a court martial ſhall think fit.

3. If any perſon ſhall give or hold intelligence to or with an enemy without leave, he ſhall ſuffer death.

4. If any letter or meſſage from an enemy be conveyed to any in the fleet, and he ſhall not in twelve hours acquaint his ſuperior officer with it, or if the ſuperior officer, being acquainted therewith, ſhall not reveal it to the commander in chief, the offender ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall impoſe.

5. Spies and perſons endeavouring to corrupt any one in the fleet, ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall impoſe.

6. No perſon ſhall relieve an enemy with money, victuals or ammunition, on like penalty.

7. All papers taken on board a prize ſhall be ſent to the Court of Admiralty, &c. on penalty of forfeiting the ſhare of the prize, and ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall impoſe.

8. No perſon ſhall take out of any prize any money or goods, unleſs for better ſecuring the ſame, or for the neceſſary uſe of any of his Majeſty's ſhips, before the prize ſhall be condemned; upon penalty of forfeiting his ſhare, and ſuch puniſhment as ſhall be impoſed by a court martial.

9. No perſon on board a prize ſhall be ſtripped of his cloaths, pillaged, beaten, or ill treated, upon pain of ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall impoſe.

10. Every commander, who, upon ſignal or order of fight, or ſight of any ſhip which it may be his duty to engage, or who, upon likelihood of engagement, ſhall not make neceſſary preparations for fight, and encourage the inferior officers and men to fight, ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall deem him to deſerve. And if any perſon ſhall treacherouſly or cowardly yield or cry for quarter, he ſhall ſuffer death.

11. Every perſon who ſhall not obey the orders of his ſuperior officer, in time of action, to the beſt of his power, ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall deem him to deſerve.

12. Every perſon, who, in time of action, ſhall withdraw or keep back, or not come into the fight, or do his utmoſt to take or deſtroy any ſhip which it ſhall be his duty to engage, and to aſſiſt every ſhip of his Majeſty or his allies, which it ſhall be his duty to aſſiſt, ſhall ſuffer death.

13. Every perſon, who through cowardice, &c. ſhall forbear to purſue the chaſe of any enemy, &c. or ſhall not aſſiſt or relieve a known friend in view, to the utmoſt of his power, ſhall ſuffer death.

14. If any perſon ſhall delay or diſcourage any action or ſervice commanded, upon pretence of arrears of wages, or otherwiſe, he ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall deem him to deſerve.

15. Every perſon who ſhall deſert to the enemy, or run away with any ſhip, ordnance, &c. to the weakening of the ſervice, or yield up the ſame cowardly or treacherouſly to the enemy, ſhall ſuffer death.

16. Every perſon who ſhall deſert, or intice others ſo to do, ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall think fit. If any commanding officer ſhall receive a deſerter, after diſcovering him to be ſuch, and ſhall not with ſpeed give notice to the captain of the ſhip to which he belongs, or if the ſhip is at a conſiderable diſtance, to the Secretary of the Admiralty, or Commander in Chief, he ſhall be caſhiered.

17. Officers and ſeamen of ſhips appointed for convoy of merchant ſhips, or of any other, ſhall diligently attend upon that charge according to their inſtructions; and whoſoever ſhall not faithfully perform their duty, and defend their ſhips in their convoy, or refuſe to fight in their defence, or run away cowardly and ſubmit the ſhips in their convoy to hazard, or exact any reward for convoying any ſhip, or miſuſe the maſter or mariners, ſhall make reparation of damages, as the court of Admiralty ſhall adjudge; and be puniſhed criminally by death, or other puniſhment, as ſhall be adjudged by a court martial.

18. If any officer ſhall receive or permit to be received on board any goods or merchandiſe, other than for the ſole uſe of the ſhip, except gold, ſilver, or jewels, and except goods belonging to any ſhip which may be ſhipwrecked, or in danger thereof, in order to the preſerving them for the owners, and except goods ordered to be received by the Lord High Admiral, &c. he ſhall be caſhiered, and rendered incapable of further ſervice.

19. Any perſon making or endeavouring to make any mutinous aſſembly ſhall ſuffer death. Any perſon uttering words of ſedition or mutiny ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall deem him to deſerve. If any officer, mariner, or ſoldier, in or belonging to the fleet, ſhall behave himſelf with contempt to his ſuperior officer, being in the execution of his office, he ſhall be puniſhed according to the nature of his offence by the judgment of a court martial.

20. Any perſon concealing any traiterous or mutinous practice or deſign, ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall think fit. Any perſon concealing any traiterous or mutinous words, or any words, practice, or deſign, tending to the hindrance of the ſervice, and not forthwith revealing the ſame to the commanding officer, or being preſent at any mutiny or ſedition, ſhall not uſe his utmoſt endeavours to ſuppreſs the ſame, ſhall be puniſhed as a court martial ſhall think he deſerves.

21. Any perſon finding cauſe of complaint of the unwholeſomeneſs of victuals, or upon other juſt ground, he ſhall quietly make the ſame known to his ſuperior, who, as far as he is able, ſhall cauſe the ſame to be preſently remedied; and no perſon upon any ſuch or other pretence ſhall attempt to ſtir up any diſturbance, upon pain of ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall think fit to inflict.

22. Any perſon ſtriking any his ſuperior officer, or drawing or offering to draw or lift up any weapon againſt him, being in the execution of his office, ſhall ſuffer death. And any perſon preſuming to quarrel with any his ſuperior officer, being in the execution of his office, or diſobeying any lawful command of any his ſuperior officer, ſhall ſuffer death, or ſuch other puniſhment as ſhall be inflicted upon him by a court martial.

23. Any perſon quarrelling or fighting with any other perſon in the fleet, or uſing reproachful or provoking ſpeeches or geſtures, ſhall ſuffer ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall impoſe.

24. There ſhall be no waſteful expence or embezilment of any powder, ſhot, &c. upon penalty of ſuch puniſhment as by a court martial ſhall be found juſt.

25. Every perſon burning or ſetting fire to any magazine, or ſtore of powder, ſhip, &c. or furniture thereunto belonging, not then appertaining to an enemy, ſhall ſuffer death.

26. Care is to be taken that through wilfulneſs or negligence no ſhip be ſtranded, run upon rocks or ſands, or ſplit or hazarded; upon pain of death, or ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall deem the offence to deſerve.

27. No perſon ſhall ſleep upon his watch, or negligently perform his duty, or forſake his ſtation, upon pain of death, or ſuch puniſhment as, &c.

28. Murder,

29. And buggery or ſodomy, ſhall be puniſhed with death.

30. Robbery ſhall be puniſhed with death, or otherwiſe as a court martial ſhall find meet.

31. Every perſon knowingly making or ſigning, or commanding, counſelling, or procuring the making or ſigning, any falſe muſter, ſhall be caſhiered, and rendered incapable of further employment.

32. Provoſt martial refuſing to apprehend or receive any criminal, or ſuffering him to eſcape, ſhall ſuffer ſuch puniſhment as a court martial ſhall deem him to deſerve. And all others ſhall do their endeavours to detect and apprehend all offenders, upon pain of being puniſhed by a court martial.

33. If any flag officer, captain, commander or lieutenant, ſhall behave in a ſcandalous, infamous, cruel, oppreſſive or fraudulent manner, unbecoming his character, he ſhall be diſmiſſed.

34. Every perſon in actual ſervice and full pay, guilty of mutiny, deſertion, or diſobedience, in any part of his Majeſty's dominions on ſhore, when in actual ſervice relative to the fleet, ſhall be liable to be tried by a court martial, and ſuffer the like puniſhment as if the offence had been committed at ſea.

35. Every perſon in actual ſervice and full pay, committing upon ſhore, in any place out of his Majeſty's dominions, any crime puniſhable by theſe articles, ſhall be liable to be tried and puniſhed as if the crime had been committed at ſea.

36. All other crimes not capital, not mentioned in this act, ſhall be puniſhed according to the laws and cuſtoms uſed at ſea. No perſon to be impriſoned for longer than two years. Court martial not to try any offence (except the 5th, 34th, and 35th articles) not committed upon the main ſea, or in great rivers beneath the bridges, or in any haven, &c. within the juriſdiction of the admiralty, or by perſons in actual ſervice and full pay, except ſuch perſons and offences, as in 5th article; nor to try a land officer or ſoldier on board a tranſport ſhip. The Lord High Admiral, &c. may grant commiſſions to any officer commanding in chief any fleet, &c. to call courts martial, conſiſting of commanders and captains. And if the commander in chief ſhall die or be removed, the officer next in command may call courts martial. No commander in chief of a fleet, &c. of more than five ſhips, ſhall preſide at any court martial in foreign parts, but the officer next in command ſhall preſide. If a commander in chief ſhall detach any part of his fleet, &c. he may impower the chief commander of the detachment to hold courts martial during the ſeparate ſervice. If five or more ſhips ſhall meet in foreign parts, the ſenior officer may hold courts martial and preſide thereat. Where it is improper for the officer next to the commander in chief to hold or preſide at a court martial, the third officer in command may be impowered to preſide at or hold a court martial. No court martial ſhall conſiſt of more than thirteen, nor leſs than five, perſons. Where there ſhall not be leſs than three, and yet not ſo many as five of the degree of a Port Captain or ſuperior rank, the officer who is to preſide may call to his aſſiſtance as many commanders under the degree of a Port Captain, as, together with the Port Captains, ſhall make up the number five, to hold the court martial. After trial begun, no member of a court martial ſhall go on ſhore, until ſentence, except in caſe of ſickneſs, upon pain of being caſhiered. Proceedings ſhall not be delayed, if a ſufficient number remain to compoſe the court, which ſhall ſit from day to day (except Sunday) till ſentence be given.

The Judge Advocate, and all officers conſtituting a court martial, ſhall be upon oath. Perſons refuſing to give evidence may be impriſoned. Sentence of death within the Narrow Seas (except in caſe of mutiny) ſhall not be put in execution till a report be made to the Lord High Admiral, &c. Sentence of death beyond the Narrow Seas, ſhall not be put in execution but by order of the commander in chief of the fleet, &c. Sentence of death in any ſquadron, detached from the fleet, ſhall not be put in execution (except in caſe of mutiny) but by order of the commander of the fleet, or Lord High Admiral, &c. And ſentence of death paſſed in a court martial, held by the ſenior officer of five or more ſhips met in foreign parts (except in caſe of mutiny) ſhall not be put in execution but by order of the Lord High Admiral, &c.

The powers given by the ſaid articles ſhall remain in force with reſpect to crews of ſhips wrecked, loſt, or deſtroyed, until they be diſcharged or removed into another ſhip, or a court martial ſhall be held to inquire of the cauſes of the loſs of the ſhip. And if upon inquiry it ſhall appear, that all or any of the officers and ſeamen did their utmoſt to ſave the ſhip, and behaved obediently to their ſuperior officers, their pay ſhall go on: as alſo ſhall the pay of officers and ſeamen taken by the enemy, having done their beſt to defend the ſhip, and behaved obediently. If any officer ſhall receive any goods on board, contrary to the 18th article, he ſhall further forfeit the value of ſuch goods, or 500*l.* at the election of the informer;

Ne admittas, Is a writ directed to the biſhop for the plaintiff or defendant, where a quare impedit or aſſiſe of darrein preſentment is depending, when either party fears that the biſhop will admit the other's clerk during the ſuit between them: it ought to be brought within ſix kalendar months after the avoidance, before the biſhop may preſent by lapſe; for it is in vain to ſue out this writ when the title to preſent is devolved unto the biſhop. Reg. Orig. 31. F. N. B. 37. Writ of Ne admittas doth not lie, if the plea be not depending in the King's court by quare impedit, or darrein preſentment; therefore there is a writ in the regiſter directed to the Chief Juſtice of C. B. to certify the King in the Chancery, if there be any plea before him and the other judges between the parties, &c. So that the writ ſhould not be granted until that be done: But yet it may be had out of the Chancery before the King is certified that ſuch plea of quare impedit is depending; and then the party grieved may require the Chief Juſtice to certify, &c. New Nat. Br. 83, 84. The writ runs, prohibemus vobis, Ne admittas, &c.

Neat, or Net, Is the weight of a pure commodity alone, without the caſk, bag, droſs, &c. Merch. Dict.

Neceſſity. The law charges no man with default where the act is compulſory, and not voluntary, and where there is not a conſent and election; therefore if there be an impoſſibility for a man to do otherwiſe, or ſo great a perturbation of the judgment and reaſon, as in preſumption of law he cannot overcome, ſuch neceſſity carries a privilege in itſelf. Bac. Elem. 25.

Neceſſity is of three ſorts; neceſſity of conſervation of life, neceſſity of obedience, and neceſſity of the act of God or of a ſtranger.

And firſt of conſervation of life: If a man ſteal viands to ſatisfy his preſent hunger, this is no felony nor larceny. Ibid. Sed qu. If that is now conſidered as law? It is held to be law, Britton, c. 10. Mirr. c. 4. ſect. 16. But according to Black. 4 V. 31. it ſeems to be an unwarranted doctrine, borrowed from the notions of ſome civilians: at leaſt it is now antiquated, the law of England admitting of no ſuch excuſe at preſent. Cites 1 Hal. P. C. 54. Tho' on conviction under ſuch circumſtances, clearly proved, a merciful judge might be inclined to pardon the unhappy offender. But if ſuch neceſſity be owing to his unthriftineſs, ſurely it is far from being an excuſe. Hawk. Pl. C. 93. cap. 33. ſect. 20. So if divers be in danger of drowning by the caſting away of ſome boat or barge, and one of them get to ſome plank, or on the boat's ſide to keep himſelf above water, and another, to ſave his life, thruſts him from it, whereby he is drowned, this is neither ſe defendendo, nor by miſadventure, but juſtifiable. Ibid.—S. P. Hawk. Pl. C. 73. cap. 28. ſect. 26.

So if divers felons be in gaol, and the gaol by caſualty is ſet on fire, whereby the priſoners get forth, this is no eſcape nor breaking of priſon. Bac. Elem. 25.

So upon the ſtatute, that every merchant ſetting his merchandiſe on land without ſatisfying the cuſtomer or agreeing for it, (which agreement is conſtrued to be in certainty) ſhall forfeit his merchandiſe, and it is ſo that by tempeſt a great quantity of the merchandiſe is thrown over-board, whereby the merchant agrees with the cuſtomer by eſtimation, which falls out ſhort of the truth, yet the over quantity is not forfeited; where note, that neceſſity diſpenſes with the direct letter of a ſtatute-law. Ibid. & 26.

So if a man have right to land, and do not make his entry for terror of force, the law allows him a continual claim, which ſhall be as beneficial unto him as any entry.

The ſecond neceſſity is of obedience; therefore where baron and feme commit felony, the feme can neither be principal nor acceſſory, becauſe the law intends her to have no will, in regard of the ſubjection and obedience ſhe owes to her huſband.

So one reaſon among others, why ambaſſadors are excuſed of practices againſt the ſtate where they reſide (except it be in point of conſpiracy, which is againſt the law of nations and ſociety) is, becauſe non conſtat whether they have it in mandatis, and then they are excuſed by neceſſity of obedience. Ibid.

The third neceſſity is of the act of God, or of a ſtranger; as, if I be tenant for years of a houſe, and it be overthrown by tempeſt, or by floods, or invaſion of enemies, or if I have belonging to it ſome cottage which has been infected, whereby I can procure none to inhabit them, nor workmen to repair them, and ſo they fall down; in theſe caſes I am excuſed in waſte; but of this laſt learning, when and how the act of God and ſtrangers do excuſe, there are other particular rules. Bac. Elem. 26, 27.

Yet neceſſity is a privilege only quoad jura privata; for in all caſes if the act that ſhould deliver a man out of the neceſſity be againſt the commonwealth, neceſſity is no excuſe; for privilegium non valet contra rempublicam; and another ſays, neceſſitas publica major eſt quam privata; for death is the laſt point of particular neceſſity, and the law impoſes upon every ſubject, that he prefer the urgent ſervice of his prince and country, before the ſafety of his life; as if in danger of tempeſt thoſe who are in the ſhip throw over other men's goods, they are not anſwerable; but if a man be commanded to bring ordnance or munition to relieve any of the King's towns that are diſtreſſed, then he cannot for any danger or tempeſt juſtify throwing them over-board; for there it holds which was ſpoken by the Roman, when he alledged the ſame neceſſity of weather to hold him from embarking, neceſſe eſt ut eam, non ut vivam. So in the caſe put before of huſband and wife, if they join in commiting treaſon, the neceſſity of obedience does not excuſe the offence, as it does in felony; becauſe it is againſt the commonwealth. Bac. Elem. 27.

So if a fire happen in a ſtreet, I may juſtify pulling down the wall or houſe of another, to prevent the fire from ſpreading; but if I be aſſailed in my houſe in a city or town, and diſtreſſed, and to ſave my life I ſet fire to my houſe, which ſpreads and takes hold of other houſes adjoining, this is not juſtifiable, but I am ſubject to their action upon the caſe, becauſe I cannot reſcue my life by doing any thing which is againſt the commonwealth; but if it had been but a private treſpaſs, as the going over another's ground, or breaking his incloſure, when I am purſued, for the ſafeguard of my life, it is juſtifiable. Bac. Elem. 27, 28.

The common caſe proves this exception; that is, if a madman commit felony, he ſhall not loſe his life, becauſe his infirmity came by the act of God; but if a drunken man commit felony, he ſhall not be excuſed, becauſe his imperfection came by his own default; for the reaſon that loſs or deprivation of will, and election by neceſſity, and by infirmity, is all one, for the lack of arbitrium ſolutum is the matter; therefore as infirmitas culpabilis excuſes not, no more does neceſſitas culpabilis. Bac. Elem. 29. See Black. Com. 4 V. 27, 178.

Ne exeat Regno, Is a writ to reſtrain a perſon from going out of the kingdom without the King's licence. F. N. B. 85. It may be directed to the ſheriff to make the party find ſurety, that he will not depart the realm; and on his refuſal, to commit him to priſon: or it may be directed to the party himſelf; and if he then goes, he may be fined. 2 Inſt. 178. And this writ is granted on a ſuit being commenced in Chancery, when the plaintiff fears the defendant will fly to ſome other country, and thereby avoid the equity of the court; which hath been ſometimes practiſed: when thus granted, the party muſt give bond to the Maſter of the Rolls in the penalty of 1000*l.* or ſome other large ſum, for yielding obedience to it; or ſatisfy the court by anſwer, affidavit, or otherwiſe, that he hath no deſign of leaving the kingdom, and give ſecurity therefore. *Practiſ. And if a perſon beyond ſea refuſes to return to England on the King's letters under his Privy Seal, commanding him upon his allegiance to return; being certified into the Chancery, a commiſſion may be awarded to ſeize his lands and goods for the contempt: and ſo it is if ſuch perſon's ſervants hinder a meſſenger from delivering his meſſage, on affidavit of it, *&c. Negative, Is a propoſition by which ſomething is denied; alſo a particle of denial, as, not. An affirmative includes a negative; for every ſtatute limiting any thing to be done in one form, altho' it be ſpoke in the affirmative, includes a negative; as the ſtatute of Weſtm. cap. 4. of a quod ei deforceat is, that the demandant ſhall vouch ac ſi tenens eſſet in priori breve includes a negative, viz. and not otherwiſe Plow. 206. b. 207. a. Arg. Ubi plura, in caſe of Stradling v. Morgan.

A negative cannot be proved or teſtified by witneſſes, only an affirmative. 2 Inſt. 662. Tho' a negative is incapable of being proved directly; yet indirectly it is otherwiſe: for in caſe one accuſes B. to have been at York, and there had committed a certain fact, in proof of which he produces ſeveral witneſſes; here B. cannot prove that he was not at York. againſt poſitive evidence that he was; but ſhall be allowed to make out the negative by collateral teſtimony, that at that very time he was at Exeter, &c. in ſuch a houſe, and in ſuch company. Forteſcue 37.

Negative may be implied by an affirmative, but not neceſſarily e contra. As the ſaying, that a papiſt, unleſs he conforms, ſhall not take by deviſe, does not neceſſarily imply that if he does conform, he ſhall take by deviſe, &c. 2 Wms's Rep. 9. Paſch. 1722. in caſe of Hill. v. Felkin.

Where a truſt of a term for raiſing portions for daughters directs a particular method for raiſing them, it implies a negative, that they ſhall not be raiſed any other way. 2 Wms's Rep. 19. Paſch. 1722. in caſe of Ivy v. Gilbert & al'.

An affirmative oath was made to ground an attachment upon; if the perſon againſt whom the motion is, denies the charge by oath poſitively and fully, the negative oath ſhall be preferred; and this is the only caſe in which it ſhall be ſo. 8 Mod. 81. Trin. 8 Geo. The King v. Ackworth & al'.

Negative pregnant, (negativa pregnans) Is a negative, implying alſo an affirmative: As if a man being impleaded to have done a thing on ſuch a day, or in ſuch a place, denieth that he did it modo & forma declarata, which implieth nevertheleſs, that in ſome ſort he did it: or if a man be ſaid to have alienated land in fee, and he ſaith he hath not aliened in fee, that is a negative pregnant; for tho' he hath not aliened in fee, yet it may be, he hath made an eſtate in tail. Dyer 17 num. 95. and Brook hoc titulo, and Kitchen 232. and Terms of the Law.

We read alſo in ſome Civilians of affirmativa pregnans, and that is, quæ habet in ſe incluſivam, negativam, & hoc importare videntur dictiones (ſolum & tantum) quæ implicant negativam. Pacianus de Probationibus, lib. 1. cap. 31. num 16. fol. 93.

A negative pregnant is a fault in pleading; and there muſt be a ſpecial demurrer to a negative pregnant plea, &c. for the court will intend every pleading to be good, till the contrary doth appear. Mich. 23 Car. 1 *B. Negligence, Is where a perſon neglects or omits to do a thing which he is by law obliged to. And where one has goods of another to keep till ſuch a time, and hath a certain recompence or reward for the keeping, he ſhall ſtand charged for injury by negligence, &c. But if he hath nothing for keeping them, he is not bound to anſwer. Doct. & Stud. 269. A man who finds another's goods, if they are after hurt by wilful negligence, it is held he is chargeable to the owner; tho' it is otherwiſe when they are loſt by caſualty, as in caſe they are laid in a houſe that is accidentally burnt, or if he deliver them to another to keep, who runs away with them, &c. Ibid. It is held if an accountant be robbed, and it is without his default and negligence, he ſhall not be anſwerable for the money. 1 Inſt. 89. A right may be loſt by negligence; as where an action is not brought in the time appointed by the ſtatute of limitations, &c. 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. See 2 Williams's Rep. 665. Cowper v. Earl Cowper. Tot. 76. Kemp v. Palmer. Chanc. Rep. 10. Earl of Oxford's Caſe. Chan. Prec. 583. Ivey v. Gilbert.

Negro. By the laws of the plantations in general, Negro ſervants are ſaleable; and where a Negro is ſold here, in action indebitat. aſſumpſit for the money, the declaration ought to be, that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff for the Negro ſold here at London, but the ſaid Negro at the time of ſale was in Virginia, and that by the laws and ſtatutes of Virginia, Negroes are ſaleable as chattels. Per Holt, Ch. Juſt. 2 Salk. Rep. 666. In action of trover for a Negro, and verdict and damages for the plaintiff; it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that trover lay not for a Negro, for the owner had not an abſolute property in him: But the court ſeemed to think that in treſpaſs quare captivum ſuum cepit, the plaintiff might give in evidence that the party was his Negro, and he bought him. Ibid. See ſtat. 13 Geo. 1. c. 9. Moſt undoubtedly here in England, a man cannot have any property in his fellow creature. But probably an action may be maintained againſt any one who employs or harbours a Negro, after notice, declaring for the loſs of the ſervice of the ſervant not the ſlave.

Neif, (Fr. naif, i. e. naturalis, nativa) Was a bondwoman, or ſhe Villein, born in one's houſe, mentioned in the ſtat. 9 R. 2. c. 2. If a bond-woman married a free man, ſhe was thereby made free; and being once free, and diſcharged of bondage, ſhe could not be neif after, without ſome ſpecial act done by her, as by divorce, confeſſion in court, &c. And a free woman taking a villein to her huſband, was not thereby bond; but their iſſue were villeins as their father was; tho' this is contrary to the Civil law, which ſays, *partus ſequitur ventrem. Neiſty. There was an ancient writ called Writ of Neiſty, whereby the lord claimed ſuch a woman for his neif; now out of uſe.

Ne injuſte Vexes, A writ founded on Magna Charta, c. 10. that lies for a tenant diſtrained by his lord, for more ſervices than he ought to perform; and is a prohibition to the lord not to diſtrain or vex his tenant: In a ſpecial uſe, it is where the tenant hath prejudiced himſelf, by doing greater ſervices, or paying more rent, without conſtraint, than he needed; for in this caſe, by reaſon of the lord's ſeiſin, the tenant cannot avoid it by avowry, but is driven to his writ for remedy. Reg. Orig. 4. F. N. B. 10. And if the lord diſtrains to do other ſervices, or to pay other rent than due, after the prohibition delivered unto him, then the tenant ſhall have an attachment againſt the lord, &c. and when the lord cometh thereon, the tenant ſhall count againſt him, and put himſelf upon the grand aſſiſe, &c. whereupon judgment ſhall be given. *New Nat. This writ is always anceſtrel, where the tenant and his anceſtors have holden of the lord and his anceſtors; and the lord hath incroached any rent, &c. A feoffee ſhall not avoid ſeiſin of rent had by incroachment of his feoffor, nor have the writ Ne injuſte vexes; alſo a man ſhall not have a writ of Ne injuſte vexes againſt the grantee of the ſeigniory. Mich. 18 Ed. 2. 10 Ed. 3. New Aſſignment. In many actions the plaintiff, who hath alledged in his declaration a general wrong, may in his replication, after an evaſive plea by the defendant, reduce that general wrong to a more particular certainty, by aſſigning the injury afreſh with all its ſpecific circumſtances in ſuch manner as clearly to aſcertain and identify it, conſiſtently with his general complaint; which is called a new or novel aſſignment. *Black. Nihil capiat per Breve, or per Billam, Is the judgment given againſt the plaintiff in an action, either in bar of his action, or in abatement of his writ or bill, &c. Co. Lit. 363.

Nihil, or Nil debet, Is a common plea to an action of debt, when the money is paid: But it is no plea in covenant, or breach aſſigned for non-payment of rent, &c. 3 Lev. 170. If an action of debt be brought againſt a ſheriff or gaoler, for the eſcape of one in execution, the plaintiff muſt declare upon the judgment, and yet Nil debet per patriam is a good plea. 1 Saund. 38. It is entered thus: Et præd A. B. per, &c. Attorn. ſuum ven & defend. vim & injur. quando, &c. Et dicit quod ipſe Non debet præfat. A. B. vigint. libr. nec aliqu. denar. ſum. in forma prout præd. A. B. ſuperius verſ. eum narravit, &c.

Nihil, or Nil dicit, Is a failing by the defendant to put in an anſwer to the plaintiff's plea by the day aſſigned; which being omitted, judgment is had againſt him of courſe, as ſaying nothing, why it ſhould not.

Nihil, or Nil habuit in Tenementis, A plea to be pleaded in an action of debt only, brought by a leſſor againſt leſſee for years, or at will, without deed. 2 Lill. Abr. 214. In debt for rent upon an indenture of leaſe, Nil habuit in tenementis may not be pleaded; becauſe it is an eſtoppel, and a general demurrer will ſerve. 3 Lev. 146. But if debt is brought for rent upon a deed poll, the defendant may plead this plea: And where a defendant pleaded Nil habuit in tenmentis tempore dimiſſionis; the plaintiff replied, Quod habuit in tenementis, &c. and verdict and judgment was had for the plaintiff; whereupon writ of error being brought, it was aſſigned for error, that the replication was not good, for he ought to have ſhewn what eſtate he then had; and of that opinion was the court; and it had been bad upon demurrer, but being after a verdict, it is good. Cro. Jac. 312. If a leſs eſtate is found than the plaintiff pleads in his reply to a Nil habuit, &c. ſo as it be ſufficient to intitle the plaintiff to make a leaſe, it is good enough. 10 W. 3. Nil habuit in tenementis cannot be given in evidence where the plaintiff hath been in poſſeſſion. Ld. Raym. 746.

Nihils or Nichils, Are iſſues which the ſheriff that is appoſed in the Exchequer ſays, are nothing worth, and illeviable, for the inſufficiency of the parties from whom due, Practiſ. Exchеq. pag. 101. Accounts of Nihil ſhall be put out of the Exchequer. Stat. 5 R. 2. c. 13.

Niſi prius, Is a commiſſion to juſtices of Niſi prius; ſo called from a judicial writ of Diſtringas, whereby the ſheriff is commanded to diſtrain the impanelled jury to appear at Weſtminſter before the juſtices at a certain day in the following term, to try ſome cauſe, Niſi prius Juſtic' Domini Regis ad aſſiſes capiend. venerint, viz. unleſs the juſtices come before that day to ſuch a place, &c. 2 Inſt. 424. 4 Inſt. 159.

A writ of Niſi prius is where an iſſue is joined, then there goes a venire to ſummon the jury to appear at a day in court; and upon the return of the Venire, with the panel of the jurors names, the record of Niſi prius is made up and ſealed, and there goes forth the writ of Diſtringas to have the jurors in court, Niſi prius Juſtic' venerint, &c. ſuch a day in ſuch a county, to try the iſſue joined between the parties. 2 Lil. 215.

A record of Niſi prius ought to contain a tranſcript of the whole iſſue roll. Ibid. All civil cauſes at iſſue in the courts at Weſtminſter, are brought down in the two iſſuable Vacations before the day of appearance appointed for the jury above, into the county where the action was laid, to be tried there; viz. at the aſſizes; and then upon the return of the verdict given by the jury to the court above, the next term, the judges there give judgment for the party for whom the verdict is found: And theſe trials by Niſi prius are for the eaſe of the county, the parties, jurors, and witneſſes, by ſaving them the charge and trouble of coming to Weſtminſter; but in matters of great weight and difficulty, the judges above, upon motion, will retain cauſes to be tried there; though laid in the country, and then the juries and witneſſes in ſuch cauſes muſt come up to the courts at Weſtminſter for trial at bar: And the King hath his election to try his ſuits at the bar, or in the country, &c. Woods Inſt. 479.

The ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 30. having ordained, "that all pleas in either bench, which require only an eaſy examination, ſhall be determined in the country before juſtices of aſſiſe, by virtue of the writ appointed by that ſtatute, commonly called the writ of Niſi prius;" it has been held, that an iſſue joined in the King's Bench upon an indictment or appeal, whether for treaſon or felony, or a crime of an inferior nature, committed in a different county from that wherein the court ſits, may be tried in the proper county by writ of Niſi prius: But as the King is not expreſly named in this ſtatute; and it is a general rule, that he ſhall not be bound except named, it is ſaid where the King is party, a Niſi prius ought not to be granted, without his ſpecial warrant, or the aſſent of his attorney; though the court may grant it in appeals in the ſame manner as any other actions. 2 Inſt. 424. 4 Inſt. 160. Dyer 46. 2 Hawk. P. C. 411.

Juſtices of Niſi prius have power to record nonſuits and defaults in the country at the days aſſigned; and are to report them at the bench, &c. And are to hear and determine conſpiracy, confederacy, champerty, &c. by 4 Ed. 3. c. 11. 12 Ed. 3. c. 4. Niſi prius ſhall be granted in attaints; but that which cannot be determined before the juſtices upon the Niſi prius, ſhall be adjourned to the bench where they are juſtices: And the juſtices before whom inquiſitions, inqueſts, and juries, ſhall be taken by the King's writ of Niſi prius, are impowered to give judgment in felony and treaſon, &c. and to award execution by force of their judgment. Stat. 5 Ed. 3. c. 11. 14 Hen. 6. c. 1.

It was held by Hale, that the juſtices of Niſi prius have not any original power of determining felony, without ſpecial commiſſion for that purpoſe; and by virtue of the acts 27 Ed. 1. ſtat. 1. c. 3. and 14 H. 6. c. 1. they have authority to determine ſuch felonies only, as are ſent down to be tried before them; in which caſe, on removal of the indictments, they may proceed to trial and judgment as if juſtices of gaol-delivery. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 41.

The Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, Chief Juſtice of the Conmon Pleas, and Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and in their abſence two other of the judges, &c. as juſtices of Niſi prius for the county of Middleſex, ſhall try cauſes upon writs of Niſi prius on iſſues joined in B. R. and C. B. and the Exchequer, which were formerly only triable at bar, in the term time, or four days after each term. 18 Eliz. c. 12. And the time is enlarged to eight days after the end of any term; alſo any one judge or baron may try iſſues, &c. according to the ſtatute 18 Eliz. c. 12. in the abſence of the chiefs, and all ſheriffs, officers, parties and witneſſes, are required to give attendance, &c. by the 12 Geo. 1. c. 31. The time is enlarged to fourteen days after the end of any term, by ſtat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 18. The authority of juſtices of Niſi prius in the country, is annexed to the juſtices of aſſiſe: And the court above will take judicial notice of what is done at Niſi prius; being entered on record, 2 Hawk. 409.

Nobility, (Nobilitas) Signifies a nobleneſs of birth, generoſity or greatneſs of mind, excellence of virtue: According to Juvenal.

A nobleman is a perſon, who hath a certain eminency above the reſt; one who is known by the heroical virtues of his life. The nobility with us compriſeth all degrees of dignity above a baronet; and is derived from the King, who may grant it in fee, or for life, &c. See Peers of the realm. And *Black. Noble, An ancient kind of Engliſh money, in uſe in the reign of Ed. 3. And Knighton tells us, the Roſe Noble was a gold coin current in England about the year 1344. Noctanter, Is the name of a writ, iſſuing out of Chancery, returnable in the King's Bench, given by ſtatute Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 2. c. 46. By virtue of which ſtatute, where any one having right to approve waſte ground, &c. makes and erects a ditch or an hedge, and it is thrown down in the night time, and it cannot be known by a verdict of aſſiſe or a jury, by whom; or, if the neighbouring vills will not indict ſuch as are guilty, they ſhall be diſtrained to make again the hedge or ditch at their own coſts, and to anſwer damages. 2 Inſt. 476. And the Noctanter writ thereupon is directed to the ſheriff of the county, commanding him by the oath Proborum & legalium hominum com' prædict' inquirer, qui malefactores & pacis Dom. Regis perturbatores apud, &c. Sepes & Foſſata A. B. ibidem per ipſum nuper levat' Noctanter aut tali tempore quo facta eorum ſciri non credebant proſtraver, ad dampnum præd. A. B. & contra pacem Dom. Regis, &c. And on the return of this writ by the ſheriff, that the ſame is found by inquiſition, and the jury are ignorant who did it; the return being filed in the Crown-Office, there goes out a writ of inquiry of damages, and a diſtringas to the ſheriff to diſtrain propinquas villatas ſepes & fenſuras præd' circumadjacentes ſepes, &c. proſtrat. levare ad cuſtos ſuos proprios, and alſo to reſtore the damages, &c.

The circumadjacent vills intended by the ſtatute, are the contiguous vills round the place; and if they are not contiguous, they are not guilty, and may plead ſo: And when other vills near of as great value, by favour or negligence of the ſheriff are not ſummoned, &c. they may plead as tenants do, where all are not ſummoned. As to the pleadings to this writ, where more damages are found than there ought to be; the defendants may by proteſtation deny the fact, or confeſs and aver that the damages were but ſmall; and traverſe that the party ſuſtinuit damna to the ſum found, or any other ſum beyond what they admit; or may plead Not guilty, and in their defence any matter which will be a bar to the proſecutor, but ſatisfaction. 2 Lil. Abr. 217.

Here if the vills repair, damages ought not to be given to the value of the repairs; and if the vills which are liable thereto, have repaired, it ought ſo far to help them in the trial of the quantum damnificatus, that the other damages ought only to be conſidered. Ibid. The charges of the defence for the ſeveral vills muſt be raiſed by agreement; and if they cannot agree, each vill is to bear their own charges, as in caſe of a ſuit againſt a hundred, till execution; and then the ſtatute of 27 Eliz. c. 13. hath provided a remedy.

The writ of Noctanter, by the better opinion, lies for the proſtration as well of all encloſures as thoſe improved out of Commons; but if it be not in the night, this writ will not lie: And there ought to be a convenient time (which the court is to judge of) before the writ is brought, for the country to enquire of, and indict the offenders: which Sir Edw. Coke ſays ſhould be a year and a day. 2 Inſt. 476. Cro. Car. 440. 1 Keb. 545. And if any one of the offenders be indicted, the defendants muſt plead it, &c.

The word Noctanter is ſo neceſſary in an indictment of burglary, that it hath been adjudged inſufficient without it. Cro. Eliz. 483.

Noctes & Noctem de Firma. In the book of Domeſday we often meet with Tot noctes de firma, or firma tot noctium; which is underſtood of entertainment of meat and drink for ſo many nights: For in the time of the Engliſh Saxons, time was computed not by days, but nights; and ſo it continued till the reign of King Hen. 1. as appears by his laws, cap. 66, 76. And from hence it is ſtill uſual to ſay a Sevennight, i. e. Septem noctus, for a week; and a Fortnight for two weeks, i. e. quatuordecim noctes.

Nodfyrs or Nedfri, (Sax.) The learned Spelman ſays is derived from the old Saxon neod, obſequium & fry, ignis, and ſignified fires made in honour of the Heathen Deities. But by others it is ſaid to come from the Saxon neb, that is neceſſary; and was uſed for the neceſſary fire.

Nolle proſequi, Is uſed in the law, where a plaintiff in any action will proceed no further, and may be before or after verdict; though it is uſually before: And it is then ſtronger againſt the plaintiff than a nonſuit, which is only a default in appearance; but this is a voluntary acknowledgment, that he hath no cauſe of action. 2 Lil. 218. A plaintiff comes by his attorney hic in curia & fatetur ſe ulterius nolle proſequi; whereupon judgment was given, That the defendant eat ſine die, and no amercement upon the plaintiff: This was held erroneous; for the plaintiff ought alſo to be amerced. 8 Rep. 58.

Where there are two defendants, and one pleads Not guilty, and the other another plea; if on demurrer there is judgment for the plaintiff againſt one on the demurrer, and a nolle proſequi for the other, there it ought to be eat ſine die, or it is ill, and the entry of Quod eat ſine die is a diſcharge to the defendant. Cro. Jac. 439. Hob. 180.

In treſpaſs againſt two, one pleaded Not guilty, the other juſtified; and both iſſues being found for the plaintiff, and ſeveral damages and joint coſts aſſeſſed; the plaintiff then entered a nolle proſequi againſt one, and took judgment againſt the other for damages found againſt him, and the coſts; upon which it was inſiſted on for error, that the entry of a nolle proſequi before judgment as to one, is a releaſe to him, and quaſi a releaſe to both: Per Cur', it is not an abſolute releaſe, but as it were an agreement that the plaintiff will not proceed againſt the one; and as to him it is a bar, but he may proceed againſt the other; and where they ſever by pleas, there may be proceedings againſt one, and a nolle proſequi againſt the other. Cro. Car. 239, 243. 2 Lil. 220. It has been held, in treſpaſs againſt three defendants; If a nolle proſequi were entered againſt two, before judgment againſt any of them, it had not amounted to a releaſe to them all; only to a waiver of ſuit: And the three defendants cannot join in a writ of error; for thoſe againſt whom the nolle proſequi is entered, are not damnified. Jenk. Cent. 309.

A nolle proſequi does not amount to a retraxit or releaſe, where there are more defendants. Ld. Raym. 599.

If there are divers iſſues, or an iſſue and demurrer in one cauſe, againſt one perſon, joined between the parties, the plaintiff may enter on the roll a nolle proſequi, that he will not proceed on one or more of the iſſues, or demurrer joined; and may notwithſtanding go to trial upon the reſt of the iſſues, or argue the demurrer. Hil. 23 Car. B. R.

The King may enter a nolle proſequi on an information; but it ſhall not ſtop the proceedings of the informer. 1 Leon. 119. And if an informer cauſe a nolle proſequi to be entered, the defendant ſhall have coſts, &c. by ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. Keble mentions a nolle proſequi on retraxit by attorney. 3 Keb. 332. Alſo the King may, by his Attorney General, enter a nolle proſequi on an indictment.

But the clerk of the Crown cannot enter a nolle proſequi on an indictment, without leave of the Attorney General. Ld. Raym. 721.

Nomenclator, One who opens the etymologies of names, interpreted Theſaurarius by the learned Spelman. Cowell.

Nomination, (nominatio) Is the power (by virtue of ſome manor or otherwiſe) of appointing a clerk to a patron of a benefice, by him to be preſented to the ordinary. The right of nomination a man may have by deed; and in ſuch caſe, if the patron refuſe to preſent the nominee, or preſents another, he may bring a quare impedit; for he who is to preſent, is only an inſtrument to him who nominates; and the perſon who hath the nomination is in effect the patron of the church. Plowd. 529. Moor 47. A nominator muſt appoint his clerk within ſix months after avoidance; if he doth not, and the patron preſents his clerk before the biſhop hath taken any benefit of the lapſe, he is obliged to admit that clerk: But where one hath the nomination, and another the preſentation, if the right of preſentation ſhould afterwards come to the King, it is ſaid he who hath the nomination will be intitled to the preſentation alſo; becauſe the King who ſhould preſent cannot be ſubſervant to the nominator, being contrary to his dignity. Hugh's Parſ. Law 76, 77. Right of nomination may be forfeited to the crown as well as preſentation; where the nominator corruptly agrees to nominate within the ſtatute of Simony, &c.

Nomina Villarum. Edw. 2. ſent his letters to every ſheriff in England, requiring an exact account and return into the Exchequer of the names of all the villages, and poſſeſſors thereof in every county, which being done accordingly, the returns of the ſheriffs all joined together are called Nomina Villarum, ſtill remaining in the Exchequer. Anno 9 Ed. 2.

Nomine Pœnæ, A penalty incurred for not paying rent, &c. at the day appointed by the leaſe or agreement for payment thereof. 2 Lil 221. If rent is reſerved, and there is a nomine pœnæ on the non-payment of it, and the rent be behind and unpaid, there muſt be an actual demand thereof made, before the grantee of the rent can diſtrain for it; the nomine pœnæ being of the ſame nature as the rent, and iſſuing out of the land out of which the rent doth iſſue. Hob. 82, 133. And where a rent-charge was granted for years, with a nomine pœnæ and clauſe of diſtreſs, if it was not paid on the day; on the rent's being behind, and the term expired, the court was moved that the grantee might diſtrain for the nomine pœnæ; but it was held that he could not, becauſe the nomine pœnæ depended on the rent and the diſtreſs was gone for that, and by conſequence for the other. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1182. See ſtat. 8 Ann. c. 17.

When any ſum nomine pœnæ is to be forfeited for non-payment of the rent at the time, &c. the demand of the rent ought to be preciſely at the day, in reſpect of the penalty: And debt will not lie on a nomine pœnæ, without a demand. 7 Rep. 28. Cro. Eliz. 383. Style 4. If there is a nomine pœnæ, of ſuch a ſum for every day after rent becomes due, it has been a queſtion whether there muſt be a demand for every day's nomine pœnæ, or one demand for many days: And by the better opinion it hath been holden, that for every day there ought to be a demand; and that one will not be ſufficient for the whole: But where a nomine pœnæ of forty ſhillings was limited quolibet die proximo the feaſt-day on which the rent ought to be paid, it was adjudged, that there was but one forty ſhillings forfeited, becauſe the word proximo muſt relate to the very next day following the rent day; ſo likewiſe when the rent became due and unpaid at the next rent day after that, and ſo on. Palm. 207. 2 Nelſ. 1182. An aſſignee is chargeable with a nomine pœnæ incurred after the aſſignment, but not before. Moor 357. 2 Lil. Abr. 221. Though forfeiture is mentioned to be nomine pœnæ, or not paying of a collateral ſum; it is no nomine pœnæ, if it be not of a rent. Lutw. 1156.

Non-ability, Is an exception taken againſt the plaintiff in a cauſe, upon ſome juſt ground, why he cannot commence any ſuit in law; as præmunire, outlawry, excommunication, &c. F. N. B. 35, 65. Vide Diſability.

Nonæ & Decimæ, Payments made to the church by thoſe who were tenants of church farms; where nonæ was a rent or duty for things belonging to huſbandry, and decimæ were claimed in right of the church. Formerly a ninth part of moveable goods was paid to the clergy on the death of perſons in their pariſh, which was called nonagium; and claimed on pretence of being diſtributed to pious uſes. Blount.

Non-age, In general underſtanding is all the time of a perſon's being under the age of one and twenty; and in a ſpecial ſenſe, where one is under fourteen, as to marriage, &c.

Non Aſſumpſit, A plea in perſonal actions, whereby a man denies any promiſe made, &c. See Aſſumpſit.

Non Aſſumpſit infra ſex Annos. Where a defendant by virtue of the ſtatute of limitations, 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. pleads that he did not undertake or promiſe within ſix years before the commencement of the action: As a plea of Non accrevit infra ſex annos is pleaded by virtue of the ſame ſtatute. This laſt plea is proper where the cauſe of action does not accrue, at the time of the promiſe made, as in the caſe of a note, payable at ſome time ſpecified, but ſubſequent to the date.

N. B. The commencement of the action is the actual taking out of the plaintiff's writ. And the computation is to be up to that day, though in vacation, and not to the teſte of the writ.

Non-claim, Is an omiſſion or neglect of one that claims not within the time limited by law, as within a year and a day, where continual claim ought to be made; or in five years after a fine levied, &c. By which a man may be barred of his right of entry. Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 24. 32 H. 8. c. 33. See Claim.

Non compos mentis, Is where a perſon is not of ſound mind, memory, and underſtanding. And there are four ſorts of Non compos mentis.

1*ſt*, An ideot, or natural fool.

2*dly*, A madman, or one who was of ſane memory, but hath loſt his underſtanding by ſickneſs, accident, or misfortune.

3*dly*, A lunatic, ſometimes of ſane memory, at other times not ſo.

4*thly*. A drunkard who deprives himſelf of his memory and underſtanding for a time. But though a drunken perſon is Non compos mentis, it ſhall give no privilege or benefit to him, as to acts done, &c. And his drunkenneſs ſhall not extenuate, but rather aggravate his offence, as well touching his life as his lands or goods. 1 Inſt. 264. 4 Rep. 125.

A deed of feoffment, grant, &c. made by a perſon Non compos mentis is voidable; his heir, as privy in blood, may ſhew the diſability of his anceſtor, and avoid his grants; and his executors, &c. as privies in repreſentation may do the ſame, by ſetting forth the infirmity of the teſtator or inteſtate. 4 Rep. 126. Where a perſon of ſane memory becomes Non compos mentis, and afterwards aliens his lands or goods; if he be found Non compos, and that he had aliened, the King may protect him, and take the profits of his lands, &c. to maintain him and his family. 4 Rep. 127. And he who hath the cuſtody of a man of Non ſane memory is accountable as bailiff to the Non compos, his executors or adminiſtrators. Ibid. A man Non compos mentis ſhall not loſe his life for felony or murder, for he cannot be guilty of either. 3 Rep. 124. 3 Inſt. 5, 54. Though if one who wants diſcretion or underſtanding, does any corporal hurt to, or treſpaſs againſt another; he may be compelled by action to render damages. 35 H. 6. 1 Inſt. 247. 1 Hawk. P. C. 2. Vide Ideot, Lunatic.

Non-conformiſts. The ſtatutes 1 Eliz. c. 1. and 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 4. were made for the uniformity of Common Prayer, and ſervice in the church; and perſons not conforming thereto are ſubject to penalties. Stat. 10 Ann. c. 2. Non-conformiſts to be puniſhed by impriſonment, and to ſubmit in three months, or abjure the realm. 35 Eliz. c. 1. Keeping a Non-conformiſt in the houſe after notice, ſubject to the penalty of ten pounds a month. 35 Eliz. c. 1. Penalties on being at conventicles. 16 Car. 2. c. 4. 22 Car. 2. c. 1. Non-conformiſt formiſt miniſters prohibited to come within five miles of a corporate town, &c. 17 Car. 2. c. 2. prohibited to teach ſchool. Ib. 12 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 7.

The penal laws not to extend to Proteſtant diſſenters, Proteſtant diſſenting miniſters freed from pariſh-offices, and ſerving upon juries. 1 W. & M. c. 18. Penalty on diſturbing their worſhip. Ib. Diſſenters permitted to qualify according to the toleration act, pending a proſecution. 10 Ann. c. 2. Toleration of the epiſcopal communion in Scotland. 10 Ann. c. 7. Penalty on magiſtrates being at conventicles in their habits. 5 G. 1. c. 4. Epiſcopal meeting houſes in Scotland, to be regiſtered. 19 Geo. 2. c. 38. Penalty on unqualified miniſters officiating in Scotland. Ib. Epiſcopal miniſters in Scotland, to be ordained by a biſhop of England or Ireland. Ib. 21 Geo. 2. c. 33. Peers and others preſent at unlawful meeting houſes in Scotland diſqualified from voting. 19 Geo. 2. c. 38. A form of affirmation to be taken inſtead of an oath by the members of the Unitas fratrum. 22 Geo. 2. c. 30. Privileges granted to the members of the Unitas fratrum, who ſhall ſettle in America. Ib.

Non Culpabilis, A plea of Not guilty to any action of treſpaſs, or tort, or to an Indictment, &c. See Non eſt culpabilis.

Non damnificatus, Is a plea to an action of debt upon a bond, with condition to ſave the plaintiff harmleſs. 2 Lil. Abr. 224. If the condition of a bond be to ſave harmleſs only, Non damnificatus generally is a good plea; but if it be to diſcharge the plaintiff, &c. then the manner of the diſcharge is to be ſhewn. 1 Leon. 72. When one pleads a diſcharge, and that he ſaved another harmleſs, he ought to ſhew how he did it, that the court may judge thereof: Though a defendant may plead Non damnificatus, without ſhewing it: becauſe he pleads in the negative, and then the other party ſhall ſhew damnification. Cro. Jac. 363. 2 Rep. 3, 4. March 121. It has been adjudged, where a condition of a bond is to ſave harmleſs from all ſuits in general, Non damnificatus may be pleaded; and if it is in a particular ſuit or thing, there the defendant muſt ſet forth how he hath ſaved harmleſs and diſcharged; but where a ſuit is upon a counter-bond, the plea of Non damnificatus is good. 8 W. 3. B. R. 5 Mod. 243.

Non Decimando. A cuſtom or preſcription: De Non decimando is to be diſcharged of all tithes, &c. See Modus Decimandi.

Non Diſtringendo, A writ not to diſtrain, uſed in divers caſes. Table of Reg. of Writs.

Nones, (nonæ) of every month is, the ſeventh day of March, May, July, and October; and the fifth day of all the other months. By the Roman account the nones in the aforementioned months are the ſix days next following the firſt day, or the calends; and of others the four days next after the firſt, according to theſe verſes,

> Sex Nonas Majus, October, Julius & Mars,
> Quatuor at reliqui, &c.

Though the laſt of theſe days is properly called Nones; for the others are reckoned backwards as diſtant from them, and accounted the third, fourth, or fifth nones, &c. And nones had their name from their beginning the ninth day before the ides. See Ides.

Non eſt Culpabilis, Or Non Cul. is the general plea to an action of treſpaſs, whereby the defendant abſolutely denies the fact charged on him by the plaintiff: Whereas in other ſpecial pleas, the defendant admits the fact to be done, but alledges ſome reaſons why he lawfully might do it. And as the plea of Non Culp. is the general anſwer in actions of treſpaſs, being actions criminal, civilly proſecuted; ſo it is likewiſe in all actions criminally followed, either at the ſuit of the King or any other, where the defendant denies the crime for which he is brought to trial. S. P. C. lib. 2. c. 63.

Non eſt Factum, A plea where an action is brought upon a bond, or any other deed, and the defendant denieth that to be his deed whereon he is impleaded. Broke. In every caſe where a bond is void, the defendant may plead Non eſt factum: But when a bond is voidable only, he muſt ſhew the ſpecial matter, and conclude judgment Si actio, &c. 2 Lil. 226

This plea is good in all caſes where the bond or ſpecialty was not executed.

Or, if it was executed, but was void ab initio: As, for default of capacity; if the obligor was a Monk, feme covert, &c. he may plead a ſpecial Non eſt factum.

It ought to conclude to the country; but if the plaintiff pleads over to the ſpecial matter, it will be well. 1 Salk. 274.

A ſpecial Non eſt factum puts the proof upon the defendants, which, upon Non eſt factum generally, will be upon the plaintiff. Mod. Caſ. 218.

If a deed is raſed in a material part, by which it becomes void, the perſon bound by it may plead Non eſt factum, and give the matter in evidence, becauſe it was not his deed at the time of the plea. 11 Rep. 27.

A bond was dated November the 10th, and ſo ſet forth in the plaintiff's declaration; the defendant pleaded Non eſt factum, and though it was found that it was not delivered till the eighteenth, the iſſue being upon a Non eſt factum, it appeared to be his deed: But it is ſaid the defendant might have helped himſelf by pleading ſpecially. Cro. Jac. 126.

The defendant pleads Quod factum prædict. was made and delivered without a date, and that the plaintiff put a date to it, and ſo Non eſt factum; this was held naught upon a demurrer, for the defendant confeſſes the deed, by ſaying factum prædict. and afterwards denies it; tho' he might have ſaid generally, Non eſt factum. Cro Eliz. 800. Where two are jointly bound in a bond, and an action is brought on it againſt one only, he cannot plead Non eſt factum, or demur in that caſe; but may have his plea in abatement of the writ. 5 Rep. 119. None but the party, his heirs, executors, &c. can plead Non eſt factum, Lutw. 662. For a ſtranger to the deed cannot plead a ſpecial Non eſt factum; but muſt ſay Nothing paſſed by the deed. 1 Rol. 188. See Com. Dig. 5 V. 222, 223.

Non eſt Inventus, The ſheriff's return to a writ, when the defendant is Not to be found in his Bailiwick. And there is a return that the plaintiff Non invenit plegium, on original writs. Shep. Epit. 1129.

Nonfeaſance. An offence of omiſſion of what ought to be done; as in not coming to church, &c. which need not be alledged in any certain place; for generally ſpeaking it is not committed any where: But nonfeaſance will not make a man a treſpaſſer, &c. 1 Hawk. 13. Hob. 251. 8 Rep. 146.

Non implacitando aliquem de Libero Tenemento ſine Brevi, A writ to prohibit bailiffs, &c. from diſtraining or impleading any man touching his freehold, without the King's writ. Reg. Orig. 171.

Non intromittendo, quando Breve Præcipe in Capite ſubdole impetratur, Was a writ directed to the juſtices of the Bench, or in Eyre, commanding them not to give one, who had, under colour of intitling the King to land, &c. as holding of him in capite, deceitfully obtained the writ called Præcipe in Capite, any benefit thereof, but to put him to his writ of right. Reg. Orig. 4. This writ having dependance on the court of Wards, ſince taken away, is now diſuſed.

Nonjurors, Are perſons who refuſe to take the oaths to government, who are liable to certain penalties; and for a third offence to abjure the realm, by 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 1. Parſons, vicars, &c. are to take the oaths. and give their aſſent to the declaration, 14 Car. 2. c. 4. or they ſhall not preach, under the penalty of forty pounds, &c. Stat. 17 Car. 2. c. 2. Eccleſiaſtical perſons not taking the oaths on the revolution, were rendered incapable to hold their livings: but the King was impowered to grant ſuch of the nonjuring clergy as he thought fit, not above twelve, an allowance out of their eccleſiaſtical benefices for their ſubſiſtence, not exceeding a third part. 1 W. & M. ſeſſ. 1. c. 8. Perſons refuſing the oaths, ſhall incur, forfeit, and ſuffer the penalties inflicted on Popiſh recuſants, and the court of Exchequer may iſſue out proceſs againſt their lands, &c. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 27. See the ſtat. 1 Geo. 1. c. 55. and Oaths.

Non Merchandizando viſtualia, Is a writ to juſtices of aſſiſe, to inquire whether the magiſtrates of ſuch a town do ſell victuals in groſs, or by retail; during the time of their being in office, which is contrary to an ancient ſtatute; and to puniſh them if they do. Reg. Orig. 184.

Non Moleſtando, A writ that lies for a perſon who is moleſted contrary to the King's protection granted him. Reg. of Writs 184.

Non obſtante, (Notwithſtanding) Is a clauſe frequent in ſtatutes and letters patent, and is a licence from the King to do a thing which at the Common law might be lawfully done; but being reſtrained by act of parliament, cannot be done without ſuch licence, Vaugh. 347. Plowd. 501.

The doctrine of non obſtante's, which ſets the prerogative above the laws, was effectually demoliſhed by the bill of rights at the revolution, and abdicated at Weſtminſter-hall when King James abdicated the kingdom. Black. Com. 1 V. 342.

The ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 2. confirmed all grants of the Queen by letters patent, of any honours, caſtles, manors, lands, tenements, &c. and that they ſhould ſtand and be good in law againſt the Queen, her heirs and ſucceſſors, Non obſtante any miſ-naming, miſ-recital, want of certainty, finding offices or inquiſitions, livery of ſeiſin, &c. By 14 Car. 2. c. 11. it was declared, that all grants of penſions, &c. and every Non obſtante therein contained, ſhould be void. And the 1 W. & M. c. 2. makes diſpenſations, Non obſtante to ſtatutes, void; unleſs allowed therein. See Diſpenſations and Grants of the King. And Black. Com. 1 V. 342. 2 V. 273. 4 V. 394.

Non omittas, Is a writ directed to the ſheriff, where the bailiff of a liberty or franchiſe who hath the return of writs refuſes or neglects to ſerve a proceſs, for the ſheriff to enter into the franchiſe and execute the King's proceſs himſelf, or by his officer: Before this writ is granted, the ſheriff ought to return, that he hath ſent to the bailiff, and that he hath not ſerved the writ; but for diſpatch, the uſual practice is to ſend a Non omittas with a capias or latitat. F.N.B. 68, 74. 2 Inſt. 453. If a ſheriff return that he ſent the proceſs to the bailiff of a liberty, who hath given him no anſwer; a Non omittas ſhall be awarded to the ſheriff: And if he returns that he ſent the proceſs to ſuch bailiff, who hath returned a cepi corpus, or ſuch like matter; and the bailiff bring not in the body, or money, &c. at the day, the bailiff ſhall be amerced, and a writ iſſue to the ſheriff to diſtrain the bailiff to bring in the body. 2 Hawk. 143.

Writs of capias utlagatum, and of Quo minus out of the Exchequer, and it is ſaid all writs whatſoever at the King's ſuit, are of the ſame effect as a Non omittas; and the ſheriff may by virtue of them enter into a liberty and execute them. 2 Lil. Abr. 229. The Reg. of Writs mentions three ſorts of this writ, given to prevent liberties being privileged to hinder or delay the general execution of juſtice: and the clauſe of the non omittas is, quod non omittas, propter aliquam libertatem (viz. of the liberty to which the ſheriff hath made a mandavi ballivo, qui nullum dedit reſponſum) quin in eam ingrediaris & capias A. B. Si, &c.

Non plevin, (non plevina) Is defined to be defalta poſt defaltam; and in Hengham Magna, cap. 8. it is ſaid, that the defendant is to replevy his lands ſeized by the King within fifteen days; and if he neglects, then, at the inſtance of the plaintiff at the next court day, he ſhall loſe his ſeiſin, ſicut per defaltam poſt defaltam: but by ſtatute it was enacted, that none ſhould loſe his land, becauſe of non-plevin, i. e. where the land was not replevied in due time. 9 Ed. 3. c. 2.

Non ponendis in Aſſiſis & Juratis, Is a writ granted for freeing and diſcharging perſons from ſerving on aſſiſes and juries; and when one hath a charter of exemption, he may ſue the ſheriff for returning him. This writ is founded on the Stat. of Weſtm. 2. c. 38. And the Stat. Articuli ſuper Chartas, cap. 9. F. N. B. 165. 2 Inſt. 127, 447.

Non procedendo ad Aſſiſam Rege inconſulto, A writ to ſtop the trial of a cauſe appertaining to one who is in the King's ſervice, &c. until the King's pleaſure be farther known. Reg. Orig 220.

Non Pros, or Non Proſequitur. If a plaintiff in an action, doth not declare againſt the defendant within reaſonable time, a rule may be entered againſt him by the defendant's attorney to declare; and thereupon a non proſ. &c. Practiſ. Solic. 222. And a plaintiff may enter a non proſ. againſt one defendant, where there are two who ſever in their pleas, before the record of the cauſe is ſent down by a Niſi prius to be tried at the aſſiſes: but it is ſaid there cannot be a non proſ. on a trial at the aſſiſes. 3 Salk. 246. Though in action againſt ſeveral defendants, it has been ruled otherwiſe. 2 Salk. 456. Non pros's have been frequent on informations; but never upon indictments, till the reign of Charles II. Ibid. See Nolle Proſequi, and Nonſuit.

Non-Reſidence, Is applied to thoſe ſpiritual perſons who are not reſident, but wilfully abſent themſelves for the ſpace of one month together, or two months at ſeveral times in one year, from their dignities or benefices, which is liable to penalties, by the ſtatute againſt non reſidence. 21 H. 8. c. 13. But chaplains to the King, or other great perſons, mentioned in this ſtatute, and the 25 H. 8. c. 16. may be non-reſident on their livings; for they are excuſed from reſidence whilſt they attend thoſe who retain them: and biſhops are not puniſhable by ſtatute for non-reſidency; but if a biſhop hold a deanery, parſonage, &c. in commendam with his biſhopwrick, he is puniſhable by 21 H. 8. c. 13. for non-reſidence on the ſame. Alſo where biſhops are non-reſident on their biſhopricks, they are liable to eccleſiaſtical cenſure; and the King may iſſue a mandatory writ for their attendance thereon, and compel them to it by ſeizing their temporalties, a remarkable precedent whereof we have in the caſe of the biſhop of Hereford, in the reign of Hen. III. 2 Inſt. 625. See Reſidence.

Non Reſidentia pro Clericis Regis, Is a writ directed to the biſhop, charging him not to moleſt a clerk, employed in the King's ſervice, by reaſon of his nonreſidence; in which caſe he is to be diſcharged. Reg. Orig. 58.

Non ſane Memory, (Non ſanæ Memoriæ) Is uſed in law for an exception to an act, declared to be done by another, whereon the plaintiff in any action grounds his plaint; and the effect of it is, that the party who did that act, was not well in his ſenſes when he did it, or when he made his laſt will and teſtament. New Book Entries. And ſane memory for the making of a will is not always where the teſtator can anſwer Yes or no, or in ſome things with ſenſe; but he ought to have judgment to diſcern, and be of perfect memory, or the will ſhall be void. Moor, c. 1051. See Non compos Mentis.

Nonſenſe. Where a matter ſet forth is grammatically right, but abſurd in the ſenſe and unintelligible, ſome words cannot be rejected to make ſenſe of the reſt, but muſt be taken as they are; for there is nothing ſo abſurd but what by rejecting may be made ſenſe; but where a matter is nonſenſe by being contradictory and repugnant to ſomewhat precedent, there the precedent matter which is ſenſe ſhall not be defeated by the repugnancy which follows, but that which is contradictory ſhall be rejected; as in ejectment where the declaration is of a demiſe the 2d of January, and that the defendant poſtea, ſcilicet the 1ſt of January, ejected him; here the ſcilicet may be rejected as being expreſly contrary to the poſtea, and the precedent matter; per Holt Ch. J. 1 Salk. 324. Trin. 2 Ann. B. R. Wyat v. Aland.——But per Powell J. Words unneceſſary might in conſtruction be omitted or rejected, though they are not repugnant or contradictory, but in cæteris omnibus agreed with the Ch. J. Ibid. See Miſtake.

Non ſolvendo pecuniam, ad quam clericus mulctatur pro non reſidentia, Is a writ prohibiting an ordinary to take a pecuniary mulct, impoſed upon a clerk of the King's for non-reſidence. Reg. of Writs, fol. 59.

Non-ſuit, (non eſt proſecutus, &c.) Is a renunciation of the ſuit by the plaintiff or demandant, moſt commonly, upon the diſcovery of ſome error or defect, when the matter is ſo far proceeded in, as the jury is ready at the bar to deliver their verdict. The Civilians term it Litis renunciationem. Cowell.

Where plaintiff is demanded and doth not appear, he is ſaid to be nonſuit; this uſually happens, where upon trial, and when the jury are ready to give their verdict, the plaintiff diſcovers ſome error or defect in the proceedings, or is unable to prove a material point, &c. and thereupon the plaintiff may be demanded, (as he muſt be) his default is recorded, and the entry is in miſericordia quia non proſecutus eſt breve ſuum; upon which defendant recovers his coſts againſt him; but this ariſing from ſome ſuppoſed neglect or overſight, the plaintiff, except in ſome particular caſes, is not barred from commencing a new action. For the form of the entry, ſee Cro. Jac. 213. 2 Leon. 177. 4 Mod. 86. 2 Salk. 456.

Where a plaintiff is nonſuit, if he will again proceed he muſt commence a new action.

1. Who may be nonſuit; in what action, and at what time there may be a nonſuit.

2. How far the nonſuit of one, ſhall be the nonſuit of another; and how far a nonſuit for part of the thing in demand ſhall be a nonſuit for the whole.

3. Of the effect of a nonſuit; and of its being a temporary bar.

1. Who may be nonſuit; in what actions, and at what time there may be a nonſuit.

It is agreed, that the King being in ſuppoſition of law always preſent in court, cannot be nonſuit in any information or action wherein he is ſole plaintiff; but it is held, that any informer qui tam, or plaintiff in a popular action, may be nonſuit, as well in reſpect of the King as of himſelf. Bro. Nonſuit 68. Co. Lit. 139. b. 2 Roll. Abr. 131.

If an infant bring an aſſiſe by guardian, altho' the infant diſavow the ſuit in proper perſon, yet no nonſuit ſhall be awarded. 39 Aſſ. pl. 1. 2 Roll. Abr. 130. S. C.

Where an executor need not name himſelf executor, he ſhall pay coſts upon a nonſuit, and the naming himſelf executor ſhall not exempt him from it. 6 Mod. 181.

If an attorney of the Common Pleas ſues an action there, he ſhall not be demanded, becauſe he is ſuppoſed always preſent aiding the court. 2 H. 6. 44. b. 1 Roll. Abr. 581. S. C. Sed qu. as to this doctrine? In many caſes it is the intereſt of the plaintiff to be nonſuit, inſtead of having a verdict againſt him, as he may bring a new action, wherein, if properly adviſed, and purſued, he may recover.

A perſon may be nonſuit in a writ of error. 2 Roll. Abr. 130. 1 Sid. 255. S. P.

A perſon may be nonſuit in a writ of falſe judgment. 20 H. 6. 18. b. 2 Roll. Abr. 130. S. C.

One cannot be nonſuit in an action in which he is not an actor or demandant; and tho' he afterwards becomes an actor, yet not being originally ſo, he cannot be nonſuit as an avowant; ſo of garniſhees who become actors, but were not ſo originally. 22 Ed. 4. 10.

So if a perſon outlawed hath a charter of pardon, and ſues a ſcire facias againſt the party, tho' hereby he is an actor, yet he cannot be nonſuit. 2 Roll. Abr. 130.

So if a man traverſe an office he cannot be nonſuit, altho' he is an actor, for he hath no original pending againſt the King. 2 Rol. Abr. 130. Dyer 141. pl. 47. this is made a quære.

But in a petition of right againſt the King the plaintiff may be nonſuit. 11 H. 4. 52. 2 Roll. Abr. 130.

So in an audita querela, to avoid a ſtatute, the plaintiff may be nonſuit, for he is plaintiff in this action. 47 Ed. 3. 5. b.

If to two nihils returned to a ſcire facias on a charter of pardon, the plaintiff does not appear, he ſhall be nonſuit; for the ſtatute ordains, that upon his appearing, he ought to count againſt the defendant. 45 Ed. 3. 16.

At the Common law, upon every continuance, or day given over before judgment, the plaintiff was demandable, and upon his non-appearance might have been nonſuit. Co. Lit. 139. b. That if at Common law he did not like the damages given by the jury, he might be nonſuit. 5 Mod. 208.

But now by 2 Hen. 4. cap. 7. it is enacted in the words following: "Whereas, upon verdict found before any juſtice in aſſiſe of novel diſeiſin, mort d'anceſtor, or any other action whatſoever, the parties before this time have been adjourned upon difficulty in law, upon the matter ſo found; it is ordained and eſtabliſhed, that if the verdict paſs againſt the plaintiff, the ſame plaintiff ſhall not be nonſuited."

Notwithſtanding this ſtatute, it hath been held, that the plaintiff may be nonſuited after a ſpecial verdict, or after a demurrer and argument thereon. Co. Lit. 139. 2 Jon. 1. 2 Roll. Abr. 131-2. 3 Leon. 28. and ſee 2 Hawk. P. C. 184.

If there be a judgment to account, and auditors aſſigned, and thereupon a capias ad computandum, the plaintiff cannot be nonſuited on the original, becauſe the original is determined by the judgment to account. 2 Roll. Abr. 131. See Co. Lit. 139. b.

Stat. 14 Geo. 2. cap. 17. Where iſſue is joined in an action at law, and the plaintiff ſhall neglect to bring ſuch iſſue to be tried according to the courſe of the court; it ſhall be lawful for the judges on motion in open court (due notice having been given thereof) to give the like judgment for defendant as in caſes of nonſuit; unleſs the judges ſhall on reaſonable terms allow further time for trial of ſuch iſſue; and if the plaintiff neglect to try ſuch iſſue within the time allowed, then the judges ſhall give judgment as aforeſaid.

All judgments given by virtue of the act, to be of the like effect as judgments upon nonſuit. The defendant ſhall upon ſuch judgment be awarded his coſts, in any action where he would upon nonſuit be intitled to the ſame. No indictment, information, or cauſe ſhall be tried at niſi prius before any judge of aſſiſe or niſi prius, or at the ſittings in London or Weſtminſter, where the defendant reſides above 40 miles from the ſaid cities reſpectively, unleſs notice of trial in writing has been given 10 days before. In caſe any party ſhall have given ſuch notice of trial, and ſhall not afterwards duly countermand the ſame in writing ſix days before ſuch intended trial, every ſuch party ſhall be obliged to pay unto the party to whom notice was given, the like coſts as if ſuch notice had not been countermanded. And the defendant may, the next term, move the court for judgment as in caſe of a nonſuit.

2. How far the nonſuit of one ſhall be the nonſuit of another; and how far a nonſuit of part of the thing in demand ſhall be a nonſuit of the whole.

In real or mixt actions, the nonſuit of one demandant is not the nonſuit of both; but he who makes default ſhall be ſummoned and ſevered; but regularly in perſonal actions, the nonſuit of one is the nonſuit of both. Co. Lit. 139. 2 Inſt. 563. And vide 2 Roll. Abr. 132. Several caſes to this purpoſe.

But in perſonal actions brought by executors, there ſhall be ſummons and ſeverance, becauſe the beſt meaſure ſhall be taken for the benefit of the dead; and ſo it is in action of treſpaſs, as executors, for goods taken out of their own poſſeſſion. Like law in account, as executors by the receipt of their own hands. Co. Lit. 139. a. See Executors.

In an audita querela concerning the perſonalty, the nonſuit of the one is not the nonſuit of the other; becauſe it goeth by way of diſcharge, and freeing themſelves, therefore the default of the one ſhall not hurt the other. Co. Lit. 139. In an audita querela, ſcire facias, attaint, the nonſuit of one ſhall not prejudice the other. 6 Co. 26.

In a quid juris clamat, the nonſuit of the one is the nonſuit of both; becauſe the tenant cannot attorn according to the grant. Co. Lit. 139. a.

An appeal againſt divers, whether they plead the ſame or ſeveral iſſues, it hath been adjudged, that a nonſuit againſt one, at the trial of any one of the iſſues, is a nonſuit as to all, becauſe a nonſuit operates as a releaſe of the whole. Cro. Eliz. 460. pl. 6. Dyer 120. 2 Rol. Abr. 133. 1 Sid. 378.

A latitat was ſued out againſt four defendants in treſpaſs, the plaintiff was nonſuit for want of a declaration, and the defendant's attorney entered four nonſuits againſt him; and it was held to be irregular, becauſe the treſpaſs is joint; and tho' the plaintiff may count ſeverally againſt the defendants, yet it remains joint till ſevered by the count. 2 Salk. 455. There is a nonſuit before appearance at the return of the writ, or after appearance at ſome day of continuance. Co. Lit. 138. b.

It is laid down as a general rule, that a nonſuit for part is a nonſuit for the whole; but it hath been held, that if a defendant plead to one part, and thereupon iſſue is joined, and demur to the other, the plaintiff may be nonſuit as to one part, and proceed for the other. 2 Leon. 177. Hob. 180.

If in debt the defendant acknowledges the action as to part, and joins iſſue as to the reſidue, and the plaintiff hath judgment for that which is confeſſed; but there is a ceſſat executio, by reaſon of the damages to be aſſeſſed by the jury; if the plaintiff be nonſuited in this iſſue, this ſhall be a nonſuit for the damages to be given, becauſe that he had judgment. 2 Rol. Abr. 134.

If in trover the defendant pleads, that as to ſome of the goods they were fixed to his freehold, as to others that he had them of the gift of the plaintiff, and as to the reſt Not guilty; and as to the firſt, the plaintiff enters non vult ulterius proſequi; this amounts only to a retraxit, and is no nonſuit, ſo as to bar the plaintiff from proceeding on the other parts of the plea, on the rule, that a nonſuit for part is a nonſuit for the whole. 2 Leon. 177. Sir John Sands v. Paſcal Brocas.

3. Of the effect of a nonſuit; and of its being a temporary bar.

A nonſuit, as hath been obſerved, is regularly no peremptory bar; but the plaintiff may, notwithſtanding, commence any new action of the ſame or like nature; but this general rule hath the following exceptions.

1. It is peremptory in a quare impedit; and in that action a diſcontinuance is alſo premptory; and the reaſon is, for that the defendant had, by judgment of the court, a writ to the biſhop; and the incumbent, that cometh in by that writ, ſhall never be removed; which is a flat bar to that preſentation.

2. Nonſuit in an appeal of murder, rape, robbery, &c. after appearance, is peremptory, and this in favorem vitæ; but the nonſuit of the plaintiff in an appeal is not ſuch an acquittal, on which the defendant ſhall recover damages againſt the abettors, by Weſtm. 2. cap. 12. unleſs, after the nonſuit, he were arraigned at the King's ſuit upon the appeal, and acquitted.

3. So if the plaintiff, in an appeal of mayhem, be nonſuit after appearance, it is peremptory; for the words therein are felonice mayhemavit.

4. A nonſuit after appearance is alſo peremptory in a nativo habendo, and the nonſuit of one plaintiff in that action nonſuits both in favorem libertatis; for in a libertate probanda ſuch nonſuit is not premptory, neither is the nonſuit of one plaintiff the nonſuit of both. Co. Lit. 139. a. Cro. Eliz. 881.

5. Such nonſuit is alſo peremptory in an attaint, but a diſcontinuance in an attaint is not; becauſe there is a judgment given upon the nonſuit, but not upon the diſcontinuance. Co. Lit. 139. a.

Non ſum informatus, Is a formal anſwer made of courſe by an attorney, who is not inſtructed or informed to ſay any thing material in defence of his client; by which he is deemed to leave it undefended, and ſo judgment paſſeth againſt his client. New Book of Entries.

Non-tenure, Is a plea in bar to a real action, by ſaying, that he (the defendant) holdeth not the land mentioned in the plaintiff's count or declaration, or at leaſt ſome part thereof. 25 E. 3. c. 16. 1 Mod. Rep. 250. And our books mention non-tenure general and ſpecial: general, where one denies ever to have been tenant of the land in queſtion; and ſpecial is an exception, alledging that he was not tenant the day whereon the writ was purchaſed. Weſt. Symb. par. 2. When the tenant or defendant pleads non-tenure of the whole, he need not ſay who is tenant; but if he pleads non-tenure as to part, he muſt ſet forth who is the tenant. 1 Mod. 181. Non-tenure]in part, or in the whole, is not pleadable after imparlance. 3 Lev 55.

Not guilty, Is the general iſſue or plea of the defendant in any criminal action; and Not guilty is a good iſſue in actions of treſpaſs, and upon the caſe for deceits or wrongs; but not on a promiſe, &c. Palm. 393. If one hath cauſe of juſtification in treſpaſs, and pleads Not guilty; he cannot give the ſpecial matter in evidence, but muſt confeſs the fact, and plead the ſpecial matter, &c. 5 Rep. 119. Unleſs in ſome caſes provided for by act of parliament, as in the caſe of juſtices of the peace, peace officers, churchwardens, and overſeers of the poor, &c. See the reſpective titles, and the Tables to the Statutes. Vide Non eſt Culpabilis.

Notice, Is the making ſomething known, that a man was or might be ignorant of before. And it produces divers effects; for by it the party who gives the ſame, ſhall have ſome benefit which otherwiſe he ſhould not have had: By this means, the party to whom the notice is given, is made ſubject to ſome action or charge, that otherwiſe he had not been liable to; and his eſtate in danger of prejudice. Co. Lit. 309.

Notice is required to be given in many caſes by law, to juſtify proceedings where any thing is to done or demanded, &c. But none is bound by law to give notice to another perſon of that which ſuch other may otherwiſe inform himſelf, except ſuch notice is directed by act of parliament.

If one be bound by an aſſumpſit generally to do a thing to another, he to whom the promiſe is made muſt give notice when he will have him do it; but if he promiſe that another perſon ſhall do it, there he to whom the thing is to be done is not obliged to give notice to that third perſon when he will have it done, but the party muſt procure it at his peril: for he may not know that other perſon, and there is no privity of contract between thoſe two, as there is betwixt the other two. 2 Lill. Abr. 239. And in caſe of a promiſe, it has been adjudged, that where a penalty is to be recovered, notice is requiſite; but it is not ſo where damages are to be recovered; in which caſe the party hath ſufficient notice by the action brought. 1 Bulſt. 12. If a perſon promiſe to pay ſo much to another at his day of marriage; the party at his peril is to take notice of the marriage. Cro. Car. 34, 35. And it is a neceſſary intendment, that when after the marriage the plaintiff requeſted payment of the money, that notice was given of the marriage. Cro. Jac. 228.

It was held, that if a collateral thing is to be done at or after marriage, there notice is to be given of it; tho' when money is to be paid, it is a debt due to the party by the marriage, and may be recovered without any notice given. 2 Bulſt 254. Notice muſt be given to an heir at law of a condition annexed to his eſtate; or he is not bound to take notice of the condition. 1 Lutw. 809. 4 Rep. 82. 3 Mod. 28. Yet it is ſaid, that the heir is bound to take notice of a proviſo in a feoffment; and this difference has been taken, that where notice is required to be given by the original deed or agreement, it is hereditary, and deſcends to the heir; but if it is collateral to the father, it ſhall not bind his heir, without expreſs notice. Winch. 108. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1186.

And copyholders ſhall not forfeit their eſtates for not appearing at the lord's court, if they have no notice of the court, etc. 1 Leon. 104.

In a covenant to make aſſurance generally, notice muſt be given to the party to know what eſtate he would have made to him. Style 61. Where one is bound to another to make ſuch an aſſurance as A. B. ſhall adviſe, the obligor is bound to make the aſſurance, without notice that A. B. had adviſed it; but if he had been bound to make ſuch aſſurance as the counſel of the obligee ſhould adviſe, notice ought to be given to the obligor, that the counſel of the obligee had adviſed it. 1 Leon. 105.

If I am bound to enfeoff ſuch perſons as the obligee ſhould name, he is to give notice of thoſe which he names, or I am not bound to enfeoff them. 2 Danv. Abr. 105. And if the condition of an obligation be to account before ſuch auditors as the obligee ſhall aſſign, and the obligee aſſigns auditors; he is to give notice thereof to the obligor, or he will not be bound to account. Ibid. Notice is not to be given ſo ſtrictly upon a covenant, as upon a bond; which is on the point of forfeiture. Cro. Jac. 391. If the agreement be, that a perſon ſhall pay ſo much as A. B. hath paid, the defendant is to inquire of him, and the plaintiff is not bound to give notice: but if the perſon or thing is altogether uncertain, the plaintiff to intitle himſelf to an action, muſt give notice. Cro. Jac. 432, 433.

If an act is to be done by a ſtranger, and not by the plaintiff, the cogniſance thereof lies as well in the notice of the defendant as of the plaintiff; therefore the plaintiff need not lay a notice. Cro. Jac. 492. Cro. Car. 132. If a thing lies in the knowledge of the plaintiff, there ought to be notice given to the defendant. March 156. 4 Mod. 230. And when one may take notice, and not the other; notice is neceſſary. Latch. 15. It has been holden, that a defendant having undertaken to do a thing, undertakes to do all circumſtances incident to the the doing it, and that without notice; but if he had been ignorant of the thing to be done, then notice muſt be given. 2 Bulſt. 143.

If one make a leaſe for years, with covenant that if the leſſee, his executors and aſſigns, do not repair within ſix months after notice given, the leaſe to be void; and the leſſee makes a leaſe for part of his term to another, and then the houſe is decayed; in this caſe the notice is to be given to the firſt leſſee in perſon, and not to the undertenant. 2 Cro. 9, 10. Sed qu. If the perſon cannot be met with, whether notice left at his laſt, or uſual place of abode, is not ſufficient?

A notice may not be pleaded to be given to executors, without averring the death of the teſtator. Hob. 93. In all writs of enquiry of damages, as well in real as perſonal actions, notice muſt be given to the other party to the ſuit. March. Rep. 82. Want of notice, upon various occaſions, has been often the cauſe of arreſt of judgment in actions, &c.

Notice is to be given of trials and motions; of a robbery committed, to recover againſt the hundred; of a prior mortgage, on making a ſecond; of an aſſignment of a leaſe, to charge the aſſignee, only on acceptance of rent; in caſes of diſtreſs for rent, according to the ſtatute; and of avoidances of churches, by reſignation, deprivation, &c. to the patron that he may preſent, &c. A month's notice is alſo to be given to a juſtice of peace, before commencement of an action againſt him for any thing done in the execution of his office. 24 G. 2. c. 44.

Nottingham, (For rebuilding the town of,) 27 Hen. 8. c. 1.

Novale, Signifies land newly ploughed or converted into tillage, that without memory of man had not been tilled; and ſometimes it is taken for ground which hath been ploughed for two years, and afterwards lies fallow for one year; or that which lies fallow every other year: it is called novale, becauſe the earth novâ culturâ proſcinditur. Cartular Abbat. de Furneſſe in Com. Lac. in Officio Ducat. Lanc. fol. 41.

Nova Oblata, Mentioned in Clauſ. 12 Ed. 1. m. 7. See Oblata.

Novel Aſſignment, (nova aſſignatio) Is an aſſignment of time, place, or ſuch like, in action of treſpaſs, otherwiſe than as it was before aſſigned; or where it is more particularly in a declaration than in the writ, &c. Bro. Treſpaſs, 122. And if the defendant juſtifies in a place where no treſpaſs was done, then the plaintiff is to aſſign the cloſe where, to which the defendant is to plead, &c. Terms de Ley. Vide Treſpaſs, and New Aſſignment.

Novel Diſſeiſin, (nova diſſeiſina.) See Aſſiſe of Novel Diſſeiſin.

Novellæ, Thoſe conſtitutions of the Civil Law, which were made, after the publication of the Theodoſian code, were called novellæ, by the Emperors, who ordained them: but ſome writers call the Julian edition only, by that name. Blount, and Black. Com. 1 V. 81.

Noyles. No perſons ſhall put any flocks, noyles, thrums, &c. or other deceivable thing, into any broad woollen cloth; by Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 18.

Nuces colligere, To gather hazle nuts, which was formerly one of the works, or ſervices, impoſed by lords upon their inferior tenants. Paroch. Antiq. 495.

Nude contract, (nudum pactum) is a bare naked contract, without a conſideration. If a man bargains or ſells goods, &c. and there is no recompence made or given for the doing thereof; as if one ſay to another, I ſell you all my lands or goods, but nothing is agreed upon what the other ſhall give or pay for the ſame, ſo that there is not a quid pro quo of one thing for another; this is a nude contract, and void in law, and for the non-performance thereof, no action will lie; ex nudo pacto non oritur actio. Terms de Ley. The law ſuppoſes error in making theſe contracts; they being as it were of one ſide only.

Nude Matter, Is naked matter, on a bare allegation of a thing done, &c. Vide Matter.

Nudum pactum. A conſideration of ſome ſort or other, is ſo abſolutely neceſſary to the forming of a contract, that a nudum pactum, or agreement to do or pay any thing on one ſide, without any compenſation on the other, is totally void in law; and a man cannot be compelled to peform it. See Black. Com. 2 V. 445 and ſee alſo, nude contract.

Nul diſſeiſin, plea of, Is a plea in real actions, of no diſſeiſin, and is one ſpecies of the general iſſue. See Black. Com. 2 V. App. xviii. 3 V. 305.

Nul tiel record, Is the plea of a plaintiff that there is no ſuch record, on the defendant's alledging matter of record, in bar of the plaintiff's action. See Failure of Record. 'Tis ſometimes the plea of a defendant, as in action on a judgment, &c.

Nul tort, plea of, A plea in a real action, i. e. of no wrong done, and is a ſpecies of the general iſſue. Black. Com. 3 V. 305.

Nullum arbitrium, The uſual plea of the defendant proſecuted on an arbitration bond, for not abiding by an award.

Nullity, Is where a thing is null and void, or of no force. Litt. Dict. And there is a nullity of marriage, where perſons marry within the prohibited degrees, &c.

Numerum. Civitas Cant. Reddit 24 l. ad numerum, i. e. by number or tale, as we call it. Domeſday.

Nummata, Signifies the price of any thing, generally by money; as denariata doth the price of a thing, by computation of pence; and librata by computation of pounds.

Nummata, terrae, Is the ſame with denariatus terræ, and thought to contain an acre; Sciatus me (ſc. Will. Longeſpee) dediſſe, & conceſſiſſe eccleſiæ S. Mariæ de Walſingham & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus in perpetuam Eleemoſynam 40 Nummatas terræ in Walſingham, quæ fuit Archetel & Brinig fratris ejus de ſocca Wihotune, libere, quiete & honorifice abſque omni ſervitio & omni conſuetudine Spelman.

Nummus, A piece of money or coin among the Romans; and it is a penny according to Matth. Weſtm. ſub. Ann. 1095.

Nun, (nunna) A conſecrated virgin or woman who by vow hath bound herſelf to a ſingle and chaſte life, in ſome place or company of other women, ſeparated from the world, and devoted to the ſervice of God by prayer, faſting, and ſuch like holy exerciſes: it is an Egyptian word, as we are told by St. Hierome.

Nuncius, A nuncio, or meſſenger, ſervant, &c. And the Pope's nuncio is legatus pontificis.

Nuncupative Will, (Teſtamentum Nuncupatum) Is a will by word of mouth; it is a verbal declaration of the teſtator's mind before a ſufficient number of witneſſes; which being reduced into writing either before or after the death of the teſtator, is good to diſpoſe of his perſonal eſtate, but not his lands. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1191. Before the 29 Car. 2. c. 3 it was neceſſary not only to put a nuncupative will in writing, but to prove it likewiſe by witneſſes in the ſpiritual court, and to have it under the ſeal of the ordinary; until which it hath been decreed in equity, that ſuch will was not pleadable againſt an adminiſtrator. 1 Chanc. Rep. 122. And that by that ſtatute, no nuncupative will ſhall be good, wherein the eſtate bequeathed exceeds 30 l. unleſs proved by three witneſſes who were preſent at the making thereof, and bid by the teſtator to bear witneſs; nor except it be made in the time of the laſt ſickneſs of the deceaſed, and in his houſe, or where he hath been reſident for ten days before, unleſs ſurprized with ſickneſs from home: and no evidence ſhall be received to prove ſuch will, after ſix months after ſpeaking of the teſtamentary words; if the ſame or the ſubſtance of it, be not committed to writing within ſix days after the making. Nor ſhall any probate of ſuch nuncupative will paſs the ſeals till fourteen days after the death of the teſtator; and until proceſs hath iſſued to call in the widow or next of kin to the deceaſed, to conteſt it, if they think fit. 29 Car. 2. c. 3.

And by the ſame act, no will in writing concerning perſonal eſtate, ſhall be repealed by any words or will by word of mouth, except the ſame be put into writing in the life-time of the teſtator, and read to and approved of by him, and proved to be ſo done by three witneſſes, &c. All witneſſes who are allowed to be good witneſſes upon trials at law, ſhall be good witneſſes to prove any nuncupative will, by Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſ. 14. See Black. Com. 2. V. 500.

Nuper obiit, Is a writ that lies for a ſiſter and coheir, deforced by her coparcener of lands or tenements, whereof their father, brother, or any other common anceſtor, died ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee-ſimple; for if one ſiſter deforce another of land held in fee-tail, her ſiſter and coheir ſhall have a formedon againſt her, &c. and not a nuper obiit; and where the anceſtor being once ſeiſed, died not ſeiſed of the poſſeſſion, but the reverſion, in ſuch a caſe a writ of rationabili parte lies. Reg. Orig. 226. F. N. B. 197. Terms de Ley. If one coparcener be deforced by another, and a ſtranger, ſhe ſhall have a nuper obiit againſt her coparcener: and if two coparceners after the death of their anceſtor enter and deforce a third ſiſter, and afterwards they make partition betwixt them, and then one of the two aliens her part to a ſtranger in fee; yet the third ſhall have the writ nuper obiit againſt her two ſiſters, notwithſtanding that alienation, and ſhall recover the third part of what the coparcener who did not aliene was ſeiſed, &c. And may ſue an aſſiſe of mordanceſtor, or writ of aiel, as the caſe is, in the name of the other coparcener, to recover her third part in the hands of the ſtranger. New Nat. Br. 437, 438. A nuper obiit ought to be brought by that coparcener who is deforced, againſt all the other coparceners; and altho' ſome of them have nothing in the tenancy. Ibid. And this writ lieth between ſiſters of the half blood; and likewiſe between coheirs in gavelkind, as well as between women parceners, &c. But qu. if an ejectment will not anſwer the purpoſe?

Nurture, Guardian for. Nuſance, (nocumentum, from the Fr. nuire, i. e. nocere) Particularly ſo called, is where one makes any encroachment on the King's lands, or the highways, common rivers, &c. 2 Inſt. 272. If a man doth any thing upon his own ground, to the particular damage of his neighbour, &c. it is accounted a nuſance: and nuſance ſignifies not only a thing done to the annoyance of another, in his lands or tenements; but the aſſiſe or writ lying for the ſame. F. N. B. 183.

Nuſances are public and common, or private. a common nuſance is defined to be an offence againſt the public, either by doing a thing which tends to the annoying of all the King's ſubjects, and is common againſt all; or by neglecting to do any thing which the common good requires. 2 Roll. Abr. 83. And annoyances in highways, as where a gate, hedge, &c. or ditches are made therein; of bridges and public rivers, diſorderly alehouſes, bawdy-houſes, gaming-houſes, ſtages for rope-dancers, mountebanks, &c. brewing-houſes erected in places not convenient; cottages with inmates; common ſcolds, eveſdroppers, &c. are generally common nuſances. 2 Inſt. 406. And indictable as ſuch. 1 Hawk. P. C. 198.

If a man ſtops up the light of another's houſe; or builds ſo near to and hanging over mine, that the rain which falleth from his houſe, falls upon mine; the turning or diverting water, running to a man's houſe, mill, meadow, &c. or ſtopping up a way, leading from houſes to lands; ſuffering the next houſe to decay to the damage of my houſe; and ſetting up or making a houſe of office, lime-pit, dye-houſe, tan-houſe or butcher's ſhop, &c. and uſing them ſo near my houſe, that the ſmell annoys me, or is infectious; or if they hurt my lands or trees, or the corruption of the water of lime-pits ſpoils my water or deſtroys fiſh in a river, &c. Theſe are in general private nuſances. 3 Inſt. 231. 5 Rep 101. 9 Rep. 54. 1 Rol. Abr. 88. 2 Rol. 140. 1 Danv. Abr. 173. For remedy whereof, an action lies, at the ſuit of the party injured.

For a common nuſance, indictment lies at the ſuit of the King; and the party ſhall be fined and impriſoned, &c. No action lieth in this caſe, becauſe if one man might have an action, all men may have alike; and the indictment muſt be ad commune nocumentum omnium ligeorum, &c. 5 Rep. 73. 1 Inſt. 56. 1 Vent. 208. But tho' action may not be brought for a common nuſance, but indictment or preſentment; yet where the inhabitants of a town had by cuſtom a watering place for their cattle which was ſtopped by another, it has been held, that any inhabitant might have an action againſt him, otherwiſe they would be without remedy; becauſe ſuch a nuſance is not common to all the King's ſubjects, and preſentable in the leet, or to be redreſſed by preſentment or indictment in the quarter-ſeſſions. 5 Rep. 73. 9 Rep. 103.

And if any one perſon hath more particular damage by a common nuſance than another; as if by reaſon of a pit dug in a highway, a man for whoſe life I held lands is drowned; or my ſervant falling into it receives injury, whereby I loſe his ſervice, &c. for this ſpecial damage, which is not common to other perſons, action lies. 4 Rep 18. 5 Rep. 73. Cro. Car. 446. Vaugh. 341. 4 Bulſt. 344.

For private nuſances, action on the caſe lieth, or aſſiſe of nuſance by the party grieved; and on action for a private nuſance, if the plaintiff hath a verdict he ſhall recover damages for the injury ſuſtained. 1 Rol. Abr. 391. 1 Vent. 208.

There is a difference between an aſſiſe for a nuſance, and an action on the caſe; for the firſt is to abate the nuſance, but the laſt is not to abate it, but to recover damages: therefore if the nuſance be removed, the plaintiff is intitled to his damages which accrued before; and though it is laid with a continuando for a longer time than the plaintiff can prove, he ſhall have damages for what he can prove, before the nuſance was removed. 2 Mod. 253.

A man may have an action for a nuſance, or he may abate or demoliſh the ſame; but if he deſtroy the nuſance himſelf, before he bring his action, he may not after have an action for the wrong, nor recover any damages. 9 Rep. 55. F. N. B. 185. 2 Rol. Abr. 745. Sed qu: for the party's right of action attached before removal.

It is ſaid both of a common and private nuſance, that they may be abated or removed by thoſe who are prejudiced by them; and they need not ſtay to proſecute for their removal. 2 Lil. Abr. 244. Wood's Inſt. 443. And it has been adjudged, that every perſon may remove a nuſance; and that the cutting a gate ſet acroſs an highway is lawful. Cro. Car. 184, 185. Alſo if a houſe be on the highway, or a houſe hang over the ground of another, they may be pulled down; but no man can juſtify the doing more damage than is neceſſary, or removing the materials farther than requiſite. 1 Hawk. 199.

A man builds a houſe ſo near mine that it is a nuſance; I may enter and pull it down; and a man indicted for a riot in ſuch a caſe had only a ſmall fine ſet on him. 2 Salk. 459. Where two houſes one whereof is a nuſance to the other, come both into one and the ſame hand, the wrong is purged. See Hob. 131. If a ſhip be ſunk in a port or haven, and it is not removed by the owner, he may be indicted for it as a common nuſance, becauſe it is prejudicial to the commonwealth in hindering navigation and trade. 2 Lil. 244.

Indictment lies for laying logs, &c. in the ſtream of a public navigable river: it is a common nuſance to divert part of a public navigable river whereby the current is weakened, and made unable to carry veſſels of the ſame burden it could before: And if a river be ſtopped to the nuſance of the country, and none appear bound by preſcription to cleanſe it; thoſe who have the piſcary, and the neighbouring towns that have a common paſſage and eaſement therein, may be compelled to do the ſame. 1 Hawk. P. C. 198, 199, 200.

It is a common nuſance indictable, to divide a houſe in a town for poor people to inhabit in, by reaſon whereof it will be more dangerous in the time of ſickneſs and infection of the plague. 2 Rol. Abr. 139. A common playhouſe, if it draws together ſuch number of coaches and people as incommode and diſturb the neighbourhood, may be a nuſance; but theſe places are not naturally nuſances, but become ſo by accident. 1 Rol. Rep. 109. 1 Hawk. 191.

A prohibitory writ was iſſued out of B. R. againſt Betterton and other actors, for erecting a new play-houſe in Little Lincoln's Inn Fields, reciting that it was a nuſance to the neighbourhood; and they not obeying the writ, an attachment was granted againſt them; but it was objected that an attachment could not be iſſued, and that the moſt proper method was to proceed by indictment, and then the jury would conſider whether it were a nuſance or not; and this was the better opinion. 5 Mod. 142. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1192.

One Hall having begun to build a booth near Charing-Croſs for rope-dancing, which drew together many idle people, was ordered by the Lord Chief Juſtice not to proceed; he proceeded notwithſtanding, affirming that he had the King's warrant and promiſe to bear him harmleſs; but being required to give a recogniſance of three hundred pounds that he would not go on with the building, and he refuſing, he was committed, and a record was made of this nuſance, as upon the judge's own view, and a writ iſſued to the ſheriff of Middleſex to proſtrate it. 1 Vent. 169. 1 Mod. 96.

Erecting a dove-cote is not a common nuſance; though action of the caſe will lie at the ſuit of the lord of the manor for erecting it without his licence. 1 Hawk. 199. It was anciently held, that if a man erected a dove-cote, he was puniſhable at the leet: but it has been ſince adjudged not to be puniſhable in the leet as a common nuſance, but that the lord for this particular nuſance ſhould have an action on the caſe, or an aſſiſe of nuſance; as he may for building an houſe to the nuſance of his mill. 5 Rep. 104. 3 Salk. 248. Neither the King, nor lord of a manor, may licence any man to make or commit a nuſance. 1 Rol. Abr. 138.

A brewhouſe erected in ſuch an inconvenient place, wherein the buſineſs cannot be carried on without incommoding the neighbourhood; may be indicted as a common nuſance; and ſo in the like caſe may a glaſs-houſe, &c. 1 Hawk. 199. Where there hath been an ancient brewhouſe time out of mind, although in Fleet-ſtreet, &c. this is not any nuſance, becauſe it ſhall be ſuppoſed to be erected when there were no buildings near: though if a brewhouſe ſhould be now built in any of the high ſtreets of London, or trading places, it will be a nuſance, and action on the caſe lies for whomſoever receives any damage thereby. 2 Lil. Abr. 246. Palm. 536.

A plaintiff was poſſeſſed of an houſe wherein he dwelled, and the defendant built a brewhouſe, &c. in which he burnt coal ſo near the houſe, that by the ſtink and ſmoak he could not dwell there without danger of his health; and it was adjudged that the action lay, though a brewhouſe is neceſſary, and ſo is burning coal in it. Hutton 135. If a perſon melt lead ſo near the cloſe of another, that it injures his graſs there, whereby cattle are loſt; notwithſtanding this is a lawful trade, and for the benefit of the nation, action lies againſt him; for he ought to uſe his trade in waſte places, ſo as no damage may happen to the proprietors of the land adjoining. 2 Rol. Abr. 140.

Building a ſmith's forge near a man's houſe, and making a noiſe with hammers, ſo that he could not ſleep, was held a nuſance, for which action lies; although the ſmith pleaded that he and his ſervants worked at ſeaſonable times; that he had been a blackſmith, and uſed the trade above twenty years in that place, and ſet up his forge in an old room, &c. For though a ſmith is a neceſſary trade, and ſo is a lime-burner, and a hog-merchant;

yet theſe trades muſt be uſed not to be injurious to the neighbours. 1 Lutw. 69.

But if a ſchoolmaſter keeps a ſchool ſo near the ſtudy of a lawyer by profeſſion, that it is a diſturbance to him; this is not a nuſance for which action may be brought. Wood's Inſt. 538. An inn-keeper brought an action on the caſe againſt a perſon for erecting a tallow furnace, and melting ſtinking tallow ſo near his houſe that it annoyed his gueſts, and his family became unhealthy; and adjudged that the action lay. Cro. Car. 367. So where a perſon kept a hogſty near a man's parlour, whereby he loſt the benefit of it. 2 Rol. Abr. 140.

Yet it is ſaid to be no nuſance to a neighbourhood, for a butcher, or chandler, to ſet up their trades in houſes amongſt them: but it may be by ſuch tradeſmen, laying ſtinking heaps at their doors; in other caſes the neceſſity of the thing ſhall diſpenſe with the noiſomneſs of it. Paſch. 5 Jac. 1. B. R. If a man have a ſpout falling down from his houſe, and another perſon erect any thing above it, that the water cannot fall as it did, but is forced into the houſe of the plaintiff, and rots the timber; it is a nuſance actionable. 18 E. 3. 2 Rol. Abr. 140. And in treſpaſs for a nuſance, in cauſing ſtinking water in the defendant's yard to run to the walls of the plaintiff's houſe, and piercing them ſo that it ran into his cellar, &c. judgment was given for the plaintiff. Hard. 60.

An action lies for hindring the wholeſome air, and alſo for corrupting the air. 9 Rep. 58. And none ſhall caſt any garbage, dung, or filth into ditches, waters, or other places, within or near any city or town, on pain of puniſhment by the Lord Chancellor at diſcretion, as a nuſance. Stat. 12 R. 2. c. 13. Sed qu. if this is not obſolete and illegal?

The continuation of a nuſance is, as it were, a new nuſance: Where a nuſance is erected in the time of the deviſor, and continued afterwards by the deviſee, it is as the new erecting of ſuch a nuſance. 2 Leon. 129. Cro. Car. 231. But a plaintiff may declare both ways, one for erecting and continuing, the other for continuing only, though the latter method is ſufficient in any caſe.

If one hath freehold land adjoining to the highway, and he incroach part of the way, and lay lands to it; and then dying it comes to his heir, if he continues it, tho' he do nothing elſe, he may be indicted for the continuance of the nuſance. Rol. Abr. 137. A man erects a nuſance, and then lets it; the continuance by the leſſee has been held a nuſance, and that action lies againſt him. Cro. Jac. 373. Moor, 353. But it is ſaid in another caſe of this nature, that admitting the plaintiff might have an aſſiſe of nuſance againſt the builder, the leſſor, he cannot have an action againſt his leſſee, becauſe it would be waſte in him to pull it down; but the plaintiff may abate the nuſance ſtanding on his own ground; yet where the thing done is a nuſante per intervalla, as a pipe or gutter, action lies againſt the leſſee, becauſe every running is a freſh nuſance; and if a man have a way over the ground of another, and ſuch other ſtops that way, and then demiſes the ground, an action lies againſt the leſſee for continuing this nuſance. 1 Mod. 54. 3 Salk. 248.

If a perſon aſſigns his leaſe with a nuſance, action lies againſt him for continuing it, becauſe the leaſe was transfered with the original wrong, and his aſſignment confirms the continuance; beſides he hath a rent as conſideration for the continuance, therefore he ought to anſwer the damages occaſioned by it. 2 Salk. 460. 2 Cro. 272, 555. If a nuſance is levied in an houſe, &c. to the prejudice of another, and then the houſe is aliened; action of the caſe lies againſt him that levied it, and alſo againſt the alienee for continuing it, by ſtat. 13 Ed. 1. c. 24.

If a fair or market be ſet up to the nuſance of another, the party grieved may have his writ or action. F. N. B. 187. 2 Saund. 173. Lutw. 69, 91. A nuſance in a church-yard, is properly, of eccleſiaſtical cogniſance. Carthew 152. If a man ſtraiten a way only, and do not ſtop it up, action of the caſe lieth, not aſſiſe of nuſance. 33 H. 6. c. 26. But for ſtopping ſuch way belonging to a freehold tenement, an aſſiſe will lie; and where one may have aſſiſe of nuſance for an injury to his way, there he ſhall not have action of treſpaſs. 19 H. 6. 29. 2 Shep. Abr. 468. This means treſpaſs vi et armis, but an action upon the caſe, will undoubtedly lie.

When a man hath but a term of years in a houſe or lands, and not a freehold, he ſhall not have an aſſiſe of nuſance; but action upon the caſe. New Nat. Br. 10. Writs of nuſance, called vicontiel, are to be made at the election of the plaintiff, determinable before the juſtices of either bench, or the juſtices of aſſiſe of the county, being in nature of aſſiſes, &c. 6 R. 2. c. 3.

Making great noiſes in the night; a nuſance indictable. 1 Strange 704. Keeping gunpowder in great quantities a nuſance. 2 Strange 1167. See Highway.

Tho' in the preceeding head, an aſſiſe of nuſance is often mentioned, yet that mode of proceeding is now grown obſolete. The method is, if it is a nuſance to many to indict, if any individual ſuſtains a peculiar injury, an action on the caſe lies, to recover an adequate ſatisfaction in damages.

If, after a plaintiff hath recovered a verdict, and damages, for the erecting and continuing or for the continuing of a nuſance, and the defendant does not remove it, actions may be brought ad infinitum, for the continuance, unleſs defendant ſubmits to remove the nuſance, but on a ſecond action generally, a jury will give large damages, and on a third, very exemplary damages.

O.

O, Is an adverb of calling; or interjection of ſorrow: And the ſeven Antiphones, or alternate hymn of ſeven verſes, &c. ſung by the choir in the time of Advent was called O, from beginning with ſuch exclamation. In the ſtatutes of St. Paul's church in London, there is one chapter, De faciendo O. Liber. Statut. MS. f. 86.

Oath, (Sax. Eoth, Lat. Juramentum) Is an affirmation or denial of any thing, before one or more perſons who have authority to adminiſter the ſame, for the diſcovery and advancement of truth and right, calling God to witneſs, that the teſtimony is true; therefore it is termed Sacramentum, a holy band or tie: it is called a corporal oath becauſe the witneſs when he ſwears lays his right-hand on the Holy Evangeliſts, or New-Teſtament. 3 Inſt. 165.

There are ſeveral ſorts of oaths in our law, viz. Juramentum promiſſionis, where oath is made either to do, or not to do, ſuch a thing. Juramentum purgationis, when a perſon is charged with any matter by bill in Chancery, &c. Juramentum probationis, where any one is produced as a witneſs, to prove, or diſprove a thing: And Juramentum triationis, when any perſons are ſworn to try an iſſue, &c. 2 Nelſ. 1181.

All oaths muſt be lawful, allowed by the Common law, or ſome ſtatute; if they are adminiſtred by perſons in a private capacity, or not duly authorized, they are coram non judice, and void; and thoſe adminiſtring them are guilty of a high contempt, for doing it without warrant of law, and puniſhable by fine and impriſonment. 3 Inſt. 165. 4 Inſt. 278. 2 Roll. Abr. 257.

One who was to teſtify on behalf of a felon, or perſon indicted of treaſon, or other capital offence, upon an indictment at the King's ſuit, could not formerly be examined on his oath for the priſoner againſt the King; tho' he might be examined without oath: but by a late ſtatute, witneſſes on behalf of the priſoner upon indictments are to be ſworn to depoſe the truth in ſuch manner as witneſſes for the King; and if convicted of wilful perjury ſhall ſuffer the puniſhment inflicted for ſuch offences. 1

Ann. c. 9. And the evidence for the defendant in an appeal, whether capital or not, or on indictment or information for a miſdemeanor, was to be on oath before this ſtatute. 2 Hawk. P. C. 434.

A perſon who is to be a witneſs in a cauſe may have two oaths given him, one to ſpeak the truth to ſuch things as the court ſhall aſk him concerning himſelf, or other things which are not evidence in the cauſe; the other to give teſtimony in the cauſe in which he is produced as a witneſs: the former is called the oath upon a voyer dire. Paſch. 23 Car. B. R.

If oath be made againſt oath in a cauſe, it is a non liquet to the court which oath is true; and in ſuch caſe the court will take that oath to be true, which is to affirm a verdict, judgment, &c. as it tends to the expediting of juſtice. 2 Lil. Abr. 247.

A voluntary oath, by conſent and agreement of the parties, is lawful as well as a compulſory oath; and in ſuch caſe, if it is to do a ſpiritual thing, and the party fail, he is ſuable in the eccleſiaſtical court, pro lætione fidei; if to do a temporal thing, and he fail therein; he may be puniſhed in B. R. Adjudged on aſſumſit, where if the defendant would make oath before ſuch a perſon, the plaintiff promiſed, &c. Cro. Car. 486. 3 Salk. 248.

By the Common law, officers of juſtice are bound to take an oath for the due execution of juſtice. Trin. 22 Car. 1. B. R. Though if promiſſory oaths of officers are broken, they are not puniſhed as perjuries, like unto the breach of aſſertory oaths; but their offences ought to be puniſhed with a ſevere fine, &c. Wood's Inſt. 412. Anciently at the end of a legal oath, was added, So help me God at his holy dome, i. e. judgment; and our anceſtors did believe, that a man could not be ſo wicked to call God to witneſs any thing which was not true; but that if any one ſhould be perjured, he muſt continually expect that God would be the revenger: And thence probably purgations of criminals, by their own oaths, and for great offences by the oaths of others, were allowed. Malmſb. lib. 2. c. 6. *Leg. Perſons ſhall take the oaths, and receive the ſacrament, to qualify them to bear any office of magiſtracy in corpotions. 13 Car. 2. c. 1.

And officers of the lieutenancy and militia are required to take the oaths by 13 Car. 2. c. 6. All perſons that bear any office, civil or military, or receive any ſalary, &c. from the King, are to take the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy; and perſons refuſing are diſabled, &c. 25 Car. 2. c. 2. By the 1 W. & M. Seſſ. 1. c. 6. the coronation oath was altered and regulated; and the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy abrogated, and others appointed to be taken and enforced, on pain of diſability, &c. by 1 W. & M. c. 8. and 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 27.

All that bear offices in the government, peers and members of the Houſe of Commons, eccleſiaſtical perſons, members of colleges, ſchool-maſters, preachers, ſerjeants at law, counſellors, attornies, ſolicitors, advocates, proctors, &c. are enjoined to take the oaths of allegiance, ſupremacy and abjuration; and perſons neglecting or refuſing, are declared incapable to execute their offices and employments, diſabled to ſue in law or equity, to be guardian, executor, &c, or to receive any legacy or deed of gift, to be in any office, &c. and to forfeit five hundred pounds.

This extends not to conſtables, and other pariſh officers, nor to bailiffs of manors, &c. 13 W. 3. c. 6.

The Stat. 1 Ann. c. 22. obliges the receiving the abjuration oath, with alterations: And by 4 Ann. c. 8. the oath of abjuration is ſettled after the death of Queen Anne, without iſſue. Alſo the oath of abjuration, with further alterations relating to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, is required to be taken by the 1 Geo. 1. c. 13. And by a late ſtatute, all perſons are to take the oaths to government, or regiſter their eſtates, on pain of forfeiture, &c. 9 Geo. 1. c. 24.

There are almoſt every other ſeſſions acts made for indemnifying perſons, who have omitted to qualify themſelves for offices and promotions within the time limited by law, and for allowing further time for that purpoſe. See Papiſts.

Perſons maintaining an oath to be unlawful, are puniſhable by fine and impriſonment, &c. Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. Two juſtices of peace have power to tender the oaths to ſuſpected perſons; and if they refuſe them, it is to be certified to the next quarter-ſeſſions, and from thence into B. R. and the offenders ſhall be adjudged Popiſh recuſants convict, and forfeit lands, goods, &c. but it hath been held that a perſon cannot be ſaid to refuſe the oaths unleſs they are read or offered to be read to him. Oaths muſt be taken in the very words expreſſed in the acts, and cannot be qualified; yet uſing the words in conſcience, inſtead of my conſcience, or Sea of Rome, inſtead of See of Rome, is not material. 1 Bulſt. 197. Obedientia, In the Canon law is uſed for an office, or the adminiſtration of it: whereupon the word obedientialis, in the provincial conſtitutions, is taken for officers under their ſuperiors. Can. Law, cap. 1. And as ſome of theſe offices conſiſted in the collection of rents or penſions, rents were called obedientiæ: quia colligebantur ab obedientialibus. But though obedientia was a rent as appears by Hoveden, in a general acceptation of this word it extended to whatever was enjoined the monks by the abbot; and in a more reſtrained ſenſe to the cells or farms which belonged to the abbey to which the monks were ſent, vi ejuſdem obedientiæ, either to look after the farms, or to collect the rents, &c.——Probibemus ne redditus quos obedientias vocant ad firmam teneant. Mat. Obit, (Lat.) Signifies a funeral ſolemnity or office for the dead, moſt commonly performed when the corpſe lies in the church uninterred; Alſo the anniverſary office. 2 Cro. 51. Dyer 313. The anniverſary of any perſon's death was called the obit; and to obſerve ſuch day with prayers and alms, or other commemoration, was the keeping of the obit: In religious houſes they had a regiſter, wherein they entered the obits or obitual days of their founders or benefactors, which was thence termed the obituary. Oblata gifts or offerings made to the King by any of his ſubjects, which in the reigns of King John and King Hen. 3. were ſo carefully heeded, that they were entered into the Fine Rolls under the title of Oblata; and if not paid, eſteemed a duty, and put in charge to the ſheriff. Philips of Purveyance. In the exchequer it ſignifies old debts, brought as it were together from precedent years, and put on the preſent ſheriff's charge. *Pract. Oblations, (oblationes) Are thus defined in the Canon law: Dicuntur, quæcunque â piis fidelibuſque Chriſtianis offeruntur Deo & Eccleſiæ, ſive res ſolidæ ſive mobiles ſint. Spelm. de Concil. tom. 1. p. 393. The word is often mentioned in our law books; and formerly there were ſeveral ſorts of oblations, viz. oblationes altaris, which the prieſt had for ſaying maſs; oblationes defunctorum, which were given by the laſt wills and teſtaments of perſons dying to the church; oblationes mortuorum, or funerales, given at burials; oblationes pænitentium, which were given by perſons penitent; and oblationes pentecoſtales, &c.

The chief or principal feaſts for the oblations of the altar, were All Saints, Chriſtmas, Candlemas, and Eaſter, which were called O*blationes quatuor principales*; and of the cuſtomary offerings from the pariſhioners to the pariſh-prieſt, ſolemnly laid on the altar, the maſs or ſacrament offerings were uſually three-pence at Chriſtmas, two-pence at Eaſter, and a penny at the two other principal feaſts: Under this title of oblations were comprehended all the accuſtomed dues for ſacramentalia or chriſtian offices; and alſo the little ſums paid for ſaying maſſes and prayers for the deceaſed. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Oblationes funerales were often the beſt horſe of the defunct, delivered at the church gate or grave to the prieſt of the pariſh; to which old cuſtom we owe the original of mortuaries, &c. And at the burial of the dead, it was uſual for the ſurviving friends to offer liberally at the altar for the pious uſe of the prieſt, and the good eſtate of the ſoul deceaſed, being called the Soul Seat: In North Wales this uſage ſtill prevails, where at the rails of the communion table in churches, is a tablet conveniently fixed, to receive the money offered at funerals according to the quality of the deceaſed; which has been obſerved to be a providential augmentation to ſome of thoſe poor churches. Kennet's Gloſſ. At firſt the church had no other revenues beſide theſe oblations, till in the fourth century it was enriched with lands and other poſſeſſions. Blount.

Oblations, &c. are in the nature of tithes, and may be ſued for in the eccleſiaſtical courts, and it is ſaid are included in the act 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 6. for recovery of ſmall tithes under 40*s.* by the determination of juſtices of peace, &c. Count. Parſ. Compan. 137, 138.

Obligation, (obligatio) Is a bond, containing a penalty, with a condition annexed for payment of money, performance of covenants, or the like: it differs from a bill, which is generally without a penalty or condition, though a bill may be obligatory. Co. Lit. 172. And obligations may be by matter of record: as ſtatutes and recognizances, to which there are ſometimes added defeaſances, like the condition of an obligation: but when the obligation is ſimple, or ſingle, without any defeaſance or condition, it is moſt properly called ſo. 2 *Shep. Obligor, Is he who enters into an obligation, and obligee the perſon to whom it is entered into.

Before the coming in of the Normans, writings obligatory were made firm with golden croſſes, or other ſmall ſigns or marks. But the Normans began the making ſuch bills and obligations with a print or ſeal in wax, impreſſed with every one's ſpecial ſignet, atteſted by three or four witneſſes. In former time many houſes and lands thereto paſſed by grant and bargain, without ſcript, charter or deed, only with the landlord's ſword or helmet, with his horn or cup; and many tenements were demiſed with a ſpur or curry-comb, with a bow or with an arrow. Cowell. See Wang.

Obolata terræ, Is, according to ſome accounts, half an acre of land; but others hold it to be only half a perch. Spelm. Gloſſ.

Obventions, (obventiones) Are offerings or tithes; and oblations, obventions and offerings are generally the ſame thing, though obvention has been eſteemed the moſt comprehenſive. The profits of the churches in London were formerly the oblations and obventions; for which a remedy is given by law: but the tithes and profits ariſing to the London clergy are now ſettled and appointed by act of parliament. Count. Parſ. Compan. 138. Rents and revenues of ſpiritual livings are called obventions. 12 Car. 2. c. 11. ——Margeria Comitiſſa de Warwick Univerſis Sanctæ Matris Eccleſiæ filiis, &c dedi omnes obventiones tam in decimis majoribus & minoribus, quam in aliis rebus de aſſartis de W. & decimam pannagii, &c. MS. penes Wil. Occupant, (occupans) Is he who firſt gets poſſeſſion of a thing. An iſland in the ſea, precious ſtones on the ſea ſhore, and treaſure diſcovered in a ground that has no particular owner, by the law of nations belong to him who finds them, and gets the firſt occupation of them. Treat. Laws 342. See Literary Property, and Black. Com. 2 V. 3, 8, 258, 400.

The law of occupancy is founded upon the law of nature, viz. Quod terra manens vacua occupanti conceditur. So as, upon the firſt coming of the inhabitants to a new country, he who firſt enters upon ſuch part of it, and manures it, gains the property (as is now uſed in Cornwall, &c. by the laws of the Stannaries, under certain regulations, for which ſee the Stannary laws); ſo that it is the actual poſſeſſion and manurance of the land, which was the firſt cauſe of occupancy, and conſequently is to be gained by actual entry. Sid. 347. Geary v Bearcroft.

Where a man finds a piece of land which no other poſſeſſes or hath title unto, and enters upon the ſame, this gains a property, and a title by occupancy: but this manner of gaining property of lands has long ſince been of no uſe in England; for lands now poſſeſſed without any title are in the crown, and not in him who firſt enters. Ibid. 218. Though an eſtate for another's life, by our ancient laws may be gotten by occupancy: As for example; ſuppoſe A. had lands granted to him for the life of B. and died without making any eſtate of it; in ſuch caſe, whoever firſt entered into the land after the death of A. got the property for the remainder of the eſtate granted to A. for the life of B. For to the heir of A. it could not go, not being an eſtate of inheritance, but only an eſtate for another man's life; which was not deſcendible to the heir, unleſs he be ſpecially named in the grant: And the executors of A. could not have it, as it was not an eſtate teſtamentary, that it ſhould go to the executor as goods and chattels; ſo that in truth no man could intitle himſelf unto thoſe lands: therefore the law preferred him who firſt entered and he was called occupans, and ſhould hold the land during the life of B. paying the rent, and performing the covenants, &c. Bac. Elem. 1. And not only if tenant pur terme d'auter vie died, living ceſtuy que vie; but if tenant for his own life granted over his eſtate to another, and the grantee died before him, there ſhould be an occupant. Co. Lit. 41, 388. But this doctrine is altered by ſtatute. See poſt.

A man cannot be an occupant but of a void poſſeſſion; and it is not every poſſeſſion of a perſon entering that can make an occupancy, for it muſt be ſuch as will maintain treſpaſs without farther entry. Vaugh. 191, 192. Carter 65. 2 Keb. 250. There can be no occupancy by any perſon of what another hath a preſent right to poſſeſs: Occupancy by law muſt be of things which have natural exiſtence, as of land, &c. and not of rents, advowſons, fairs, markets, tithes, &c. which lie in grant, and are incorporeal rights and eſtates; and there cannot be an occupant of a copyhold eſtate. Vaugh. 190. Mod. ca. 66. And occupancy of land in our law now ſeldom happens; leaſes and grants being generally made to the leſſees or grantees, and their heirs, during the life of ceſtuy que vie, whereby the lands for the remainder of the term deſcend to the heir, &c. Wood's Inſt. 216. By ſtatute, any eſtate pur auter vie ſhall be deviſeable by will in writing; and if no deviſe thereof be made, but the heir become ſpecial occupant, it ſhall be aſſets in his hands by deſcent to pay debts; and if there be no ſpecial occupant, it ſhall go to the executors or adminiſtrators of the party who had the eſtate, and be aſſets in their hands.

29 Car. 2. c. 3. It hath been adjudged, that an heir, executor, &c. ſhall be charged on this ſtatute with payment of debts only, not legacies, except deviſed particularly out of the eſtate; and that an eſtate pur auter vie belonging to an inteſtate, was not diſtributable, for notwithſtanding the alteration by the ſtatute, it remains a freehold ſtill; and the amendment of the law in this particular, was only deſigned for the relief of creditors; that if it came to the heir by reaſon of a ſpecial occupancy, it ſhould be in his hands aſſets by diſcent, that is, liable to the payment of thoſe debts where the heir is chargeable, and of thoſe only: but if there was no ſpecial occupant, then it ſhould go to the executors or adminiſtrators, i. e. they ſhall be in the room of the occupant, and it ſhall be aſſets in their hands, i. e. they ſhall be bound to pay the debts of the deceaſed to the value thereof; ſo that it is not ſo much as aſſets to pay legacies, except ſuch as are deviſed particularly thereout, the ſtatute making it aſſets only for this particular intent, to pay creditors: and no debts appearing in this caſe, the adminiſtrator is as it were the occupant, and ſhall not be compelled to make any diſtribution thereof, as he ſhall of goods and chattels, according to 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. Mich. 8 W. 3. B. R. 2 Salk. 464. Oldham v. Pickering.

The true ground of occupancy is, that anciently all trials of titles were by real actions, therefore he who had the freehold was one, to whom the law had a ſpecial regard. The ancient law, for many reſpects, did not allow leaſes for above 40 years, till 21 Hen. 8. 15. Beſides, there was reaſon too, that not only he who had right paramount, might know how to try his action, but that the lord might know how to avow for his ſervices (which were conſiderable things formerly); he ought to know who was his tenant, therefore the law provided there ſhould be a perſon on whom he ſhould avow; per Bridgman Ch. J. Cart. 65. in the caſe of Geary v. Bearcroft.

The ſubject and object of the occupant are only ſuch things as are capable of occupancy, and not the freehold at all; into which he neither doth, nor can enter; but the law caſts the freehold immediately upon him who hath made himſelf occupant of the land, or other real thing whereof he is occupant, that there may be a tenant to the præcipe; per Vaughan Ch. J. Hill. 19 & 20 Car. 2. in the caſe of Holden v. Smallbrooke.

See farther, 27 Aſſ. 31. 2 Rol. Abr. 151. Cro. Eliz. 158. Lev. 201. Geary v. Bearcroft. 6 Mod. 63, 68. Mich. 2 Ann. B. R. Smartle v. Penhallow. See 16 Vin. Abr. tit. Occupant; and ſee Life-Eſtate.

Occupation, (occupatio) Signifies in our law uſe or tenure; as we ſay, ſuch land is in the tenure or occupation, of ſuch a man, that is, in his poſſeſſion or management: Alſo it is uſed for a trade or myſtery. 12 Car. 2. c. 18, 249. And occupationes at large are taken for purpreſtures, intruſions and uſurpations; and particularly for uſurpation upon the King, by the ſtat. de Bigamis, c. 4. 2 Inſt. 272.

Odhal right. Pontoppidan, in his Hiſtory of Norway (p. 290.) obſerves, that in the Northern languages ODH ſignifies proprietas, and ALL totum. Hence he derives the ODHAL right in thoſe countries; and hence too, perhaps, is derived the udal right in Finland, &c. (See Mac Doual. Inſt. par. 2.) Now the tranſpoſition of theſe Northern ſyllables, ALLHODH, will give us the true etymology of the allodium, or abſolute property of the Feudiſts; as, by a ſimilar combination of the latter ſyllable with the word FEE (which ſignifies a conditional reward or ſtipend) FEEHODH or feodum will denote ſtipendiary property. *Black. And the party committed, if intitled to be bailed, may have the cauſe of his commitment inquired into, and be diſcharged on bail, by ſuing out an habeas corpus. See Habeas Corpus. As to the writ De odio et atia, See Black. Com. 3 V. 128.

Oeconomus, Is ſometimes taken for an advocate or defender; as, ſummus ſecularium oeconomus & protector Eccleſiæ. Matt. Paris. anno 1245.

Oeconomicus, A word uſed for the executor of a laſt will and teſtament, as the perſon who had the oeconomy or fiduciary diſpoſal of the goods of the deceaſed. Hiſt. Dunelm. apud Whartoni Angl. Sacr. par. 1. pag. 784.

Offence, (delictum) Is an act committed againſt a law, or omitted where the law requires it, and puniſhable by it. Weſtm. Symb. And all offences are capital, or not: capital, thoſe for which the offender ſhall loſe his life: not capital, where an offender may forfeit his lands and goods, be fined or ſuffer corporal puniſhment, or both; but not loſs of life. H. P. C. 2, 126, 134. Capital offences are comprehended under high treaſon, petit treaſon, and felony: Offences not capital include the remaining part of the Pleas of the Crown, and come under the title of Miſdemeanors. An offence may be greater or leſs, according to the place wherein it is done. Finch. 25. But the offence will be in equal degree in them, who are equally tainted with it; and thoſe who act and conſent thereto, are alike offenders. 5 Rep. 80. Some offences are by the Common law; but moſt by ſtatutes.

Offerings, Are reckoned among perſonal tithes, payable by cuſtom to the parſon or vicar of the pariſh, either occaſionally, as at ſacraments, marriages, chriſtenings, churching of women, burials, &c. or at conſtant times, as at Eaſter, Chriſtmas, &c. Count. Parſ. Compan. 137. Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. Stat. 32 Hen. 8. cap 7. ſect. 2. inforces the payment of offerings according to the cuſtom and places where they grow due. Vide Oblations.

By ſtat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 13 ſect. 10. All perſons who ought to pay offerings, ſhall yearly pay to the parſon, vicar, proprietary, or their deputies, or farmers of the pariſhes where they dwell, at ſuch four offering-days as heretofore within the ſpace of four laſt years paſt hath been accuſtomed, and in default thereof ſhall pay for their ſaid offerings at Eaſter following.

The four offering-days are Chriſtmas, Eaſter, Whitſuntide, and the feaſt of the dedication of the pariſh-church. Gibſ. 739.

Offerings of the King, All offerings made at the Holy Altar by the King and Queen, are diſtributed amongſt the poor, by the dean of the chapel: There are twelve days in the year, called Offering Days, as to theſe offerings, viz. Chriſtmas, Eaſter, Whitſunday, All Saints, New Year's Day, Twelfth Day, Candlemas, Annunciation, Aſcenſion, Trinity Sunday, St. John Baptiſt, and Michaelmas Day: All which are high feſtivals. Lex Conſtitution. 184.

The offering commonly made by James 1. was a piece of gold, having on one ſide the portrait of the King kneeling before the altar, with four crowns before him; and circumſcribed with this motto, Quid retribuam Domino pro omnibus quæ tribuit mihi? And on the other ſide, a lamb lying near a lyon, with this inſcription, Cor contritum & humiliatum non deſpiciet Deus. Ibid.

Offertorium, Is uſed for a piece of ſilk, or fine linen, to receive and wrap up the offerings or occaſional oblations in the church. Statut. Eccl. S. Pauli London, MS. fol. 39.——Offertorium eſſe Sindonem ſericeam, ſeu linteamen, in quo fidelium oblationes reponebantur——Sometimes this word ſignifies the offerings of the faithful; or the place where they are made or kept: Sometimes the ſinging at the time of ſacrament, &c.

Office, (Officium) Signifies that function by virtue whereof a man hath ſome employment in the affairs of another, as of the King, or of another perſon. Cowell.

It is ſaid that the word officium principally implies a duty, and in the next place the charge of ſuch duty; and that it is a rule, that where one man hath to do with another's affairs againſt his will, and without his leave, that this is an office, and he who is in it, is an officer. Carth. 478.

There is a difference between an office and an employment, every office being an employment; but there are employments which do not come under the denomination of offices; ſuch as an agreement to make hay, plough land, herd a flock; &c. which differ widely from that of ſteward of a manor, &c. 2 Sid. 142.

By the ancient Common law, officers ought to be honeſt men, legal and ſage, & qui melius ſciat & poſſit officio illi intendere; And this, ſays Lord Coke, was the policy of prudent antiquity, that officers did ever give grace to the place, and not the place, only to grace the officer. 2 Inſt 32, 456.

Officers are diſtinguiſhed into civil and military, according to the nature of their ſeveral truſts. Carth. 479.

Officers are public, or private; and it is ſaid, that every man is a public officer, who hath any duty concerning the public; and he is not the leſs a public officer, where his authority is confined to narrow limits; becauſe it is the duty of his office, and the nature of that duty, which makes him a public officer, and not the extent of his authority. Carth. 479.

Alſo offices are diſtinguiſhed into ancient offices, and thoſe which are of a new creation; and herein it is obſervable, that conſtant uſage, hath not only ſanctified the firſt eſtabliſhment of ſuch ancient offices, as have exiſted time out of mind, but alſo hath preſcribed and ſettled the manner in which they have and are to continue to exiſt, in what manner to be exerciſed, how to be diſpoſed, &c. 9 Co. 97. Cro. Eliz. 636. 2 Roll. Abr. 182. Cro. Car. 513. 1 Show. 436.

There is alſo another diſtinction of offices into judicial, and miniſterial; the firſt, relating to the adminiſtration of juſtice, or the actual exerciſe thereof, muſt be executed by perſons of ſufficient capacity, and by the perſons themſelves to whom they are granted; and herein alſo ancient uſage and cuſtom muſt govern. 1 Jon. 109. Dav. 35. 9 Co. 97.

It may not be improper, here to conſider,

1. Who hath a right to create and grant, or aſſign an office; and of one office being incident to another.
2. Of the offence of buying and ſelling an office, and what offices are prohibited to be thus diſpoſed of.
3. What remedies a perſon having a right to an office muſt purſue, to be let into the enjoyment of it, and how a diſturbance is puniſhable.
4. Of the forfeiture of an office; and where for corruption, bribery, extortion, and oppreſſive proceedings, officers are puniſhable.

1. Who hath a right to create and grant, or aſſign an office; and of one office being incident to another.

The King is the univerſal officer and diſpoſer of juſtice within this realm, from whom all others are ſaid to be derived; yet he cannot creat a new office inconſiſtent with our conſtitution, or prejudicial to the ſubject. 12 Co. 116. 1 Rol. Rep. 206. Carth. 478.

There are three things, ſays Lord Coke, which have fair pretences, yet are miſchievous; 1ſt, new courts; 2d, new offices; 3d. new corporations for trade; and as to new offices, either in courts or out of them, theſe, cannot be erected without act of parliament; for that under the pretence of common good, they are exerciſed to the intolerable grievance of the ſubject. 2 Inſt. 540.

An office granted by letters patent for the ſole making of all bills, informations and letters miſſive in the council of York, was held unreaſonable and void. 1 Jon. 231, Mounſon v. Lyſter.

One Chute petitioned the King to erect a new office for regiſtring all ſtrangers within the realm, except merchant ſtrangers, and to grant the office to the petitioner with or without a fee; and it was reſolved by all the judges, that the erection of ſuch new offices for the benefit of a private perſon, was againſt all law, of what nature ſoever. 1 Co. 116. and ſeveral caſes there cited to this purpoſe.

The King cannot grant to any perſon to hold a court of equity, tho' he may grant tenere placita; for the diſpenſation of equity is a ſpecial truſt committed to the King, and not by him to be intruſted with any other, except his Chancellor. Hob. 63.

Where-ever one office is incident to another, ſuch incident office is regularly grantable by him who hath the principal office; and on this foundation it hath been held, that the King's grant of the office of county clerk was void, it being inſeparably incident to the office of ſheriff, and could not by any law or contrivance be taken away from him. 4 Co. 32. Mitton's caſe.

So the office of chamberlain of the King's Bench priſon is inſeparably incident to the office of marſhal; therefore a grant of the office of marſhal with a reſervation of the office of chamberlain is void. 1 Salk. 439. Per Holt Ch. J. 1 Leon. 320, 321.

So it hath been reſolved, that the office of Exigenter of London and other counties in England, is incident to the office of Chief Juſtice of C. B. that therefore a grant thereof by the King, though in the vacancy of a Chief Juſtice, is null and void. Dyer 175. a. pl. 25. 1 And. 152. and ſee Show. Par. Ca. Sir Rowland Holt's caſe.

Lord Coke ſays, that the juſtices of courts did ever appoint their clerks, ſome of which after by preſcription grew to be officers in their courts; and this right which they had of conſtituting their own officers, is further confirmed to them by Weſtm. 2. c. 30. The reaſons are; 1ſt, For that the law ever appoints thoſe who have the greateſt knowledge and ſkill, to perform that which is to be done. 2dly, The officers and clerks are but to enter, inrol, or effect that which the juſtices adjudge, award or order; the inſufficient doing whereof maketh the proceeding of the juſtices erroneous, than which nothing can be more diſhonourable and grievous to the juſtices, and prejudicial to the party. 2 Inſt. 425. 4 Mod. 173. cited.

2. Of the offence of buying and ſelling an office, and what offices are prohibited to be thus diſpoſed of.

The taking, or giving, of a reward for offices of a public nature is ſaid to be bribery; and nothing can be more prejudicial to the good of the public, than to have places of the higheſt concern, (on the due execution whereof, the happineſs of both King and people depends,) diſpoſed of not to thoſe who are moſt able to execute, but to thoſe who are moſt able to pay for them; nor can any thing be a greater diſcouragement to induſtry and virtue, than to ſee thoſe places of truſt and honour, which ought to be the rewards of thoſe who by their induſtry have qualified themſelves for them, conferred on ſuch who have no other recommendation, but that of being higheſt bidders; neither can any thing be a greater temptation to officers to abuſe their power by bribery and extortion, and other acts of injuſtice, than the conſideration of the great expences they were at in gaining their places, and the neceſſity of ſometimes ſtraining a point, to make their bargain anſwer their expectations. 2 Inſt. 148. 1 Hawk. P. C. 166—8, 9. It is ſaid to be malum in ſe, and indictable at Common law. Noy 102. Moor 781.

For which reaſons among many others, it is expreſsly enacted by 12 R. 2. c. 2. That the chancellor, treaſurer, keeper of the Privy ſeal, ſteward of the King's houſe, the King's chamberlain, clerk of the rolls of the juſtices of the one bench and of the other, barons of the Exchequer, and all others who ſhall be called to ordain, name, or make juſtices of the peace, ſheriffs, eſcheators, cuſtomers, comptrollers, or any other officer or miniſter of the King, ſhall be firmly ſworn that they ſhall not ordain, name or make any of the above-mentioned officers for any gift or brokage, favour or affection; nor that none who ſueth by himſelf, or by others, privily or openly, to be in any manner of office, ſhall be put in the ſame office, or in any other, but that they make all ſuch officers and miniſters, of the beſt, and moſt moſt lawful men, and ſufficient to their eſtimation and knowledge.

And by the 4 H. 4. c. 5. it is enacted, That no ſheriff ſhall let his bailiwick to farm to any man for the time he occupieth ſuch office.

But the principal ſtatute relating to this matter is the 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 16.

Whereby it is enacted, That if any perſon bargain or ſell any office, or deputation of any office, or any part of any of them, or receive any money, fee, &c. directly or indirectly, or take any promiſe, &c. to receive any money, &c. directly, or indirectly, for any office, or for the deputation of any office, or any part of any of them; or to the intent that any perſon ſhould have, exerciſe or enjoy any office, or the deputation of any office, or any part of any of them, which ſhall in any wiſe concern the adminiſtration or execution of juſtice, or the receipt, &c. of any of the King's treaſure, &c. or the keeping of any of the King's towns, &c. being for a place of ſtrength and defence; or which ſhall concern or touch any clerkſhip to be occupied in any manner of court of record wherein juſtice is to be miniſtred; that then every perſon, that ſhall ſo offend, ſhall not only loſe and forfeit all his and their right, intereſt and eſtate, in or to any of the ſaid office or offices, &c. but alſo perſons who ſhall give or pay any ſum of money, &c. or ſhall make any promiſe, &c. ſhall immediately be adjudged a diſabled perſon in the law to all intents and purpoſes to have, &c. the ſaid office, &c.

“ It is further enacted, That bargains, ſales, promiſes, bonds, agreements, covenants and aſſurances, ſhall be void to and againſt him and them, by whom any ſuch bargain, &c. ſhall be made.”

“ Provided always, That this act ſhall not extend to any office, whereof any perſon is ſeiſed of any eſtate of inheritance; nor to any office of parkerſhip, or of the keeping of any park-houſe, manor, garden, chaſe or foreſt, or to any of them.”

“ It is alſo provided, That this act ſhall not be prejudicial to the chief juſtices of the King's Bench or Common Pleas, or the juſtices of aſſiſe; but that they may do in every behalf, concerning any office to be given or granted by them, as they might have done before the making this act.”

In the conſtruction of the laſt mentioned ſtatute, the following opinions have been holden.

1. That the office of chancellor, regiſter and commiſſary in eccleſiaſtical courts, are within the meaning of the ſtatute, inaſmuch as thoſe courts do not only determine matters which are brought before them pro ſalute animæ, but alſo have the deciſion of diſputes concerning the lawfulneſs of matrimony, and legitimation of children, which touch the inheritance of the ſubject; and alſo hold plea of legacies and tithes, &c. in which reſpects they are courts of juſtice. Cro. Jac. 269. 3 Inſt. 148. 12 Co. 78. Salk. 468. 3 Lev. 287. 2 Vent. 187, 267.

2. It hath been adjudged, that offices in fee are out of the ſtatute; for if the King be ſeiſed in fee of a bailiwick, and he demiſe the ſame to A. who demiſes to B. rendring the demiſe to B. is not within the ſtatute; for offices in fee being excepted out of the ſtatute, under leaſes, of ſuch offices, are alſo excepted incluſively. 2 Lev. 151. Ellis v. Ruddle.

3. It hath been reſolved, that the place of cofferer is within this ſtatute, and a perſon having once purchaſed this place is for ever diſabled to enjoy the ſame; and that the King is bound by this ſtatute. 3 Bulſt. 91. Sir Arthur Ingram's caſe. Co. Lit. 234. S. C. and there ſaid, that the King could not diſpenſe with this ſtatute by any non obſtante. Cro. Jac. 385. S. C. cited.

4. It hath been agreed, that the ſale of a bailiwick of a hundred is not within the ſtatute, for ſuch an office doth not concern the adminiſtration of juſtice, nor is it an office of truſt. 4 Leon. 33. Godbolt's caſe. 4 Mod. 223. S. C. cited.

5. It hath been adjudged, that a ſeat in the ſix clerks office is not within the ſtatute, being a miniſterial office only; and they are but under-clerks, who have ſo much a ſheet for copying, &c. but one judge held it not ſaleable at Common law for the following reaſons; 1ſt, Diſcouragement of merit and induſtry. 2dly, It occaſions extortion and exaction of exceſſive fees. 3dly, From its being a great charge to ſuits, 4thly, It exempts the perſons, who enter, by theſe means, in a great meaſure from the due regulations under which they ought to be; for they are not ſo eaſily removed, as if they were at the will of him who hath the diſpoſal of them. Paſch. 26 Car. 2. in C. B. Sparrow v. Reynolds.

6. It has been held, that this ſtatute doth not extend to military officers; and that the 7 W. & M. which requires, that every commiſſion officer, before his commiſſion is regiſtred, ſhould take the oath there mentioned, that he had not directly or indirectly given any thing for procuring the commiſſion, but the uſual fees, extended only to horſe, foot and dragoons, but not to the marines. Preced. Chan. 199.

7. It hath been adjudged, that the ſale of the deputation of the office of provoſt marſhal of Jamaica, is not within this ſtatute; becauſe this ſtatute does not extend to the plantations. 4 Mod. 222. Salk. 411. Blankard v. Galdy. 2 Mod. 45. S. P. undetermined, and there ſaid arguendo, that ſo good a law ſhould have as extenſive a conſtruction as poſſible.

8. In a writ on a judgment in Ireland, it was held clearly that the office of clerk of the crown, and clerk of the peace, was within the ſtatute; but that this law did not extend to Ireland, not being enacted there. Trin. 9 Geo. 2. in B. R. Maccarty v. Wickford.

9. It hath been held, that one who makes a contract for an office, contrary to the purport of this ſtatute, is ſo far, diſabled to hold the ſame that he cannot at any time during life be reſtored to a capacity of holding it by any grant or diſpenſation whatſoever. Hob. 75. Co. Lit. 234. Cro. Car. 361. Cro. Jac. 386.

10. It is held, that where an office is within the ſtatute, and the ſalary is certain, if the principal make a deputation, reſerving a leſſer ſum out of the ſalary, it is good; ſo if the profits be uncertain ariſing from fees, if the principal make a deputation, reſerving a certain ſum out of the fees and profits of the office, it is good; for in theſe caſes the deputy by his conſtitution is in place of his principal, yet he has no right to his fees, they ſtill continue to be the principal's; ſo that as to him it is only reſerving a part of his own, and giving away the reſt to another; but where the reſervation or agreement is not to pay out of the profits, but to pay generally a certain ſum, it muſt be paid at all events; and a bond for performance of ſuch agreement is void by the ſtatute. Salk. 468. 6 Mod. 234. Godolphin v. Tudor. Comb. 356. S. P.

11. It hath been held, that this being a public law, the judges ex officio are to take notice of it; but yet it ſeems the more regular and ſafe way to plead it; but it hath been reſolved, that a perſon in pleading this ſtatute need not alledge, that the party againſt whom it is pleaded is not within any of the proviſo's or exceptions in the ſtatute; but that if he be, it muſt come on his ſide to ſhew it. Trin. 9 Geo. 2. in B. R. Maccarty v. Wickford. Sed qu. Alſo vide 2 And. 55, 107. Smith v. Coteleſhill. vide Ld. Raym. 1245.

3. What remedies a perſon having a right to an office muſt purſue, to be let into the enjoyment of it, and how a diſturbance is puniſhable.

It is held clearly, that an aſſiſe lay at Common law for an office, and that therefore tho' the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 25. ſpeaks only of offices in fee, yet an aſſiſe lies for an office in tail, or for life; but this is to be underſtood of offices of profit, for of an office of charge and no profit, an aſſiſe does not lie. 8 Co. 47. a. John Webb's caſe. 2 Inſt. 412. S. P.

But a man ſhall not have an aſſiſe of the whole office, unleſs he be diſſeiſed of the whole; yet if a man be diſſeiſed of parcel of the profits of an office, he may have an aſſiſe for that parcel only. 8 Co. 49. b. 2 Inſt. 412.

In an aſſiſe for an office newly erected and conſtituted, the demandant in his plaint muſt ſhew what fee or profit is granted for the exerciſe thereof; for this office cannot have a fee or profit appurtenant to it, as an ancient office may, and for an office without fee or profit no aſſiſe lies. 8 Co. 49. Webb's caſe.

But in an aſſiſe for an ancient office, the demandant in his plaint need not ſhew what fee or profit is belonging to it, for it ſhall be intended there is ſome fee or profit. 8 Co. 49.

In an aſſiſe for an office, the demandant muſt ſhew a ſeiſin; but it hath been held, that taking 3 d. for a capias againſt B. is ſufficient ſeiſin of the office of filizer de banco. 1 Rol. Abr. 270.

Alſo in an aſſiſe for an office, the demandant in his patent muſt ſet forth a title. 3 Mod. 273. Savier v. Lenthal.

An aſſiſe lies for the office of regiſter of the admiralty; for though their proceedings are according to the Civil law, yet the right of their office is determinable at the Common law; ſo of the maſterſhip of an hoſpital, being a lay fee. 8 Co. 47. 2 Inſt. 412. 11 Co. 99. b. Dyer 152.

A man may bring an action on the caſe for the profits of an office, tho' he never had ſeiſin. 1 Mod. 122. per Hale Ch. J.

An action by a perſon claiming an office againſt the perſon in actual poſſeſſion and receiving the fees is perhaps the moſt eligible method that can be purſued, to try the queſtion of right.

If the King grant the office of comptroller of the cuſtoms to A. and B. durante beneplacito, and A. dies, and afterwards the King grants the ſaid office to C. and yet B. under pretence of ſurvivorſhip, exerciſes the ſaid office, and receives the profits thereof; C. may have an indebitatus aſſumpſit for ſo much money had and received to his uſe. 2 Mod. 260. adjudged upon a ſpecial verdict between Arris v. Stukely. Alſo vide 2 Lev. 108. Cragg v. Norfolk. And 1 Mod. 122.

4. Of the forfeiture of an office; and where for corruption, bribery, extortion, and oppreſſive proceedings, officers are puniſhable.

It is laid down in general, that if an officer acts contrary to the nature and duty of his office, or if he refuſes to act at all, that in theſe caſes the office is forfeited. 11 Ed. 4. 1. b. 2 Roll. Abr. 155.

But herein it will be neceſſary to conſider more minutely, what ſhall be ſaid to be ſuch acts as are contrary to the duty of his office, and how far the ſame (whether they are acts of omiſſion or commiſſion) amount to a forfeiture; wherein it hath been clearly agreed, that a gaoler by ſuffering voluntary eſcapes, by abuſing his priſoners, by extorting unreaſonable fees from them, or by detaining them in gaol after they have been legally diſcharged, and paid their juſt fees, forfeits his office; for that in the grant of every office it is implied, that the grantee execute it faithfully, and diligently. Co. Lit. 233. 9 Co 50. 3 Mod. 143.

But it is held, that one negligent eſcape is not a forfeiture, though a voluntary one is, but that two negligent eſcapes amount to a forfeiture. 39 Hen. 6. 33. 2 Roll. Abr. 155. 2 Vern. 173. and ſee ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 27. tit. Gaoler.

There are, ſays Lord Coke, three cauſes of forfeiture or ſeizure of offices by matter in deed. 1ſt, By Abuſer. 2dly, Nonuſer. 3dly, Refuſal.

1ſt, Abuſer; as by a marſhal or other gaoler's permitting eſcapes.

2dly, By nonuſer; in which there is this difference, when the office concerns the adminiſtration of juſtice or the commonwealth, the officer ex officio ought to attend without requeſt, there by nonuſer or non-attendance the office is forfeited; but where an officer is not obliged to attend, but upon demand or requeſt made by him whoſe officer he is, there, without ſuch demand or requeſt, there can be no forfeiture; and herein alſo Lord Coke in another place takes the following diverſity, viz. that non-uſer of itſelf, without ſome ſpecial damage, is no forfeiture of private offices, but that it is otherwiſe of a public one, which concerns the adminiſtration of juſtice.

3dly, As to refuſal, he ſays, that in all caſes where an officer is bound upon requeſt, to exerciſe his office, if he does not do it upon requeſt, he forfeits it; as if the ſteward of a manor be requeſted by the lord to hold a court, if he does not do it, it is a forfeiture. 6 Co. 50. Co. Lit. 233. b.

If a gaoler leave his priſon door unlocked, and the priſoners eſcape, it is not only a negligent but a voluntary eſcape. Cro. Car. 492. per cur'.

If conditions in law, which are annexed to offices, be not obſerved and fulfilled, the office is loſt for ever, for theſe conditions are as ſtrong and binding as expreſs conditions; therefore if the office of foreſter, &c. deſcend to an infant or feme covert, (where by law they may ſo deſcend) and theſe are not exerciſed by ſufficient deputies, they become forfeited. Co. Lit. 233. b. 8 Co. 44. Cro. Car. 556. Hard. 11.

Inſufficiency is an original incapacity which creates the forfeiture of an office; ſo if a ſuperior puts in a deputy into an office, which may be exerciſed by deputy, who is ignorant and unſkilful, this is a forfeiture of the office. 4 Mod. 29. arguendo.

If the King grants an office in any of the courts at Weſtminſter, the judges may remove an officer for inſufficiency, and they are the proper judges of his abilities. 4 Mod. 30. arguendo. Where an officer may be removed, but not abridged of his fee. 1 Roll. Rep. 82-3.

A philizer of C. B. being abſent two years, and having farmed out his office from year to year, without licence of the court, was diſcharged by the Chief Juſtice, ex aſſenſu ſociorum ſuorum, by words ſpoken openly in court; and tho' there was no record made of the diſcharge, nor no legal ſummons for him to anſwer to any accuſation, yet the diſcharge was held good. Dyer 114. b. pl. 64. 1 Roll. Abr. 155. S. C.

An officer was turned out, becauſe that he ſpoliavit quædam recorda contra officii ſui debitum; and it was objected, 1ſt, That it was not certain enough, becauſe not ſhewn what records: to which the court anſwered, that it would be prolix, and then he having ſpoiled the records, they are not perhaps to be had. 2d objection, That it may be he did it by chance, and not wilfully; to which the court ſaid, that the concluſion contra officii ſui debitum includes that. 1 Keb. 597. Pilkington's caſe.

But if the King grants an office which concerns truſt and diligence to two, and one is attainted, the entire office is forfeited to the King; for he cannot make one occupy in common with another. Plow. 180.

Wherever an officer, who holds his office by patent, commits a forfeiture, he cannot regularly be turned out without a ſcire facias, nor can he be ſaid to be compleatly, ouſted or diſcharged without a writ of diſcharge; for his right appearing of record, the ſame muſt be defeated by matter of as high a nature. But for this ſee Dyer 155, 198, 211. 9 Co. 98. Co. Lit. 233. Cro. Car. 60, 61. 1 Sid. 81, 134. 8 Co. 44. b. 1 Roll. Abr. 580. 3 Mod. 335. 3 Lev. 288.

All officers are puniſhable for corruption, and oppreſſive proceedings, according to the nature of the offence, either by indictment, attachment, action at the ſuit of the party injured, loſs of their offices, &c. 6 Mod. 96.

But beſides the puniſhment by indictment, &c. all courts of record have a diſcretionary power over their officers, and are to ſee that no abuſes are committed by them, which may bring diſgrace on the courts themſelves: The court of King's Bench, by the plenitude of its power, exerciſes a ſuperintendency over all inferior courts, and may grant an attachment againſt the judges of ſuch courts for oppreſſive, unjuſt, or irregular practice, contrary to the obvious rules of natural juſtice. Dyer 218. Palm. 564. 1 Salk. 210.

As to extortion by officers, it is ſo odious, (being more henious, as Lord Coke ſays, than robbery, as it is uſually attended with the aggravating ſin of perjury,) that it is puniſhable at Common law by fine and impriſonment, and alſo by removal from the office in the execution whereof it was committed; and is defined to be, the taking of money, by any officer, by colour of his office, either where none is due, or not ſo much is due, or where it is not yet due. But the ſtated and known fees allowed by the courts of juſtice to their reſpective officers, for their labour and trouble, are not reſtrained by the Common law, or by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. therefore ſuch fees may be legally demanded, without danger of extortion. 21 Hen. 7. 17. Co. Lit. 368.

Alſo it ſeems, that an officer, who takes a reward voluntarily given him, and which has been uſual in certain caſes, for the more diligent or expeditious performance of his duty, cannot be ſaid to be guilty of extortion; for without ſuch premium it would be impoſſible, in many caſes, to have the law executed with vigour and ſucceſs. 2 Inſt. 210. 3 Inſt. 149. Co. Lit. 368.

But it has been always held, that a promiſe to pay an officer money, for doing a thing which the law will not ſuffer him to take any thing for, is merely void, however voluntarily it may appear to have been made. 1 *Rol. As to bribery it is ſaid, in a large ſenſe, to be the receiving, or offering, of any undue reward, by, or to, any perſon, whoſe ordinary profeſſion relates to the adminiſtration of public juſtice, in order to incline him to a thing, againſt the known rules of honeſty; but in ſtrict ſenſe, it ſignifies the taking any thing valuable, by one in a judicial place, for executing his office, or by colour of his office, but of the King only; alſo it ſignifies the taking or giving a reward, for offices of a public nature, which manifeſtly tending to diſcourage men, and to introduce corruption, is highly puniſhable by the Common law. Forteſcue de Laud. cap. 51. 3 Inſt. 145, 149. Hob. 9. *Cro. It is ſaid, that at Common law bribery in a judge, in relation to a cauſe depending before him, was looked upon as an offence of ſo heinous a nature, that it was ſometimes puniſhed as high treaſon, before the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. 3 Inſt. 145. 1 Leon. 291. *Cro. Alſo it is ſaid, in general, that all wilful breaches, of the duty of an office, are forfeitures of it, and puniſhable by fine, &c. for ſince every office is inſtituted, not for the ſake of the officer, but for the good of ſome other, nothing can be more juſt, than that he, who either neglects or refuſes to anſwer the end, for which his office was ordained, ſhould give way to others, who are both able and willing to take care of it, and that he ſhould be puniſhed for his neglect or oppreſſive execution: but the particular inſtances wherein a man may be ſaid to act contrary to the duty of his office, though various, are yet ſo generally obvious, that it is needleſs to enumerate them. *Co. Offices of the Government. The parliament in former times had a right in nominating, placing, and diſplacing the Great Officers of the Kingdom, when they corrupted or miſcounſelled the King, of which many inſtances may be given. Pryn.

Office found, Is where an inquiſition is made to the King's uſe, of any thing by virtue of his office who inquireth, and it is found by the inquiſition. In this ſignification it is uſed in the ſtat. 23 H. 8. c. 20. and Staundford's Prærog. pag. 60. where to traverſe an office, is to traverſe an inquiſition taken of office: And to return an office, is to return that which is found by virtue of the office. Kitch. 177.

There are two kinds of offices iſſuing out of the Exchequer by commiſſion, viz. an office to intitle the King, in the thing enquired of; and an office of inſtruction. 6 Rep. 52. The office of intitling, doth veſt the eſtate and poſſeſſion of the land, &c. in the King, who had therein before only a right or title; as where an alien purchaſes lands, a perſon is attaint of ſelony, or the like: And the other office, is where land is veſted and ſettled before in the King, but the particular thereof doth not appear upon record. 4 Rep. 58. Plowd. 484. And the effect of this office is, that the King, from the time of finding, ſhall be anſwered the profits without entry, &c. 5 Rep. 32. 10 Rep. 115. If any office be wrongfully found: Thoſe who are grieved, may be relieved by a traverſe, or Monſtrans de Droit, by pleading or petition: For every office is in nature of a declaration, to which any man may plead, and either deny or confeſs, &c. Plowd 448. Bro. 506. Where offices are found before the eſcheators, they muſt be delivered by indenture under the hands and ſeals of the jurors. Dyer 170. The King by the Common law is not in poſſeſſion of lands, forfeited for treaſon, during the life of the offender, without an office found: But the lands whereof a perſon attainted of high treaſon, dies ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee, are actually veſted in the King, without any office; becauſe they cannot deſcend, the blood being corrupted, and the freehold ſhall not be in abeyance. 2 Hawk. P. C. 448. Vide ſtat. 33 H. 8. c. 20.

There may be an office, and Scire facias, and ſeizure on ſuch office, &c. See Inquiſition. And Black. Com. 3 V. 258, 259.

Office of the Court. It is the office of the Courts at Weſtminſter, to take notice of cuſtoms of London, &c. and to allow many things, grant new trials, prohibitions, &c.

Official, (officialis) By the ancient Civil law, ſignifies him who is the miniſter of or attendant upon a magiſtrate. In the Canon law, it is he to whom any biſhop generally commits the charge of his ſpiritual juriſdiction; and in this ſenſe there is one in every dioceſe called Officialis Principalis, whom the law ſtiles Chancellor; and the reſt, if there are more, are by the Canoniſts termed Officialis foranei, but by us Commiſſaries. In our ſtatutes this word ſignified properly him whom the Archdeacon ſubſtitutes for the executing his juriſdiction, as appears by ſtat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 15. The archdeacon hath an official, or church lawyer to aſſiſt him, who is judge of the archdeacon's court. Wood's Inſt. 30, 505.

Officiariis non faciendis vel amovendis, Is a writ directed to the magiſtrates of a corporation, requiring them not to make ſuch a man an officer, or to put one out of the office he hath, until inquiry is made of his manners, &c. Reg. Orig. 126.

Oppreſſion, In a private ſenſe, is the trampling upon or bearing down one, on pretence of law, which is unjuſt: But where the law is known and clear, though it be unequitable, the judges muſt determine according to that. Vaugh. 37. In another ſignification, it is ſaid by Forteſcue, that all the unjuſt methods invented by princes, to extort money from their ſubjects, are ſo many fountains of oppreſſion, which never dry up; for ſucceeding Kings ſeldom fail to follow the example of their predeceſſors. Forteſc. Laud. Leg. Angl.

Oppreſſion of the Crown, how Remedied. The learned Blackſtone, treating of the King, his dignity, &c. and obſerving that no ſuit or action can be brought againſt him, even in civil matters, becauſe no court can have juriſdiction over him, proceeds as follows,

Are then, it may be aſked, the ſubjects of England totally deſtitute of remedy, in caſe the crown ſhould invade their rights, either by private injuries, or public oppreſſions? To this we may anſwer, that the law has provided a remedy in both caſes.

And, firſt, as to private injuries; if any perſon has, in point of property, a juſt demand upon the King, he muſt petition him in his court of Chancery, where his Chancellor will adminiſter right as a matter of grace, though not of COMPULSION: And this is entirely conſonant to what is laid down by the writers on natural law. "A ſubject, "(ſays Puffendorf) ſo long as he continues a ſubject, "hath no way to oblige his prince to give him his due, "when he refuſes it; though no wiſe prince will ever "refuſe to ſtand to a lawful contract. And, if the prince "gives the ſubject leave to enter an action againſt him, "upon ſuch contract, in his own courts, the action itſelf "proceeds rather upon natural equity, than upon the municipal laws." For the end of ſuch action is not to compel the prince to obſerve the contract, but to PERSUADE him. And, as to perſonal wrongs; it is well obſerved by Mr. Locke, "The harm which the ſovereign can do "in his own perſon not being likely to happen often, "nor to extend itſelf far; nor being able by his ſingle "ſtrength to ſubvert the laws, nor oppreſs the body of "the people, (ſhould any prince have ſo much weakneſs "and ill nature as to endeavour to do it)——the inconveniency therefore, of ſome particular miſchiefs, that "may ſometimes happen, when an heady prince comes "to the throne, are well recompenſed by the peace of "the public and ſecurity of the government, in the perſon of the chief magiſtrate being thus ſet out of the "reach of danger."

Next, as to caſes of ordinary public oppreſſion, where the vitals of the conſtitution are not attacked, the law hath alſo aſſigned a remedy. For, as a King cannot miſuſe his power, without the advice of evil counſellors, and the aſſiſtance of wicked miniſters, theſe men may be examined and puniſhed. The conſtitution has therefore provided, by means of indictments, and parliamentary impeachments, that NO MAN SHALL DARE TO ASSIST THE CROWN IN CONTRADICTION TO THE LAWS OF THE LAND. But it is at the ſame time a maxim in thoſe laws, that the King himſelf can do no wrong; ſince it would be a great weakneſs and abſurdity in any ſyſtem of poſitive law, to define any poſſible wrong, without any poſſible redreſs.

For, as to ſuch public oppreſſions as tend to diſſolve the conſtitution, and ſubvert the fundamentals of government, they are caſes which the law will not, out of decency, ſuppoſe: Being incapable of diſtruſting thoſe, whom it has inveſted with any part of the ſupreme power; ſince ſuch diſtruſt would render the exerciſe of that power precarious and impracticable. For, wherever the law expreſſes its diſtruſt of abuſe of power, it always veſts a ſuperior coercive authority in ſome other hand to correct it; the very notion of which deſtroys the ideas of ſovereignty. If therefore (for example) the two houſes of parliament, or either of them, had avowedly a right to animadvert on the King, or each other, or if the King had a right to animadvert on either of the houſes, that branch of the legiſlature, ſo ſubject to animadverſion, would inſtantly ceaſe to be part of the ſupreme power; the balance of the conſtitution would be over-turned; and that branch or branches, in which this juriſdiction reſided, would be completely ſovereign. The ſuppoſition of law therefore is, that neither the King, nor either houſe of parliament (collectively taken) is capable of doing any wrong; ſince in ſuch caſes the law feels itſelf incapable of furniſhing any adequate remedy. For which reaſon all oppreſſions, which may happen to ſpring from any branch of the ſovereign power, muſt neceſſarily be out of the reach of any ſtated rule, or expreſs legal proviſion: But, if ever they unfortunately happen, the prudence of the times muſt provide new remedies upon new emergencies.

Indeed, it is found by experience, that whenever the unconſtitutional oppreſſions, even of the ſovereign power, advance with gigantic ſtrides and threaten deſolation to a ſtate, MANKIND WILL NOT BE REASONED OUT OF THE FEELINGS OF HUMANITY; nor will ſacrifice their LIBERTY by a ſcrupulous adherence to thoſe political maxims, which were originally eſtabliſhed to preſerve it. Therefore, though the poſitive laws are ſilent, experience will furniſh us with a very remarkable caſe, wherein NATURE AND REASON PREVAILED. When King James the Second INVADED the fundamental conſtitution of the realm, the convention declared an abdication, whereby the throne was rendered vacant, which induced a new ſettlement of the crown. And ſo far as this precedent leads, and no farther, we may now be allowed to lay down the law of redreſs againſt public oppreſſion. If therefore any future prince ſhould endeavour to ſubvert the conſtitution by BREAKING the ORIGINAL CONTRACT between King and people, ſhould violate the fundamental laws, and ſhould withdraw himſelf out of the kingdom; we are now authorized to declare that this conjunction of circumſtances would amount to an abdication, and the throne would be thereby vacant. But it is not for us to ſay, that any one, or two, of theſe ingredients would amount to ſuch a ſituation; for there our precedent would fail us. In theſe therefore, or other circumſtances, which a fertile imagination may furniſh, ſince both law and hiſtory are ſilent, it becomes us to be ſilent too; leaving to future generations, whenever neceſſity and the ſafety of the whole ſhall require it, the EXERTION of thoſe INHERENT (though latent) POWERS OF SOCIETY, which no climate, no time, no conſtitution, no contract, can ever DESTROY or DIMINISH. Black. Com. 1 V. 243, 4, 5.

Optional Writ. A præcipe is an optional writ, i. e. it is in the alternative, commanding the defendant, to do the thing required, or ſhew the reaſon wherefore he hath not done it. There is another ſpecies of original writs called Peremptory, or a Si fecerit te ſecurum, from the words of the writ, which directs the ſheriff to cauſe the defendant to appear in court, without any option given him, provided the plaintiff gives the ſheriff ſecurity effectually to proſecute his claim. *Black. Ora. This was Saxon money or coin, valued at ſixteen pence, and ſometimes according to variation of the ſtandard at twenty pence. It is a word which often occurs in Domeſday, and the laws of King Canutus.

Orando pro Rege & Regno, An ancient writ. Before the Reformation, while there was no ſtanding collect for a ſitting parliament, when the Houſes of Parliament were met, they petitioned the King that he would require the biſhops and clergy to pray for the peace and good government of the realm, and for a continuance of the good underſtanding between his Majeſty and the eſtates of the kingdom; and accordingly the writ De Orando pro Rege & Regno was iſſued, which was common in the time of King Edw. 3. Ordeal, or Ordal, (ordalium) Is a Saxon word, compounded of or, magnum, and deal, or dele, judicium, or as others, from or, which in that language is privative, and del, part, that is, expers criminis, or Not guilty; but is uſed for a kind of purgation practiſed in ancient times, and in the Canon law called purgatio vulgaris. There were of this two ſorts, one by fire, another by water. Of theſe ſee Mr. Lambard, in his Explication of Saxon Words, verbo ordalium: of this you may read likewiſe Holingshed, fol. 98. and Hotoman eſpecially, Diſput. de Feud. p. 41. where, of five kinds of proofs, which he calleth, Feudales probationes, he maketh this the fourth, calling it Explorationem, & hujus furioſæ probationis 6, genera fuiſſe animadvertit, viz. per flammam, per aquam, per ferrum candens, per aquam vel gelidam vel ferventem, per fortes & per corpus Domini, of all which he alledgeth ſeveral examples out of hiſtory, very worthy reading. See Skene de verbor. Significat. verbo Machainum.

This ſeems to have been in uſe in the time of Henry the Second, as appeareth by Glanville, lib. 14. cap. 1, 2. See alſo Verſtegan, cap. 3. pag. 63, &c. See alſo Hoveden, 556. This Ordalian law was condemned by Pope Stephen the Second, and afterwards totally aboliſhed here by parliament, as appears by Rot. Paten. de Anno 2 Hen. 3. membr. 5. Cowell. Vide Leg. Edw. Confeſſ. cap. 9.

Anciently, when an offender being arraigned pleaded Not guilty, he might chooſe whether he would put himſelf for trial upon God and the country, by twelve men, as at this day, or upon God only; and then it was called the judgment of God, preſuming that he would deliver the innocent. Terms de Ley. 9 Rep. 32.

This trial was two ways, one by water, and another by fire: the water ordeal was performed either in hot or cold; in cold water the parties ſuſpected were adjudged innocent, if their bodies were not borne up by the water contrary to the courſe of nature; in hot water, they were to put their bare arms or legs into ſcalding water, which if they brought out without hurt, they were taken to be innocent of the crime.

Thoſe that were tried by the fire ordeal, paſſed barefooted and blind-fold over nine hot glowing plow-ſhares; or were to carry burning irons in their hands, uſually of one pound weight, which was called ſimple ordeal; or of two pounds, which was duplex; or of three pound weight, which was triplex ordalium; and accordingly as they eſcaped, they were judged innocent or nocent, acquitted or condemned: this fire ordeal was of freemen, and perſons for better condition; and the water ordeal for bondmen and ruſtics. Glanv. lib. 4. c. 1.

And the horrible trial by fire ordeal, in the firſt degree, Queen Emma, mother of Edward the Confeſſor, underwent on a ſuſpicion of her chaſtity: alſo an example of the ſecond kind is mentioned in our books of a company of perſons ſuſpected to be ſtealers of the King's deer, in the reign of King Wil. 2. who having carried burning irons without injury, on its being reported to the King, he received it with a remarkable indignation; and replied,

> Quid eſt id; Deus eſt juſtus Judex: Pereat qui deinceps hoc crediderit.

The monarch muſt mean, that God, whom his prieſts had taught him to worſhip, or conſider as God; was not the great Author of Nature.

The Saxons, beſides the trial by combat, commonly uſed their fire and water ordeals. See Black. Com. 4 V. 336, 407, 418.

Ordeffe, or Ordelfe, (effoſſio metalli, derived from the Saxon ore, metallum and delfan effodere) Is often uſed in charters of privileges, being taken for a liberty, whereby a man claims the ore found in his own ground, but properly is the ore lying under ground: as alſo a delfe of coal, is coal lying in veins under ground, before it is dug up. Cowell.

Ordels, Oaths and ordels, Was part of the privileges and immunities granted in old charters, meaning the right of adminiſtring oaths, and adjudging ordeal trials, within ſuch a precinct or liberty. Cowell.

Orders, Are of ſeveral ſorts, and by divers courts; as of the Chancery, King's Bench, &c. Orders of the court of Chancery, either of courſe or otherwiſe, are obtained on the petition or motion of one of the parties in a cauſe, or of ſome other intereſted in or affected by it; and they are ſometimes made on hearings, ſometimes by conſent of parties. Pract. Solic. 26. They are to be pronounced in open court, and drawn up by the Regiſter from his notes; and if there be any difficulty in adjuſting the notes, a ſummons is given by the regiſter for the clerk or ſolicitor of the other ſide to attend, whereupon they are ſettled, or the court is applied to, if it cannot be otherwiſe done: before the orders are entred and paſſed by the regiſter, the other ſide hath four days allowed to object againſt them, for which purpoſe copies are delivered; and when they are perfected, they are to be ſerved on the parties, or the clerk or ſolicitor employed by them. Ibid. If an order is of courſe, the ſolicitor uſually draws up the notes or minutes, and gives them to the regiſter's clerk, to draw up the order from; and when the order is drawn up, it is to be entered by the entring clerk, which muſt be within eight days from the pronouncing; then the regiſter paſſes and ſigns it, after which is the ſervice, &c. For not obeying an order, perſonally ſerved, a party may be committed.

Orders of the King's Bench, Are rules made by the court in cauſes there depending; and when they are drawn up and entered by the clerk of the rules, they become orders of the court. 2 Lil. 261. This court doth not take notice of orders made in Chancery, nor in any other court, ſo as to be bound by them; but will proceed according to their own rules and orders. Trin. 23 Car. B. R. And if a cauſe be put in the paper of cauſes, that it may be ſpoke unto in the matter of law, by the order of the court; and the attorney in the cauſe doth not attend at the day, the cauſe is to be put out of the paper, and not be put in again that term; except very good cauſe be ſhewn. Mich. 22 Car. B. R. 2 Lil. 261. The King's Bench hath power to quaſh any orders made at the public or private ſeſſions of the peace; or by any other commiſſioners, if they find good reaſon for it. Ibid.

See Sir George Cooke's Rules and Orders in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, and Caſes in Practice, 2 vols. 8vo. a very excellent work, from which many things in our modern books of practice are taken, though the authors have ſeldom been ſo ingenious as to acknowledge from whence they were taken, or to refer to any authorities, in many of thoſe inſtances.

Orders of Juſtices of Peace. Juſtices of peace, who make orders muſt be ſaid in ſuch orders to be juſtices of the county, for reſiding in the county is not ſufficient; but they need not be of the diviſion: it muſt alſo appear that one of the juſtices was of the quorum. 2 Salk. 474, 480. But ſee poſt. An order ſigned ſeparately by two juſtices of peace, not being preſent together at the doing it, was ruled naught upon the ſtatute 14 Car. 2 c. 12. See 1 Ld. Raym. 55. Alſo where it is ſaid, that two juſtices doth order inſtead of do, the ſingular number for the plural, it has been adjudged ill. 2 Raym. 1198. And if the name of the county be not in the body of orders, but only in the margin, they will be quaſhed: tho' ſome orders of removal with the name of the county in the margin, have been held good. Mich. 11 Geo. 1. Mod. Ca. in L. and E. 310. The ſeſſions of the peace, during all their ſeſſions, may alter or revoke their orders, and make a new order to vacate the former, though it be drawn up; as judgments in B. R. may be altered during the ſame term, the ſeſſions as well as the term being in law accounted as one day. Ibid. 606. And the quarter-ſeſſions is not bound to ſet forth the reaſon of their orders and judgments, no more than other courts. 2 Salk. 607. Juſtices of peace at the quarter-ſeſſions may rectify defects of form in orders, &c. upon appeals, and then ſhall determine the matters according to the merits of the caſe; and no orders ſhall be removed into B R. without entering into recognizance of 50*l*, to proſecute with effect, &c. otherwiſe the juſtices to confirm their order, by Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 19 By the Stat. 26 Geo 2. c. 27. No order of juſtices ſhall be ſet aſide for not inſerting that one of them is of the quorum. See Poor.

Order of ſeſſions muſt adjudge, and not ſtate the evidence only. 1 Wilſ. 74.

Ordinale, Is a book which contains the manner of performing divine offices: in quo ordinatur modus, &c.

Ordinance, (ordinatio) Is a law, decree, or ſtatute, variouſly uſed. Lit. Dict.

Ordinance of the Foreſt, (ordinatio foreſtæ) Is a ſtatute made touching matters and cauſes of the foreſt, anno 34 Ed. 1.

Ordinance of Parliament, Is ſaid to be the ſame with act of parliament; for in the Parliament Rolls acts of parliament are often called ordinances, and ordinances acts: but originally there ſeems to be this difference between them; that an ordinance was but a temporary act, by way of prohibition, which the Commons might alter or amend at their pleaſure; and an act of parliament is a perpetual law not to be altered but by King, Lords and Commons. Rot. Parl. 37 Ed. 3. Pryn's Animadver. on 4 Inſt. 13. And Sir Edward Coke ſays, that an ordinance of parliament is to be diſtinguiſhed from an act; in as much as the latter can be only made by the King and the three eſtates, whereas the former is by one or two of them. Co. Lit.

Ordinary, (ordinarius) Is a Civil law term, for any judge who hath authority to take cogniſance of cauſes in his own right, and not by deputation: by the Common law it is taken for him who hath ordinary or exempt and immediate juriſdiction in cauſes eccleſiaſtical, Co. Lit. 344. Stat. Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 19.

This name is applied to a biſhop who hath original juriſdiction; and an archbiſhop is the ordinary of the whole province, to viſit and receive appeals from inferior juriſdictions, &c. 2 Inſt. 398. 9 Rep. 41. Wood's Inſt. 25. The word ordinary is alſo uſed for every commiſſary or official of the biſhop, or other eccleſiaſtical judge, having judicial power: an archdeacon is an ordinary; and ordinaries may grant adminiſtration of inteſtate's eſtates, &c. Stat. 31 Ed. 3. c. 11. 9 Rep. 36. But the biſhop of the dioceſe is the true and only ordinary to certify excommunications, lawfulneſs of marriage, and ſuch eccleſiaſtical and ſpiritual acts to the judges of the Common law; for he is the perſon whom the court is to write to, in ſuch things. 2 Shep. Abr. 472.

For the ordinary's power, it is declared by many ſtatutes; as relating to viſiting hoſpitals, by 2 H. 5. c. 1. The certifying of baſtardy, &c. 9 H. 6. c. 11. Concerning queſtions of tithes, that ſhall come in debate before him. 27 H. 8. c. 20. Allowance of ſchoolmaſters, &c. 23 Eliz. c. 1. 1 Jac. 1. c. 4. If a man may keep a ſchool without licence of the ordinary, ſee Ld. Raym. 603. And their authority in general is reſtored, by 13 Car. 2. c. 12.

The ordinary's power and intereſt in a church, is of admitting, inſtituting and inducting parſons; of ſeeing and taking care that it be provided with a paſtor, by the patron who has the right of preſenting; or in his default, to beſtow the church on ſome proper perſon to ſerve the cure, &c. 1 Rol. Rep. 453. Before preſentation to a church, the ordinary may ſequeſter the profits; and during the vacation, it is ſaid he may make a leaſe. 1 Keb. 370. When the ordinaries or their miniſters have committed extortion or oppreſſion, they may be indicted, putting the things in certain, and in what manner, &c. 25 Ed. 3. c. 9.

Formerly clerks accuſed of crimes were delivered to the ordinary, and the bodies of ſuch clerks kept in the ordinary's priſon until tried before him by a jury of twelve clerks; and if condemned, they were liable to no greater puniſhment than degradation, loſs of goods, and the profits of their lands; unleſs they had been guilty of apoſtacy, &c. This was when they had the privilege of being tried only by eccleſiaſtical judges; which was ſo far indulged them, that after they had been once delivered to the ordinary, they could not be remanded to any temporal court, until the Stat. 8 Eliz. c. 4. 2 Hawk. P. C. 361.

No ornaments can be ſet up in a church, without conſent of the ordinary. 1 Strange 576. See Co. lib. 9. fol. 36. Henſloe's caſe. And the ſtatute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 19. 31 E. 3. c. 11. and 21 H. 8. cap. 5. 2 Inſt. cap. 19. See Brooke, Ordinary, and Lindewode in *cap. Indictment againſt an ordinary, &c. for extortion, muſt ſet forth the fact, 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 3. c. 9. See Adminiſtrator, Biſhop, Clergy, Hoſpitals.

Ordinary of Newgate, Is one who is attendant in ordinary upon condemned malefactors in that priſon, to prepare them for death; and he records the behaviour of ſuch perſons.

Ordinatione contra Servientes, A writ that lieth againſt a ſervant, for leaving his maſter contrary to the ſtatute. Reg. Orig. 189.

Ordination of Clergy. No man is capable of taking any eccleſiaſtical promotion, or dignity, unleſs he be ordained a prieſt, to qualify him for the ſame. A clerk is to be twenty-three years old, and have deacon's orders, before he can be admitted into any ſhare of the miniſtry: and a prieſt muſt be twenty-four years of age, before he ſhall be admitted into orders to preach, or to adminiſter the ſacraments; but the archbiſhop may diſpenſe with one to be made deacon at what age he pleaſes, tho' he cannot with one who is to be made a prieſt. 13 Eliz. c. 12.

Deacons and prieſts are to be ordained only on the four Sundays immediately following the Ember Weeks, except on urgent occaſions: and it is to be done in the cathedral or pariſh church where the biſhop reſides, in time of divine ſervice, and in the preſence of the archdeacon, dean, and two prebendaries, or of four other grave divines. And no biſhop ſhall admit any perſon into orders, without a title or aſſurance of being provided for; and before any are admitted, the biſhop ſhall examine them in the preſence of the miniſters, who aſſiſt him at the impoſition of hands; on pain, if he admits any not qualified, &c. of being ſuſpended by the archbiſhop from making either deacons or prieſts for two years. Can. 31, 34.

If any impediment be objected againſt one who is to be made either prieſt or deacon, at the time he is to be ordained, the biſhop is bound to ſurceaſe from ordaining him, until he ſhall be found clear of that impediment; and it is generally held, that whatever are good cauſes of deprivation, are alſo ſufficient cauſes to deny admiſſion to orders; as incontinency, drunkenneſs, illiterature, perjury, forgery, ſimony, hereſy, outlawry, baſtardy, &c. 2 Inſt. 631. 5 Rep. A perſon to be ordained prieſt, muſt bring a teſtimonial of four perſons, known to the biſhop, of his life and doctrine; and be able to give an account of his faith in Latin: and a deacon is not to be made a prieſt, unleſs he produce to the biſhop ſuch a teſtimonial of his life, &c. and that he hath been found faithful and diligent in executing the office of a deacon.

A biſhop ſhall not make any one deacon and miniſter, on the ſame day; for there muſt be ſome time to try the behaviour of a deacon in his office, before he is admitted to the order of prieſthood, which time is generally a year, but it may be ſhorter, on reaſonable cauſe allowed by the biſhop: prieſts and deacons are not only to ſubſcribe the thirty-nine articles, but take the oath of the King's ſupremacy, &c as directed and altered by Stat. 1 W. & M. ſt. 1 c. 1, 8. A prieſt by his ordination receives authority to preach the word, and adminiſter the Holy Sacraments, &c. (but he may not preach without licence from the biſhop, archbiſhop, or one of the univerſities.)

None but prieſts are capable of any benefice, or dignity, or of adminiſtring the ſacrament, 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 4. ſect 14.

The Stat. 31 Eliz. cap. 6. puniſhes corrupt ordination of prieſts, &c. If any perſons ſhall take any reward, or other profit, to make and ordain a miniſter, or to licenſe him to preach, they ſhall forfeit 40*l.* and the party ſo ordained, &c. 10*l.* by this ſtatute.

Ordines, A general chapter, or other ſolemn convention of the religious of ſuch a particular order. Paroch. Antiq. p. 576.

Ordines majores & minores, The holy orders of prieſt, deacon and ſubdeacon, any of which did qualify for preſentation and admiſſion to an eccleſiaſtical dignity or cure, were called ordines majores; and the inferior orders of chantor, pſalmiſt, oſtiary, reader, exorciſt and acloyte, were call ordines minores: for which the perſons ſo ordained had their prima tonſura different from the tonſura clericalis. Cowell.

Ordinum fugitivi, Signified thoſe of the religious who deſerted their houſes, and throwing off the habits, renounced their particular order, in contempt of their oath and other obligations. Paroch. Antiq. 388.

Ordnance, Letters patent for making it not within the ſtatute of monopolies, 21 Jac. 1. c. 3. ſect. 10.

Ordo, Is taken for that rule which the monks were obliged to obſerve. In Eadmer. vita S. Enſelmi, cap. 37.

Ordo Albus, The White Friars, or Auguſtines; and the Ciſtercians alſo wore White.

Ordo Niger Were the Black Friars. Sub normâ Benedicti famulantes; as Ingulphus tells us, p. 851. The Cluniacs likewiſe wore Black. Mat. Paris, 321, 514.

Orfgild, or Cheapgeld, (from the Saxon orf, pecus, and gild, ſolutio vel redemptio,) Is a delivery or reſtitution of cattle. But Lambard ſays, it is a reſtitution made by the hundred, or county, for any wrong done by one who was in pledge. Arch. pag. 125. or, rather a penalty for taking away cattle.

Orford haven, Penalty on ſelling a net with a ſtallboat within the mouth of Orford haven, 27 El. c. 21.

Orfraies, (aurifriſium) A ſort of cloth of gold, frizled or embroidered, formerly made and uſed in England, worn by our Kings and nobility; and the cloaths of the King's guards were called orfraies, becauſe adorned with ſuch works of gold. Mention is made of theſe orfraies in the Records of the Tower.

Orgallous, More truly orguillous, that is, proud and high-minded, derived from the French orgueil, pride. 4 Inſt. 89.

Orgeys, (mentioned in ſtat. 32 E. 2. ſt. 3. c. 3.) Is the greateſt ſort of North-ſea fiſh, (for the ſtatute ſays they are greater than lob-fiſh) which we now call organ-ling, corruptly from Orkney-ling, becauſe the beſt are near that iſland. Cowell.

Orgild, (ſine compenſatione) Without recompence; as where no ſatisfaction was to be made for the death of a man killed, ſo that he was judged lawfully ſlain. Spelm.

Oriel college, A prebend of Rocheſter, how annexed to its provoſtſhip, 12 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 6. ſ. 7.

Original, In the court of King's bench, the uſual original writ iſſued in actions, as actions of treſpaſs upon the caſe, &c. So original writs in actions, iſſue out of the chancery, returnable in B. R. and when the party proceeds on ſuch writ, and obtains judgment, error does not lie in the exchequer, but in parliament, only. The court of Common Pleas proceeds by original in all actions: but to arreſt and ſue a party to outlawry, it is uſed by both courts. And for originals in treſpaſs on the caſe, there is a fine payable to the crown, where the damages are laid, to forty pounds or upwards in proportion to the damage. Practiſ. Solic. 254, 255. The original is the foundation of the capias, and all ſubſequent proceſs; the return whereof is generally the teſte of the capias: tho' the capias may be taken out before the original, by leaving the præcipe with the filazer, who will make out a capias upon it, and afterwards carry it to the curſitor to make an original; and the filazer when it is returned, is to file it with the cuſtos brevium. See Attorney's Pract. in Court of K. B. and C. P.

Originalia. In the treaſurer's remembrancer's office in the Exchequer, the tranſcripts, &c. ſent thither out of the Chancery are called by this name, and diſtinguiſhed from recorda; which contain the judgments and pleadings in ſuits tried before the Barons.

Orped, Some orped knight, i e. a knight whoſe clothes ſhone with gold. Blount.

Orphan, (orphanus) Is a fatherleſs child; and in the city of London there is a court of record eſtabliſhed for the care and government of orphans. 4 Inſt. 248.

The Lord mayor and Aldermen of London have the cuſtody of orphans under age and unmarried, of freemen that die; and the keeping of their lands and goods: and if they commit the cuſtody of an orphan to any man, he ſhall have the writ of raviſhment of ward, if the orphan be taken away; or the Mayor and Aldermen may impriſon the offender until he produces the infant. 2 Danv. Abr. 311. If any one without conſent of the court of Aldermen, marries ſuch an orphan under the age of twenty-one years, tho' out of the city, they may fine and impriſon him, until the fine is paid. 1 Lev. 32. 1 Ventr. 178. Executors and adminiſtrators of freemen dying, are to exhibit true inventories of their eſtates before the Lord Mayor and Aldermen in the court of orphans, and muſt give ſecurity to the Chamberlain of London and his ſucceſſors by recogniſance for the orphan's part; which if they refuſe to do, they may be committed to priſon until they obey. Wood's Inſt. 522. If any orphan, who by the cuſtom of London is under the government of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, ſue in the Spiritual court for any legacy, &c. a prohibition ſhall be granted; becauſe the Lord Mayor and Aldermen only have juriſdiction of them. 5 Rep. 73. But an orphan may waive the benefit of ſuing in the court of orphans, and file a bill in equity for diſcovery of the perſonal eſtate, &c.

The Lord Mayor and Commonalty of London being anſwerable for the orphans money paid into the chamber of the city, and by ſome accidents become indebted to the orphans and their creditors, in a greater ſum than they could pay; by Stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 10. it is enacted, that the lands, markets, fairs, &c. belonging to the city of London, ſhall be chargeable for raiſing eight thouſand pounds per ann. to be appropriated for a perpetual fund for orphans; and, towards raiſing ſuch a ſund, the Mayor and Commonalty may aſſeſs two thouſand pounds yearly upon the perſonal eſtates of inhabitants of the city, and levy the ſame by diſtreſs, &c. Alſo a duty is granted of four ſhillings per ton on wines imported, and on coals; and every apprentice ſhall pay 2*s.* 6*d.* when he is bound; and 5*s.* when he is admitted a freeman; for raiſing the fund: the fund is to be applied for payment of the debts due to orphans, by intereſt after the rate of 4*l. per cent.* &c. And no perſon ſhall be compelled, by virtue of any cuſtom in the city, to pay into the chamber of London any ſum of money or perſonal eſtate belonging to an orphan of any freeman for the future. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 10. By the Stat. 21 Geo. 2. c. 29. The duty of 6*d. per* chaldron on coals, given by the Stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 10. towards the orphan debt, is continued for thirty-five years. See Stat. 21 Geo. 2. c. 29. for the further relief of the orphans of the city of London.

It is a liberty or privilege, as uſed in the ancient Common law, whereby a lord was enabled to call any man dwelling in his manor, and taken for felony in another place out of his fee, to judgment in his own court. Raſtal. Stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 15.

Outheſt, Is the ſame with outhorn; which is a calling men out to the army, by the ſound of an horn.

Out-houſes, Are thoſe belonging and adjoining to dwelling-houſes; and taking away any money, goods, &c. from ſuch out-houſes, in the day-time, of 5 s. value, is felony without benefit of clergy. Dalt. c. 99. Stat. 32 Eliz. c. 15. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9. See Burglary.

Outland. The Saxon Thanes divided their hereditary lands into inland, ſuch as lay neareſt their dwelling, which they kept to their own uſe; and outland, which lay beyond the demeans, and was granted out to tenants, at the will of the lord, like copyhold eſtates. This outland they ſubdivided into two parts, one part they diſpoſed among thoſe who attended their perſons, called Theodens, or leſſer Thanes; the other part, they allotted to their huſbandmen, or churls. Spelm. de Feud. cap. 5.

Outlaw, Sax. utlaghe, Lat. utlagatus, One deprived of the benefit of the law, and out of the King's protection. Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 47. If where a perſon is called into the law, after an original writ, and the writs of capias, alias and pluries, returned Non eſt inventus, and proclamation made for him to appear, &c. he contemptuouſly refuſes to appear, he is then outlawed. 1 Inſt. 128. A woman cannot be an outlaw, becauſe women are not ſworn to the King as men are, to be ever within law; therefore they are ſaid to be waived, as not regarded but forſaken of the law. F. N. B. 160. When a perſon is reſtored to the King's protection, he is inlawed again.

Outlawry, (utlagaria) Is the loſs of the benefit of a ſubject, that is, of the King's protection and the realm. Cowell.

Outlawry is a puniſhment inflicted for a contempt, in refuſing to be amenable to the juſtice of that court which hath authority to call him before them; and as this is a crime of the higheſt nature, being an act of rebellion againſt that ſtate or community of which he is a member, ſo it ſubjects the party to forfeitures and diſabilities; for he loſeth his liberam legem, is out of the King's protection, &c. Co. Lit. 128. Doct. & Stud. dial. 2. cap. 3. 1 Roll Abr. 802.

And as to forfeitures for refuſing to appear, the law diſtinguiſhes between outlawries in capital caſes, and thoſe of an inferior nature; for as to outlawries in treaſon and felony, the law interprets the party's abſence a ſufficient evidence of his guilt, and without requiring further proof, accounts him guilty of the fact, on which enſues corruption of blood, and forfeiture of his eſtate, real and perſonal. Co. Lit. 128. 3 Inſt. 161.

But outlawry in perſonal actions does not occaſion the party to be looked on as guilty of the fact, nor does it occaſion an intire forfeiture of his real eſtate, yet it is very fatal and penal in its conſequences; for hereby he is reſtrained of his liberty, if he can be found, forfeits his goods and chattels, and the profits of his lands, while the outlawry remains in force. Plow. 541. 9 H. 6. 20. b. Show. Parl. Ca. 73.

Anciently outlawry was looked upon as ſo horrid a crime, that any one might as lawfully kill a perſon outlawed, as he might a wolf, or other noxious animal; but the law herein was changed in Edward the Third's time, which provides, that a perſon outlawed ſhall be put to death by the ſheriff only, having lawful authority for that purpoſe. Co. Lit. 128. b. See poſt, div. 4.

It is now holden that no man is intitled to kill an outlaw wantonly or wilfully; but in ſo doing is guilty of murder, (1 Hal. P. C. 497.) unleſs it happens in the endeavour to apprehend him. Bracton, fol. 125.

Alſo from the heinouſneſs of the offence the ſheriff may, on a capias utlagatum, break open the houſe of the perſon outlawed; for it would be unreaſonable, that the protection, allowed in other caſes, ſhould extend to him who is declared a contemner and violator of the laws; therefore the ſeizing him as an outlaw, implies the liberty of entering and ſeizing him wherever he lies hid. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 202. 9 Co. 91. 1 Bulſ. 146. Cro. Eliz. 908. Moor 606, 668. Yelv. 28. Cro. Car. 537. 4 Leon. 41. 2 Jon. 233.

1. In what caſes proceſs of outlawry lies; and by what juriſdiction ſuch proceſſes are to iſſue.
2. Againſt whom proceſs of outlawry may be awarded; whether it may be awarded againſt a peer, an infant, feme ſole or covert, ſeveral defendants, and principal and acceſſary.
3. To what place proceſs of outlawry is to iſſue; of the quinto exactus, and proclamations on an outlawry.
4. What the party muſt do in order to intitle him to a reverſal; and of the effects and conſequences of a reverſal.

1. In what caſes proceſs of outlawry lies; and by what juriſdiction ſuch proceſſes are to iſſue.

Originally proceſs of outlawry only lay in treaſon and felony, and was afterwards extended to treſpaſs of an enormous nature; and herein it is laid down by Hawkins, That proceſs of outlawry lies in all appeals, and in all indictments of conſpiracy and deceit, or other crimes of a higher nature than treſpaſs vi & armis; but it lies not in an action, nor, as ſome ſay, on an indictment on a ſtatute, unleſs it be given by ſuch ſtatute, either expreſly, as in the caſe of præmunire, or impliedly, as in caſes made treaſon or felony by ſtatute, or where a recovery is given by an action in which ſuch proceſs lay before, as in the caſe of forcible entry. Staundf. 192. Bro. tit. Outlawry, 26, 36, 59. Co. Lit. 128. b. Dyer 213, 214. 2 Hawk. P. C. 302, 303. and ſeveral authorities there cited.

In an aſſiſe, a capias pro fine lies, and upon that proceſs of outlawry, if the aſſiſe be found with force, but being a mixt action, as ſavouring of the realty, it is out of the ſtatute of additions, 1 Hen. 5. cap. 5. which extends only to perſonal actions, appeals and indictments. 2 Inſt. 665. 6 Mod. 85.

So proceſs of outlawry lies in replevin, and is given by the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. cap. 17. which gives the capias in this manner; when on the pluries replegiari facias the ſheriff returns averia elongata, then a capias in withernam iſſues, and on that's being returned nulla bona, a capias iſſues, and ſo to outlawry; but it does not lie on the original writ of replevin, which is vicontiel and determined; therefore as no addition is required in ſuch original writ, ſo neither ought there to be any in the ſecond writ; for where a writ or proceſs is founded on a former, it muſt purſue the former, and cannot vary from it. 6 Mod. 84. 1 Salk. 5. Earl of Banbury v. Wood.

By the Common law, in all actions of treſpaſs quare vi & armis, and in which there is a fine to the King, a capias was the proceſs; and herein proceſs of outlawry lay by the Common law. 35 Hen. 6. 6. b. 22 Hen. 6. 13. Raſt. Ent. 293. 10 Co. 72. 2 Roll. Abr. 805.

But in account, debt, detinue, annuity, covenant, and ſuch actions as are grounded upon negligence or laches merely, no capias lay at Common law, but only ſummons and diſtreſs infinite, therefore the capias and outlawry in theſe actions were introduced by acts of parliament. Co. Lit. 128. b. 3 Co. 12. 2 Bulſt. 63. 2 Inſt. 143. Cro. Jac. 222, 261. Yelv. 158. Raym. 128. 1 Keb. 890, 908. 1 Sid. 248, 258. Of detinue of charters. Dyer 223. a. dubitatur.

By the ſtatute of Marlebridge cap. 23. the writ of monſtravit de compto was given, where before the proceſs in account was ſummons, attachment, and diſtreſs infinite; and by Weſtm. 2. cap. 11. proceſs of outlawry is given in account. 2 Inſt. 145, 380. F. N. B. 259.

By the 25 Ed 3. cap. 17. Such proceſs ſhall be made in a writ of debt and detinue of chattels, and taking of beaſts, by writ of capias, and by proceſs of exigent, by the ſheriff's return, as is uſed in a writ of account. 3 Co. 12. 2 Rol. Rep. 295. 2 Bulſt. 63.

And by the 19 Hen. 7. cap. 9. it is enacted, That like proceſs be had in actions upon the caſe, as in actions of treſpaſs, or debt.

But it hath been adjudged, that proceſs of outlawry lies in no caſe but where a capias lies; that therefore where the proceeding is by bill, and not by original, as there can be no capias, ſo there can be no proceſs of outlawry, as in a bill of privilege by or againſt an attorney. 1 Leon. 329. 2 Roll. Abr. 76. 1 Sid. 159. 1 Keb. 577.

It is clear, that the courts at Weſtminſter may iſſue proceſs of outlawry, and that the court of King's Bench, either upon an indictment originally taken there, or removed thither by certiorari, may iſſue proceſs of capias and exigent into any county of England, upon a non eſt inventus returned by the ſheriff of the county where he is indicted, and a teſtatum that he is in ſome other county. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 198.

Alſo juſtices of oyer and terminer may iſſue a capias or exigent, and ſo proceed to the outlawry of any perſon indicted before them, directed to the ſheriff of the ſame county where they held their ſeſſions at Common law; and by the ſtatute of 5 Ed. 3. cap. 11. they may iſſue proceſs of capias and exigent to all the counties of England, againſt perſons indicted or outlawed of felony before them. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 31, 199.

But juſtices of gaol delivery regularly cannot iſſue a capias or exigent; becauſe their commiſſion is to deliver the gaol de priſonibus in ea exiſtentibus, ſo that thoſe whom they have to do with, are always intended in cuſtody already. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 199.

Juſtices of the peace may make out proceſs of outlawry upon indictments taken before themſelves, or upon indictments taken before the ſheriff, and returned to the juſtices of the peace, by the ſtatute of 1 Ed. 4. cap. 1 but the power of the ſheriff, to make any proceſs upon indictments, taken before him, is taken away by that ſtatute. 2 Hale's Hiſt. 199.

It is made a quære by Hale, whether a coroner can, by law, make out proceſs of outlawry, againſt a man indicted by inquiſition before him. 2 Hale's Hiſt P. C. 99.

It hath been held, that though the proceſs in inferior courts be a capias, that yet they cannot proceed to outlaw the party. Yelv. 158. Cro. Jac. 222, 261. Raym 128. 1 Sid. 248, 259. 1 Keb. 890, 908.

The proceſs to the outlawry, viz. the capias and exigent, muſt be in the King's name, and under the judicial ſeal of the King, appointed to that court, which iſſues that proceſs, and with the teſte of the chief juſtice or chief judge of that court or ſeſſions. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 199.

2. Againſt whom proceſs of outlawry may be awarded; whether it may be awarded againſt a peer, an infant, feme ſole or covert, ſeveral defendants, and principal and acceſſary.

If a peer of the realm be indicted, and cannot be found, proceſs of outlawry ſhall be awarded againſt him, and he ſhall be outlawed per judicium coronatorum. 2 Inſt. 49. 3 Inſt. 31. Staundf. 130 2 Hawk. P. C. 424.

But in civil actions, between party and party, regularly a capias or exigent lies not againſt a peer, yet in caſe of an indictment for treaſon or felony, or for treſpaſs vi & armis, as an aſſault or riot, proceſs of outlawry ſhall iſſue againſt a peer, for the ſuit is for the King, and the offence a contempt againſt him; therefore, if a reſcue be returned againſt a peer, or if a peer be convict of a diſſeiſin with force, or denies his deed, and it be found againſt him, a capias pro fine and exigent ſhall iſſue, for the King is to have a fine; and the ſame reaſon holds upon an indictment of treſpaſs or riot, much more in the caſe of felony. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 199, 200. Cro. Eliz. 170, 503. 5 Co. 54. 1 Roll. Abr. 220.

An infant above the age of fourteen may be outlawed, and the outlawry is not erroneous; but an infant under the age of fourteen cannot be outlawed; if he be, it is erroneous. 3 Hen. 5. utlag. Fitz. tit. Outlawry 11. 2 Roll. Abr. 805. Dyer 104. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 207, 208.

But the outlawry of ſuch infant is not void, it being of record, but is voidable only by writ of error. Dyer. 239. a. 2 Rol. Abr. 805.

A woman is ſaid to be waived, and not outlawed; and the reaſon why the outlawry of a woman is legally called waiviaria mulieris, is becauſe women are not ſworn in leets or torns; therefore men are called utlagati, i. e. extra legem poſiti, but women are waiviatæ, i. e. derelictæ, left out, or not regarded, becauſe they are not ſworn to the law. Co. Lit 122. b. Lit. ſect. 186.

Therefore where a capias and exigent were awarded againſt three men and two women, and the return was utlagati exiſtunt, where, as to the women, it ought to have been waiviata exiſtunt, this was held to be error. Cro. Jac. 358. Middleton's caſe. 1 Rol. Rep. 407. S. P. 1 Rol. Abr. 804. S. P.

If in an action againſt huſband and wife, the huſband is outlawed, and wife waived, and ſhe is taken upon the capias utlagat', though ſhe is to be diſcharged of the impriſonment, (becauſe the plaintiff cannot proceed againſt her alone) yet ſhe ſtill remains waived, and when her huſband is taken he muſt bring her in. For this vide Dyer 271. b. Cro. Jac. 445 Cro. Eliz. 370. Hut. 86. 1 Sid. 21. Vide Cro. Car. 58, 59. Smith v. Aſh & ux' Hut. 86. S. C.

If two are ſued in a joint action, and neither of them will appear, proceſs of outlawry muſt be taken out againſt both. Cro. Eliz. 648. Beverley v. Beverley.

If an exigent be awarded againſt two, and the return primo exacti fuerunt & non comparuerunt, without ſaying nec eorum aliquis comparuit, it is erroneous. 2 Rol. Abr. 802. Taverner's caſe.

As to outlawry in action of account, vide 41 Ed. 3. 3. 1 Rol. Abr. 127. S. C. 1 Brownl. 25. S. P. 41 Ed. 3. 13. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 127. and vide Moor 188. 2 Leon. 76. Alſo vide Dyer 239. pl. 203. Hawtry v. Anger. N. Bendl. 148. pl. 205. Moor 74. pl. 203. 1 And. 10. S. C. and 1 Sid. 173. 1 Keb. 642. S. C. Guy v. Barnard.

As to awarding outlawry againſt principal and acceſſary by the ſtat. of Weſtm. 1. cap. 14. it is provided, that none be outlawed upon appeal of commandment, force, aid or receipt, unleſs he who is appealed of the deed be attainted ſo that one like law be uſed therein thro' this realm; nevertheleſs, he that will ſo appeal, ſhall not by reaſon of this intermit, or leave off to commence his appeal at the next county, againſt them, no more than againſt their principals which he appealed of the deed, but their exigent ſhall remain, until ſuch as be appealed of the deed, be attainted of outlawry or otherwiſe.

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute, the following particulars are laid down by Serjeant Hawkins, as moſt remarkable.

1ſt, That it ſeems agreed, that it extends as well to indictments as to appeals, not only becauſe the word appeal in the ſtatute may in a large ſenſe be taken for any accuſation in general; but becauſe indictments are certainly as much within the reaſon of the ſtatute as appeals; and the Common law (for the ſettling whereof this ſtatute was made) did not make any diſtinction in this reſpect between appeals and indictments. 2 Inſt. 183. 2 Hawk. P. C. 306.

2dly, That it ſeems agreed, that wherever ſome of the defendants are expreſsly charged as principals, and others as acceſſaries, before the award of this exigent, the outlawry thereon, of thoſe charged as acceſſaries, cannot but be reverſible, becauſe it appears upon record that the exigent iſſued, contrary to the direction of the ſtatute; but if ſeveral be outlawed, on a writ of appeal, which chargeth them all alike without any diſtinction, there can be no advantage taken of the appellant's not having purſued the ſtatute, ſince it appears not, but that he might have charged them all as principals. 1 Hawk. P. C. 306. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 200.

3dly, That it is ſtrongly holden, that if an appellant take out the exigent, at the ſame time, againſt all the defendants, he muſt, when they appear, count againſt them all as principals, and ſhall be concluded from charging any of them as acceſſaries, becauſe he has taken out ſuch proceſs as is erroneous, where all are not principals;

but he makes a doubt, whether this be law at this day, ſince all errors, as the law ſeems now to be holden, are ſalved by appearance. 2 Hawk. P. C. 306. and vide 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 200.

4thly, That it ſeems the better opinion, that where there are more than one principal, the exigent ſhall not iſſue, till all of them are arraigned; and herein it is ſaid by Hale, that if A. and B. be indicted as principals in felony, and C. as acceſſary to them both, the exigent againſt the acceſſary ſhall ſtay till both be attainted by outlawry or plea; for that it is ſaid, if one be acquitted, the acceſſary is diſcharged, becauſe indicted as acceſſary to both, therefore ſhall not be put to anſwer till both be attaint; but hereof he adds a dubitatur, becauſe though C. be acceſſary to both, he might have been indicted as acceſſary to one, becauſe the felonies are in law ſeveral; but if he be indicted as acceſſary to both, he muſt be proved ſo. 2 Hawk. P. C. 306. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 200, 201.

In treaſon all are principals; therefore proceſs of outlawry may go againſt him who receives, at the ſame time as againſt him that did the fact. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 238.

3. To what place proceſs of outlawry is to iſſue; of the quinto exactus, and proclamations on an outlawry.

The exigent muſt be ſued in the county where the party really reſides, for there all actions were originally laid; and becauſe outlawries were at firſt only for treaſon, felony, or very enormous treſpaſſes, the proceſs was to be executed at the Torn, which is the ſheriff's criminal court; and this held not only before the ſheriff, but before the coroners, who were ancient conſervators of the peace, being the beſt men in each county, to preſide with the ſheriff in his court, and who pronounced the outlawry in the county court on the party's being quinto exactus; therefore anciently there was no occaſion for any proceſs to any other county than that in which the party actually reſided; but this matter being ſince altered, and the learning thereof depending on ſeveral acts of parliament, it will be neceſſary to take notice of the ſtatutes. Fitz. Exigent 26. Dyer 295.

And firſt, It is enacted by the 6 Hen. 6. cap. 1. "That before any exigents be awarded againſt perſons indicted in the King's Bench, of treaſon or felony, writs of capias ſhall be directed to the ſheriff of the county, whereof they be named in the indictments;" vide the Stat.

And it is further enacted by 8 H. 6. cap. 10. "That upon every indictment or appeal, before any exigent awarded, preſently after the firſt writ of capias returned, another writ of capias ſhall be awarded, directed to the ſheriff of the county, whereof he who is indicted is or was ſuppoſed to be converſant, by the ſame indictment, by which ſecond writ of capias, the ſheriff ſhall be commanded to take him, if he can be found within his bailiwick; and if he cannot, to make proclamation in two counties, before the return of the ſame writ, after which writ ſo ſerved and returned, if he which is ſo indicted or appealed, come not at the day of ſuch writ returned, the exigent ſhall be awarded."

This ſtatute not to extend to indictments, or appeals, taken within the county of Cheſter.

It is enacted by 10 H. 6. cap. 6. "That ſuch ſecond capias as is required by 8 Hen. 6. cap. 10. ſhall be awarded upon indictments or appeals removed into the King's Bench, or elſewhere, by certiorari or otherwiſe."

And by the 31 Eliz cap. 3. it is enacted, "That in every action perſonal, where any writ of exigent ſhall be awarded, one writ of proclamation ſhall be awarded out of the ſame court, and delivered of record to the ſheriff of the county where the defendant, at the time of the exigent ſo awarded, ſhall be dwelling; which writ of proclamation ſhall contain the effect of the ſame action: And that the ſheriff (as mentioned in the ſtatute, which vide) ſhall make three proclamations; and that all outlawries pronounced, and no writs of proclamation awarded and returned, according to the form of this ſtatute, ſhall be utterly void and of none effect."

In the conſtruction of theſe ſtatutes, the following opinions have been holden:

That though the words are expreſs, that any outlawry pronounced, contrary to the directions of the ſtatute ſhall be void; yet it is not to be taken, as if ſuch outlawries were abſolutely void, but only voidable by writ of error. Cro. Eliz. 179. 3 Co. 59. Plowd. 137. Hob. 166.

If a defendant be expreſsly named of the ſame county wherein he is indicted, or appealed, and be alſo named under an alias dictus of another, it hath been adjudged, that there is no need of any capias, with a command for proclamation according to 8 Hen. 6. c. 10. becauſe that which comes under the alias dictus is not traverſable nor material: Alſo if a defendant be named of B. and late of D. there is no need of any capias to the ſheriff of the county wherein D. lies; becauſe it appears, that defendant is at preſent converſant at B. but if a defendant be named of no certain place at preſent, but only late of B. and late of D. and late of E. &c. being all in different counties from that in which the proſecution is commenced, a capias ſhall go to the ſheriff of each county. 2 Hawk. P. C. 304-5. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 195-6. Vide Cro. Jac. 167. Leeche's caſe. And alſo 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 201-2. Where it hath been holden, that in London, where the holding of the huſtings is uncertain, no exigi facias ſhall iſſue with an allocato huſtings, becauſe the court cannot take notice of the ſet times of holding it, as they may of the times of holding the county-courts; but it is now agreed, that if an exigent iſſues in London, and they begin Huſting de placito terræ (as they may) they ſhall proceed along at that Huſtings to the outlawry, without mingling their Huſting de communibus placitis; but if an allocato Huſting comes, they ſhall proceed without omitting any Huſting. Palm. 287. 2 Leon. 14. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 202.

4. What the party muſt do in order to initle him to a reverſal; and the effects and conſequences of a reverſal.

Regularly in all outlawries, as well perſonal as criminal, the party in order to reverſe the ſame was to appear in perſon, and could not appear by attorney. 2 Leon. 22.

But now by the 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 18. No perſon who ſhall be outlawed in the court of B. R. for any cauſe whatſoever, (treaſon and felony only excepted) ſhall be compelled to appear in perſon in the ſaid court to reverſe ſuch outlawry, but may appear by attorney and reverſe the ſame without bail in all caſes, (except where ſpecial bail ſhall be ordered by the ſaid court)

And that if any perſon outlawed in the ſaid court, (other than for treaſon or felony) ſhall be taken upon any capias utlagatum out of the ſaid court, it ſhall be lawful for the ſheriff (in all caſes where ſpecial bail is not required by the ſaid court) to take an attorney's engagement under his hand to appear for the defendant and reverſe the outlawries, and thereupon to diſcharge the defendant; and where ſpecial bail is required, the ſheriff ſhall and may take ſecurity of the defendant by bond, with one or more ſufficient ſurety or ſureties, in the penalty of double the ſum for which ſpecial bail is required, and no more, for appearance by attorney at the return of the writ, and to perform ſuch things as ſhall be required by the court; and after ſuch bond taken to diſcharge the defendant.

And if any perſon outlawed, and taken upon a capias utlagatum, ſhall not be able within the return of the writ to give ſecurity where ſpecial bail is required, ſecurity may be given after the return, and after the commitment.

It hath been held, that if the party outlawed comes in by cepi corpus, he ſhall not be admitted to reverſe the outlawry without appearing in perſon, as in ſuch caſe he was obliged to do at Common law; or putting in bail with the ſheriff for his appearance, upon the return of the cepi corpus and for doing what the court ſhall order. 2 Salk. 496.

Bail muſt be put in before it can be reverſed. 1 Wilſ. 3.

By Weſtm. 1. cap. 9. it is expreſsly provided, that thoſe who are outlawed, have abjured the realm, &c. ſhould be excluded the benefit of replevin; yet it hath been always held, that the court of King's Bench may in their diſcretion, in ſpecial caſes, bail a perſon upon an outlawry of felony, as where he pleads, that he is not of the ſame name, and therefore not the ſame perſon with him that was outlawed, or alledges any other error in the proceedings. 2 Hawk. P. C. 98.

By the 31 Eliz. cap. 3. ſect. 3. it is enacted, "That before any allowance of any writ of error, or reverſing of any outlawry be had by plea, or otherwiſe, through or by want of any proclamation to be had or made according to the form of this ſtatute, the defendant and defendants in the original action ſhall put in bail, not only to appear and anſwer to the plaintiff in the former ſuit in a new action to be commenced by the ſaid plaintiff for the cauſe mentioned in the firſt action, but alſo to ſatisfy the condemnation, if the plaintiff ſhall begin his ſuit before the end of two terms next after the allowing the writ of error, or otherwiſe avoiding of the ſaid outlawry."

A foreigner was outlawed and goods, &c. ſeiſed, and the court would not reverſe the outlawry on motion, but put him to his writ of error, whereby the plaintiff got bail. Carth. 459. Matthews v. Erbo.

H. was outlawed, in two actions, one for 10*l.* the other for 40*s.* and on reverſing the outlawry the court took ſpecial bail for the firſt, and an appearance for the other, upon the ſtatute 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. and the recognizance was taken purſuant to 31 Eliz. c. 3. 2 Salk. 496.

It is clearly agreed, that an attainder of felony of a perſon who had any lands ſhall never be reverſed by writ of error, without a ſcire facias againſt all the tertenants and lords mediate and immediate; but it is ſettled, that ſuch ſcire facias is not neceſſary in the caſe of high treaſon. Dyer 34. pl. 20. Cro. Eliz. 235 1 Keb. 141. pl. 11. 1 Sid. 316. 3 Keb. 39. 3 Mod. 42, 47. 4 Mod. 366. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. S. P. and ſee Ld. Raym. 154.

Alſo it is ſaid, that it is not neceſſary in the caſe of felony, when it is ſuggeſted on the roll that the party had no lands, and the attorney general confeſſes it. 2 Salk. 495.

It is agreed, that after an outlawry of treaſon or felony is reverſed, the party ſhall be put to plead to the indictment, for that ſtill remains good, and he may be tried at the King's Bench bar; or the record may be remitted into the country, if it were removed into the King's Bench by certiorari, with a command to the juſtices below, to proceed by the ſtatute of 6 Hen. 6. cap. 1. Cro. Jac. 646. Cro. Car. 365. 3 Mod. 42. 6 Mod. 115. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 209.

So if a man be outlawed by proceſs in an information, and comes in and reverſes the outlawry, he muſt plead inſtanter to the information. 1 Salk. 371. Rex v. Hill. 5 Mod. 141. S. P.

The law is the ſame in civil caſes; and therefore if an outlawry in a perſonal action be reverſed, the original remains. March 9. Vide the caſe of Whitwick v. Hovenden. 3 Lev. 245.

It hath been adjudged, that if the King grant over the lands of a perſon outlawed for treaſon or felony, and afterwards the outlawry be reverſed, the party may enter on the patentee, and need neither ſue a petition to the King, nor a ſcire facias againſt the patentee. 1 And. 188. A perſon ſhall, after outlawry reverſed, be reſtored to his law, and to be of ability to ſue. Co. Lit. 288. b.

If the goods of a perſon outlawed are ſold by the ſheriff upon a capias utlagatum and after the outlawry is reverſed by writ of error, he ſhall be reſtored to the goods themſelves; becauſe the ſheriff was not compellable to ſell theſe goods, but only to keep them to the uſe of the King. 5 Co. 90. Hoe's caſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 778. S. C. cited.

If an advowſon come to the King, by forfeiture upon an outlawry, and, the church becoming void, the King preſents, and then the outlawry is reverſed; yet the King ſhall enjoy that preſentment, becauſe the preſentment there came to the King as the profit of the advowſon. Moor 269. Beverley v. Cronwall.

But if the church be void at the time of the outlawry, and the preſentation is thereby forfeited as a chattel principally and diſtinct of itſelf, there, upon reverſal of the outlawry, the party ſhall be reſtored to the preſentation. Cro. Eliz. 170. agreed per curiam.

If a termor being outlawed for felony, grants over his term, after the outlawry is reverſed, the grantee may have treſpaſs for the profits taken between the reverſal of the outlawry and the aſſignment; for by the reverſal it is, as if no outlawry had been, and there is no record of it. Cro. Eliz. 170. Ognell's caſe, and 13 Co. 20, 22.

It is ſaid, that if a man be outlawed in the King's Bench, and the party's goods are ſeiſed into the King's hands, and then the outlawry is reverſed, there can be no reſtitution; the reaſon whereof is, for that the court of King's Bench cannot ſend a writ to the Treaſurer; and the court of Exchequer have no record before them to iſſue out a warrant for reſtitution. 5 Mod. 61. Vide 2 Vern. 312. Peyton v. Ayliff; and vide 2 Lev. 49. the caſe of Pinfold v. Northey.

Oyer. This word was anciently uſed for what we now call aſſiſes. Anno 13 Ed. 1.

Oyer of a Deed, Is where a man brings an action of debt upon a bond, or other deed, and defendant appears, and prays that he may hear the bond, &c. wherewith he is charged, which ſhall be allowed him. 2 Lil. Abr. 266.

Defendant may crave oyer of the writ, or of the bond, or other ſpecialty upon which the action is brought, that is, to hear it read to him; the generality of defendants in the times of ancient ſimplicity being ſuppoſed incapable to read it themſelves: Whereupon the whole is entered verbatim upon the record, and the defendant may take advantage of any condition or other part of it, not ſtated in the plaintiff's declaration. Black. Com. 3 V. 299.

The demand of oyer is a kind of plea, and may be counterpleaded: Where there may be oyer, the party demanding it is not bound to plead without it, but defendant may plead without it if he will, on taking upon him to remember the bond or deed; tho' if he plead without oyer, he cannot after waive his plea, and demand oyer. Mod. Caſ. 28. 3 Salk. 119. In the court of B. R. oyer may be prayed after imparlance; but not in C. B. 5 Rep. 74. See Ld. Raym. 970. After imparlance oyer cannot be demanded, becauſe imparlance is always to another term: Alſo after a plea in abatement, oyer may not be had the ſame term, to plead another dilatory plea. Mod. Caſ. 27. 2 Lil. 267. Sed qu. as to oyer after imparlance.

Oyer in C. B. muſt be demanded, before time for pleading expires. 2 Barnes 265.

Omiſſion of, per ſcriptum ſuum obligatorium, cured by profert and oyer. Ld. Raym. 1056.

An imperfect oyer, if received, makes no variance. ib. 1176.

To demand oyer of an obligation, is not only to deſire the plaintiff's attorney to read the ſame; but to have a copy thereof, that the defendant may conſider what to plead to the action. Hob. 217. And when on oyer of a deed, it is entered, the whole caſe appears to the court as if the deed were in the plea, and the deed is become parcel of the record: Though oyer of a deed can only be demanded, during the term it is produced in court; and then it may be entered in hæc verba, and there may be a demurrer, or iſſue upon it, &c. 5 Rep. 76. Lutw. 1644. 3 Salk. 119.

If a bond is brought into court, oyer is grantable only the firſt term, for afterwards it is adjudged in the poſſeſſion of the party.—Yet oyer of a recognizance was granted in a term ſubſequent to the declaration. Ld. Raym. 84.

Where oyer is prayed, it is always intended that the bond or deed is in court; which is not of another term. Sid. 308. A defendant ought to crave oyer of the plaintiff's deed, on which he hath declared; and cannot ſet forth another, to plead performance thereof. Mod. Caſ. 154. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1225. If there is miſnomer in a bond, &c. the defendant is to plead the miſnomer, and that he made no ſuch deed, without craving oyer; for if he doth, he admits his name to be right. 1 Salk. 7.

If defendant will take advantage of a variance between the writ and count, he muſt crave oyer of the writ, and ſpread it on the record, i. e. ſhew it to the court. Wilſ. par. 2. 395.

Executors bringing action of debt, the defendant may demand oyer of the teſtament, &c. oyer is not to be diſpenſed with though a deed be loſt. Where a deed is in the hands of a third perſon, the court will oblige him to give oyer and produce it. 2 Strange 1198. And ſee Wilſ. par. 1. 16. Where a deed is pleaded, the other party cannot alledge that there is other matter contained in the deed, but muſt ſet it forth on oyer. Strange 227. A party who has had oyer is not obliged to ſet it forth in pleading. Strange 1241. And ſee Wilſ. par. 1. 97.

Formerly all demands of oyer were in court, as it is now in caſes of appeals: But now, in other caſes, it is demanded and granted between the attornies. Vide Mod. 28. Langvill v. Hundred of Thiſtleworth. Salk. 7. Linch v. Hooke. 2 Salk. 498, 499. Cooke v. Remmington. Poph. 202. Chamber's caſe. Keb. 182. pl. 91. Ruſſel v. *Lee. Oyer de Record, (audire recordum) Is a petition made in court, that the judges, for better proof-ſake, will hear or look upon any record. And it hath been adjudged, that the craving oyer of an original writ is not like the craving oyer of a deed; becauſe the deed is always produced by the plaintiff, and it is the act of the party, wherefore he ſhall not be admitted to ſay that it is not his deed: But the filing a writ, and having it read on oyer demanded, is the act of the court. 2 Lutw. 1641. See Doct. Plac. 270-2.

If defendant pleads another action depending for the ſame cauſe, in the ſame court, the plaintiff may pray oyer of the record, being in the ſame court; and if there is no oyer of the record, the plaintiff may ſign judgment by default. For in all caſes where a deed or record is pleaded, and oyer prayed; if oyer is not granted, the plea is as no plea. Ld. Raym. 347. Keilw. 95, 96. Carth. 453. 3 Salk. 119.

A defendant is not intitled to oyer of the writ, after judgment of reſpondeas ouſter, though in the ſame term. Ld. Raym. 970.

Oyer and Terminer, (Fr. Ouir & Terminer, La. Audiendo & Terminando) Is a commiſſion directed to the judges, and other gentlemen of the county to which it is iſſued by virtue whereof they have power to hear and determine treaſons, and all manner of felonies and treſpaſſes. Cromp Juriſd. 121. 2 Inſt. 419. 4 Inſt. 152. It is the firſt and largeſt of the five commiſſions, by which our judges of aſſiſe ſit in their ſeveral circuits: And is general, for trying all offenders and offences; or ſpecial, to try only particular perſons, or offences: And in our ſtatutes it is often printed Oyer and Determiner. 4 Inſt. 162. The uſual commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer of juſtices of aſſiſe, is general; and when any ſudden inſurrection, or treſpaſs is committed, which requires ſpeedy reformation, then a ſpecial commiſſion is immediately granted. Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 29. F. N. B. 110. And this commiſſion was formerly iſſued, only where ſome inſurrection was made, or heinous miſdemeanor committed; when the manner and uſage was to grant a commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, to hear and determine it: and the ſtat. 2 Ed. 3. c. 2. requireth that no commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer be granted, but before the juſtices of one bench or other or the juſtices itinerant, and that for horrible treſpaſſes. New Nat. Br. 243.

A man may have a ſpecial commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, to enquire of extortions and oppreſſions of underſheriffs, bailiffs, clerks of the markets, and all other officers, &c. on the complaint and ſuit of any one who will ſue it out: And the King may make a writ of Aſſociation unto the juſtices of Oyer and Terminer, to admit thoſe into their company whom he hath aſſociated unto them; alſo another writ may be ſent to the judges to proceed, although all the juſtices do not come at the day of the ſeſſions; and this writ is called the writ of Si non omnes, &c. Ibid. 245, 247.

As to theſe commiſſions it is ſaid, that if a commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, &c. be awarded to certain perſons to enquire at ſuch a place, they can neither open their commiſſion at another, nor adjourn it thither, or give judgment there; if they do, all their proceedings are, as coram non judice: But it is held, that juſtices appointed pro hac vice, may adjourn their commiſſion, from one day to another, though there be no words in their commiſſion to ſuch purpoſe; for a general commiſſion authoriſing perſons to do a thing, implicitly allows them convenient time for the doing it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 18.

Upon the general commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, there ſhould iſſue a precept to the ſheriff in the name of the commiſſioners, bearing date fifteen days before their ſeſſions, that he return twenty-four perſons for a grand jury ad inquirendum, &c. on ſuch a day; and the ſheriff is to return his panel annexed to the precept: And by the ſtatute 5 Ed. 3. c. 11. Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer may iſſue proceſs of outlawry in any county of England, againſt perſons indicted before them; but all their proceſſes are regularly to be in the names, and under the ſeals of the commiſſioners, viz. three of them, one being of the Quorum. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 26, 31.

The ſame juſtices, at the ſame time, may execute the commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, and alſo that of gaol-delivery; and the ſame perſons being authorized by both theſe commiſſions, may proceed by virtue of the one in thoſe caſes, where they have no juriſdiction by the other, and make up their records accordingly. Ibid. 20. But juſtices of Oyer and Terminer cannot proceed but upon indictments taken before themſelves, unleſs they have a commiſſion of gaol-delivery likewiſe, or a ſpecial commiſſion; for the commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer is, Ad inquirendum, audiendum & terminandum, To inquire, hear and determine. Wood's Inſt. 478. And though juſtices of gaol-delivery, have a more general commiſſion for trying malefactors, than the commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer have; yet ſuch juſtices may not proceed, but on indictments found before other juſtices, as juſtices of peace, &c. 2 Hawk. 24. On indictments found before the juſtices of Oyer and Terminer, they may proceed the ſame day againſt the parties indicted.

There is a Special Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer granted upon urgent occaſions; and the party ſuing it, might thereupon take out a writ to the ſheriff, commanding him to arreſt goods wrongfully taken away, and keep them in ſafe cuſtody, till order made concerning them, by the juſtices aſſigned to determine the matter. Reg. Orig. 126. F. N. B. 112.

Pain (or Peine) Fort & Dure, (Lat. pœna fortis & dura, Fr. peine forte & dure) Signifies a ſpecial puniſhment inflicted on thoſe who, being arraigned of felony, refuſe to put themſelves on the ordinary trial, but ſtubbornly ſtand mute; it is vulgarly called Preſſing to Death. Stat. Weſtm 1. c. 12.

If a criminal doth not plead directly to the fact, or put himſelf on trial by the country, he ſhall be put to the penance of pain fort & dure, in caſes of petit treaſon and felony; and forfeit his goods; and ſome criminals have undergone this puniſhment, to prevent attainder, corruption of blood, and forfeiture of lands; but on ſtanding mute in high treaſon, the higheſt offence, and in petit larceny, the loweſt of all felonies, the offenders ſhall have the like judgment, as if they had been convicted by confeſſion or verdict. 3 Inſt. 217. *H. Palatines, How intituled to naturalization, 1 Geo. 1. ſt. 2. c. 29.

Pales. See Incloſures.

Palfrey, (Palfredus, palafredus, palefredus, palifredus,) Is one of the better ſort of horſes uſed by noblemen or others for ſtate: And ſometimes of old taken for a horſe fit for a woman to ride. Camden ſays, that William Fauconberg held the manor of Cukeny, in the county of Nottingham in ſergeanty, by the ſervice of ſhoeing the King's palfrey, when the King ſhould come to Manſfield. See Co. on Lit. 149.

Palicea, A park pale. Cowell.

Palingman, (mentioned in ſtat. 22 Ed. 4. c. 23. and 11 H. 7. c. 23.) Seems to be a merchant denizen, one born within the Engliſh pale. But Dr. Skinner judges it to ſignify a fiſhmonger, or merchant of fiſh. Cowell.

Palla, A canopy; alſo often uſed for an altar-cloth. Matt. Paris, ſub. Ann. 1236. Chartular. Glaſton. MS. fol. 12.

Pallio cooperire. It was anciently a cuſtom where children were born out of wedlock, and their parents afterwards intermarried, that thoſe children, together with the father and mother, ſtood under a cloth extended while the marriage was ſolemnizing, which was in the nature of adoption; and by ſuch cuſtom, the children were taken to be legitimate.——In ſignum legitimationis nati ante matrimonium conſuerunt poni ſub pallio ſuper parentes eorum extento in matrimonii ſolemnizatione. Epiſt. Rob. Groſthead Epiſc. Lincoln. Such children were never legitimate in this country at Common law, tho' the clergy wanted to have a law paſs to render them legitimate.

Pallium, A word often mentioned in our old hiſtorians; Durandus tells us that it is a garment made of white wool, after the following manner, viz The nuns of St. Agnes every year, on the feaſt-day of their ſaint, offer two white lambs on the altar of their church, during the time they ſing Agnus Dei in a ſolemn maſs; which lambs are afterwards taken by two of the canons of the Lateran church, and by them given to the Pope's ſubdeacons, who put them to paſture till ſhearing time, and then they are ſhorn, and the pall is made of their wool, mixed with other white wool: The pall being thus made is carried to the Lateran church, and there placed on the high altar by the deacons of that church on the bodies of St. Peter and St. Paul; and after the uſual watching, it is carried away in the night, and delivered to the ſubdeacons, who lay it up ſafe. And becauſe it was taken from the body of St. Peter, it ſignifies the plenitude of eccleſiaſtical power; and therefore it was the prerogative of Popes, who pretend to be the immediate ſucceſſors of that ſaint, to inveſt other prelates with it, which at firſt was done no where but at Rome, but afterwards at other places. Durandus's Rationale.

Palls, The pontifical veſture made of lamb's wool, in breadth not exceeding three fingers, cut round that they may cover the ſhoulders; they have two labels or ſtrings on each ſide, before and behind, and likewiſe four purple croſſes on the right and left, faſtened with pins of gold, whoſe heads are Sapphire: Theſe veſtments the Pope gives or ſends to archbiſhops and metropolitans, and upon extraordinary occaſions to other biſhops; who wear them about their necks at the altar, above their other ornaments. The pall was firſt given to the biſhop of Oſtia, by Pope Marcus the Second, Anno 336. And the preface to an ancient ſynod here in England, wherein Odo, archbiſhop of Canterbury preſided, begins thus;——Ego Odo humilis & extremus, divina largiente Clementia, Almi præſulis & palli, honore ditatus, &c. Selden's Hiſt. Tithes 227. Creſſy's Church Hiſt. 972.

Palmeſtry, A kind of divination, practiſed by looking upon the lines and marks of the hands and fingers: being a deceitful art uſed by Egyptians, prohibited by the ſtatute of 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 4. See Black. Com. 4 V. 165, 6,

Pamphlets, ſee Table to the Statutes, tit. Stamps. The duties they are to pay are fixed by 10 Ann. c. 19. ſ. 101. 11 Geo. 1. c. 8. ſ. 14. and 30 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſ. 1.

Pandects, Are the books of the Civil law, compiled by Juſtinian; mentioned in the hiſtorians of this nation. Bede, c. 5. See Black. Com. 1 V. 17. 81.

Pandoxatrix, An ale wife who both brews and ſells ale or beer; from pandoxatorium, a brewhouſe, Statut. & Conſuetud. Burgi Villæ de Montgom'. Temp. Hen. 2.

Panel, (panella, pannellum) According to Sir Edward Coke, denotes a little part; but the learned Spelman ſays, that it ſignifies a ſchedula vel pagina, a ſchedule or page; as a panel of parchment, or a counterpane of an indenture; But it is uſed more particularly for a ſchedule or roll, containing the names of ſuch jurors as the ſheriff returns to paſs upon any trial. Kitch. 226. Reg. Orig. 223. And the impannelling a jury is the entring their names by the ſheriff into a panel or little ſchedule of parchment; in panello aſſiſæ. 8 H. 6. c. 12. Panels of juries are to be returned into court, on writs of Niſi prius, &c. before inqueſts can be taken upon them, by ſtatute 42 Ed. 3. c. 11.

And perſons indicted of high treaſon ſhall have a copy of the panel of the jurors, who are returned to try them, two days at leaſt before tried. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 3. But it is ſaid, that in trials before juſtices of gaol-delivery, the priſoner has no right to a copy of the panel before the time of his trial; except only in caſes within that ſtatute. 2 Hawk. P. C. 410. See Black. Com. 3 V. 354. 4 V. 299, 344.

Panetia, A pantry, or place to ſet up cold victuals. Cowell.

Panis armigerorum, The bread diſtributed to ſervants. Mon. 1. p. 420.

Panis biſus, Coarſe bread. Id. ib.

Panis called Blackwhytlof. Bread of a middle ſort, between white and brown, ſuch as in Kent is called Ravel-bread. In religious houſes it was their coarſer bread, made for ordinary gueſts, and diſtinguiſhed from their houſhold loaf, or panis conventualis, which was pure manchet, or white-bread. Cowell.

Panis militaris, Hard biſket, brown george, camp-bread, coarſe and black. The prior and convent of Ely grant to John Grove, a corrody or allowance,——Ad ſuum victum quolibet die unum panem monachalem, i. e. a white loaf; and to his ſervant unum panem nigrum militarem, i. e. a little brown loaf or biſket. Cartular. Elyn. MS. f. 47.

Pannage or Pawnage, (pannagium, Fr. paſnage) Is that food which the ſwine feed upon in the woods, as maſt of beech, acorns, &c. Alimentum, quod in ſilvis colligunt pecora, ab arboribus dilapſum: Alſo it is the money taken by the Agiſtors for the food of hogs in the King's foreſt. Crompt. Juriſd. 155. Stat. Weſt. 2. c. 25. Manwood ſays pannage ſignifies moſt properly the maſt of the woods or hedge rows: And Linwood thus defines it; Pannagium eſt paſtus pecorum in nemoribus & in ſylvis, utpote de glandibus & aliis fructibus arborum ſylveſtrium, quarum fructus aliter non ſolent colligi. It is mentioned in the ſtatute 20 Car. 2. c. 3. And in ancient charters this word is variouſly written; as pannagium, paſnagium, pathnagium, paunagium & peſſona. See 8 Rep. 47.

Pannus, A garment made with ſkins.——Statutum fuit quod nullos habet pannos deciſos & laceratos, Fleta, lib. 2. c. 14.

Pantiles, To what duties liable, 4 W. & M. c. 5.

Paper-Books, Are the iſſues in law, &c. upon ſpecial pleadings, made up by the clerk of the papers, who is an officer for that purpoſe. And the clerks of the papers of the court of King's Bench, in all copies of pleas and paper books by them made up, ſhall ſubſcribe to ſuch paper-books, the names of the counſel who have ſigned ſuch pleas, as well on the behalf of the plaintiff as defendant; and in all paper-books delivered to the judges of the court, the names of the counſellors, who did ſign thoſe pleas, are to be ſubſcribed to the books, by the clerks or attornies who deliver the ſame. Paſch. 18 Car. 2. 2 Lill. Abr. 268.

Paper-Office, Is an ancient office within the palace of Whitehall, wherein all the public papers, writings, matters of ſtate and council, letters, intelligences, negotiations of the King's miniſters abroad, and generally all the papers and diſpatches that paſs thro' the offices of the two principal ſecretaries of ſtate, are lodged and tranſmitted, and there remain diſpoſed in the way of library. Alſo an office belonging to the court of King's Bench ſo called.

Papiſts, Are thoſe who profeſs the Popiſh religion in this kingdom: And ſince the Reformation there have been many ſtatutes concerning them. By the 35 Eliz. c. 2. Papiſts are to repair to their uſual place of reſidence, and not remove above five miles, without licence, &c. The 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. enacts, That no Papiſts, or Popiſh recuſant convict, ſhall come to court; practice the Common law, Civil law, phyſick, &c. or bear any public office or charge, but ſhall be utterly diſabled to exerciſe the ſame; and liable to a penalty of 100*l.* But offices of inheritance may be executed by deputies taking the oaths, by 1 W. & M.

Papiſts, and truſtees for Papiſts, are incapable to preſent to any benefice, ſchool, hoſpital, &c. or to grant any avoidance of a benefice, and the two univerſities ſhall preſent; the Chancellor, &c. of Oxford, to preſent to benefices lying in ſuch and ſuch counties; and the univerſity of Cambridge to benefices in others, particularly mentioned in the ſtatute; and a bill may be brought in a court of equity to diſcover ſecret truſt, &c. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. It has been adjudged on that ſtatute, that the perſon is only diſabled to preſent; and that he continues patron to all other purpoſes. Cawley 230. That ſuch a perſon by being diſabled to grant an avoidance, is not hindered from granting the advowſon itſelf, in fee, or for life, for good conſideration. 1 Jon. 19, 20. (See infra). And that if an advowſon or avoidance belonging to a Papiſt come into the King's hands, by reaſon of an outlawry, or conviction of recuſancy, &c. the King and not the univerſities, ſhall preſent. 1 Jon. 20. Hob. 126. But where a preſentment is veſted in the univerſity, at the time when the church becomes void, it ſhall not be deveſted again, by the patron's conforming, &c. 10 Rep. 57.

Papiſts, and Popiſh recuſants, married not according to the orders of the church of England, are diſabled, the huſband to be tenant by the curteſy, and the wife to have dower, &c. and incur a forfeiture of 100*l.* Alſo not baptizing their children by a lawful miniſter, is liable to the like penalty: And not being buried according to the Eccleſiaſtical laws, the executor ſhall forfeit 20*l.* &c. And Papiſts are incapable to be executors, adminiſtrators, or guardians; diſabled to ſue actions, and as perſons excommunicate till they conform, &c. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. And it is ſaid that being convicted of Popiſh recuſancy, they may be taken up by the writ de excom. capiend. And ſhall not be admitted as competent witneſſes in a cauſe: But this ſeems to be carried beyond the intent of the ſtatute. 2 Bulſt. 155, 156. 1 Hawk. P. C. 23.

Perſons going beyond ſea to be trained up by Papiſts, ſhall forfeit their goods and chattels, if they do not conform within ſix months after their return: And ſending children abroad to be thus trained up, is liable to a penalty of 100*l.* Stat. 3 Car. 1. c. 2.

The Lord Mayor of the city of London, and juſtices of peace, &c. are to cauſe to be brought before them Papiſts within the ſaid city and ten miles thereof, and tender them the declaration 30 Car. 2. c. 1. againſt tranſubſtantiation; and refuſing to ſubſcribe it, they ſhall ſuffer as Popiſh recuſants convict: But ſuch as uſe any trade or manual art; and foreign merchants, ſervants to ambaſſadors, &c. are excepted. 1 W. & M. ſeſſ. 1. c. 9. Papiſts refuſing to appear and ſubſcribe the ſaid declaration, are not to keep in their houſes any arms, weapons, gunpowder, &c. And juſtices of peace may order any ſuch to be ſeized: And they may not keep any horſe above the value of 5*l.* which may be alſo ſeized, And perſons concealing arms or horſes, or hindering a ſearch after them, ſhall be committed, and forfeit treble value. 1 W. & M. c. 15.

If any perſon refuſe to repeat and ſubſcribe the abovementioned declaration, and ſhall thereupon have his name and place of abode certified and recorded at the general quarter-ſeſſions of the peace, as by the act is appointed, he ſhall be diſabled to make any preſentation, &c. And preſenting contrary to this act ſhall forfeit 500*l.* 1 W. & M. c. 26. Papiſts who keep ſchools are to ſuffer perpetual impriſonment: And perſons educated in the Popiſh religion, not taking the oaths and ſubſcribing the declaration in the 30 Car. 2. c. 1. within ſix months after they attain the age of eighteen years, ſhall be diſabled to take or inherit lands, but not their heirs or poſterity; and during their lives or refuſal, the next Proteſtant relation ſhall enjoy, &c.

And where the parents of Proteſtant children are Papiſts, the Lord Chancellor may take care of the education of ſuch Proteſtant children, and make order for their maintenance ſuitable to the ability of the parent. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 4. Every truſtee, etc. for Popiſh children is diſabled to preſent to any benefice, etc. and preſentations by them ſhall be void; and the Chancellor and ſcholars of the univerſities ſhall preſent, as by the act 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. And biſhops are required to examine perſons preſented on oath, before inſtitution, whether the perſon preſenting be the real patron, and made the preſentation in his own right, or whether he be not a truſtee for a Papiſt, etc. And if the parſon preſented refuſe to be examined, his preſentation ſhall be void. 12 Ann. ſeſſ. 2. c. 14.

Grants of advowſons, or right of preſentation to churches, etc. by any Papiſts, or perſon any ways in truſt for him, to be void; except made for valuable conſideration to ſome Proteſtant purchaſer; for the benefit of a Proteſtant only; and perſons claiming under ſuch grant, ſhall be deemed as truſtees for a Papiſt, and they and their preſentees be compelled to make diſcovery thereof and the intent, as directed by 12 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 14. etc. 11 Geo. 2. c. 17. Papiſts are to regiſter their eſtates, as by this ſtatute is directed, on pain of forfeiture; and lands regiſtered muſt be expreſſed in what pariſhes they lie, who are the poſſeſſors thereof, the eſtate therein, and the yearly rent, etc. Perſons ſuing in Chancery for forfeitures for default of regiſtry, may demand all diſcoveries as if purchaſers; and they may bring ejectment on their own demiſe, and give the act and ſpecial matter in evidence. 1 Geo. 1. c. 55.

Sales of lands by Papiſts (incurring the diſabilities 11 and 12 W. 3.) to Proteſtant purchaſers, are confirmed notwithſtanding the diſability of perſons joining in the ſale; unleſs before ſuch ſales any perſon who is to take advantage of the diſability, has recovered, or entered his claim, and given notice, etc. No lands ſhall paſs from Papiſts, by deed or will, without inrollment: and Papiſts are rendered incapable to purchaſe lands. 3 Geo. 1. c. 18. Deeds and wills of Papiſts have further time to be inrolled, and not avoidable for want thereof, etc. by 6 Geo. 2. c. 5.

All perſons within England, of the age of eighteen years, not having taken the oaths, and who refuſe to take the ſame, ſhall regiſter their eſtates as Papiſts; or neglecting ſuch regiſtry, are to forfeit the inheritance of their lands, two thirds to the King, and the other third to the proſecutor. 9 Geo. 1. c. 24. But by a ſubſequent act, this ſhall not extend to oblige any woman to take the oaths, or to regiſter her eſtate; nor any perſon that hath only an intereſt in lands in reverſion; or to eſtates under 10*l.* a year, &c. And only one year's rent and profits of lands is forfeited for default of regiſtring by this ſtatute, recoverable by actions in the courts at Weſtminſter, within ſix months after the offence; perſons in priſon, beyond ſea, non compos, &c. are to have ſix months to take the oaths and regiſter their eſtates, after the removal of their diſabilities; and certificates by the proper officers, ſhall be allowed as evidence of taking the oaths, &c. 10 Geo. 1. c. 4.

By a late ſtatute, the reputed owners of eſtates being Papiſts, on conforming to the proteſtant religion, and taking the oaths, the ſame to be recorded, and they and all Proteſtants claiming under them, ſhall poſſeſs the eſtates freed of diſabilities incurred by ſuch owners, &c. And any perſon's right, intitled to a reverſion, is ſaved if his ſuit be commenced in twelve months after the determination of the precedent eſtate. But perſons conforming as aforeſaid, and afterwards returning to the Popiſh religion, ſhall be ever after incapable of any benefit by this act 11 Geo. 2. c. 17.

A Papiſt tenant in tail ſuffers a recovery to the uſe of himſelf in fee, in order to make a marriage ſettlement; this is not a purchaſe within 11 W. 3. c. 4. Strange 267. Acts are made almoſt every other ſeſſions, for allowing further time for the inrolment of deeds and wills made by Papiſts, and for relief of Proteſtant purchaſers. Papiſts taxed. Papiſts, or reputed papiſts, who refuſe to take the oaths 1 W. and M. are to pay double to the land tax, etc. Stat. 8 W. 3. c. 6. And a tax of 100,000*l.* for the year 1723. was laid on the lands of all papiſts, over and above the double taxes, towards reimburſing the public charges occaſioned by the late conſpiracies; charged ſo much on every county, etc. and leviable by the commiſſioners of the land tax, by Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 18.

Par, Is a term in Exchange, where a man to whom a bill is payable, receives of the acceptor juſt ſo much in value, etc. as was paid to the drawer by the remitter. Merch. Dict. And in exchange of money, par is defined to be a certain number of pieces of the coin of one country, containing in them an equal quantity of ſilver to that of another number of pieces of the coin of ſome other country; as where thirty-ſix ſhillings of the money of Holland, have juſt as much ſilver, as twenty ſhillings Engliſh money; and bills of exchange drawn from England to Holland, at the rate of thirty-ſix ſhillings Dutch, for each pound ſterling, is according to the par. Lock's Conſid. of Money, pag. 18.

Paracium, The tenure that is between parceners, viz. that which the youngeſt oweth to the eldeſt. Domeſday.

Parage, (paragium) Signifies equality of name, blood, or dignity; but more eſpecially of land, in the partition of an inheritance between coheirs: hence comes to diſparage and diſparagement. Co. Lit. 166.

Paragium, Was commonly taken for the equal condition betwixt two parties, to be contracted in marriage; for the old laws did ſtrictly provide, that young heirs ſhould be diſpoſed in matrimony cum paragio, with perſons of equal birth and fortune, ſine diſparagacione.

Paramount, (compounded of two French words, par; i. e. per and monter, aſcendere) Signifies in our law the higheſt lord of the fee, of lands, tenements, or hereditaments. F. N. B. 135. As there may be a lord meſne; where lands are held of an inferior lord, who holds them of a ſuperior under certain ſervices; ſo this ſuperior lord is lord paramount: and all honours, which have manors under them, have lords paramount. Alſo the King is chief lord, or lord paramount of all the lands in the kingdom. Co. Lit. 1.

Parapharnalia, or Paraphernalia, (from the Greek Παρὰ, Præter, and Φερνὴ Dos) Are thoſe goods which a wife challengeth over and above her dower or jointure, after her huſband's death; as furniture for her chamber; wearing apparel, and jewels, which are not to be put into the inventory of her huſband. A wife, after the death of her huſband, may claim her paraphernalia or neceſſary apparel for her body, and cloth given her to make a garment, etc. beſides her dower; ſo that the huſband cannot give them away by will: but ſhe ſhall not have exceſſive apparel, beyond her rank.

Pearl necklaces, chains of diamonds, gold watches, etc. may be included under paraphernalia, if they were uſually worn by the wife, and ſuitable to her quality, and the faſhion of the times; and they are aſſets to pay debts and legacies; provided the huſband does not give theſe away by will. 1 Rol. Abr. 911. 3 Cro. 343. Kitch. 369. Noy's Max. 168.

It was adjudged in the Viſcounteſs Bindon's caſe, that paraphernalia ought to be allowed to a widow, having regard to her quality and degree; and that her huſband being a Viſcount, ſhe ſhall be allowed her jewels to the value of 500 marks, etc. 2 Leon. 166. A widow retained a chain of diamonds and pearls, againſt the deviſe of her huſband; and two judges held, that ſhe might detain them, becauſe they were convenient for a woman of her quality; but two other judges were of a contrary opinion, that paraphernalia ſhould be not only convenient, but neceſſary; otherwiſe the widow ſhall not detain them againſt the expreſs deviſe of the huſband: tho' it is ſaid it was adjudged that the widow might detain neceſſary apparel and likewiſe ornaments againſt the deviſe of her huſband; and that he cannot diſpoſe of them by will, though he might have ſold them in his life-time; for immediately upon his death the property is veſted in the widow. Cro. Car. 347. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1225.

All the wife's wearing apparel, more than that which is neceſſary and convenient, is a chattel in the huſband; and after the huſband's death ſhall go to his executors; but what is neceſſary for her condition and ſtate, and comes under paraphernalia, ſhe ſhall have as her own goods, and may diſpoſe of at her death; or take after the death of her huſband. Bro. 9. Doct. et Stud. 17. Tho' by our law the wife may not make a will of and deviſe them, without the aſſent of the huſband whilſt he lives; becauſe the property and poſſeſſion is in him. 2 *Shep. Paraſitus, A word uſed for a domeſtick ſervant. Blount.

Paravail, (per-availe) Signifies the loweſt tenant o the fee, or he who is immediate tenant to one who holdeth over of another; and he is called tenant paravail, becauſe it is preſumed he hath profit and avail by the land. F. N. B. 135. 2 Inſt. 296. 9 Rep. Coney's caſe. See Black. Com. 2 V. 60.

Parcella Terræ, A parcel of land, as uſed in ſome ancient charters.——Sciant, quod ego Stephanus W. dedi, etc. Roberto de D. unam parcellam terræ cum pertinen. jacen'. etc. ſine dat.

Parcel-makers, Are two officers in the Exchequer, that make the parcels of the eſcheators accounts; wherein they charge them with every thing they have levied for the King's uſe, within the time of their being in office, and deliver the ſame to the auditors, to make up their accounts therewith. Practice Excheq. 99.

Parceners, (quaſi parcellers, i. e. rem in parcellas dividentes) Are of two ſorts, viz parceners, according to the courſe of the Common law; and parceners according to cuſtom.

Parceners by the Common law, are where a man or woman ſeiſed of lands or tenements in fee-ſimple or fee-tail hath no iſſue but daughters, and dieth, and the tenements deſcend to ſuch daughters, who enter into the lands deſcended to them, then they are called parceners, and are but as one heir to their anceſtor; and they are termed parceners, becauſe by the writ de partitione facienda the law will conſtrain them to make partition; tho' they may do it by conſent, etc. Litt. 243. 1 Inſt. 164. See Black. Com. 2 V. 187. And if a man ſeiſed of lands in fee-ſimple, or in tail, dieth without any iſſue of his body begotten, and the lands deſcend to the ſiſters, they are parceners; and in the ſame manner where he hath no ſiſters, but the lands deſcend to his aunts, or other females of kin in equal degree, they are alſo parceners: but where a perſon hath but one daughter, ſhe ſhall not be called parcener, but daughter and heir, etc. Lit. ſect. 242.

If a man hath iſſue two daughters, and the eldeſt hath iſſue divers ſons and daughters, and the youngeſt hath iſſue divers daughters; the eldeſt ſon of the eldeſt daughter ſhall not only inherit, but all the daughters of the youngeſt ſhall inherit, and the eldeſt ſon is coparcener with the daughters of the youngeſt ſiſter, and ſhall have one moiety, viz. his mother's part; ſo that men deſcending of daughters may be parceners as well as women, and ſhall jointly plead and be impleaded, etc. 1 Inſt. 164. None are parceners by the Common law, but either females, or the heirs of females, who come to lands or tenements by deſcent. Lit. 254.

Parceners by cuſtom is, where a perſon ſeiſed in fee-ſimple, or in fee-tail of lands or tenements of the tenure called gavelkind, hath iſſue, divers ſons, and dies; ſuch lands ſhall deſcend to all the ſons as parceners by the cuſtom, who ſhall equally inherit and make partition as females do, and writ of partition lies in this caſe, as between females, etc. Lit. ſect. 265. Women parceners make but one heir, and have but one freehold: but between themſelves they have in judgment of law ſeveral freeholds, to many purpoſes; for one of them may infeoff the other of her part; and the parcenary is not ſevered by the death of any of them; but if one dies, her part ſhall deſcend to her iſſue, &c. 1 Inſt. 164, 165. If one parcener make a feoffment in fee of her part, this is a ſeverance of the coparcenary, and ſeveral writs of præcipe ſhall lie againſt the other parceners and the feoffee. 1 Inſt. 167. Tho' if two coparceners by deed alien both their parts to another in fee, rendering to them two, and their heirs, a rent out of the land, they ſhall have the rent in courſe of parcenary; becauſe their right in the land out of which the rent is reſerved was in parcenary. Ibid. 160.

If there be two parceners, and each of them taketh huſband, and have iſſue, and the wives die, the parcenary is divided, and here is a partition in law. Ibid. Partition of lands held in tail, by the death of one ſiſter without iſſue is made void, and the other ſiſter as heir in tail will be intitled to the whole land; and may have writ of formedon where the other parcener hath aliened. New Nat. Br. 476. And a writ of nuper obiit lies for one parcener deforced by another, &c. F. N. B. 197.

If any parceners or there iſſues be diſſeiſed, they muſt join in an aſſiſe againſt the diſſeiſor; ſo if they have cauſe to bring any action of waſte, &c. 1 Inſt. 95, 198. Two parceners are of land, one enters and claims the whole, and is diſſeiſed, ſhe alone may maintain aſſiſe; but if the diſſeiſin be of rent, the other parceners muſt be named, or the writ ſhall abate. Jenk. Cent. 41, 42.

The poſſeſſion of one parcener, &c. of land, without an actual ouſter, gives poſſeſſion to the other of them. Hob. 120. Dyer 128. One parcener may juſtify detaining the deeds concerning the land, againſt another, as they belong to one as well as the other. 2 Rol. Abr. 31.

Parceners are to make partition of the lands deſcended; and eſtates of coparceners at Common law are applicable only to inheritances: Partition may be made between parceners of inheritances, which are intire and dividable, as of an advowſon, rent charge, or ſuch like; but it is otherwiſe of inheritances which are not intire and indiviſible, as of a piſcary, common without number; or ſuch uncertain profits out of lands; for in ſuch caſe the eldeſt parcener ſhall have them, and the others have contribution from her out of ſome other inheritance, left by the anceſtor; but if there be no ſuch inheritance, then the eldeſt ſhall have theſe uncertain profits for one time, and the youngeſt for another time. Dyer 153.

Parceners cannot make partition, ſo as for one to have the land for one time, and another for another, &c. for each is to have her part abſolutely: but if an advowſon deſcend to them, they may preſent by turns; and if there be a common, &c. which may not be divided, one may have it for one year, and another for another year, &c. 1 Inſt. 164.

An advowſon is an entire thing, and yet, in effect, the ſame may be divided betwixt parceners; for they may preſent by turns: and if there be coparceners of an advowſon appendant to a manor, and they make partition of the manor, without mentioning the advowſon; the ſame is ſtill appendant, and they may preſent by turns. 8 Rep. 79. If two parceners be of an advowſon, and they agree to preſent by turns, this is a good partition as to the poſſeſſion; but it is not a ſeverance of the eſtate of inheritance. 1 Rep. 87. And where there are coparceners of an advowſon, the eldeſt hath privilege to preſent firſt; not in reſpect of her perſon but eſtate: and if one parcener hath a rent granted to her upon a partition made, to make her part equal with the other, ſhe may diſtrain for the arrears of common right; and ſo ſhall the grantee of the rent, becauſe it is not annexed to her perſon only, but to her eſtate. 3 Rep. 32.

If there are two parceners of a manor, and on partition made, each hath demeſnes and ſervices allotted; in this caſe each is ſaid to have a manor. 1 Leon. 26. Davis 61. A partition may not be made of franchiſes, as goods of felons, waifs, eſtrays, &c. which are caſual. 5 Rep. 3.

How partition may be made.

Partition, between parceners, may be made four ways, viz

Firſt, When they themſelves divide the lands equally into as many parts, as there are parceners; and each chuſes one ſhare or part, the eldeſt firſt, and ſo one after another, &c.

Secondly, When they agree to chuſe certain friends to make diviſion for them.

Thirdly, Partition by drawing lots, where having divided the lands into as many parts as there are parceners, and written every part in a diſtinct ſcroll, being wrapt up, they each draw one.

And Fourthly, Partition by writ de partitione facienda, which is by compulſion, where ſome agree to partition, and others do not; and when judgment is given on a writ of partition, it is that the ſheriff ſhall go to the land, and by the oaths of twelve men make partition between the parties, to hold to them in SEVERALTY, without any mention of preference to the eldeſt ſiſter, &c. Litt. 248. 1 Inſt. 164. But if there be a capital meſſuage on the land to be divided, the ſheriff muſt allot that wholly to the eldeſt of the parceners. 1 Inſt. 165. The partition made and delivered by the ſheriff and jurors, ought to be returned into court under the ſeal of the ſheriff, and the ſeals of the twelve jurors; for the words of the judicial writ of partition, which commands the ſheriff to make partition, are, Aſſumpſit tecum duodecim, &c. & partitionem inde ſcire facias juſticiariis, etc. ſub ſigillo tuo et ſigillis eorum per quorum ſacramentum partitionem illam feceris, etc. If partition be made by force of the King's writ, and judgment thereof given, it ſhall be binding to all parties, becauſe it is made by the ſheriff, by the oath of twelve men, by authority of law; and the judgment is, that the partition ſhall remain firm and ſtable for EVER. 1 Inſt. 171.

In a writ of partition, the judgment was, quod partitio fiat; and before it was executed by the ſheriff, a writ of error was brought; and it was adjudged that a writ of error doth not lie upon this firſt judgment, becauſe this is not like other actions, where error lies before the habere facias ſeiſinam is returned, and the judgment is final; but it is not ſo in this caſe, as there muſt be another judgment, i. e. quod partitio ſtabilis maneat, which cannot be till the partition is made, and returned by the ſheriff. Hetley 36. Dyer 67.

Where two perſons hold lands pro indiviſo, and one would have his part in ſeveralty, and the other refuſeth to make partition by deed, there the writ de partione facienda lies againſt him who refuſes, directed to the ſheriff; and he muſt be preſent when the partition is made; and if it is objected before the return of the writ, that he was not preſent, he may be examined by the court; but after the writ is returned and filed, it is too late. Cro. Eliz. 9.

A writ of partition was taken forth, and the ſheriff made partition, but was not upon the land; and on motion that the return might not be filed, but that a new writ might be awarded, becauſe the ſheriff was not on the land, the court ſtaid the filing, and on examining the ſheriff, ordered a new writ. Cro. Car. 9, 10.

On writ of partition to the ſheriff to make partition of lands, part of the lands were allotted to one, and the jury would not aſſiſt the ſheriff to make partition of the other part; which appearing on the return of the writ, the court was moved for an attachment againſt the jury, and a new writ to the ſheriff. Godb. 265. Partition was brought by tenant in fee of one moiety, againſt tenant for life of the other moiety, on the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 32. And though it has been reſolved, if partition be made between one who hath an eſtate of inheritance, and another who hath a particular eſtate for life; that the writ ought to be framed upon the ſtatute, and to be made ſpecial, ſetting forth the particular eſtate: yet it was held to be good where the writ was general. Goldſb. 84. 2 Lutw. 1015.

A partition may be made by ſtatute of any eſtate of freehold, or for term of years, &c. of manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments whereof the partition is demanded; and if after proceſs of pone returned upon a writ of partition, and affidavit of notice given of the writ to the tenant to the action, and a copy left with the tenant in poſſeſſion at leaſt forty days before the return of the ſaid pone, &c. there be no appearance entered in fifteen days; the demandant having entered his declaration, the court may give judgment by default, and award a writ to make partition, whereby the demandant's part or purpart will be ſet out ſeverally; which writ being executed after eight days notice, and returned, and thereupon final judgment entered, ſhall conclude all perſons, &c.

But the court may ſuſpend or ſet aſide the judgment, if the party concerned move the court in a year, and ſhew good matter in bar. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 31. And by this ſtatute, if the high ſheriff, by reaſon of diſtance, &c. cannot be preſent at the execution of any judgment in partition, then the under ſheriff in the preſence of two juſtices of peace of the county, ſhall proceed to the execution of the writ, by inquiſition, and the high ſheriff is to make the return, &c. Ibid. When the partition is made and returned, the perſons who were tenants of the lands, or any part thereof, before divided, ſhall continue tenants of the lands they held, to the reſpective owners, under ſuch conditions and rents as before: and no plea in abatement ſhall be admitted or received in any ſuit of partition; nor ſhall the ſame be abated by the death of any tenant, &c. Ibid.

In a writ of partition the defendant pleaded, that he formerly brought writ of partition againſt the plaintiff, and had judgment, to have partition: and held a good plea; but it was a queſtion, whether it ſhould be pleaded in bar or abatement, or by way of eſtoppel. Dyer 92. No damages can be recovered on a writ of partition, though the writ and declaration conclude ad damnum. Hetl. 35. Noy 143. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1237.

Where judgment for debt is had againſt one parcener, the lands, &c. of both may be taken in execution, and the moiety undivided is to be ſold, and then the vendee will be tenant in common with the other coparcener: if the ſheriff ſeize only a moiety and ſell it, the other parcener will have a right to a moiety of that money. 1 Salk. 392. All partitions ought to be according to the quality and true value of the lands, and be equal in value: but if partition be made by parceners of full age, and unmarried, and ſanæ memoriæ, it binds them for ever, although the value be unequal, if it be made of lands in fee: and if it be of lands intailed, it ſhall bind the parties themſelves for their lives, but not their iſſue unleſs it be equal: if it be unequal, the iſſue of her who hath the leſſer part, may after deceaſe diſagree, and enter and occupy in common with the aunt: alſo if any be covert, it ſhall bind the huſband, but not the wife, or her heirs; or if any be within age, it ſhall not bind the infant, but ſhe may at her full age diſagree, &c. 1 Inſt. 166, 170. 2 Lil. Abr. 283. Though if a wife after coverture, or the infant at her age, accept of the unequal part, they are concluded for ever. 1 Inſt. 170. And where there be two coparceners, and one hath ſeven daughters, and dieth; if the other parcener releaſeth to any one of the daughters her whole part, here, although ſhe to whom the releaſe is made, have not an equal part, the releaſe is good. Ibid. 193. It hath been adjudged, that notwithſtanding a partition is unequal, if it be by writ, it cannot be avoided; but if it be by deed, it may be avoided by entry. 1 Inſt. 171.

If the eſtate of a parcener be in part evicted, that ſhall defeat the whole partition; partition implying a warranty and condition in law to enter upon the whole on eviction, as in caſe of exchange of lands. 1 Inſt. 173. 1 Rep. 87. And if after partition, one of the parts is recovered from a parcener by lawful title, ſhe ſhall compel the others to make a new partition. Cro. Eliz. 902. But as to eviction of parceners, if one ſell her part, and then the part which the other parcener hath, is evicted; in this caſe ſhe who loſeth her part, cannot enter on the alienee, for by alienation the privity is deſtroyed. 1 Inſt. 173. Among parceners, a partition upon the land may be good without deed; but not among jointenants, &c. Dyer 29, 194.

Parco fracto, Is a writ which lies againſt him who violently breaks a pound, and takes out beaſts from thence, which for ſome treſpaſs done, &c. were lawfully impounded. Reg. Orig. 166. And if a perſon hath authority to take beaſts out of the pound, if he breaks the pound before he demands the cattle of the keeper thereof, and he refuſeth, or interrupts them in the taking of them, &c. the writ parco fracto lies. Dr. and Stud. 112. Damages are recoverable in this writ; and the party may be puniſhed, as for a pound breach in the court leet. 1 Inſt. 47. F. N. B. 100. The word parcus was frequently uſed for a pound to confine treſpaſſing or ſtraying cattle; whence imparcare to impound, imparcatio pounding, and imparcamentum, right of pounding, &c.

Pardon, (Pardonatio, venia) Is the remitting or forgiving of an offence committed againſt the King; and is either ex gratia Regis, or by courſe of law. Staundf. Pl. Cor. 47. Pardon ex gratia Regis, is that which the King affords by virtue of his prerogative. Pardon by courſe of law, is that which the law in equity affords for a light offence; as caſual homicide, when one killeth a man, having no ſuch meaning. Weſt. Symbol. par. 2. tit. Indictments, ſect. 46.

1. By whom a pardon may be granted; in what caſes, and for what offences.

2. Where a pardon is grantable of common right; of the validity of a pardon; and by what words treaſons, murder, felony, and other offences may be pardoned.

1. By whom a pardon may be granted; in what caſes, and for what offences.

The power of pardoning offences is inſeparably incident to the Crown; and this high prerogative the King is intruſted with upon a ſpecial confidence, that he will ſpare thoſe only whoſe caſe, could it have been foreſeen, the law itſelf may be preſumed willing to have excepted out of its general rules, which the wiſdom of man cannot poſſibly make ſo perfect, as to ſuit every particular caſe. 1 Show. 284. See Black. Com. 4 V. 389, &c.

Anciently the right of pardoning offences, within certain diſtricts, was claimed by lords, who had jura regalia by ancient grants from the Crown, or by preſcription. But now, by 27 H. 8. cap. 24. it is enacted, "That no perſon ſhall have power to pardon any treaſons or felonies, nor any acceſſaries, nor outlawries; but that the King ſhall have the authority thereof, united to the crown of this realm, as of right it appertaineth." Co. Lit. 114. 3 Inſt. 233.

It is laid down in general, that the King may pardon any offence, ſo far as the public is concerned in it, after it is over, conſequently may prevent a popular action on a ſtatute, by pardoning the offence before the ſuit is commenced; but it ſeems, that he cannot wholly pardon a public nuſance, while it continues ſuch, becauſe ſuch pardon would take away the only means of compelling a redreſs; yet it is ſaid, that ſuch a pardon will ſave the party from any fine, to the time of the pardon. Plowd. 487. Keilw. 134. 12 Co. 29, 30. 3 Inſt. 237. Vaugh. 333.

But it ſeems agreed, that the King can by no previous licence, pardon, or diſpenſation, make an offence diſpuniſhable which is malum in ſe; as being either againſt the law of nature, or ſo far againſt the public good as to be indictable at Common law; and that a grant of this kind, tending to encourage the doing of evil, which it is the chief end of government to prevent, is againſt the common good, therefore void. Dav. 75. 5 Co. 35. 12 Co. 29. Vide 2 Hawk. P. C. 389. 3 H. 7. 15. pl. 30.

But where a thing in its own nature lawful, is made unlawful by parliament, it was formerly taken as a general rule, that the King might diſpenſe with it, as to a particular time or place, or perſon, ſo far as the public was concerned in it; unleſs ſuch diſpenſation could not but be attended with an inconvenience, as the introducing a monopoly; or fruſtrating the end for which the law was made; as the licenſing a particular perſon to import foreign cards or wines, &c. in which caſe, it was commonly taken to be void; alſo, where a ſtatute gives a particular intereſt, or right of action to the party grieved, it has always been agreed, that no charter from the King, can bar the right of the party grounded on ſuch ſtatute; alſo where a ſtatute is expreſs, that the King's charter againſt the purport of it, though with the clauſe of non obſtante, ſhall be void; it ſeems to have been always generally agreed, that regularly no ſuch clauſe could diſpenſe with it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 389, 390. and ſeveral anthorities there cited. See the next clauſe.

It ſeems to be agreed, that no diſpenſation of any ſtatute, except the ſtatutes of mortmain, was of any force without a clauſe of non obſtante; neither is ſuch clauſe of any effect at this day, for it is declared and enacted by 1 W. & M. ſeſſ. 2. cap. 2. That no diſpenſation by non obſtante of or to any ſtatute, or any part thereof, be allowed; but that the ſame ſhall be held void, except a diſpenſation be allowed in ſuch ſtatute; but it is provided, that no charter, grant or pardon, granted before 23d of October 1699, ſhall be any ways invalidated by that act, but that the ſame ſhall be and remain of the ſame force, and no other, as if the ſaid act had never been made. 2 Hawk. P. C. 391.

The King cannot by any charter bar any right of entry or action, or any legal intereſt, or benefit before veſted in the ſubject; therefore it ſeems clear, that he cannot bar any action on a ſtatute by the party grieved, nor even a popular action commenced before his pardon, nor a recognizance for the peace before it is forfeited. Plowd. 487. 2 Rol. Abr. 178. Cro. Car. 199. Keilw. 134.

Neither can the King pardon an appeal, except only where it is carried on at his ſuit, after a nonſuit; therefore if a perſon attainted, on an appeal carried on at the ſuit of the party, get the King's pardon, he muſt ſue a ſcire facias againſt the appellant, before the pardon ſhall be allowed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 392.

And if the appellant appear on the ſcire facias, he may pray execution notwithſtanding the pardon; but if the ſheriff return a ſcire facias, or two nihils, and the appellant appear not, on demand, or if he return the appellant dead, the appellee ſhall be diſcharged; but ſome have holden, that in this laſt caſe, a ſcire facias ſhall go againſt the heirs of the deceaſed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 392.

But there is no need of any ſcire facias againſt the lord by eſcheat, becauſe the pardon no way tends to reverſe the attainder whereon the title of eſcheat is founded. 2 Hawk. P. C. 393. which vide.

It hath been ſtrongly holden, that the King may pardon the burning of the hand, on a conviction of manſlaughter on an appeal, as being no part of the judgment at the ſuit of the party, but collateral and exemplary puniſhment inflicted by the ſtatute, and intended only by way of ſatisfaction to public juſtice, like the finding of ſureties by one convicted on the ſtatute, againſt treſpaſs in parks. But for this ſee 2 Hawk. P. C. 393.

A pardon will not only diſcharge any ſuit in the ſpiritual court ex officio, but alſo any ſuit in ſuch court ad inſtantiam partis pro reformatione morum, or ſalute animæ, as for defamation, or laying violent hands on a clerk, &c. See the following caſes, 5 Co. 51. Latch. 190. Cro. Eliz. 684. Hob. 81. Cro. Jac. 335. 2 Hawk. P. C. 394.

If a perſon be impriſoned on an excommunicato capiendo for non-payment of coſts, and the King pardons all contempts, it is ſaid, that he ſhall be diſcharged without any ſcire facias againſt the party, and that the party muſt begin anew to compel payment of coſts; becauſe the impriſonment was grounded on the contempt, which is wholly pardoned. 1 Jon. 227. 2 Rol. Abr. 178. Cro. Jac. 159. 8 Co. 68, 69.

But no pardon will diſcharge a ſuit in the ſpiritual court, any more than in a temporal, for a matter of intereſt or property in the plaintiff; as for tithes, legacies, matrimonial contracts and ſuch like; alſo it is agreed, that after coſts are taxed in a ſuit, in ſuch court, at the proſecution of the party, whether for a matter of private intereſt, or pro reformatione morum, or pro ſalute animæ, or for defamation, &c. they ſhall not be diſcharged by a ſubſequent pardon. 5 Co. 51. Latch 190. Cro. Car. 46-7.

And with reſpect to coſts, fee 2 Rol. Abr. 304. Noy 85. Latch 155.

By the 12 & 13 W. 3. cap. 2. "No pardon under the great ſeal ſhall be impleaded to an IMPEACHMENT by the commons in parliament."

2. When a pardon is grantable of common right; and by what words treaſon, murder, felony, and other offences may be pardoned.

By the ſtatute of Glouceſter, cap. 9. it is enacted, "That if it be found by the country, that a perſon tried for the death of a man, did it in his defence, or by miſfortune, then, by the report of the juſtices to the King, the King ſhall take him to his grace, if it pleaſe him." 2 Inſt. 316.

But it ſeems to be ſettled at this day, agreeable to the ancient Common law, in affirmance whereof this ſtatute was made, that in ſuch a caſe, or where one indicted of homicide ſe defendendo confeſſes the indictment, if the party cauſe the record to come into Chancery, the Chancellor will of courſe make him a pardon, without ſpeaking to the King, and that by ſuch pardon the forfeiture of goods may be ſaved; for theſe words, "If it ſhall pleaſe the King," ſhall be taken as ſpoken only by way of reverence to him, and not intended to make ſuch a pardon diſcretionary. But if the party be found to have fled, it is made a quære, if the pardon ſave the forfeiture of the flight, for that is not grounded on the homicide, but on the contempt of law. 2 Hawk. P. C. 380, 381.

If an approver convict all the appellees, whether by battle or verdict, the King ex merito juſtitia ought to pardon him as to his life, and alſo give him his wages from the time of appeal, to the time of conviction. 3 Inſt. 139. 2 Hawk. P. C. 209. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 233.

As to perſons intitled to pardons, on diſcovering their fellows, vide 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 8. 6 & 7 W. & M. c. 17. 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. 5 Ann. c. 31, &c.

It is laid down as a general rule, that whereever it appears by the recital of the pardon, that the King was miſinformed, or not rightly appriſed, both of the heinouſneſs of the crime, and alſo how far the party ſtands convicted upon record, the pardon is void, upon a preſumption that it was gained from the King by impoſition. Yel. 43, 47. Cro. Jac. 18, 34, 548. 2 Rol. Abr. 188. Dyer 352. pl. 26. Raym. 13. 1 Sid. 41. 3 Inſt. 338.

And on this ground it ſeems agreed, that if a man attainted of felony get a Pardon, which doth not mention the attainder, the Pardon will be ineffectual; alſo it hath been holden, that the Pardon of a perſon convicted by verdict of felony is void, unleſs it recite the indictment and conviction; alſo it hath been queſtioned, if the pardon of a perſon barely indicted of felony be good, without mentioning the indictment; but it hath been adjudged, that ſuch a defect is ſaved by the words ſive indictatus ſive non. 2 Hawk. P. C. 382-3.

Anciently a Pardon of all felonies, included all treaſons as well as felonies; and it ſeems to be taken for granted in many books, that ſuch a general Pardon is even at this day pleadable to any felony, except murder and rape, and piracy; and that the only reaſon why it may not alſo be pleaded to murder and rape is, becauſe 13 Rich. 2. requires an expreſs mention of them; and that the only reaſon why it is not pleadable to piracy is, becauſe it is a felony by the Civil law. 2 Hawk. P. C. 383-4. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 466. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 45. Vide Stat. 37 E. 3. c. 2.

No Pardon of felony ſhall be carried beyond the EXPRESS purport of it; therefore if the King, reciting an attainder of robbery, pardon the execution, he thereby neither pardons the felony itſelf, nor any other conſequence of it, beſides the execution. 6 Co. 13. 2 Hawk. P. C. 384.

Vide Stat. 2 Ed. 3. c. 2. which ſeems to deprive the King of the power of pardoning WILFUL murder. But ſee 13 Rich. 2. c. 1. and Hawk. P. C. 385-6. and the various authorities there cited.

It hath been formerly adjudged, that murder might be pardoned under the general deſcription of a felonious killing, with a clauſe of non obſtante; but by 1 W. & M. ſeſſ. 2. cap. 2. it is declared that no diſpenſation by non obſtante of or to any ſtatute ſhall be allowed. 1 Sid. 366. 1 Show. 283. Keling 24. 3 Mod. 37.

But Pardons of manſlaughter remain as they were at Common law; therefore the Pardon of the felonious killing of J. S. may be pleaded to an indictment of manſlaughter in killing him; but where ſuch a Pardon is pleaded to a coroner's inqueſt of manſlaughter, the court may refuſe to allow it, till the fact be found manſlaughter by a jury directed by a higher court. 2 Keb. 363, 415. Keling 24. 2 Jon. 56.

If a general act expreſsly pardon petit treaſon, and except murders, it cannot be avoided by indicting a perſon guilty of petit treaſon for murder only, omitting the word proditorie; for the leſs offence being included in the greater is pardoned, by the Pardon of it; therefore ſuch an exception of murder is to be intended of ſuch murder only as is ſpecially ſo called, and doth not amount to petit treaſon. Dyer 50. pl. 4. 235. pl. 19. 6 Co. 13.

Neither doth the exception of murder in a general act of Pardon of all felonies, extend to felo de ſe; for tho' his offence be in ſtrictneſs murder, yet in common ſpeech, according to which ſtatutes are commonly expounded, it is generally underſtood as a diſtinct offence, the word murder ſeeming prima facie to import the murder of another. 1 Lev. 8, 120. 1 Sid. 150. 1 Keb. 66, 548.

It is ſaid, that a general act of Pardon of all felonies, miſdemeanors and other things done before ſuch a day, pardons a homicide from a wound before the day, whereof the party died not till after; becauſe the ſtroke being pardoned, the effects of it are conſequently pardoned. Plowd. 401. Cole's caſe. 1 *Hale's Hiſt. It is ſaid that a Pardon of all miſpriſions, treſpaſſes, offences and contempts, will pardon a contempt in making a falſe return, and a ſtriking in Weſtminſter Hall, and barratry, and even a præmunire; alſo it is laid down in general, that it will pardon any crime not capital. 1 Lev. 106. 1 Sid. 211. 2 Mod. 52. Parent, (Parens) A father or mother; but generally applied to the father: parents have power over their children by the law of nature, and the Divine law; and by thoſe laws they muſt educate, maintain and defend their children. Wood's Inſt. 63. The parent or father hath an intereſt in the profits of the childrens labour while they are under age, if they live with and are maintained by him: but the father hath no intereſt in the eſtate of a child, otherwiſe than as his guardian. Ibid. The eldeſt ſon is heir to his father's eſtate at Common law; and if there are no ſons, but daughters, the daughters ſhall be heirs, &c. And there being a reciprocal intereſt in each other, parents and children may maintain the ſuits of each other, and juſtify the defence of each other's perſon. 2 Inſt. 564. Parentela, or De Parentela ſe tollere, To renounce his kindred, which was done in open court before the judge, and in the preſence of twelve men, who made oath, that they believed it was done lawfully, and for a juſt cauſe. Pariſh, (parochia) Did anciently ſignify what we now call the dioceſe of a biſhop: But at this day it is the circuit of ground in which the people who belong to one church do inhabit, and the particular charge of a ſecular prieſt. It is derived from the Saxon Pꞃeoꞅꞇ-ꞅcyꞃe, Preoſt-ſcyre, which ſignifies the precinct of which the prieſt had the care, in Engliſh prieſt-ſhire.

How ancient the diviſion of pariſhes is, may at preſent be difficult to aſcertain; for it ſeems to be agreed on all hands, that in the early ages of chriſtianity in this iſland, pariſhes were unknown, or at leaſt ſignified the ſame that a dioceſe does now. There was then no appropriation of eccleſiaſtical dues to any particular church; but every man was at liberty to contribute his tithes to whatever prieſt or church he pleaſed, provided only that he did it to ſome: Or, if he made no ſpecial appointment or appropriation thereof, they were paid into the hands of the biſhop, whoſe duty it was to diſtribute them among the clergy, and for other pious purpoſes, according to his own diſcretion.

Mr. Camden (in his Britania) ſays, England was divided into pariſhes by archbiſhop Honorius about the year 630. Sir Henry Hobart lays it down that pariſhes were firſt erected by the council of Lateran, which was held Anno Domini 1179. Each widely differing from the other and both of them perhaps from the truth; which will probably be found in the medium between the two extremes. For Mr. Selden has clearly ſhewn, (of tithes. c. 9.) that the clergy lived in common without any diviſion of pariſhes, long after the time mentioned by Camden. And it appears from the Saxon laws that pariſhes were in being long before the date of that council of Lateran, to which they are aſcribed by Hobart.

We find the diſtinction of pariſhes, nay even of mother churches, ſo early as in the laws of King Edgar, about the year 970. Before that time the conſecration of tithes was in general arbitrary; that is, every man paid his own (as before obſerved) to what church or pariſh he pleaſed, But this being liable to be attended with either fraud, or at leaſt caprice, in the perſons paying, and with either jealouſies or mean compliances in ſuch as were competitors for receiving them; it was now ordered by the law of King Edgar, (c. 1.) That "dentur omnes decimæ primariæ eccleſiæ ad quam parochia pertinet." However, if any thane, or great lord, had a church within his own demeſnes, diſtinct from the mother church, in the nature of a private chapel; then, provided ſuch church had a coemitery or conſecrated place of burial belonging to it, he might allot one third of his tithes for the maintenance of the officiating miniſter: But, if it had no coemitery, the thane muſt himſelf have maintained his chaplain by ſome other means; for in ſuch caſe all his tithes were ordained to be paid to the primariæ eccleſiæ or mother church.

This proves that the kingdom was then univerſally divided into pariſhes; which diviſion happened probably not all at once, but by degrees. For it ſeems pretty clear and certain, that the boundaries of pariſhes were originally aſcertained by thoſe of a manor or manors: Since it very ſeldom happens that a manor extends itſelf over more pariſhes than one, tho' there are often many manors in one pariſh. The lords, as Chriſtianity ſpread itſelf, began to build churches upon their own demeſnes or waſtes, to accommodate their tenants in one or two adjoining lordſhips; and, in order to have divine ſervice regularly performed therein, obliged all their tenants to appropriate their tithes to the maintenance of the one officiating miniſter, inſtead of leaving them at liberty to diſtribute them among the clergy of the dioceſe in general: And this tract of land, the tithes whereof were ſo appropriated, formed a diſtinct pariſh: Which will account well enough for the frequent intermixture of pariſhes one with another. For if a lord had a parcel of land detached from the main of his eſtate, but not ſufficient to form a pariſh of itſelf, it was natural for him to endow his newly erected church with the tithes of thoſe disjointed lands; eſpecially if no church was then built in any lordſhip adjoining to thoſe out-lying parcels. Thus pariſhes were gradually formed, and pariſh churches endowed with the tithes that aroſe within the circuit aſſigned. But ſome lands, either becauſe they were in the hands of irreligious and careleſs owners, or were ſituate in foreſts and deſart places, or for other now unſearchable reaſons, were never united to any pariſh, and therefore continue to this day extraparochial; and their tithes are now by immemorial cuſtom payable to the King inſtead of the biſhop, in truſt and confidence that he will diſtribute them, for the general good of the church. 2 Inſt. 647. 2 Rep. 44. Cro. Eliz. 512. Yet extraparochial waſtes and marſh lands, when improved and drained, are by the ſtatute 17 Geo. 2. c. 37. to be aſſeſſed to all parochial rates in the pariſh next adjoining. See Black. Com. 1 V. 111, 112, 113. And Wilſ. par. 2. 182.

Lord Holt held, That pariſhes were inſtituted for the eaſe and benefit of the people, not of the parſon; and the reaſon why pariſhioners muſt come to their pariſh church is, becauſe, having charged himſelf with the cure of their ſouls, he might be enabled to take care of that charge. 3 Salk. 88, 89. A pariſh may compriſe many vills; but generally it ſhall not be accounted to contain more than one, except the contrary be ſhewn, becauſe moſt pariſhes have but one vill within them. Hil. 23 Car. 1. B. R. And it ſhall not be intended that there is more than one pariſh in a city, if it be not made to appear; for ſome cities have but one pariſh. Ibid. Where there are ſeveral vills in a pariſh, they may have peace officers, and overſeers of the poor for every particular vill: And an ancient vill in a pariſh, that time out of mind hath had a church of its own, and churchwardens and parochial rights, being reputed a pariſh, is a pariſh within the ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. to provide for its own poor, and ſhall not pay to the poor of the pariſh wherein it lies. Cro. Car. 92, 384, 396. But to make a vill a reputed pariſh within 43 Eliz. c. 2. it muſt have a parochial chapel, chapel-wardens and ſacraments at the time that ſtatute was made. 2 Salk. 501. Pariſhes in reputation are within that ſtatute, eſpecially when it has been the conſtant uſage of ſuch pariſhes to chooſe their own overſeers; who may diſtrain for a poor tax, &c. 2 Rol. Rep. 160. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1235.

Money given by will to a pariſh, ſhall be to the poor of the pariſh, as adjudged in equity. Chanc. Rep. 134. If a highway lie in a pariſh, the pariſh is obliged to repair it, and it is the moſt convenient and equal for the pariſhioners in every pariſh, to repair the ways within it, if they are able. 2 Lil. 272. And if any vill, liberty, &c. that uſes to repair their own highways, ſhall after the uſual rate levied and employed, find the ways not ſufficiently repaired; the whole pariſh may be ordered by juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions to contribute to the repairing thereof. Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 29.

Pariſh Clerk. In every pariſh the parſon, vicar, &c. hath a pariſh clerk under him, who is the loweſt officer of the church. There were formerly clerks in orders, and their buſineſs was at firſt to officiate at the altar, for which they had a competent maintenance by offerings; but now they are laymen, and have certain fees with the parſon, on chriſtnings, marriages, burials, &c. beſides wages for their maintenance. Count. Parſ. Compan. 83, 84. They are to be twenty years of age at leaſt, and known to be of honeſt converſation, ſufficient for their reading, ſinging, &c. And their buſineſs conſiſts chiefly in reſponſes to the miniſter, reading leſſons, ſinging pſalms, &c. And in the large pariſhes of London, ſome of them have deputies, to diſpatch the buſineſs of their places, which are more gainful than common rectories. Ibid. The law looks upon them as officers for life: They are regarded by the Common law, as perſons who have freeholds in their offices; and therefore though they may be puniſhed, yet they cannot be deprived, by eccleſiaſtical cenſures. Black. Com. 1 V. 395. And they are generally appointed by the miniſter, unleſs there is a cuſtom for the pariſhioners or churchwardens to chuſe them; in which caſe the canon cannot abrogate ſuch cuſtom; and when choſen it is to be ſignified, and they are to be ſworn into their office by the archdeacon. Cro. Car. 589. Can. 91. And if ſuch cuſtom appears, the court of B. R. will grant a Mandamus to the archdeacon to ſwear him in, for the eſtabliſhment of the cuſtom turns it into a temporal or civil right. Black. Com. 1 V. 395. He may make a deputy without licence of the ordinary. Strange 942. And cannot ſue in the Spiritual court for fees as being a temporal officer. 2 Strange 1108.

Pariſhioner, (Parochianus) Is an inhabitant of or belonging to any pariſh, lawfully ſettled therein. Pariſhioners are compellable to put things in decent order; but the judgment of the majority is the only rule for the degrees of that decency; and the court inclined, that a rate for that purpoſe is binding; as for moving the communion-table out of the body of the church into the chancel, or raiſing it higher, &c. Far. 70.

Pariſhioners have a right to view pariſh books. 11 Mod. 134.

Pariſhioners are a body politic to many purpoſes; as to vote at a veſtry if they pay ſcot and lot; and they have a ſole right to raiſe taxes for their own relief, without the interpoſition of any ſuperior court; may make by-laws to mend the highways, and to make banks to keep out the ſea, and for repairing the church, and making a bridge, &c. or any ſuch thing for the public good, and by the 3 & 4 W. 3. c. 11. and 7 Ann, to tax and levy poor rates, and to make and maintain fire-engines, and by 9 Geo. for purchaſing workhouſes for the poor. Arg. 8 Mod. 354.

Pariſh Officers. Divers perſons are exempted from ſerving pariſh offices on account of their profeſſions, viz. Phyſicians and ſurgeons, apothecaries, diſſenting teachers, regiſtered ſeamen, and perſons having proſecuted any felon to conviction, &c. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 40. 1 W. & M. c. 18. 7 & 8 & 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. 1 & 10 Ann. &c.

Park, (Lat. parcus, Fr. parque, i. e. locus incluſus) Is a large quantity of ground incloſed and privileged for wild beaſts of chaſe, by the King's grant or preſcription. 1 Inſt. 233.

Manwood defines a park to be a privileged place for beaſts of venary, and other wild beaſts of the foreſt and chaſe, tam Sylveſtres, quam Campeſtres; and differs from a chaſe or warren, in that it muſt be incloſed; for if it lies open it is good cauſe of ſeizure into the King's hands, as a thing forfeited; as a free chaſe is, if it be incloſed; beſides, the owner cannot have an action againſt ſuch as hunt in his park, if it lies open. Manw. Foreſt Laws. Cromp. Juriſ. 148. No man can erect a park, without licence under the broad ſeal; for the Common law does not encourage matter of pleaſure, which brings no profit to the commonwealth. Wood's Inſt. 207. But there may be a park in reputation, erected without lawful warrant; and the owner may bring his action againſt perſons killing his deer. Ibid.

To a park three things are required. 1. A grant thereof. 2. Incloſures by pale, wall or hedge. 3. Beaſts of a park, ſuch as the buck, doe, &c. And where all the deer are deſtroyed, it ſhall no more be accounted a park; for a park conſiſts of vert, veniſon, and incloſure, and if it is determined in any of them, it is a total diſparking. Cro. Parliament, (Parliamentum, from the Fr. Parler, i. e. loqui, & ment, mens, to ſpeak the mind, ſometimes called Commune Concilium Regni Angliæ, Magnum Concilium, &c.) Is a grand aſſembly, or convention of the three eſtates of the kingdom, ſummoned to meet the King, to conſult of matters relating to the common wealth; and particularly to enact and repeal laws.

1. The antiquity and original of parliaments.

Some authors ſay, that the ancient Britains had no ſuch aſſemblies; but that the Saxons had; which may be collected from the laws of King Ina; who lived about the year 712. And William the firſt, called the Conqueror, having divided this land among his followers, ſo that every one of them ſhould hold their lands of him in capite, the chief of theſe were called Barons, who thrice every year aſſembled at the King's court, viz. at Chriſtmas, Eaſter, and Witſuntide, among whom the King uſed to come in his royal robes, to conſult about the public affairs of the kingdom. This King called ſeveral parliaments, wherein it appears, that the freemen or commons of England were alſo there, and had a ſhare in making laws: He by ſettling the court of parliament ſo eſtabliſhed his throne, that neither Britain, Dane, nor Saxon, could diſturb his tranquility; the making of his laws were by act of parliament, and the accord between Stephen and him was made by parliament; though all the times ſince have not kept the ſame form of aſſembling the ſtates. Doddridge's Antiq. Parliament.

There was a parliament before there were any barons; and if the commons do not appear, there can be no parliament; for the knights, citizens and burgeſſes, repreſent the whole commons of England, but the peers only are preſent for themſelves, and none others. Ibid. Sir Edward Coke affirms, that many parliaments were held before the conqueſt; and produces an inſtance of one held in the reign of Alfred: He likewiſe gives us a concluſion of a parliament holden by Athelſtan, where mention is made, that all things were enacted in the great ſynod, or council at Grately, whereat was archbiſhop Wolſehelme, with all the noblemen and wiſemen, whom the King called together. 1 Inſt. 110. It is apparent, (ſays Mr. Pryn) from all the precedents before the time of the conqueſt, that our priſtine ſynods and councils were nothing elſe but parliaments; that our Kings, nobles, ſenators, aldermen, wiſemen, knights and commons, were preſent and voting in them as members and judges: And Sir Henry Spelman, Camden, and other writers, prove the commons to be a part of the parliament in the time of the Saxons, but not by that name, or elected as conſiſting of knights, citizens and burgeſſes. Pryn's Sovereign Pow. Parliament.

As to the original of the preſent houſe of commons, our authors of antiquity vary very much; many are of opinion that the commons began not to be admitted as part of the parliament, upon the footing they are now, until the 49 H. 3. becauſe the firſt writ of ſummons of any knights, citizens and burgeſſes, is of no ancienter date than that time. But the great charter in the 17th year of King John, (about which time the diſtinction of Barones Majores and Minores is ſuppoſed to begin) was made per Regem, Barones & LIBEROS HOMINES TOTIUS REGNI.

Mr. Selden ſays, that the borough of St. Albans claimed by preſcription in the parliament, 8 Ed. 2. to ſend two burgeſſes to all parliaments, as in the reigns of Edw. 1. and his progenitors, which muſt be the time of King John; and ſo before the reign of King Hen. 3. And in the reign of Hen. 5. it was declared and admitted, that the commons of the land were ever a part of the parliament. Selden's Tit. Hon. 709. Polydore Virgil, Hollinſhead, Speed, and others mention, that the commons were firſt ſummoned at a parliament held at Saliſbury, 16 Hen. 1. Sir Walter Raleigh, in his treatiſe of the Prerogative of Parliaments, thinks it was Anno 18 H. 1. And Dr. Heylin finds another beginning for them, viz. in the reign of King Hen. 2.

Thus much ſor the original of our parliament; which is the higheſt and moſt honourable, and abſolute court of juſtice in England; conſiſting of the King, the lords of parliament, and the commons; and again, the lords are divided into ſpiritual, and temporal; and the commons divided into knights of ſhires or counties, citizens out of cities, and burgeſſes from boroughs; the words of the old Latin writ to the ſheriff for the election, being Duos milites gladiis cinctos magis idoneos & diſcretos comitatus tui, & de qualibet civitate comitatus tui duos cives, & de quolibet burgo duos burgenſes, de diſcretioribus & magis ſufficientibus, &c. Inſt. 109.

2. The juriſdiction of parliament.

The juriſdiction of this court is ſo tranſcendent, that it makes, enlarges, abrogates, repeals, and revives laws and ſtatutes, concerning matters eccleſiaſtical, civil, criminal, martial, maritime, &c. And for making of laws and in proceeding by bill, this ſupreme court is not confined either for cauſes, or perſons within any bounds; nor is it tied down to any certain rules or forms of law, in proceedings and determinations: The court of parliament hath power to judge in matters of law; and redreſs grievances that happen, eſpecially ſuch as have no ordinary remedy; to examine into the corruption of magiſtrates, and illegal proceedings of other courts; to redreſs errors, and determine on petitions and appeals, &c. and FROM THIS HIGH COURT THERE LIES NO APPEAL. Ibid.

Affairs of parliament are to be determined by the parliament; tho' the parliament err, it is not reverſible: And not only what is done in the houſe of commons, but what relates to the commons during the parliament, and ſitting the parliament, is no where elſe to be puniſhed but by themſelves, or a ſucceeding parliament.

Every court of juſtice having laws and cuſtoms for its direction, the high court of parliament hath its own proper laws and cuſtoms, called the Laws and Cuſtoms of Parliament; inſomuch that no judge ought to give any opinion of matters done in parliament, becauſe they are not to be decided by the Common law: But the parliament, in their judicial capacity, are governed by the Common and Statute laws, as well as the courts in Weſtminſter Hall. 4 Inſt. 14, 15. State Trials, Vol. 2. 735. The lords and commons in their reſpective houſes have power of judicature, and ſo have both houſes together: And in former times both lords and commons ſat together in one houſe of parliament. 4 Inſt. 23.

3. The ſpeaker.

The lords have one who preſides as ſpeaker in common affairs, uſually the Lord Chancellor; and the commons have their ſpeaker, choſen by the houſe, but to be approved by the King: The commons anciently had no continual ſpeaker, but after conſultation, their manner of proceedings was to agree upon ſome perſon of great abilities, to deliver their reſolutions: In the reign of William Rufus, at a great parliament held at Rockingham, a certain knight came forth, and ſtood before the people, and ſpake in the name and behalf of them all, who was undoubtedly the ſpeaker of the houſe of commons at that time: But the firſt ſpeaker certainly known was Peter de Montford, 44 H. 3. when the lords and commons ſat in ſeveral houſes, or at leaſt gave their aſſents ſeverally. Lex Conſtitution. 162. Sir Richard Walgrave, 5 R. 2. was the firſt ſpeaker who made any formal apology for inability, as now practiſed: Richard Rich, Eſq; 28 H. 8. was the firſt ſpeaker who is recorded to have made requeſt for acceſs to the King. Thomas Moyle, Eſq; 34 H. 8. is ſaid to be the firſt ſpeaker who petitioned for freedom of ſpeech; and Sir Thomas Gargrave, 1 Eliz. was the firſt who made the requeſt for privilege from arreſts, &c. Sir John Buſhy, 17 R. 2. was the firſt ſpeaker preſented to the King in full parliament by the commons: And when Sir Arnold Savage was ſpeaker, 2 Hen. 4. it was the firſt time that the commons were required by the King to chuſe a ſpeaker. Ibid. 163, &c.

4. The judicial power of parliament.

The King cannot take notice of any thing ſaid to be done in the houſe of commons but by the report of the houſe; and every member of the houſe of parliament has a judicial place, and cannot be a witneſs. 4 Inſt. 15. When Charles 1. being in the houſe of commons, and ſitting in the ſpeaker's chair, aſked the then ſpeaker, whether certain members, whom the King named, were preſent? The ſpeaker, from a preſence of mind which aroſe from the genius of that houſe, readily anſwered, That "he had neither eyes to ſee, nor tongue to ſpeak, but as the houſe was pleaſed to direct him." Atkin's Juriſd. and Antiquity of the Houſe of Commons. Hen. 8. having commanded Sir Thomas Gaudy, (one of the judges of the King Bench,) to attend the chief juſtices and know their opinion, whether a man might be attainted of high treaſon by parliament, and never called to anſwer; the judges declared it was a dangerous queſtion, and that the high court of parliament ought to give examples to inferior courts, for proceeding according to juſtice, and no inferior court could do the like. Lex Conſtitution. 161. The houſe of lords is a diſtinct court from the commons, to ſeveral purpoſes, and is the ſovereign court of juſtice, and dernier reſort: They try criminal cauſes on impeachments of the commons; and have an original juriſdiction for the trial of peers upon indictments found by a grand jury: They alſo try cauſes upon appeals from the court of Chancery, or upon writs of error to reverſe judgments in B. R. &c. And ALL THEIR DECREES ARE AS JUDGMENTS; and judgments given in parliament may be executed by the Lord Chancellor. 4 Inſt. 21. Finch 233. 1 Lev. 165. It is ſaid that the judicial power of Parliament is in the lords; but that the houſe of lords hath no juriſdiction over ORIGINAL CAUSES, which would deprive the ſubject of the benefit of appeal. 2 Salk. 510. Alſo the houſe of commons is a diſtinct court to many purpoſes; they examine the right of elections, expel their own members, and commit them to priſon, and ſometimes other perſons, &c. And the book of the clerk of the houſe of commons is a record. 2 Inſt. 536. 4 Inſt. 23. The commons coming from all parts are the grand inqueſt of the realm; to preſent public grievances and delinquents to the King and lords to be puniſhed by them: And any member of the houſe of commons, has the privilege of impeaching the higheſt lord in the kingdom. Wood's Inſt. 455.

5. The proper province of the houſe of commons, &c.

As the houſe of lords ſeems to be politically conſtituted for the ſupport of the rights of the crown; ſo the proper province of the houſe of commons, is to ſtand for the preſervation of the people's liberties. The commons, in making and repealing laws, have equal power with the lords; and for laying taxes on the ſubject, the bill is to begin in the houſe of commons, becauſe from thence the greateſt part of the money ariſes, they repreſenting the whole commons of England; for which reaſon they will not permit any alteration to be made by the lords in a bill concerning money: And as formerly the laying and levying of new taxes have cauſed rebellions and commotions, this has occaſioned, particularly 9 E. 3. when a motion has been made for a ſubſidy of a new kind, that the commons have deſired a conference with thoſe of their ſeveral counties and places, whom they have repreſented, before they have treated of any ſuch matters. 4 Inſt. 34.

There are no places of precedency in the houſe of commons as there are in the houſe of lords; only the ſpeaker has a chair or ſeat, fixed towards the upper end, in the middle of the houſe; and the clerk, with his aſſiſtant, ſits near him at the table, juſt below the chair: The members of the houſe of commons never had any robes, as the lords ever had, except the ſpeaker and clerks, who in the houſe wear gowns, as profeſſors of the law do during term time. If a lord be abſent from the houſe, he may make another lord his proxy; tho' a member of the houſe of commons cannot make a proxy, for he himſelf is only a repreſentative or deputy. Wood's Inſt. 456. No knight, citizen or burgeſs of the houſe of commons, ſhall depart from the parliament without leave of the ſpeaker and commons aſſembled; and the ſame is to be entered in the book of the clerk of the parliament. Stat. 6 Hen. 8. c. 16. And in the 1 & 2 P. & M. Informations were preferred by the attorney general againſt thirty-nine of the houſe of commons, for departing without licence, whereof ſix ſubmitted to fines; but it is uncertain whether any of them were paid.

Calling the houſe is to diſcover what members are abſent, without leave of the houſe, or juſt cauſe; in which caſes fines have been impoſed: On the calling over, ſuch of the members as are preſent, are marked; and the defaulters being called over again the ſame day, or the day after, and not appearing, are ſummoned, or ſent for by the ſerjeant at arms. Lex Conſtitution 159.

Forty members are requiſite to make a houſe of commons for diſpatch of buſineſs; and the buſineſs of the houſe is to be kept ſecret among themſelves: In the 23d year of Queen Elizabeth, Arthur Hall, Eſq; member of parliament, for publiſhing the conferences of the houſe, and writing a book which contained matters of reproach againſt ſome particular members, derogatory to the general authority, power, and ſtate of the houſe, and prejudicial to the validity of the proceedings, was adjudged by the commons to be committed to the Tower for ſix months, fined 500*l.* and expelled the houſe. But the ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, according to the duty of his office, as ſervant to the houſe, may publiſh ſuch proceedings as he ſhall be ordered by the commons aſſembled; and he cannot be liable for what he does that way by the command of others, unleſs thoſe other perſons are liable.

If any member of either houſe ſpeak words of offence in a debate, after the debate is over he is called to the bar, where commonly on his knees he receives a reprimand from the ſpeaker; and if the offence be great, he is ſent to the Tower. When the bill of attainder of the earl of Strafford, was paſſing the houſe of commons, Mr. Taylor, a member of that houſe oppoſed it with great violence and indecency, and being heard to explain himſelf, was commanded to withdraw; whereupon it was reſolved he ſhould be expelled the houſe, be made incapable of ever ſerving as a member of parliament, and ſhould be committed priſoner to the Tower, there to remain during the pleaſure of the houſe: And he was called to the bar, where he kneeled down, and Mr. Speaker pronounced the ſentence accordingly. And Sir John Elliot, Denzil Hollis, and another perſon having ſpoken theſe words, viz. The King's Privy Council, his judges and his counſel learned in the law, have conſpired to trample under their feet the liberties of the ſubject, and of this houſe, an information was filed againſt them by the Attorney General; and farther, for that the King having ſignified his pleaſure to the houſe of commons for the adjournment of the parliament, and the ſpeaker endeavouring to get out of the chair, they violenter, &c. detained him in the chair, upon which there was a great tumult in the houſe, to the terror of the commons there aſſembled, and againſt their allegiance, in contempt of the King, his crown and dignity: The defendants pleaded to the juriſdiction of the court; and refuſed to anſwer but in parliament; but it was adjudged, that they ought to anſwer, the charge being for a conſpiracy, and ſeditious acts to prevent the adjournment of the parliament, which may be examined out of it; and not anſwering, judgment was given againſt them, that Sir John Elliot ſhould be committed to the Tower, and fined 2000*l.* and the other two were fined and impriſoned. Cro. Car. 130.

6. The Privilege of members, &c.

Members of parliament are not only privileged from arreſts, but likewiſe in an extraordinary manner from aſſaults, menaces, &c. Sir Robert Brandling made an aſſault upon Mr. Witherington, a member of the houſe of commons, in the country before his coming up to parliament, and Sir Robert was ſent for by the houſe, and committed to the Tower. And Anno 19 Jac. 1. ſome ſpeeches paſſed privately in the houſe between two of the members, and one of them going down the parliament ſtairs, ſtruck the other, who catching at a ſword in his man's hand, endeavouring to return the ſtroke; on complaint to the houſe of commons they were both ordered to attend, where he who gave the blow was committed to the Tower during the pleaſure of the houſe.

Aſſaulting a member coming to or attending in parliament, the offender ſhall pay double damages, and make fine and ranſom, &c. By ſtat. 11 H. 6. c. 11.

All members of parliament, that they may attend the public ſervice of their country, have privilege of parliament for themſelves and their menial ſervants, to be free from arreſts, &c. and for their goods to be free from diſtreſſes: And this privilege of parliament generally holds in all caſes except in treaſon, felony, and breach of the peace. 4 Inſt. 24, 25.

The law and privilege of parliament is part of the law of the land; and a member cannot be arreſted, except in caſes of treaſon, felony, and ACTUAL breach of the peace. Wilſ. par. 2. 159.

There are many remarkable caſes in our books treating of the privileges of parliament, relating to arreſts of members of the houſe of commons, and their ſervants, and the manner of their confinement, releaſement, &c. The firſt year of King Jac. Sir Thomas Shirley, a member of parliament, was arreſted four days before the ſitting of the parliament, and carried priſoner to the Fleet; on which a warrant iſſued to the clerk of the crown for a habeas corpus to bring him to the houſe, and the ſerjeant was ſent for in cuſtody, who being brought to the bar, and confeſſing his fault, was excuſed for that time: But on hearing counſel at the bar for Sir Thomas Shirley, and the warden of the Fleet, and upon producing precedent, Simpſon the proſecutor, who cauſed the arreſt to be made, was ordered to be committed to the Tower; and afterwards the warden refuſing to execute the writ of habeas corpus, and the delivery of Sir Thomas being denied, was likewiſe committed to the Tower; tho' on his agreeing to deliver up Sir Thomas, upon a new warrant for a new writ of habeas corpus, and making ſubmiſſion to the houſe, he was diſcharged: This affair taking up ſome time, the houſe entered into ſeveral debates touching their privilege, and how the debt of the party might be ſatisfied, which produced three queſtions; Firſt, Whether Sir Thomas Shirley ſhould have privilege? Secondly, Whether preſently, or to be deferred? And, Thirdly, Whether the houſe ſhould petition the King for ſome courſe for ſecuring the debt of the party, according to former precedents, and ſaving harmleſs the warden of the Fleet? All which queſtions were reſolved; and a bill was brought in to ſecure Simpſon's debt, &c. which alſo occaſioned an act 1 Jac. 1. c. 13. for relief of plaintiffs in writs of execution, where the defendants in ſuch writs are arreſted, and ſet at liberty by privilege of parliament, by which a freſh proſecution and new execution may be had againſt them when that privilege ceaſes. Lex Conſtitution. 141. And 19 Jac. 1. one Johnſon, a ſervant to Sir James Whitlock a member of the houſe of commons, was arreſted by two bailiffs, who being told Sir James Whitlock was a parliament man, anſwered, that they had known greater men's ſervants than his taken from their maſters in time of parliament: And this appearing, the two bailiffs were ſentenced to aſk pardon of the houſe and Sir James Whitlock, on their knees; that they ſhould both ride on one horſe bare backed, back to back, from Weſtminſter to the Exchange, with papers on their breaſts ſignifying their offence; all which was to be executed preſently, Sedente Curia. Ibid. Let it be remembered, that it was in the reign of James the Firſt.

In action of debt on a bond, conditioned that B. B. ſhould render himſelf at ſuch a day and place to an arreſt; defendant pleaded, that by privilege of parliament, the members, &c. and their ſervants ought not to be arreſted by the ſpace of forty days before the ſitting of the parliament, nor during the ſeſſion, nor forty days afterwards; and that B. B. was at that time ſervant to ſuch a member of parliament, ſo as he could not render himſelf to be arreſted: Upon demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged ill, becauſe he might have rendered himſelf at the time and place; but then it would be at their peril if he was arreſted. 1 Brownl. 81.

The commons in parliament claim privilege for forty days before and after each ſeſſions and prorogation. 2 Lev. 72. Tho' 12 W. 3. c. 3. ordains, That actions may be proſecuted againſt perſons intitled to privilege of parliament, after a diſſolution or prorogation, until a new parliament is called, or the ſame is reaſſembled: and after adjournment for above fourteen days, the reſpective courts may proceed to judgment, &c. Proceedings are to be by ſummons and diſtreſs infinite, &c. until the parties ſhall enter a common appearance; and the real or perſonal eſtates of the defendants may be ſequeſtered for default of appearance; but the plaintiff may not arreſt their bodies: and where any plaintiff ſhall be ſtayed or prevented from proceeding by privilege of Parliament, he ſhall not be barred by any ſtatute of limitation, or nonſuited, diſmiſſed, or his ſuit diſcontinued for want of proſecution; but at the riſing of the Parliament ſhall be at liberty to proceed to judgment and execution. This act is by 10 Geo. 3. c 50. extended to Scotland.

And by 2 Ann. c. 8. Actions may be proſecuted againſt officers of the revenue, or in any place of public truſt, for any forfeiture or breach of truſt, &c. and ſhall not be ſtayed by colour of privilege; but ſuch officer being a Member of Parliament, is not ſubject to arreſt during time of privilege, but ſummons, attachment, &c.

By the 11 Geo. 2. cap. 24. Any perſon may proſecute a ſuit in any court of record, &c. in Great Britain or Ireland, againſt any Peer, or Member of the Houſe of Commons, or other perſon intitled to privilege, in the intervals of Parliaments, or of Seſſions, if above fourteen days; and the ſaid courts, after diſſolutions or prorogations, are to give judgment, and award execution: and no proceedings in law againſt the King's immediate debtor, as ſuch, &c. to be delayed under colour of ſuch privilege; only the perſon of a Member of Parliament, &c. ſhall not be arreſted or impriſoned.

By Stat. 10 Geo. 3. c. 50. Suits may at any time be proſecuted in courts of record, equity, or admiralty, and courts having cogniſance of cauſes matrimonial, and teſtamentary, againſt peers and members of the houſe of commons, and their ſervants, &c.——But the perſons of members of the houſe of commons, are not to be arreſted or impriſoned.——Proceſs by diſtringas being found dilatory, the court out of which the writ proceeds, may order the iſſues to be ſold, and the money ariſing thereby, to be applied to pay the coſts to the plaintiff, and the ſurplus to be retained till the appearance of the defendant, &c.—When the purpoſe of the writ is anſwered the iſſues are to be returned; or, if ſold, the money remaining is to be repaid.—Obedience to the rule of the court of King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer may be enforced by diſtreſs infinite.

A defendant who was a Member of Parliament, brought a letter from the Speaker to the court of King's Bench to ſtay proceedings; but the court would not allow it, but told him he might bring his writ of privilege. Latch. 150. Judgment was had againſt the defendant, and afterwards he was choſen a Member of Parliament, and after his election he was taken in execution, yet he had his privilege; tho' the book tells us minus juſte. Moor 57. And where judgment being had againſt a defendant, and he was taken in execution in the morning, and about three hours afterwards was choſen a Member of Parliament; the Houſe agreed, that being arreſted before he was choſen, &c. he ſhall not have his privilege. Moor 340. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 27.

The courts at Weſtminſter may judge of the privilege of Parliament, where it is incident to a ſuit the court is poſſeſſed of: and courts may proceed to execution between the ſeſſions of Parliament, notwithſtanding appeals lodged, &c. State Trials, 2 V. pag. 66, 209.

Of elections, and herein,

1. Of the elected, and who are eligible, and who are not, and of their qualifications.
2. Of the electors, and their qualifications,
3. Of the duty of returning officers, and the remedies againſt them.

1. Of the elected, and who are eligible, and who not, and of their qualifications.

The Parliament is called by virtue of the King's writ of ſummons out of Chancery, at leaſt forty days before the Parliament begins: the Commons are elected by the people; and every Member, tho' choſen for one particular place, ſerves for the whole kingdom. As attendance of this nature is for the ſervice of the public, the whole nation has ſuch an intereſt therein that the King cannot grant an exemption to any perſon from being elected as a Knight, Citizen, or Burgeſs in Parliament; and for that elections ought to be free. 29 Hen. 6. But an alien cannot be elected, for he is not a liege ſubject; tho' if an alien were naturalized, he was eligible till the Stat. 12 W. 3 cap. 2. A man attainted of treaſon or felony, or outlawed, &c. is not eligible; nor ſhall ſuch perſons be ſuffered to ſit in the houſe of Parliament. 4 Inſt. 48. A perſon under the age of twenty-one years, may not be elected to ſit in Parliament; neither can any Lord ſit there, until he be of the full age of twenty-one years. Ibid. It was formerly held that Mayors and Bailiffs of towns corporate were not eligible; but now they may be elected. And ſo may a ſheriff of a county, for another ſhire. None of the Judges, or Barons of the Exchequer, who have judicial places, can be choſen Knight, Citizen, or Burgeſs of Parliament, as it is now holden, becauſe they are aſſiſtants in the Houſe of Lords: yet Thorpe, Baron of the Exchequer, was Speaker of the Houſe of Commons. Perſons who have judicial places in the other courts, Eccleſiaſtical or Civil, are eligible. 4 Inſt. 47. Clergymen are not eligible, they being of another body, viz. the Convocation. Ibid. Any of the profeſſion of the law, and who are in practice, are eligible; but Anno 6 H. 4. a Parliament was ſummoned by writ, and by colour of a certain ordinance, it was forbidden that any lawyer ſhould be choſen; by reaſon whereof Lord Coke obſerves this Parliament was fruitleſs: and the prohibitory clauſe inſerted in the writ was againſt law; for lawyers are eligible of common right, and cannot be diſabled by ordinance without act of Parliament.

By 12 W. 3. c. 2. No perſon who had any office or place of profit under the King, or penſion from the crown, was to ſerve as a member of the Houſe of Commons. And by 6 Ann c. 7. No member of Parliament may enjoy any office in the government, and ſit in the houſe at the ſame time by virtue of his former election; for by acceptance of an office his election is void: but he may be elected again, on a new writ iſſued out, and ſit in the houſe; and officers in the army or navy, receiving any new commiſſion, need not be re-elected. When perſons are incapable of being elected, the election ſhall be void; and ſitting or voting in the Houſe of Commons they ſhall forfeit 500*l.* And the ſtatute 1 Geo. 1. c. 56. enacts, That no man having any penſion from the crown, either in his own name or in truſt for him, ſhall be elected a member of Parliament; and penſioners preſuming to ſit and vote, ſhall forfeit 20*l.* for every day, &c. The act mentions only a penſion for any term or number of years; and not a penſion during pleaſure, according to the 4 Ann. c. 8.

It is now enacted, That no perſon who ſhall be a Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, Paymaſter of the Army, Secretary of State, &c. ſhall be capable of being a member in any Parliament. 15 Geo. 2. c. 22. But this ſtatute does not exclude the Secretaries of the Treaſury, or thoſe of other offices; or any other perſon having an office for life. Ibid.

By ancient ſtatutes, Knights of the Shire are to be reſident in the county, for which they are choſen; ſo Citizens and Burgeſſes elected ſhall be reſident in, and free of the ſame cities and boroughs, the day of the date of the writ of ſummons, and they are to be notable Knights of the ſame county, &c. notable Eſquires or Gentlemen: alſo by a late act, no perſon ſhall be qualified to ſerve in Parliament as a Knight of the Shire, who hath not an eſtate of freehold or copyhold for life, or ſome greater eſtate to his own uſe, of 600*l.* a year, above all incumbrances; and a Citizen and Burgeſs 300*l. per annum,* of which oath is to be made at the requeſt of a candidate, or two perſons having a right to vote; and if any perſon be elected and returned not ſo qualified, the return ſhall be void. 9 Ann. cap. 5. And none ſhall be qualified by virtue of any mortgage, whereof the equity of redemption is in another; unleſs the mortgagee ſhall have been in poſſeſſion ſeven years before the election.

Though the eldeſt ſon of a Peer, or of any perſon qualified to ſerve as a Knight of the Shire, ſhall not be incapable of being elected. Stat. ibid.

Members of Parliament muſt take the oaths to the Government before they ſit and vote in the Houſe; or ſhall be adjudged Popiſh Recuſants, and be diſabled to ſit in Parliament, and liable to certain forfeitures, &c. Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 1. 30 Car. 2. c. 1. And this ſtatute was confirmed and inforced by the 13 & 14 W. 3. c. 6.

2. Of the electors and their qualifications.

The election of Knights of the Shire is to be made by the majority of people dwelling in the counties, having each of them lands or tenements to the yearly value of 40*s.* beſides repriſes; and he who cannot expend 40*s.* per ann. ſhall have no vote in the election of Knights for the Parliament. 8 H. 6. c. 7. And by the 10 H. 6. c. 2. an elector of Knights of the Shire muſt be reſident, and have 40*s.* per annum freehold over and above repriſes in the ſame county. The 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 25. requires, that every freeholder ſhall take an oath that he is a freeholder of the county, and has freehold lands or hereditaments of the yearly value of 40*s.* lying at ſuch a place, within the ſaid county, and that he hath not before polled at the election; no perſon is to be admitted to vote in any election of a member to ſerve in Parliament, who is under the age of twenty-one, or be intitled to any vote by reaſon of any truſt or mortgage; if the truſtee or mortgagee be not in actual poſſeſſion, and receive the rents and profits of the eſtate: but the mortgagor or ceſtui que truſt in poſſeſſion, ſhall and may vote for the ſame eſtate: and all conveyances of lands, tenements, &c. in order to multiply votes, or ſplit and divide the intereſt in any houſes or lands, among ſeveral perſons, to enable them to vote, ſhall be void and of none effect.

By 10 Ann. c. 22. None ſhall have a voice for electing Knights of the Shire in right of any lands, who has not been charged or aſſeſſed to the public taxes, church rates and pariſh duties, in ſuch proportion as other lands and tenements of 40*s. per annum,* lying within the ſame pariſh; and for which he ſhall not have received the rents and profits, or be intitled to have received the ſame to the full value of 40*s.* or more, to his own uſe for one year, before the election; except ſuch lands or tenements come by deſcent, deviſe, preſentation to ſome church, or promotion to an office, to which a freehold is annexed; and perſons voting contrary ſhall forfeit 40*l.* This extends not to reſtrain perſons from voting for Knights of the Shire, in reſpect of any tithes, or other incorporeal inheritances, or meſſuages, &c. belonging to offices, by reaſon the ſame have not been uſually aſſeſſed to any public taxes; or in regard to lands not taxed to all taxes, if they have been generally aſſeſſed to ſome one or more of the ſaid rates, &c. by 12 Ann. c. 5.

All eſtates and conveyances made to any perſon in a fraudulent manner, on purpoſe to qualify him to vote, ſubject to conditions to defeat or determine ſuch eſtate or re-convey the ſame, ſhall be taken againſt the perſons executing them as free and abſolute; and all bonds, &c. for redemption ſhall be void; alſo perſons voting by colour of ſuch conveyance, incur a forfeiture of 40*l.*

The ſtatutes for preventing fraudulent conveyances to multiply votes on electing Knights of Shires, are made to extend to lands or tenements, for which any perſons ſhall vote for the election of Members to ſerve in Parliament for any city or town, that is a county of itſelf; and if any perſon votes at ſuch election as a freeholder, not having his eſtate a year before, and aſſeſſed as deſcribed in the act 10 Ann. c. 22. he is liable to the penalties impoſed on unqualified voters. 13 Geo. 2. c. 20. Perſons refuſing to take the oaths of abjuration, &c. are made incapable to vote for Members of Parliament. 1 Geo. 1. c. 13.

By 18 Geo. 2. c. 18. No perſon ſhall vote for the electing a Knight of the Shire in England and Wales, in reſpect or right of any meſſuage, &c. which has not been charged or aſſeſſed to the land tax twelve kalendar months next before the election. But not to reſtrain any perſon from voting in right of any rents or chambers in the inns of courts, &c. or any meſſuages or ſeats belonging to any offices, in regard they have not been uſually aſſeſſed to the land tax. No perſon ſhall vote at any ſuch election without having a freehold in the ſame county, of the clear yearly value of 40*s.* above all charges, or without having been in the actual poſſeſſion or receipt of the profits above twelve kalendar months, unleſs the ſame come to him within the time aforeſaid, by deſcent, marriage, marriage ſettlement, deviſe or promotion to any benefice or office; or ſhall vote in right of any freehold granted to him fraudulently, or vote more than once at the ſame election, under the penalty of 40*l.* No public tax, rate or aſſeſſment, ſhall be deemed a charge on any freehold.

As to who are, or ought, to be the electors in boroughs, it hath very much exerciſed the Britiſh Houſe of Commons: in the 22 Jac. 1. it was reſolved, that where there is no charter or cuſtom to the contrary, the election in boroughs is to be made by all the houſholders and not freeholders only: and in a queſtion whether the commons or the capital burgeſſes of a certain borough in Lincolnſhire, were the electors of Members of Parliament, anno 4 Car. 1. it was agreed, that the election of burgeſſes in all boroughs did of common right belong to the commoners, and that nothing could take it from them but a preſcription and conſtant uſage beyond the memory of man. It has been holden, that the commonalties of cities and burghs are only the ordinary and lower ſort of citizens, burgeſſes or freemen; and that the right of election of burgeſſes to Parliament in all boroughs, belongs to the commoners, viz. the ordinary burgeſſes or freemen; and not the Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council: though the meaning of the words communitates civitatum & burgorum, has always ſignified, rightly underſtood, the Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council, where they were to be found; or the Steward or bailiff, and capital Burgeſſes, or the governing parts of cities and towns, by what perſons ſoever they were governed, or titles called.

The moſt extraordinary caſe which has happened in this age, with relation to the determinations of a committee of privileges and elections, was the caſe of Aſhby and White, concerning the borough of Aileſbury; on a queſtion, "Whether an action at law lies for an elector who is "denied his vote?"

In this caſe the debates ended in the following reſolutions, viz. That the qualification of electors and of perſons elected, is cognizable only before the Commons in Parliament; and that the examining and determining the qualification or right of any elector, &c. belongs to them, where the acts of Parliament give no particular direction; that whoever ſhall proſecute any action, &c. which ſhall bring the right of electors to the determination of any other juriſdiction than that of the Houſe of Commons, except in caſes ſpecially provided for by ſome ſtatute, ſhall be guilty of a breach of the privilege of the Houſe. Several perſons were committed to Newgate by a warrant ſigned by Robert Harley, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, for proſecuting actions at law againſt the conſtables of the borough of Aileſbury, who refuſed to take their votes at the election of Members of Parliament, &c. in contempt of the juriſdiction and privileges of the Houſe; and this matter being returned by habeas corpus ſeverally, and the ſeveral perſons defendants brought into court, counſel moved that they might be diſcharged, for that the proſecution of a ſuit at law could be no unlawful act, nor a breach of the privilege of the Houſe of Commons: three judges were of opinion, that the Houſe were the proper judges of their own privileges; but Holt Chief Juſtice held, That THE AUTHORITY OF THE COMMONS WAS CIRCUMSCRIBED BY LAW; and if they ſhould exceed that authority, then to ſay they were judges of their own privilege, is to make their privilege to be what they would have them to be; and that if they ſhould wrongfully impriſon, there could be no redreſs, ſo that the courts at Weſtminſter could not execute the laws upon which the liberties of the ſubject ſubſiſt. 2 Salk. 503.

And in action on the caſe, by a burgeſs of Aileſbury, againſt the conſtables of the ſaid borough, for refuſing to receive the plaintiff's vote in the election of a Member of Parliament; the plaintiff had a verdict, but the judgment was arreſted by the opinion of three judges, viz. That the action is not maintainable, becauſe the conſtables acted as judges, and the not receiving the plaintiff's vote is damnum ſine injuria; for when the matter comes before the Houſe, his vote will be received; that the right of electing Members to ſerve in Parliament, is to be decided in Parliament, and the plaintiff may petition the Houſe for that purpoſe, and after it is determined there, he may then bring his action and not before. Holt Chief Juſtice contra, That the plaintiff had a right to vote; a freeholder has a right to vote by reaſon of his freehold; and IT IS A REAL RIGHT, and the value of his freehold was not material till the Stat. 8 H. 6. which requires it to be 40 s. per annum: that as it is ratione liberi tenementi in counties; ſo in ancient boroughs, they have a right to vote ratione burgagii; and in cities and corporations, it is ratione francheſiæ, and a perſonal inheritance, veſted in the whole corporation, but to be uſed by the PARTICULAR Members; that this is a noble privilege, which entitles the ſubject to a ſhare in the government and legiſlature; and that if the plaintiff hath a right, he muſt have a remedy to aſſert that right, for want of right and want of remedy is the ſame thing; that refuſing to take the plaintiff's vote is an injury, and every injury imports a damage; and that where a parliamentary matter comes in incidentally to an action of property in the King's court, it muſt be determined there, and not in Parliament; the Parliament cannot judge of the injury, nor give damages to the plaintiff, and he hath no remedy by way of petition: and, according to this opinion, the judgment of the other three judges was reverſed upon a writ of error brought in the Houſe of Lords. 1 Salk. 10. This caſe occaſioned great diſputes between the two Houſes of Parliament; the Lords inſiſting, That if the Commons only could judge of the right of their electors, they would in effect chooſe their electors, &c. And the Commons alledging, that if the right of electors might be determined in the courts of law, from whence cauſes are removed by writ of error into the Houſe of Lords, the Lords would become judges of the right of electors to chooſe, and conſequently who were duly elected Members of the Commons Houſe; whereby the Commons would loſe their independency, and be ſubject to the Lords, &c. But the Parliament being ſoon after prorogued, the diſpute was dropped. See the caſe of Aſhby and White, which is excellently reported, as well in 6 Mod. 45 to 56 incluſive, as in Ld. Raym. from fol. 938 to 958 incluſive. And ſee alſo Lord Holt's Life.

The caſe of Aſhby and White is printed by itſelf in a ſmall volume.

By the Common law of England, No Commoner can be ſubjected to laws made without his conſent; and becauſe ſuch conſent cannot be given by every individual, by reaſon of number and confuſion; that power is lodged in their Repreſentatives, elected and choſen by them, viz. Knights, Citizens, &c. 3 Salk. 18. And in ſeveral counties, the Citizens and Burgeſſes were formerly choſen in the county-courts, with the Knights of Shires, and jointly returned, &c. For there were commonly four or five Citizens or Burgeſſes ſent from the reſpective cities or boroughs to the county-court; and there choſen, with full power for themſelves and their ſeveral communities, to do and conſent to ſuch things, as by the Common Council of the Kingdom aſſembled in Parliament, ſhould be ordained and enacted.

It is ſaid by ſome writers, that in ancient times the King hath nominated the very perſons to be returned, and did not leave it to the election of the people; for which they give an inſtance in the 45th year of Ed. 3. And among the Parliament writs 14 Eliz. there appears to be an appointment and return of Burgeſſes, by the Lord of a Town, &c. But theſe are ſingle inſtances in their kind; and the writs for elections in the 23d year of King Ed. 1. ran in Engliſh as follows, viz.

Form of an ancient writ for election of Members of Parliament.

T*O the ſheriff of*, &c. greeting: Becauſe we deſire to have a conference and treaty with the Earls, Barons and other great men of our kingdom, to provide remedies againſt the dangers our kingdom is in at this time; therefore we have commanded them that they be with us at Weſtminſter, on the day, &c. next coming, to treat, ordain, and do, ſo as thoſe dangers may be prevented: and we command, and firmly enjoin thee, that, without delay, thou doeſt cauſe to be choſen, and to come to us, at the time and place aforeſaid, two Knights of the County aforeſaid, and of every city two Citizens, and of every borough two Burgeſſes, of the beſt, moſt able, and diſcreet men for buſineſs; ſo as the ſaid Knights may have ſufficient power for themſelves and the community of the County aforeſaid; and the Citizens and Burgeſſes may have the ſame power ſeparately from them, for themſelves and the communities of Cities and Burghs, then to do in the premiſſes what ſhall be ordained by the Common Council of the realm, ſo that the buſineſs aforeſaid may not remain undone; and have there the names of the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes, and this Writ. Witneſs the King, &c.

The Return of the Writ, thereon indorſed was thus:

I A. B. ſheriff, by virtue of this writ have cauſed to be choſen in the county of, &c. two Knights, and of every city of the ſame county two Citizens, and of every borough two burgeſſes, of the beſt, moſt able, and diſcreet Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of the county, city and burghs aforeſaid, according to the tenor of the writ.

3. Of the duty of Returning Officers, and the remedies againſt them.

By 7 H. 4. cap. 15. The election of Knights of the Shire is to be made in the following manner:

At the next county-court after delivery of the writ, proclamation is to be made by the ſheriff of the county, of the day and place the Parliament is to aſſemble, and that all as are there preſent ſhall attend at the election of Knights of the Shire; and then, in full county, a free and indifferent election ſhall be made: and after ſuch choice the names of the parties choſen, are to be written on an indenture under the ſeals of the electors; which indenture ſo ſealed and tacked to the writ, ſhall be the ſheriff's return thereof. And by the 23 H. 6. c. 7. it is enacted, That the ſheriff after receipt of the writ ſhall deliver a precept under his ſeal to every Mayor and Bailiff of cities and boroughs within his county, reciting the writ, and requiring them to chooſe two Citizens and Burgeſſes to come to the Parliament; and ſuch Mayors and head officers, are to make return of the precept of the ſheriff, by indenture, &c. whereupon the ſheriff is enabled to make a good return of the writ: the ſheriff is to make election between the hours of eight and eleven in the forenoon; and if any Knight, Citizen, or Burgeſs, returned by the ſheriff ſhall be put out, and the name of another put in, divers penalties are incurred; ſheriffs acting contrary to this ſtatute, and not returning a Member duly elected, are ſubject to a forfeiture of 100 l. recoverable by action of debt; and officers of corporations, making falſe returns, liable to a penalty of 40 l. &c.

It has been adjudged on this act, That though no election ſhould be made of any Knight of the Shire, but between eight and eleven of the clock in the forenoon; if the election be begun within that time, and cannot be determined in thoſe hours, it may be made after. 4 Inſt. 48. And if any electors give their voices before the precept for election is read and publiſhed, it will be of no force; for after the precept is thus read, &c. they may alter their voices and make a new election. Ibid. 49.

The Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 7. ordains, If any perſon ſhall return a Member to ſerve in Parliament for any place, contrary to the determination in the Houſe of Commons of the right of election for ſuch a place, the return ſo made ſhall be judged a falſe return; and the party making it may be proſecuted, and double damages, with coſts, recovered againſt him: officers wilfully and falſly returning more perſons than are required to be choſen by the writ or precept, the like remedy may be had againſt them; and all contracts, promiſes, &c. to return any Member of Parliament, are not only declared void, but the makers or givers of the contracts, &c. or of any gift or reward to procure a falſe or double return, ſhall forfeit 300 l. one third to the King, another to the informer, and the other third to the poor of the place, to be recovered in any Court of Record at Weſtminſter, &c.

By 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 25. When any new Parliament ſhall be called, there ſhall be forty days between the teſte and returns of the writs; the Lord Chancellor, &c. is to iſſue out writs for election of Members of Parliament, with as much expedition as may be; and the ſeveral writs ſhall be delivered to the proper officers for execution, who are to indorſe the day of the receipt on the back of the writ, and forthwith make out the precepts to each borough, &c. which are to be delivered to the officers of every ſuch borough, within three days, and they muſt likewiſe indorſe the day of the receipt, and immediately cauſe public notice to be given of the time and place of election, and proceed to election thereupon in eight days: for electing Knights of the Shire, the ſheriff is to hold his county-court at the moſt public and uſual place, and there proceed in the election at the next court, unleſs it fall out to be within ſix days after the receipt of the writ, and then the ſame is to be adjourned, giving ten days notice of the election; if the election be not determined on view, but a poll is demanded, the ſheriff is to take the ſame, and likewiſe a ſcrutiny, and he or his under-ſheriff ſhall appoint and ſwear clerks for that purpoſe, &c. The county-court is not to be adjourned to any other place, without conſent of the candidates; nor ſhall any unneceſſary adjournments be made, but the poll to proceed; alſo every ſheriff, &c. is to deliver a copy of the poll to any perſon deſiring it; and officers for every wilful offence againſt this act, are ſubject to a forfeiture of 500 l. And by 6 Geo. 2. cap. 23. The county-court for electing Knights of the Shire in Parliament, may be adjourned from day to day, until the election is determined; but not to a Monday, or Friday, &c. only, which will be void.

The 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 7. directs, that the ſheriff or other officer having execution and return of writs of ſummons for parliament, ſhall on or before the day of meeting of parliament, and with all expedition, (not exceeding fourteen days after election) make returns to the clerk of the crown in Chancery to be filed, on pain of forfeiting 500 l. And the returning officer, within twenty days after the election, is to deliver over to the clerk of the peace, all the poll books on oath made before two juſtices, to be preſerved among the records of the ſeſſions of the peace, &c. 10 Ann. cap. 23.

In double returns, it has been formerly a general practice in the Houſe of Commons, that neither one nor the other ſhould ſit in the houſe until it be decided; anno 1640, two returns were made for Great Marlow, and in both indentures one perſon was returned, and he was admitted to ſit, but the others ordered to withdraw until the queſtion was determined: And in the ſame year, it was ordered, That where ſome are returned by the ſheriff or ſuch other officer as by law hath power to return, and others returned by private hands; in ſuch caſe, thoſe returned by the ſheriff or other officer, ſhall ſit until the election is quaſhed by the houſe. Ordinan. 1640. If one be duly elected, and the ſheriff, &c. return another, the return muſt be reformed and amended; and he who is duly elected is to be inſerted, for the election is the foundation, and not the return. 4 Inſt. 49.

In action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared, that he was duly elected a member of parliament for ſuch a borough, and that the defendant returned two other perſons; and that he petitioned the Houſe of Commons, and was adjudged to be duly elected, and his name ordered to be inſerted in the Roll, and the name of the other to be razed out: the plaintiff had a verdict; but it was adjudged in arreſt of judgment, that this declaration was not founded on the act 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 7. becauſe that ſtatute gave an action where there was NONE BEFORE, therefore the fact muſt be agreeable to it, which not being done, defendant had judgment. 2 Salk. 504. The court will not meddle in an action upon a double return, until it is determined in parliament, Lutw. 88. And it hath been holden, that for a double return, no action lay before the ſtatute 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 7. becauſe it is the only method the ſheriff had to ſecure himſelf; and when the right was decided in parliament, then one indenture was taken off the file, ſo that it is not then a double return; neither can the party have an action for a falſe return, for the matter may be determined in the houſe whether true or falſe; and if ſo, there will be an inconvenience in contrary reſolutions, if they ſhould determine one way, and the courts at law another; but after a diſſolution the action may lie for a falſe return, for then the right cannot be determined in parliament. 2 Salk. 502.

A double return is the ſame as a falſe return, as to action on the caſe; in both it is grounded on the falſity; but there is another reaſon why this action will not lie for a double return, (viz.) becauſe the law doth not take notice of ſuch a return; it is only allowed by the uſage of parliament, and in caſes wherein the proper officer cannot determine who is choſen; therefore when he doubts, he makes a double return, and ſubmits the choice to the determination of the Houſe of Commons; and if that houſe admits ſuch returns, and make determinations on them, it will be hard for the law to ſubject a man to the action only for ſubmitting a fact to be determined by a court, which hath a proper juriſdiction to determine it: And by reaſon of the variety of opinions, that an action in this caſe would lie, and would not; it hath been enacted by 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 7. That THE LAST DETERMINATION OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS CONCERNING THE RIGHT OF ELECTION, IS TO BE PURSUED. 2 Lev. 114. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 30.

A member elected and returned for ſeveral places, is to make his choice for which place he will ſerve; and if he doth not, by the time which the houſe ſhall appoint, the houſe may determine for what place he ſhall continue a member, and writs ſhall go out for the other place.

Candidates are not to make preſents of money to, or treat, &c. electors, after the teſte of the writ of ſummons, or iſſuing out the writs of election, or after any place of a member becomes vacant; if they do, for THIS BRIBERY they ſhall be incapacitated to ſerve as members. 7 W. 3. c. 4. And no officers of the exciſe, poſt-office, &c. are to make any intereſt for members of parliament, on pain of forfeiting 100 l. and diſability, &c. 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 20.

By a late act, an oath is to be taken by electors of members of parliament, That they have not received or had any money, gift, reward, office, place, or employment, or any promiſe for money, &c. to them or their uſe, to give their votes: and if they aſk, take, or contract for any money, or reward, by gift or other device, to give or refuſe their votes; or if any perſons by gift, &c. corruptly procure any one to give his vote; they ſhall forfeit 500 l. and be diſabled to vote in any election, and to hold any office, or franchiſe, &c. And officers admitting perſons to vote, without taking the aforeſaid oath, if demanded, incur a forfeiture of 100 l. Likewiſe an oath is to be adminiſtred to returning officers, that they have not received any money, &c. or promiſe for ſuch, for making any returns, &c. Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 24. Perſons are to be proſecuted within two years, after any offence againſt this laſt ſtatute, for preventing bribery and corruption in elections of perſons to ſerve in parliament, or ſhall not be liable to any incapacity or forfeiture, &c. by the 9 Geo. 2. c. 38. And when election ſhall be made, the ſecretary at war ſhall iſſue orders for the removal of all ſoldiers quartered in any city, town, or borough, where ſuch election ſhall be, one day at leaſt before, to the diſtance of two or more miles; and not to make a nearer approach, until after the poll taken, is ended, &c. But this not to extend to the liberty of Weſtminſter, &c. in reſpect of his Majeſty's guards; nor to fortified places, &c. Stat. 8 Geo. 2. cap. 30.

See 33 Geo. 2. c. 20. intitled, An act to enforce and render more effectual the laws relating to the qualification of members to ſit in the Houſe of Commons.

To regulate the trials of controverted elections, or returns of members to ſerve in parliament, ſee 10 Geo. 3. c. 16.

By 10 Geo. 3. c. 41. The Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, is impowered to iſſue his warrant to make out new writs for the choice of members, during the receſs of parliament.

N. B. By 10 Geo. 3. c. 6. ſ. 86. Members of parliament are to be taxed at their manſion-houſes.

Parliaments holden, and proceedings in.

All parliaments are to be held without force, 7 Ed. 1. Before the Conqueſt, parliaments were held twice every year: The 4 Ed. 3. enacted, That a parliament ſhould be holden once a year, and oftener if neceſſary; and the 36 Ed. 6. requires a parliament to be held every year. But by the means of Cardinal Wolſey, a parliament was held but once in fourteen years during the reign of H. 8, which was upon a remarkable occaſion, viz. to attaint the Duke of Buckingham. The Stat. 16 Car. 2. cap. 1. ordains, That the ſitting and holding of parliaments ſhall not be diſcontinued above three years. And the 6 W. & M. cap. 2. enacts, That new parliaments ſhall be choſen once in three years: and no parliament continue longer than three years. But by 1 Geo. 1. c. 38. The time of continuance of parliament is enlarged to ſeven years; to be computed from the day appointed for their meeting, by the writ of ſummons.

The occaſional law, 1 W. & M. Seſſ. 1. cap. 1. declared, That the Lords and Commons convened at Weſtminſter, were the two houſes of parliament, notwithſtanding the want of any writ of ſummons, or other defect of form, &c. Though 12 & 13 Car. 2. c. 1. made it penal, for any perſon to affirm that the houſes of parliament have a legiſlative power without the King. An old ſtatute ordains, That every perſon and commonalty, having ſummons to parliament, ſhall come thither, on pain to be amerced, or otherwiſe puniſhed: And if the ſheriff doth not ſummon them, he ſhall likewiſe be amerced, &c. 5 R. 2. c. 4.

On holding a parliament, the King the firſt day ſits in the upper houſe, and by himſelf or the Lord Chancellor, ſhews the reaſon of their meeting; then the Commons are commanded to chooſe their ſpeaker, which done, two or three days afterwards he is preſented to the King, and after ſome ſpeeches is allowed, and ſent down to the Houſe of Commons; when the buſineſs of parliament proceeds. 12 Rep. 115.

A parliament cannot begin on return of the writs, without the King, in perſon, or by repreſentation; and by repreſentation two ways, either by a guardian of England, by letters patent under the Great Seal, when the King is out of the realm; or by commiſſion, to certain lords in caſe of indiſpoſition, &c. when his Majeſty is at home. 4 Inſt. 6, 7. And if any parliament is to be holden before a guardian of the realm, there muſt be a ſpecial commiſſion to begin the parliament; but the teſte of the writs of ſummons is to be in the guardian's name: And by an ancient law, if the King, being beyond ſea, cauſe a parliament to be ſummoned in this kingdom, by writ under the teſte of his lieutenant; and after the King returns hither, the parliament ſhall proceed without any new ſummons. 8 H. 5. c. 1.

In the 5th year of Hen. 5. a parliament was held before John Duke of Bedford, brother to the King, and guardian of the kingdom. Anno 3 Ed. 4. a parliament was begun in the preſence of the King, and prorogued to a further day; and then William Archbiſhop of York, the King's Commiſſary by letters patent, held the ſame parliament, and made an adjournment, &c. And 28 Eliz. the Queen by commiſſion under the Great Seal, (reciting, that for urgent occaſions ſhe could not be preſent in her royal perſon) did authoriſe John Whitgiſt Archbiſhop of Canterbury, William Lord Burleigh, Lord Treaſurer of England, and Henry Earl of Derby, Lord Steward, to hold a parliament, &c. Ad faciendum omnia et ſingula, &c. necnon ad parliamentum adjornand' et prorogand', &c. And in the upper part of the page, above the beginning of the commiſſion is written, Domina Regina repræſentatur per commiſſionarios, viz. &c. Theſe commiſſioners ſat on a form before the cloth of ſtate, and after the commiſſion read, the parliament proceeded.

A parliament may be holden at any place the King ſhall aſſign; but it ought not to be diſſolved as long as any bill remains undiſcuſſed, and proclamation muſt be made in the parliament, that if any perſon have any petition, he ſhall come in and be heard, and if no anſwer be given, it is intended the public are ſatisfied. Lex Conſtitution. 157.

In former times, by the death of the King during the ſitting of parliament, the parliament was ipſo facto diſſolved: but by the Stat. 4 Ann. c. 8. A parliament ſitting or in being, at the demiſe of the King, ſhall continue for ſix months; unleſs prorogued or diſſolved, by ſuch perſon to whom the crown ſhall come. 4 Ann. c. 8. 6 Ann. c. 7. All orders of parliament determine by prorogation; and one taken by order of the parliament, after their prorogation, may be diſcharged on an habeas corpus, as well as after a diſſolution; but the diſſolution of a parliament doth not alter the ſtate of impeachments brought up by the commons in a preceding parliament. Raym. 120. 1 Lev. 384. And it hath been reſolved, that caſes of appeals and writs of error, ſhall continue, and are to be proceeded in ſtatu quo, &c. as they ſtood at the diſſolution of the laſt parliament. Raym. 381.

A prorogation of parliament is always by the King, and in this caſe the ſeſſions muſt begin de novo; and if a parliament is prorogued upon return of the writ of ſummons, it begins at the end of prorogation: An adjournment is by each houſe, and the ſeſſions continues notwithſtanding ſuch adjournment. 1 Mod. 242. By a prorogation of parliament, there is a ſeſſion; and every ſeveral ſeſſion of parliament is in law a ſeveral parliament: though if it be only an adjournment, there is no ſeſſion; and when a parliament is called and doth ſit, but is diſſolved without any act paſſed, or judgment given, it is no ſeſſion of parliament, but a convention. 4 Inſt. 27. If a parliament is aſſembled, and orders made, and writs of error brought in the Houſe of Peers, and ſeveral bills agreed on, but none ſigned; this is but a convention, and no parliament, or ſeſſions of parliament: But every ſeſſion, in which the King ſigns a bill, is a parliament: and ſo every parliament is a ſeſſion. 1 Rol. Rep. 29. Hut. 61. And a ſeſſion doth continue, until it is prorogued or diſſolved.

The parliament from the firſt day of ſitting is called the firſt ſeſſion of parliament, &c. Raym. 120. And the courts of juſtice ex officio are to take notice of the beginning, prorogation, and ending of every parliament; alſo of all general ſtatutes; and acts of parliament take effect from the beginning of the parliament, unleſs it be otherwiſe ordered by the acts. 1 Lev. 296. Hob. 111.

On prorogation, ſuch bills as have paſſed, not having received the royal aſſent, muſt fall: for there can be no act of parliament, without conſent of the lords and commons, and the royal fiat of the King, giving his conſent perſonally, or by commiſſion; and by the Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 21. The King may paſs acts by commiſſion under the Great Seal, ſigned by his hand; and ſuch acts ſhall be of equal force as if the King were preſent in perſon.

Every man in judgment of law is party to an act of parliament; after the royal aſſent is given, it is the deed of the prince, and of the whole realm. The determination of the High court of Parliament, being preſumed to be the act of every particular ſubject, who is either perſonally preſent, or conſenting by his repreſentative.

Public bills or acts of parliament, are commonly drawn by ſuch members of the Houſe of Commons as are moſt inclined to effect the good of the public, particularly in relation to the bill deſigned, taking advice thereupon; and acts for the revival, repeal, or continuance of ſtatutes, are penned by lawyers, members of the houſe, appointed for that purpoſe.,

Of the formality in bringing in, and paſſing ſtatutes.

In bringing in and paſſing ſtatutes, the following formalities are obſerved, viz.

Any member may move for a bill to be brought in, except it be for impoſing a tax, which is to be done by order der of the houſe; and being granted, the perſon making the motion, and thoſe who ſecond it, are ordered to prepare and bring in the ſame: When the bill is ready, ſome of the members ordered to prepare it, preſent it; and upon a queſtion being agreed to, it has the firſt reading by the clerk at the table; after this the clerk delivers the bill to the ſpeaker, who, ſtanding up, declares the ſubſtance of it; and if any debate happens, he puts the queſtion, whether the ſame ſhall have a ſecond reading: And ſometimes upon motion appoints a day for it; for public bills, unleſs upon extraordinary occaſions, are ſeldom read more than once a day, the members being allowed convenient time to conſider of them: If nothing be ſaid againſt a bill, the ordinary courſe is to proceed without a queſtion; but if the bill be generally diſliked, a queſtion is ſometimes put, whether the bill ſhall be rejected? If it be rejected, it cannot be propoſed any more that ſeſſions: When a bill hath been read a ſecond time, any member may move to have the ſame amended; but no member of the houſe is admitted to ſpeak more than once in a debate, except the bill be read more than once that day, or the whole houſe is turned into a committee; and after ſometime ſpent in debates, the Speaker collecting the ſenſe of the houſe, reduces the ſame to a queſtion, which he ſubmits to the houſe, and is put to the vote: And a queſtion is to be put, after the bill is ſo read a ſecond time, whether it ſhall be committed? which is either to a committee of the whole houſe or a private committee, as the importance of the bill ſhall require; this committee is to report their opinion of the bill, with the amendments, to the houſe, the chairman having cauſed the clerk attending, to read the bill, and read it himſelf, putting every clauſe to the queſtion, &c. The chairman makes his report at the ſide bar of the houſe, reading all the alterations made, and then delivers the ſame to the clerk of the parliament; who likewiſe reads all the amendments, and the ſpeaker puts the queſtion, whether they ſhall be read a ſecond time? And if that be agreed unto, he reads the amendments himſelf, and puts the queſtion, whether the bill ſo amended ſhall be ingroſſed, and read a third time ſome other day? And then the ſpeaker takes the bill in his hand, holds it up, and puts the laſt queſtion, whether the bill ſhall paſs? If a majority of voices are for it, then the bill paſſes; and it is ſent up to the Houſe of Lords, where, when it is twice read, the queſtion is to be for commitment; or if it be not committed, then it is to be read a third time, and the next queſtion to be for its paſſing; and on the third reading of the bill, any member may ſpeak againſt the whole bill to throw out the ſame, or for amendment of any clauſe; and if it be amended, it is to be ſent back again to the Commons for their concurrence, and being returned, is then paſſed in the Houſe of Lords, and ready for the royal aſſent. If a bill paſs in one houſe, but a demur happens upon it when ſent to the other houſe, in this caſe a conference is demanded; wherein certain deputed members of each houſe meet in the painted chamber, and debate the matter; and when they have agreed, the bill paſſed is brought to the King in the Houſe of Lords, where having his royal robes on, he declares the royal aſſent, by the clerk of the parliament. Pract. Solic. in Par. 397, 398.

As for private bills, leave is to be obtained by petition, &c. to bring in the ſame; and the ſubſtance thereof is to be ſet forth, until which a bill is not to be offered; and when the petition is read, and leave given to bring in the bill, whereupon it is accordingly brought into the houſe, the perſons concerned and affected by it may be heard by themſelves or counſel at the bar, or before a committee, to whom ſuch bill is referred; (and in caſe of a peer, he ſhall be admitted to come within the bar of the Houſe of Commons, and ſit covered on a ſtool whilſt the ſame is debating.) And after counſel is heard on both ſides, and the houſe is ſatisfied with the contents of the bill, it is committed, and paſſed, &c.

All bills, motions and petitions, are by order of parliament to be entered on the parliament rolls, altho' they are denied, and never proceed to the eſtabliſhment of a ſtatute, together with the anſwers. Lex Conſtitution. 154.

The Speaker of the Houſe of Commons is not allowed to perſuade or diſſuade in paſſing a bill, only to make a ſhort narrative of it; opening the parts of the bill, ſo that all may underſtand it; if any queſtion be upon the bill, he is to explain, but not enter into argument or diſpute; and he is not to vote, except the houſe is equally divided: When Mr. Speaker deſires to ſpeak, he ought to be heard without interruption; and when the Speaker ſtands up, the member ſtanding up is to ſit down: If two ſtand up to ſpeak to a bill, he who would ſpeak againſt the bill, if it be known, is to be firſt heard; otherwiſe he who was firſt up, which is to be determined by the Speaker: No member is to be taken down, unleſs by Mr. Speaker, in ſuch caſes as the houſe do not think fit to admit; and if any perſon ſpeak impertinently, or beſides the queſtion, the Speaker is to interrupt him, and know the pleaſure of the houſe whether he ſhall be further heard: but if he ſpeaks not to the matter, it may be moderated: And whoſoever hiſſes or diſturbs any perſon in his ſpeech, ſhall anſwer it at the bar of the houſe.

In enacting laws, and other proceedings in parliament; the Lords give their voices in their houſe, from the puiſne Lord ſeriatim, by the word Content, or Not Content: The manner of voting in the Houſe of Commons, is by Yea and No; and if it be difficult to determine which are the greater number, the houſe divides, and four tellers are appointed by the Speaker, two of each ſide, to number them, the Ay's going out, and the No's ſtaying in; and thereof report is made to the houſe. When the members of the houſe go forth, none is to ſtir, until Mr. Speaker riſes from his ſeat; and then all the reſt are to follow after.

Parliamentum Diabolicum, Was a parliament held at Coventry, 38 H. 6. wherein Edward Earl of March, (afterwards King) and many of the chief nobility were attainted, but the acts then made were annulled by the ſucceeding parliament. Holingſh. Cron.

Parliamentum Indoctorum, A parliament 6 H. 4. whereunto by ſpecial precept to the ſheriffs in their ſeveral counties, no lawyer or perſon ſkilled in the law was to come; therefore it was ſo termed. Rot. Parl. 6 H. 4. Black. Com. 1 V. 176.

Parliamentum inſanum, Was a parliament aſſembled at Oxford, anno 41 H. 3. ſo ſtiled, from the madneſs of their proceedings; and becauſe the Lords came with armed men to it, and contentions grew very high between the King, Lords and Commons, whereby many extraordinary things were done. 4 Inſt.

Parliamentum Religioſorum. In moſt convents, they had a common room, into which the brethren withdrew for converſation; and the conference there had was termed Parliamentum. Mat. Paris. The abbot of Croyland uſed to call a parliament of his monks, to conſult about the affairs of his monaſtery: And at this day, the ſocieties of the two Temples, or Inns of Court, call that aſſembly a parliament, wherein they confer upon the common affairs of their ſeveral houſes. *Crompt. Parol. What things may be done by parol or without deed.

Stat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. enacts, That all leaſes, eſtates, intereſts of freehold, or terms of years, or any uncertain intereſts in or out of lands, &c. not put in writing, and ſigned by the parties, or their agents authorized by writing, ſhall have no greater effect than as eſtates at will. Except leaſes not exceeding three years, whereof the rent ſhall be two thirds of the full value.

No ſuch eſtates or intereſts, not being copyhold or cuſtomary intereſt, ſhall be aſſigned, granted or ſurrendered, unleſs by deed or note in writing ſigned (ut ſupra) or by operation of law. No action ſhall be brought, to charge an executor on a ſpecial promiſe to anſwer damages out of his own eſtate, Or to charge the defendant upon any promiſe to anſwer for the debt or miſcarriage of another, Or upon an agreement or conſideration of marriage, Or on any contract ot ſale of lands, &c. or any intereſt concerning them, Or on any agreement not to be performed within a year after the making, Unleſs ſuch agreement, or ſome note thereof, be in writing, ſigned by the party to be charged, or ſome other by him authorized.

All deviſes of lands or tenements ſhall be in writing, and ſigned by the party deviſing, or ſome other in his preſence and by his direction, and ſubſcribed in his preſence by three or four witneſſes, or elſe ſhall be void.

No ſuch deviſes in writing ſhall be revocable, otherwiſe than by writing or burning, tearing or cancelling the ſame by the teſtator, or in his preſence, and by his conſent.

All declarations or creations of truſts ſhall be made by ſome writing, ſigned by the party, or by his laſt will in writing, or elſe be void.

Aſſignments of truſt ſhall be in writing, ſigned by the party granting or aſſigning by ſuch laſt will, or elſe ſhall be of no effect.

Truſts reſulting by implication of law, or transferred or extinguiſhed by act of law, ſhall be as if this ſtatute had not been made.

No contract for the ſale of any goods for 10 l. or upwards, ſhall be good, except the buyer ACTUALLY receive part of them, or give ſomething in earneſt, or ſome note thereof in writing be made and ſigned by the parties to be charged, or their agents.

No will in writing of any perſonal eſtate ſhall be repealed by words only, except the ſame be in the life of the teſtator committed to writing, and read to him, and allowed by him, and that be proved by three witneſſes.

An uſe will not paſs by parol without deed; but Ch. J. Pemberton ſaid, it would be a good truſt or Chancery uſe, if for money. 2 Show. 156. Paſch. 33 Car. 2. B. R. in caſe of Berris v. Bowyer. A parol releaſe is good to diſcharge a debt by ſimple contract. Arg. 2 Show. 417.

A rent aſſigned in lieu of dower may be by parol without deed, though it be a freehold created de novo: And though a rent lies in grant; becauſe this is not properly a grant, but an appointment. 12 Mod. 201. Leſſee for years ſurrendered to the leſſor by parol reſerving rent; adjudged, this was a good reſervation upon the contract, and that an action of debt would lie for the rent after the firſt day of payment incurred, though the reſervation was by way of contract, and without any deed. 3 Salk. 312. pl. 7.

If one has a bill of exchange, he may authoriſe another to indorſe his name upon it by parol, and when that is done, it is all one as if he had done it himſelf; per Holt Ch. J. at Niſi prius. 12 Mod. 564.

An inſurance was made from Archangel to the Downs and from the Downs to Leghorn, but there was a parol agreement at the ſame time, that the policy ſhould not commence till the ſhip came to ſuch a place, and it was held, that the parol agreement ſhould avoid (or defeat) the writing; cited per Holt Ch. J. as adjudged in Pemberton's time. 2 Salk. 444, 445.

If a thing is granted by a writing, which is grantable by parol, it may be revoked by parol. Vide 10 Mod. 74.

Deputation of an office is in it's own nature grantable by parol, and therefore though it ſhould happen to be granted by writing, yet ſince it is in itſelf grantable by parol, it may be revoked by parol. 10 Mod. 74. See Black. Com. 2 V. 297.

Parol arreſt, Any juſtice of peace may, by word of mouth, authoriſe any one to arreſt another who is guilty of a breach of the peace in his preſence, &c. Dalt. 117.

Parol demurrer, Is a privilege allowed an infant, who is ſued concerning lands which came to him by deſcent; and the court thereupon will give judgment, quod loquela predicta remaneat quouſque the infant comes to the age of twenty-one years. And where the age is granted on parol demurrer, the writ doth not abate, but the plea is put ſine die, until the infant is of full age; and then there ſhall be a re-ſummons. 2 Lill. Abr. 280. 2 Inſt. 258. Raſt. Entr. 363.

The granting a parol demurrer is in favour of an infant, and for his benefit, that he may not be prejudiced in his right for want of well knowing his eſtate, &c. And if his anceſtor dies ſeiſed, and the land deſcends to him, and he enters and takes the profits, it would be a prejudice to the infant to loſe the poſſeſſion which he hath; ſo that in ſuch caſe it ſhall ſtay until his age. 6 Rep. 3.

In parol demurrer when it may be had, if two are vouched, and there is parol demurrer for the nonage of the one; it ſhall be for the other alſo. 45 Ed. 3. 23. But by the ſtatutes of Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 46. and of Gloceſter 6 Ed. 1. c. 2. in writs of entry ſur diſſeiſin in ſome particular caſes, and in actions anceſtrel brought by an infant, the parol ſhall not demur: otherwiſe he might be deforced of his whole property, and even want a maintenance till he came of age. 6 Rep. 3, 5. So likewiſe in a writ of dower the heir ſhall not have his age; for it is neceſſary that the widow's claim be immediately determined, elſe ſhe may want a preſent ſubſiſtence. 1 Rol. Abr. 137. Nor ſhall an infant patron have it in a quare impedit, ſince the law holds it neceſſary and expedient, that the church be immediately filled. Ibid. 138. See Age prier, and Black. Com. 3 V. 300.

Parol Evidence, See tit. Witneſſes, and Black. Com. 3 V. 369.

Parol, or Pleadings, Are the mutual altercations between the plaintiff and defendant; which at preſent are ſet down and delivered into the proper office in writing, tho' formerly they were uſually put in by their counſel ore tenus, or viva voce, in court, and then minuted down by the chief clerks, or prothonotaries; whence in our old law French the pleadings are frequently denominated the parol. Black. Com. 3 V. 293.

It is ſometimes joined with leaſe, as leaſe parol, i. e. leaſe per parol, a leaſe by word of mouth, to diſtinguiſh it from a leaſe in writing. Cowell.

Parricide, (Patricida,) Is properly he who kills his father, and may be applied to him who killeth his mother. Law Lat. Dict.

By the Roman law, parricide, or the murder of one's parents or children, was puniſhed in a much ſeverer manner than any other kind of homicide. After being ſcourged, the delinquents were ſewed up in a leather ſack, with a live dog, a cock, a viper, and an ape, and ſo caſt into the ſea. Solon, it is true, in his laws, made none againſt parricide; apprehending it impoſſible that any one ſhould be guilty of ſo unnatural a barbarity. And the Perſians, according to Herodotus, entertained the ſame notion, when they adjudged all perſons who killed their reputed parents to be baſtards. And, upon ſome ſuch reaſon as this, muſt we account for the omiſſion of an exemplary puniſhment for this crime in our Engliſh laws; which treat it no otherwiſe than as ſimple murder, unleſs the child was alſo the ſervant of his parent. 1 Hal. P. C. 380.

For, tho' the breach of natural relation is unobſerved, yet the breach of civil or eccleſiaſtical connexions, when coupled with murder, denominates it a new offence; no leſs than a ſpecies of treaſon, called parva proditio, or petit treaſon: which, however, is nothing elſe but an aggravated degree of murder; altho' on account of the violation of private allegiance, it is ſtigmatized as an inferior ſpecies of treaſon. And thus, in the ancient Gothic conſtitution, we find the breach both of natural and civil relations, ranked in the ſame claſs with crimes againſt the ſtate and ſovereign. Black. Com. 4 V. 203.

Parſon, (Perſona) Signifies the rector of a church becauſe for his time he repreſents the church, and in his perſon the church may ſue for, and defend her right, &c. Or he is called parſon as he is bound by virtue of his office, in propria perſona ſervire Deum. Fleta, lib. 9. cap. 18. 1 Inſt. 300. Alſo the word parſon in a large ſenſe includes all clergymen having ſpiritual preſentments. And there may be two parſons in one church, one of the one moiety, and the other of the other; and a part of the church and town allotted to each; and may be two that make but one parſon in a church, preſented by one patron. 1 Inſt. 17, 18.

To a parſon, theſe things are requiſite; holy orders, preſentation, inſtitution, and induction; and where a perſon is compleat parſon, he may ceaſe to be parſon of the church, by death, or ceſſion, reſignation, deprivation for ſimony, nonconformity to the canons, for adultery, &c. 1 Inſt. 120. 4 Rep. 75, 76. A parſon hath the entire fee of his church; and where it is ſaid he hath not the right of fee ſimple, that is underſtood as to bringing a writ of right. Cro. Car. 582. And in the time of the parſon, the patron hath nothing to do with the church; but if the parſon waſtes the inheritance thereof to his own private uſe, in cutting trees, &c. his patron may have a prohibition, ſo that to ſome purpoſes he hath an intereſt in the parſon's time. 11 H. 6. 4. 11 Rep. 49.

Sir Edward Coke was of opinion, That at Common law a parſon could not be arreſted; and ſaid, he had ſeen a report grounded on the ſtatutes 50 Edward 3. c. 5. and 1 Henry 2. c. 15. which are in affirmance of the Common law, and in maintenance of the liberties of the church; that a parſon ought not to be arreſted in going, ſtaying, or returning to celebrate divine ſervice, nor any other perſon who attended him in ſuch ſervice; and that if he was, he might have an action upon thoſe ſtatutes, againſt the perſon making the arreſt. 12 Rep. 100. A parſon ought not to appear at the ſheriff's torn, or the court leet, without an abſolute neceſſity, F. N. B. 160.

No parſon or ſpiritual perſon, ſhall take a farm or leaſe of lands, &c. to himſelf, or any one for his uſe, on pain of forfeiting 10*l.* a month, one moiety to the King, the other to the informer. Stat. 21 H. 8. cap. 13. Nor ſhall he buy, to ſell again, any merchandiſe, corn, cattle, &c. upon forfeiture of treble value: but he may buy horſes, or any other cattle, for his neceſſary uſe in manuring his glebe and church lands. Ibid. On information upon this ſtatute for renting a farm, defendant pleaded in bar, that he had not ſufficient glebe for paſturing his cattle, nor corn for his family; but the plaintiff traverſed his having ſpent the product thereof in his family, &c. 1 Lutw. 134. See Church, Eccleſiaſtical Courts, &c. and Black. Com. 1 V. 384.

Parſon Imparſonee, (Perſona imperſonata) Is he who is in poſſeſſion of a church, be it preſentative or impropriate, and with whom the church is full.

Perſona, according to the New Book of Entries, ſeems to be the patron who has right to give the benefice, by reaſon he had anciently the tithes in reſpect of his liberality in erecting or endowing the church, Quaſi ſuſtineret perſonam eccleſiæ; and perſona imperſonata is the parſon to whom the benefice is given in the patron's right. Perſona imperſonata is uſed for the rector of a church preſentative. Reg. Judic. 24. A dean and chapter are parſons imparſonees of a benefice appropriated to them; and perſona imperſonata is one who is inducted and in poſſeſſion of a benefice. Dyer 40. 221. So that perſona may be termed imperſonata, only in regard of the poſſeſſion he hath of the rectory, by the act of another. 1 Inſt. 300. In a quare impedit the parſon is to plead perſona imperſonata; but if he doth not ſay at the time of obtaining the writ, it will be inferred by the writ that he is. Cro. Car. 105. And this is a plea that he is admitted and inſtituted in the church, &c. 7 Rep. 26. See Black. Com. 1 V. 391.

Parſonage, (Perſonatus, perſonagium,) Is ſometimes taken for a dignitary in a church, and ſometimes for the benefice itſelf. Cowell.

Parſonage, or rectory, is a pariſh church, endowed with a houſe, glebe, tithes, &c. Or a certain portion of lands, tithes, and offerings, eſtabliſhed by law, for the maintenance of the miniſter who hath the cure of ſouls: And tho' properly a parſonage or rectory doth conſiſt of glebe land and tithes; yet it may be a rectory, tho' it have no glebe, but the church and church-yard: Alſo there may be neither glebe nor tithes, but annual payments in lieu thereof. Parſ. Counc. 190. The rights to the parſonage and church lands are of ſeveral natures; for the parſon hath a right to the poſſeſſion; the patron hath the right of preſentation; and the ordinary a right of inveſtiture, &c. But the rights of the patron and ordinary are only collateral rights: neither of them being capable of poſſeſſing or retaining the church themſelves; tho' no charge can be laid on the church or parſonage, but by the conſent and agreement of all of them. Hugh's Parſ. Law. 188.

Parſon mortal. The rector of a church inſtituted and inducted, for his own life, was called Perſona mortalis: And any collegiate or conventual body, to whom the church was for ever appropriated, were termed Perſona immortalis. Cartular. Rading. MS. fol. 182.

Partes finis nihil habuerunt, &c. Is an exception taken againſt a fine levied. 3 Rep. 88. The caſe of Fines.

Participatio, Is the charity ſo called, by which the poor are made participes of other mens goods. We read it in ſeveral places in the Monaſt. 2 tom. pag. 321.

Parties, Are thoſe who are named in a deed of fine, as parties to it; as thoſe who levy the fine, and to whom the fine is levied: ſo they who make any deed, and they to whom it is made, are called parties to the deed. Cowell. See 16 Vin. Abr. tit. Party. and Black. Com. 2 V. 298, 355.

Partition, (Partitio,) Is dividing land deſcended by the Common law, or cuſtom, among coheirs or parceners, where there are two at leaſt. In Kent, where the land is of gavelkind nature, they call their partition ſhifting, from the Saxon ſhiftan, to divide. In Latin it is called herciſſere. Partition alſo may be made by joint-tenants, or tenants in common, by aſſent, deed, or writ. 31 H. 8. 1. 32 H. 8. 32. See Joint-tenants, Parceners, and Black. Com. 2 V. 189, 323.

Partitione facienda, (Mentioned in ſtat. 31 H. 8. cap. 1.) Is a writ that lies for thoſe who hold lands or tenements pro indiviſo, and would ſever to every one his part, againſt thoſe who refuſe to join in partition, as copartners, tenants in gavelkind, &c. Old Nat. Brev. 142. F. N. B. 61.

Partners, Are where two or more perſons agree to come in ſhare and ſhare alike to any trade or bargain. If there are two partners in trade, and judgment is recovered againſt one of them, his moiety of the goods in partnerſhip only ſhall be taken in execution. Show. 174. Partnerſhip, is cogniſable in equity. See Black. Com. 3 V. 437. and 16 Vin. Abr. tit. Partners.

Part-owners, Are thoſe who are concerned in ſhip matters, and have joint ſhares therein. And when there are part-owners of a ſhip, the majority may fit her out, without conſent of the reſt; and if they do, ſuch majority run all hazard, and are to partake of the profits. Show. 13, 30. Action lies as well againſt the part-owners of a ſhip, for the loſs or ſpoiling of goods delivered to the maſter, as againſt the maſter; for as the maſter of a ſhip is chargeable in reſpect of his wages, ſo are part-owners in reſpect of the freight; but the action againſt the part-owners muſt be brought againſt all of them, or defendants may take advantage of it, by pleading in abatement, &c. Show. 30, 105. 3 Lev. 259.

Parviſe, (parviſa, parviſus, non à parvus adject. ſed à gal. le parvis) Sed placitantes, tunc, i. e. poſt meridiem, ſe divertunt ad parviſum & alibi conſulentes cum ſervientibus ad legem & aliis conſiliariis, &c. Forteſcue de Laudibus LL. Angl. cap. 51. pag. 124. And Selden (in his notes on Forteſcue) defines it to be, an afternoon's exerciſe, or moot for the inſtruction of young ſtudents; bearing the ſame name originally with the Parviſiæ at Oxford, Seld. Notes pag. 56. Of which Chaucer has mention in one of his prologues:

A Serjeant at Law, that ware and wiſe,
That often had been at the Parviſe.

Paſcha clauſum, The Octaves of Eaſter or Low Sunday, which cloſes that ſolemnity: And die (tali) poſt paſcha clauſum, is a date in ſome of our old deeds. The firſt ſtatute of Weſtminſter, anno 3 Ed. 1. is ſaid to be made the Monday after Eaſter week; poſt de la cluſe de paſche, &c.

Paſcha floridum, Is the Sunday before Eaſter, called Palm Sunday; when the proper hymn or goſpel ſung was occurrunt turbæ cum floribus & palmis, &c. Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. MS 75.

Paſchal Rents, Rents or yearly tributes paid by the clergy to the biſhop or archdeacon, at their Eaſter viſitations.

Paſcua, A meadow or paſture ground, ſet apart to feed cattle. See Paſtura.

Paſcuage, (paſcuagium, Fr. paſcage) The graſing or paſturing of cattle.——Et habere viginti porcos quietos de paſcuagio, &c. Mon. Angl. Tom. 2. 23. The ſame with pannage.

Paſnage, And pathnage in woods, &c. See Pannage.

Paſſage, (Paſſagium) Is properly over water, as way is over land; it relates to the ſea, and great rivers, and is a French word ſignifying tranſitum. In the ſtat. 4 Ed. 3. c. 7. it is uſed for the hire a man pays for being tranſported over ſea, or any river: And it is mentioned among cuſtoms and duties, as theolonio, paſſagio, & laſtagio. Chart. Hen. 1.

All perſons ſhall have free paſſage on the river Severn; and if any be diſturbed, he may have his remedy by action. Stat. 9 H. 6. c. 5. There are other ſtatutes for regulating the paſſage of this river, and preventing diſorders therein by the Welch, &c. 19 Hen. 7. cap. 18. 26 Hen. 8. cap. 5.

Alſo paſſagio is a writ directed to the keepers of the ports to permit a man to paſs over ſea, who has the King's leave. Reg. Orig. 193. The prices of paſſage at Dover, &c. are limited by 4 Ed. 3. c. 8. None to paſs out of the realm without the King's licence. 5 R. 2 ſt. 1. c. 2. Paſſage from Kent to Calais reſtrained to Dover. 4 Ed. 4. c. 10.

Paſſagium, A voyage or expedition to the Holy Land, when made by the Kings of England in perſon, was called Paſſagium, or Paſſagium regis. Cowell.

Paſſator, Is he who has the intereſt or command of the paſſage of a river, or the lord to whom a duty is paid for paſſage. Cowell.

Paſs-port, A compound of two French words, viz. paſſer, tranſire, and port, portus, a haven. It ſignifies a licence, for the ſafe paſſage of any man from one place to another. 2 E. 6. cap. 2. See Black. Com. 1 V. 260. 4 V. 68.

Paſſagiarius, A ferry-man. We meet with the word in Thorn's Chronicle, in anno 1287.

Paſtitium, A paſture field. Caſtrum Arundel. T. R. E. reddebat a quodam molino 40s. &c. & de uno paſtitio 20 s. Domeſday, per Gale 761.

Paſtoral ſtaff. The form of it was ſtreight, which ſignified rectum regimen. All the top part of it was crooked, and the other part ſharp: The crooked ſignified, that the biſhop preſided over the people; and the ſharp ſignified, to puniſh the ſtubborn. Cowell.

Paſture, Is generally any place where cattle may feed; and feeding for cattle is called paſture, wherefore feeding grounds are called common of paſture: But common of paſture is properly a right of putting beaſts to paſture in another man's ſoil; and in this there is an intereſt of the lord and of the tenant. Wood's Inſt. 196, 197. For in thoſe waſte grounds, which are uſually called Commons, the property of the ſoil is generally in the lord of the manor; as in common fields it is in the particular tenants. And common of paſture is either appendant, appurtenant, becauſe of vicinage, or in groſs. Black. Com. 2 V. 32. See Admeaſurement.

Paſtura differs from paſcua, as appears from what follows, viz. paſtura omne genus paſcendi ſignificat, ſive fiat in partis, ſive in ſtipula, ſive in agris, ſive in campis; ſed paſcua eſt locus principaliter deputatus pecoribus paſcendis, utputa in montibus, moris, mariſcis & planis non cultis aratis. Lindewood. Provin. Angl. lib. 3. c. 1.

Paſtus, Is the ſame with procuration, or the proviſion which tenants are bound to make for their lords at certain times, or as often as they make a progreſs to their lands: This in many places was turned into money. Hoc modo per ævum liberabo a paſtu Regis & principum. Chart. Walgaſi Regis Merciorum in Mon. Angl. tom. 1. p. 123.

Patentee, One to whom the King grants his letters patent. 7 Ed. 6. c. 3.

Patents, Are the King's writings, ſealed with the Great Seal, having their name from being open: And they differ from writs. Crompt. Juriſd. 126. The King is to adviſe with his council touching grants and patents made of his eſtate, &c. And in petitions for lands, annuities or offices, the value is to be expreſſed: alſo a former patent is to be mentioned where the petition is for a grant in reverſion, or the patents thereupon ſhall be void. 1 Hen. 4. c. 6. 6 Hen. 8. c. 15. And patents which bear not the date and day of delivery of the King's warrants into Chancery, are not good. Statute 18 Hen. 6. c. 1. Where the King's patent creates a new eſtate, of which the law does not take knowledge; the patents are void. 8 Rep. 1. 5 Rep. 93. But patents ſhall not be avoided by nice conſtructions: If a patent may be taken to two intents; and is good as to one, and not as to the other; it is valid. Jenk. Cent. 138. When the King would paſs a freehold, it is neceſſary that the patent be under the Great Seal; and it ought to be granted de adviſamento of the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Lord Treaſurer in the uſual manner. Fitzgib. 291. See Grants of the King. And Black. Com. 2 V. 346.

As to patents for new inventions, ſee Black. Com. 4 V. 159. For patents of peerage, ib. 1 V. 400. For patents of precedence, ib. 3 V. 28.

Patria, Properly ſignifies the country, but in law it denotes the men of a neighbourhood; ſo when we ſay inquiratur per patriam, we mean a jury of the neighbourhood. In like manner, Aſſiſa vel recognitio per aſſiſam, idem eſt quod recognitio patriæ. Cowell. See Black. Com. 3 V. 349. 4 V. 342.

Patrimony. An hereditary eſtate, or right deſcended from anceſtors. The legal endowment of a church or religious houſe, was called eccleſiaſtical patrimony; and the lands and reverſions united to the ſee of Rome, are called St. Peter's Patrimony. Cowell.

Patrinus, Is uſed for godfather, and matrina a godmother, in the laws of King Hen. 1.

Patritius, An honour conferred on men of the firſt quality, in the time of the Engliſh Saxon Kings.——Pro ampliori firmitatis teſtamento, principes & ſenatores, judices & patritios ſubſcribere fecimus. Mon Angl. tom. 1. p. 13.

Patron, (Patronus) Signifieth in the Civil law him who hath manumitted a ſervant; and thereby is accounted his great benefactor, and claims duty of him during life. Digeſt tit. de Jure Patronatus. In the Canon and Common law, it is he who hath the diſpoſition of an eccleſiaſtical benefice; and the reaſon is, becauſe the gift of churches and benefices belonged unto ſuch good men as either built or endowed them with great part of their revenues. Terms de Ley.

He who has the right of advowſon is called the Patron of the church. For, when lords of manors firſt built churches on their own demeſnes, and appointed the tithes of thoſe manors to be paid to the officiating miniſters, which before were given to the clergy in common, (from whence aroſe the diviſion of pariſhes) the lord, who thus built a church, and endowed it with glebe or land, had of common right a power annexed of nominating ſuch miniſter as he pleaſed (provided he were canonically qualified) to officiate in that church, of which he was the founder, endower, maintainer, or, in one word, the patron. Black. Com. 2 V. 21.

This original of the jus patronatus by building and endowing the church appears alſo to have been allowed in the Roman empire. Nov. 56. t. 12. c. 2. Nov. 118. c. 23.

There are three cauſes of patronage: Ratione fundationis, where one ſolely founds a church; Ratione donationis, when a man only endows it; and Ratione fundi, where a perſon erects a church on his own ground. Lit. 137. 2 Lil. Abr. 286.

The patron is to preſent within ſix kalendar months after an avoidance of the church; and where the church becomes void by the death of the incumbent, the patron at his peril muſt take notice of it, in making preſentation; but if there be an avoidance by deprivation, &c. he ſhall have notice, and ſix months after to preſent. 6 Rep. 61. 3 Leon. 46. If a church becomes litigious by the preſentation of two patrons of their clerks, a jus patronatus may be awarded by the biſhop to inquire who is rightful patron, and he is to admit accordingly. 2 Rol. Abr. 384, 385.

The patron's right is the moſt worthy and firſt act and part of a promotion to a benefice, and is granted and pleaded by the name of libero diſpoſitio eccleſiæ. Hob. 152. But during the vacancy of a church, the freehold of the glebe is not in the patron; for it is in abeyance. 8 H. 6. 24. Lit. 144. A patron ſhall not have an action for treſpaſs done when the church is vacant: And if a man who hath a right to glebe lands, releaſeth the ſame to the patron, that is not good; becauſe the patron has not any eſtate in the land. 11 H. 6. c. 4. If the patron grants a rent out of a church, it is void even againſt himſelf. 38 Ed. 3. 4. See Advowſon, Parſon, Preſentation, &c. And Black. Com. 2 V. 21. And 3 V. 242.

Pavage, (Pavagium) Money paid towards paving the ſtreets or highways. Rex (Edw. 1.) conceſſit pavagium villæ de Huntingdon per quinquennium. Pla. Parl. 35. Edw. 1.

Paving, &c. See the Table to the Statutes.

Pauper, Signifies a poor man according to which we have a term in law, to ſue in forma pauperis. See Forma Pauperis. Alſo vide the ſtatute 11 Hen. 7. c. 12.

Before a perſon is admitted to ſue in forma pauperis, he muſt have counſel's hand to his petition, certifying the judge to whom the petition is directed, that he conceives the petitioner hath good cauſe of action; he muſt alſo annex an affidavit to his petition, that he is not worth five pounds, all his debts paid, except wearing apparel, and his right to the matter in queſtion. Lil. Reg. 633.

None ought to be admitted to ſue in forma pauperis in an action on the caſe, for words. Lil. Reg. 633. per Wild.

A perſon admitted to ſue in forma pauperis, can only ſue in that cauſe for which he is admitted, & ſic toties quoties. Lil. Reg. 633.

It ſeems that, after the ſtatutes which introduced coſts, neither plaintiffs nor defendants could ſue or defend in forma pauperis, for that would be a means of depriving the other party of the coſts given him by ſtatute; and as the 11 Hen. 7. c. 12. enables perſons only to ſue as paupers; and as the ſtatute 23 Hen. 8. c. 15. excepts only plaintiffs who are paupers from paying coſts, it ſeems, that defendant cannot be admitted in a civil action to defend as a pauper. But it hath been adjudged, that a perſon may be admitted to defend an indictment in forma pauperis for a miſdemeanor, ſuch as a conſpiracy, keeping a diſorderly houſe, &c. for in ſuch proceedings there being no coſts, the judges have a diſcretionary power of admitting or refuſing them by the Common law. Paſch. 9 Geo. 2. The King v. Wright. See ſtatute 2 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſ. 8.

It is ſaid, that paupers ought not to be admitted to removes cauſes out of inferior courts, but ought to ſatisfy themſelves with the juriſdiction within which their actions properly lie. 1 Mod. 368. per North.

By the orders of the courts, if the party admitted to ſue in forma pauperis give any fee or reward to his counſel or attorney, or make any contract or agreement with them, he ſhall from thenceforth be diſpaupered, and not be afterwards admitted again in that ſuit to proſecute in forma pauperis. Ord. Cur' 94.

Alſo if it ſhall be made appear to the court, that any perſon proſecuting in forma pauperis hath ſold or contracted for the benefit of the ſuit, or any part thereof, while the ſame depends, ſuch cauſe ſhall be from thenceforth totally diſmiſſed the court. Ord. Cur' 95.

It is ſaid, that if a pauper gives notice of trial, and does not proceed, he ſhall be diſpaupered. 1 Salk. 506.

In the ſtatute 23 Hen. 8. c. 15. there is a proviſion, "That whoever ſues in forma pauperis ſhall not pay coſts, but ſhall ſuffer ſuch other puniſhment as the court ſhall think fit."

But notwithſtanding this ſtatute, if he be diſpaupered or nonſuited, the uſual practice is to tax the coſts, and for non-payment to order him to be whipped. 2 Salk. 506. Stile 386.

A. brought a bill in forma pauperis, to which the defendant put in a plea and demurrer, which were both over-ruled; and it was inſiſted upon, that he ſhould not have coſts, being at none; but Lord Somers, (after long debate and inquiry of all the ancient counſel and clerks, who agreed, that he ſhould have coſts) ordered him his coſts like other ſuitors; for though he is at no, or but ſmall coſts, yet the counſel and clerks do not give their labour to defendant, but to the pauper. Abr. Eq. 125. See Black. Com. 3 V. 400.

Pawn, (Pignus) A pledge or gage for payment of money lent: It is ſaid to be derived à pugno, quia res quæ pignori dantur, pugno vel manu traduntur. Lit. Dict. The party who pawns goods, hath a general property in them; they cannot be forfeited by the party who hath them in pawn for any offence of his, nor be taken in execution for his debt; neither may they otherwiſe be put in execution, till the debt for which they are pawned is ſatisfied. Lit. Rep. 332.

If a man pawns goods for money, and afterwards a judgment is had againſt the pawner at the ſuit of one of the creditors; the goods in the hands of the pawnee ſhall not be taken in execution, until the money is paid to the pawnee, becauſe he had a qualified property in them, and the judgment creditor only an intereſt. 3 Bulſt. 17. And when a perſon hath jewels in pawn for a certain ſum, and he who pawned them is attainted, the King ſhall not have the jewels unleſs he pay the money. Plowd. 487.

The pawnee of goods hath a ſpecial property in them, to detain them for his ſecurity, &c. and he may aſſign the pawn over to another, ſubject to the ſame conditions: And if the pawnee die before redeemed, his executors ſhall have it upon the like terms as he had it.

If goods pawned are periſhable, and no day being ſet for payment of the money, they lie in pawn till ſpoiled, without any default in him who hath them in keeping; the party who pawned them ſhall bear the damage, for it ſhall be adjudged his fault that he did not redeem them ſooner; and he to whom pawned may have action of debt for his money: Alſo if the goods are taken from him, he may have action of treſpaſs, &c. Co. Lit. 89, 208.

Where goods are pawned for money borrowed, without a day ſet for redemption, they are redeemable at any time during the life of the borrower. They may be redeemed after the death of him to whom pawned; but not after the death of him who pawned the goods. 2 Cro. 245. Noy 137. 1 Bulſt. 9. But where a day is appointed, and the pawner dieth before the day, his executors may redeem the pawn at the day, and this ſhall be aſſets in their hands. 1 Bulſt. 30, 31. If goods are redeemable at a day certain, it muſt be ſtrictly obſerved; and the pawnee, in caſe of failure of payment at the day, may ſell them. 1 Rol. Rep. 181, 215.

He who borrows money on a pawn, is to have the pledge again when he repays it, or he may have action for the detainer; and his tender of the money reveſts the ſpecial property. 2 Cro. 244. And it it hath been held, that where a broker or pawnee refuſes (upon tender of the money) to redeliver the goods in pawn, he may be indicted; becauſe, being ſecretly pawned, it may be impoſſible to prove a delivery for want of witneſſes, if trover ſhould be brought for them. 3 Salk. 268. Adjudged, that if goods are loſt, after the tender of the money, the pawnee is liable to make them good to the owner; for after tender he is a wrongful detainer, and he who keeps goods wrongfully muſt anſwer for them at all events, his wrongful detainer being the occaſion of the loſs: but if they are loſt before a tender, it is otherwiſe; the pawnee is not liable, if his care of keeping them was exact; and the law requires nothing of him, but only that he ſhould uſe an ordinary care in keeping the goods, that they may be reſtored on payment of the money for which they were depoſited; and in ſuch caſe if the goods are loſt, the pawnee hath ſtill his remedy againſt the pawner for the money lent. 2 Salk. 522. 3 Salk. 268.

If the pawn is laid up, and the pawnee robbed, he is not anſwerable: Though if the pawnee uſeth the thing, as a jewel, watch, &c. that will not be the worſe for wearing, which he may do, it is at his peril; and if he is robbed, he is anſwerable to the owner, as the uſing occaſioned the loſs, &c. Ibid. If the pawn is of ſuch a nature that the keeping is a charge to the pawnee, as a cow or a horſe, &c. he may milk the one, or ride the other, and this ſhall go in recompence for his keeping: Things which will grow the worſe by uſage, as apparel, &c. he may not uſe. Owen 124.

A perſon borrowed 100*l.* on the pawn of jewels, and took a note from the lender acknowledging them to be in his hands, for ſecuring the money; afterwards he borrowed ſeveral other ſums of the ſame perſon, for which he gave his notes, without taking any notice of the jewels. As in this caſe it was natural to think the lender would not have advanced the ſums on note only, but on the credit of the pledge in his hands before; it was decreed in equity, that if the borrrower would have his jewels, he muſt pay all the money due on the notes. Preced. Chanc. 419, 421.

A factor cannot pawn the goods of his principal, Strange 1178. He to whom goods are delivered for ſafe cuſtody cannot pawn them. Strange 1187. There can be no market-overt for pawning. Ibid. Where money is lent on a pledge, the borrower is perſonally liable to the payment, unleſs there be an agreement to the contrary. Strange 919. See Cheats, Pledging, and Pawnbrokers. And Black. Com. 2 V. 452.

Pawnage, In woods and foreſts for ſwine. Vide Pannage.

Pawnbrokers. By 30 Geo. 2. c. 24. they are to make entry of goods pawned, pledged or exchanged; and a duplicate thereof, if required, is to be given to the pawner, upon paying for the ſame. Default of making ſuch entry, and giving ſuch duplicate, ſhall forfeit 5 l. Where goods pawned are damaged through the neglect of the pawnbroker, the juſtices may award ſatisfaction to be deducted out of the principal and intereſt and allowance for warehouſe room; and in all caſes of ſuch damages happening, it ſhall be ſufficient for the pawner to pay or tender the money upon the balance after ſuch deduction, and upon ſo doing, the juſtices may proceed as if the whole principal, &c. had been paid or tendered. Perſons buying or taking in pledge, linen or apparel intruſted to others to waſh or mend, &c. ſhall forfeit double the ſum and reſtore the goods. Perſons offering goods to ſell, pawn, &c. not giving a good account of themſelves, may be detained, and carried before a juſtice, who may commit the party. The perſons detaining the party and goods are indemnified. Juſtice, upon oath of the owner, to iſſue a warrant to ſearch the ſuſpected perſon's houſe. Upon refuſal of admittance the officer may break open the door. Perſons hindering ſuch ſearch are to forfeit 5 l. And on non-payment to be committed to hard labour for a time not exceeding one month, nor leſs than five days. The goods found to be reſtored to the owner. Goods pawned for a ſum not exceeding 10*l.* may be recovered within two years. Juſtice, on complaint of pawnbroker refuſing to deliver goods, to ſummon and examine the parties; and proof being made of tender and payment of the principal, intereſt, and charges; or tender being then alſo made and refuſed; juſtice to make an order for the immediate delivery of the goods; on refuſal, to commit the pawnbroker until ſatisfaction be made. Goods remaining unredeemed for two years, are forfeited, and may be ſold. Entry to be made of ſale of goods pawned for 2 l. or upwards. Overplus ariſing from the ſale to be paid on demand to the owner. On refuſal of inſpection on the goods being ſold for more than entered, &c. pawnbroker to forfeit treble the value. Summons and warrants to be iſſued without fee.

Payment of money before the day appointed, is in law payment at the day; for it cannot, in preſumption of law, be any prejudice to him to whom the payment is made, to have his money before the time; and it appears, by the party's receipt of it, that it is for his own advantage to receive it then, otherwiſe he would not do it: Yet it is ſaid, that defendant muſt not plead, that the plaintiff accepted it in full ſatisfaction; but that he PAID it in full ſatisfaction. 5 Rep. 117. Payment of a leſſer ſum in ſatisfaction of a greater, cannot be a ſatisfaction for the whole, unleſs the payment be before the day: Though the gift of an horſe, or robe, &c. in ſatisfaction may be good. Ibid. And where damages are uncertain, a leſs thing may be done in ſatisfaction of a greater. 4 Mod. 89.

Upon ſolvit ad diem pleaded, it is good evidence to prove payment at any time after the day, and before action brought; and payment, although after the day, may be pleaded to any action of debt, upon bill, bond or judgment, or Scire facias upon a judgment. 2 Lil. Abr. 287. Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. But though payment after the day, is good by way of diſcharge, it will not be ſo by way of ſatisfaction. 4 Mod. 250. Payment is no plea to debt on covenant, or an obligation, without acquittance; but if the obligation have a condition, it is otherwiſe. Dyer 25, 160. If a bond, &c. be for payment of money; and no day is ſet, damages cannot be recovered till a demand is made. Bridgm. 20.

For payment of rent there are ſaid to be four times; 1. A voluntary time, that is not ſatisfactory, and yet good to ſome purpoſe; as where a leſſee pays his rent before the day, this gives ſeiſin of the rent, and enables him to whom paid to bring his aſſiſe for it. 2. A time voluntary and ſatisfactory in ſome caſes; when it is paid the morning of the laſt day, and the leſſor dies before the end of the day, this is a good payment to bind the heir or executor, but not the King. 3. The legal, abſolute and ſatisfactory time, which is a convenient time before the laſt inſtant of the laſt day, and then it muſt be paid. The 4th is ſatisfactory, and not voluntary, but coercive, when forced and recovered by ſuit at law. Co. Lit. 200. 10 Rep. 127. Plowd. 172.

Payment of money ſhall be directed by him who pays it, and not by the receiver, &c. 5 Rep. 117. Cro. Eliz. 68. If the payer does not apply the payment, the receiver may, but he muſt not apply it to an uncertain demand, as to a debt from a teſtator. Strange 1194. In the payment of a teſtator's debts by executors, they are to pay firſt judgments, mortgages, rent due by leaſe, &c. then bonds and bills, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 927. Vide Bond and Rent.

A bill drawn on A. to pay money for value received, is a good diſcharge of a debt, though the bill be not paid, unleſs the creditor return the bill in convenient time. Per Holt Ch. J. Show. 155.

A. gives B. a bill of exchange on C. in payment of a former debt; this is not allowable as evidence on non aſſumpſit, unleſs paid; for a bill ſhall never go in diſcharge of a precedent debt, except it be part of the contract that it ſhould be ſo. 1 Salk. 124.

When a merchant draws a bill upon a correſpondent, who accepts it, this is payment; for it makes him debtor to another perſon, who may bring his action. 10 Mod. 37.

4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16. ſect. 12. enacts, That in debt on ſingle bill, debt, or ſcire facias on judgment, defendant may plead payment in bar. In debt on bond, if defendant before action brought hath paid the principal and intereſt due by the condition, though ſuch payment was not ſtrictly made according to the condition, yet it may be pleaded in bar, and ſhall be as effectual as if the money had been paid at the day and place, according to the condition, and had been ſo pleaded. Vide Bond, and Rent.

Peace, (Pax) In the general ſignification is oppoſite to war or ſtrife: But particularly with us it intends a quiet behaviour toward the King and his ſubjects. And if any man is in danger from another, and makes oath of it before a juſtice of peace, he ſhall be ſecured by good bond, which is called binding to the peace. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 2. cap. 2. 77. Cromp. Juſt. of Peace, 118, 129. And alſo frank-pledge and conſervator of the peace. Time of peace is when the courts of juſtice are open, and the judges and miniſters of the ſame may by law protect men from wrong, and adminiſter juſtice to all. Co. Lit. 249.

All authority for keeping the peace comes originally from the King, who is the ſupreme magiſtrate for preſervation thereof; though it is ſaid the King cannot take a recognizance of the peace, becauſe it is a rule in law that no one can take any recognizance, who is not either a juſtice of record, or by commiſſion: Alſo it is certain, that no duke, earl, or baron, as ſuch, have any greater power to keep the peace, than meer private perſons. Lamb. lib. 1. c. 3. Dalt. c. 1. But the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, the Lord High Steward, the Lord Marſhal, and every juſtice of the King's Bench, have, as incident to their offices, a general authority to keep the peace throughout the realm, and to award proceſs for ſurety of the peace, and take recognizances for it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 32. And every court of record hath power to keep the peace within its own precinct: As have likewiſe ſheriffs, who are intruſted with the cuſtody of the counties, conſequently have by it an implied power of keeping the peace within the ſame; and coroners may bind perſons to the peace who make an affray in their preſence; but may not grant proceſs of the peace, &c. Ibid.

It is ſaid every man is to be a conſtable, to keep the peace among others, and juſtices of peace are to do the ſame eſpecially; and no man may break it. 3 Shep. Abr. 14.

Peace ſhall be kept, and juſtice and right duly adminiſtred to all perſons. Stat. 1 R. 2. c. 2, &c. Peace of God and the Church, (Pax Dei & Eccleſiæ) Was anciently uſed for that ceſſation which the King's ſubjects had from trouble and ſuit of law between the terms. Tempus dicitur cultui divino adhibitum, eaque appellatione omnes dies dominici, feſta & vigiliæ cenſentur. Spelman. See Vacation.

Peace of the King, (Pax Regis, mentioned in Stat. 6 R. 2 ſtat. 1. cap. 13.) Is that peace and ſecurity both for life and goods, which the King promiſeth to all his ſubjects, or others taken into his protection. And where an outlawry is reverſed, a perſon is reſtored to the King's peace, called ad pacem redire. Bract. lib. 3. c. 11. See Suit of the King's Peace. This point of policy ſeems to have been borrowed by us from the Feudiſts, which in the ſecond book of the Feuds, cap. 53. intitled, De paee tenenda, &c. Hotoman proveth. Of this Hoveden ſetteth down many branches Par. poſter. ſuorum Annal. in H. 2. fol. 144. and 330. There is alſo peace of the church, for which ſee Sanctuary. There is beſides, the peace of the King's highway, which is the immunity that the King's highway hath to be free from annoyance or moleſtation. The peace of the plough, whereby the plough and the plough cattle are ſecured from diſtreſſes. F. N. B. 90. And fairs have been ſaid to have their peace; becauſe no man might be troubled in them for any debt contracted elſewhere.

Pecia, A piece or ſmall quantity of ground.—— Cum duabus peciis, & dictæ terræ pertinentibus. Paroch. Antiq. 240.

Pectorale, A word often met with in old writings. Moſt authors agree that it is the ſame with that garment called rationale, which the high prieſt in the old law wore on his ſhoulders, as a ſign of perfection. It is worn alſo by the high prieſt of the new law, as a ſign of the greateſt virtue. Quæ gratia & ratione perficitur; for which reaſon it is called rationale. It is by ſome taken to be that part of the pall which covers the breaſt of the prieſt, and from thence called pectorale. But all agree that it is the richeſt part of that garment, embroidered with gold, and adorned with precious ſtones. Cowell. Item capa cum pectorale optime brendato cum rotundis pectoralibus aurifrigiis, &c. humerali vincato de fino auro brendato, & lapidibus inſertis, &c.

Pectoral, Armour for the breaſt, a breaſt-plate or petrel, for a horſe; from the Lat. pectus: it is mentioned in the Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 3.

Peculiar, (Fr. peculier, i. e. private) Is a particular pariſh or church, that hath juriſdiction within itſelf, and power to grant adminiſtration or probate of wills, &c. exempt from the ordinary.

There are royal peculiars, and archbiſhops peculiars: the King's chapel is a royal peculiar, exempted from all ſpiritual juriſdiction, and reſerved to the immediate government of the King; there are alſo ſome peculiar eccleſiaſtical juriſdictions belonging to the King, which formerly appertained to monaſteries and religious houſes. Wood's Inſt. 504. It is an ancient privilege of the ſee of Canterbury, that wherever any manors or advowſons belong to it, they forthwith become exempt from the ordinary, and are reputed peculiars of that ſee; not becauſe they are under no ordinary, but becauſe they are not under the ordinary of the dioceſe, &c. For the juriſdiction is annexed to the Court of Arches, and the judge thereof may originally cite to theſe peculiars of the archbiſhop. Ibid.

The Court of Peculiars of the archbiſhop of Canterbury, hath a particular juriſdiction in the city of London, and in other dioceſes, &c. within his province, in all fifty-ſeven peculiars. 4 Inſt. 338. Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. There are ſome peculiars which belong to Deans and Chapters, or a Prebendary, exempted from the archdeacon only; they are derived from the Biſhop, of ancient compoſition, and may be viſited by the biſhop in his primary or triennial viſitation: in the mean time an official of the Dean and Chapter, or Prebendary, is the judge; and from hence the appeal lies to the biſhop of the dioceſe. Wood 504. Appeal lieth from other peculiar courts to the King in Chancery. Stat. 25 H. 8. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's have a peculiar juriſdiction; and the Dean and Chapter of Saliſbury have a large peculiar within that dioceſe; ſo have the Dean and Chapter of Litchfield, &c. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1240, 1241.

There is mention in our books of Peculiars of Archdeacons; but they are not properly Peculiars, only ſubordinate juriſdictions; and a Peculiar is prima facie to be underſtood of him who hath a co-ordinate juriſdiction with the biſhop. Hob. 185. Mod. Ca. 308. If an Archdeacon hath a peculiar authority by commiſſion, this ſhall not take away the authority of the Biſhop; but if he hath authority and juriſdiction by preſcription, it is ſaid it ſhall. 2 Rol. Rep. 357. Where a man dies inteſtate, leaving goods in ſeveral Peculiars, it has been held, that the Archbiſhop is to grant adminiſtration. Sid. 90. 5 Mod. 239. See 16 Vin. Abr. tit. Peculiars. See Black. Com. 3 V. 65.

Pecunia, Properly money, but anciently uſed for cattle, and ſome times for other goods as well as money. So we find often in Domeſday, Paſtura ibidem ad pecuniam villæ, that is, paſture-ground for the cattle of the village. And in Emendat. Willielmi Primi ad Leg. Edw. Conf. Intenti ſimus etiam ut nulla viva pecunia vendantur, aut emantur niſi infra civitates, & hoc ante tres fideles teſtes. And Leg. Edw. Conf. cap. 10. Qui habuerit 30 denariatos vivæ pecuniæ. Cowell.

Pecunia ſepulchralis, (LL. Canuti, 102.) Was money anciently paid to the prieſt at the opening of the grave for the good of the deceaſed ſoul. This the Saxons called ſaulſcead, ſaulſcot, and animæ ſymbolum. Spel. de Concil. T. 1. f. 517.

Pecuniary. All puniſhments of offences were anciently pecuniary, by mulct, &c. See Fine.

Pecuniary Cauſes, Cognizable in the Eccleſiaſtical courts, are ſuch as ariſe either from the withholding Eccleſiaſtical dues, or the doing or neglecting ſome act relating to the church, whereby damage accrues to the plaintiff; towards obtaining a ſatisfaction for which he is permitted to inſtitute a ſuit in the Spiritual Court. For the principal of theſe cauſes, ſee Black. Com. 2 V. 88.

Pecuniary Legacy, Cannot be taken without conſent of the executor: for in him all the chattels are veſted; and it is his buſineſs firſt to ſee whether there is a ſufficient fund left to pay the debts of the teſtator: the rule of equity being, that A MAN MUST BE JUST, BEFORE HE IS PERMITTED TO BE GENEROUS. And in caſe of a deficiency of aſſets, all the general, or pecuniary legacies, muſt abate proportionably, in order to pay the debts. Black. Com. 2 V. 512.

Pedage, (pedagium) Signifies money given for the paſſing by foot or horſe through any country. Pedagium à pede dictum eſt, quod a tranſeuntibus ſolvitur, &c. Caſſan. de Conſ. Burgun. p. 118. Pedagia dicuntur quæ dantur a tranſeuntibus in locum conſtitutum a principe, &c. Et capiens pedagium, debet dare ſalvum conductum, & territorium ejus tenere ſecurum. Spelm. This word is likewiſe mentioned by Mat. Paris, anno 1256. And Ed. 3. granted to Sir Nele Loring pedagium Sancti Macharii, &c. Rot. Paſch. 22 Ed. 3.

Pedale, A foot cloth, or piece of tapeſtry laid on the ground to tread on for greater ſtate and ceremony. Ingulph. pag. 41.

Pedis abſciſſo, Cutting off the foot, was a puniſhment of criminals, inflicted here, inſtead of death; as appears by the laws of William, called The Conqueror, viz. Interdicimus ne quis occidatur vel ſuſpendatur pro aliqua culpa, ſed eruantur oculi, abſcindantur pedes, vel teſticuli, vel manus. Leg. Wil. 1. cap. 7. So in Ingulphus, p. 856. Sub pœna perditionis dextri ſui pedis. Fleta, lib. 1. c. 38. Bracton, lib. 3. cap. 32. Monaſt. 1 tom. p. 166.

Pedones, Foot-ſoldiers. Simeon of Durham, Anno 1085.

Peer, or Pier, (Pera, Fr. pierre, ſaxum, quod e ſaxis fieri ſolebat) Is a fortreſs made againſt the force of the ſea, or great rivers, for the better ſecurity of ſhips that lie at harbour in any haven. So is the peer of Dover deſcribed in Cam. Britan. 259. 14 Car. 2. cap. 27. The haven and peer of Great Yarmouth, mentioned 22 Car. 2. cap. 2.

Peerage, A duty or impoſition for maintenance of a ſea peer: Alſo the dignity of the lords or peers of the realm.

Peers, (Pares) Signify in law, thoſe who are impanelled in an inqueſt upon a man, for convicting or clearing him of any offence; the reaſon is, becauſe the cuſtom of the realm is, to try every man in ſuch caſe by his peers or equals. Weſtm. 1. cap. 6. Mag. Car. c. 29. And in this ſenſe, is in uſe with other nations: for pares ſunt convaſſalli quorum ſententia vaſſallus propter feloniam eſt condemnatus. Bartilayus de Regno, lib. 4. c. 2. Et pares ſunt qui ab eodem domino feudum tenent. Lib. 1. Feudor. cap. 26. Cowell.

And as every one of the nobility being a Lord of Parliament, is a Peer or equal to all the other Lords, though of ſeveral degrees; ſo the Commons are Peers to one another, although diſtinguiſhed as Knights, Eſquires, Gentlemen, &c. 2 Inſt. 29. 3 Inſt. 31. See Peers of the Realm.

Peers of Fees. The word peer denoted originally one of the ſame rank; afterwards it was uſed for the vaſſals or tenants of the ſame Lord, who were obliged to ſerve and attend him in his courts, being equal in function: theſe were termed peers of fees, becauſe holding fees of the lord, or becauſe their buſineſs in court was to ſit and judge under their lord, of diſputes ariſing on fees: but if there were too many in one lordſhip, the lord uſually choſe twelve, who had the title of peers, by way of diſtinction, from whence it is ſaid we derive our common juries, and other peers. Cowell.

Peers of the Realm, (Pares Regni, proceres) Are the Nobility of the Kingdom, and Lords of Parliament; who are divided into Dukes, Marqueſſes, Earls, Viſcounts, and Barons: And the Reaſon why they are called peers, is that, notwithſtanding a diſtinction of dignities in our nobility, yet in all public actions they are equal; as in their votes of Parliament, and trial of any nobleman. S. P. C. lib. 3. And this appellation ſeems to be chiefly borrowed from France, from thoſe twelve peers that Charlemaine inſtituted in that kingdom, (called pares vel patricii Franciæ) but we have applied this name to all our Lords of Parliament, and have no ſet number of peers, for they are more or leſs at the Kings pleaſure.

All nobility and peerage is granted by the crown; and created either by writ, or letters patent: the calling up a lord by writ is the moſt ancient way, and gives a fee-ſimple in a barony, without words of inheritance, viz. To him and his heirs; but the King may limit the general eſtate of inheritance to heirs male, or the heirs of the body: and as ſoon as the perſon called ſits in parliament by virtue of this writ, his blood is ennobled, and he is a peer, but if he dies before he ſits in parliament, he is not, the bare direction and delivery of the writ having no effect. 1 Inſt. 9, 16. But creation by letters patent is good, and makes the peerage ſure, altho' he never ſit in parliament, and his heirs ſhall inherit the honour purſuant to the words of the patent: though the perſon created muſt in this caſe have the inheritance limited by apt words; as to him and his heirs, or the heirs male of his body, heirs of his body, &c. otherwiſe he ſhall have no inheritance. 1 Inſt. 2 Inſt. 48.

The King may create either man or woman noble for life only: and peerage may be gained for life, by act of law; as if a Duke take a wife, ſhe is a Dutcheſs in law by the intermarrriage; ſo of a Marquiſs, Earl, &c. 1 Inſt. 16. 9 Rep. 97. Alſo the dignity of an Earl may deſcend to a daughter, if there be no ſon, who ſhall be a Counteſs; and if there are many daughters, it is ſaid, the King ſhall diſpoſe of the dignity to which daughter he pleaſes. 1 Inſt. 165. Wood's Inſt. 42. It has been reſolved in the Houſe of Peers, that if a perſon is ſummoned as a Baron to Parliament by writ, and ſitting die, leaving two or more daughters, who all dying, one of them only leaves iſſue a ſon, ſuch iſſue has a right to demand a ſeat in the Houſe of Peers. Skin. 441.

Before the time of King Ed. 3. there were but two titles of nobility, viz. Earls and Barons: the Barons were originally by tenure, afterwards created by writ, and after that by patent; but Earls were always created by letters patent. Seld. 536. And Hen. 6. created Edmond of Hadham, Earl of Richmond, by patent, and granted him precedency before all other Earls. Mary I. likewiſe granted to Henry Ratcliff, Earl of Suſſex, a privilege by patent beyond any other nobleman, viz. that he might at any time be covered in her preſence, like unto the grandees of Spain; and ſome few others of our nobility have had this honour.

The 31 H. 8. c. 10. ſettles the precedency of the lords of Parliament, and great officers, &c. After whom, the Dukes, Marquiſſes, Earls, Viſcounts, and Barons, take place according to their ancienty; but it is declared, that PRECEDENCE IS IN THE KING'S DISPOSITION. Thomas de la Warre was ſummoned to parliament by writ, anno 3 H. 8. and William his ſon, anno 3 Ed. 6. was diſabled by attainder to claim any dignity during his life, but was afterwards called to parliament by Queen Elizabeth, beth, and ſat there as puiſne Lord, and died; then Thomas, the ſon of the ſaid William, petitioned the Queen in parliament to be reſtored to the place of Thomas his grandfather; and all the Judges to whom it was referred, were of opinion that he ſhould, becauſe his father's diſability was not abſolute by attainder, but only perſonal and temporary during his life: and the acceptance of the new dignity by the petitioner ſhall not hurt him, ſo that when the old and new dignity are in one perſon, the old ſhall be preferred. 11 Rep. 1.

A dignity of Earl, &c. is a title by the Common law; and if a patentee be diſturbed of his dignity; the regular courſe is to petition the King, who indorſes it and ſends it into Chancery. Staundf. Prærog. 72. 22 Edw. 3. And where nobility is gained by writ, or patent, without deſcent, it is triable by record; but when it is gained by matter of fact, as by marriage, or where deſcents are pleaded, nobility is triable per pais. 22 Aſſiſ. 24. 3 Salk. 243. A perſon petitioned the Lords in Parliament to be tried by his peers; the Lords diſallowed his peerage, and diſmiſſed the petition: and it was held in this caſe, that the defendant's right ſtood upon his letters patent, which could not be cancelled but by ſcire facias: and that the parliament could not give judgment in a thing which did not come in a judicial way before that court. 2 Salk. 510, 511. 3 Salk. 243. Where peerage is claimed ratione Baronii, as by a Biſhop, he muſt plead that he is unus parium Regni Angliæ; but if the claim is ratione nobilitatis, he need not plead otherwiſe than purſuant to his creation. 4 Inſt. 15. 3 Salk. 243.

There are now no feudal Baronies; but there are Barons by ſucceſſion, and thoſe are the Biſhops, who by virtue of ancient Baronies held of the King, (into which the poſſeſſions of their biſhopricks have been converted) are called by writ to parliament, and have place in the Houſe of Peers as Lords Spiritual: the temporal poſſeſſions of Biſhops are held by their ſervice to attend in parliament when called; and that is in the nature of a Barony; and all the Biſhops, it hath been ſaid, made one of the three eſtates in parliament; but this is denied, becauſe they have ſeparately from the other Lords no negative vote, &c. And tho' the Biſhops are Lords of Parliament, and called by the King's writ, and have a vote there; they ſhall not be tried by the Peers, as they do not ſit in parliament by reaſon of their nobility, but of their Baronies which they hold in right of the church: they are not of the degree of nobility; their blood is not ennobled, nor their Peerage hereditary; ſo that they are to be tried by the country, i. e. by a common jury: and when one of the nobility is to be tried by his Peers in parliament, the Spiritual Lords muſt withdraw, and make their proxies. 1 Inſt. 70, 97, 110. 3 Inſt. 30. 4 Inſt. 1, 2. Some Biſhops have been tried by Peers of the realm; but it hath been when impeached by the Houſe of Commons, as upon ſpecial occaſions many others have been who have not been Peers: and the Biſhops may claim all the privileges of the Lords Temporal; ſaving they cannot be tried by their Peers, becauſe the Biſhops cannot in like caſes paſs upon the trial of any other Peers, they being prohibited by canon to be judges of life and death, &c.

When a Lord is newly created, he is introduced into the Houſe of Peers, by two Lords of the ſame form in their robes, Garter King at Arms going before, and his Lordſhip is to preſent his writ of ſummons, &c. to the Lord Chancellor; which being read, he is conducted to his place: and Lords by deſcent, where nobility comes down from the anceſtor, and is enjoyed by right of blood, are introduced with the ſame ceremony, the preſenting of the writ excepted. Lex Conſtitution. 79.

A nobleman, whether native or foreigner, who has his nobility from a foreign ſtate, altho' the title of dignity be given him, (as the higheſt and loweſt degrees of nobility are univerſally acknowledged) in all our legal proceedings no notice is taken of his nobility, for he is no Peer: and the laws of England prohibit all ſubjects to receive any hereditary title of honour or dignity, from any foreign Prince, without conſent of the Sovereign. Ibid. 80, 81.

Tho' dignities of peerage are granted from the crown; yet they cannot be ſurrendered to the crown, except it be, in order to new and greater honours; nor are they transferrable, unleſs they relate to an office: and notwithſtanding there are inſtances of Earldoms being transferred, and wherein one branch of a family ſat in the Houſe of Peers, by virtue of a grant from the other branch, particularly in the reigns of Hen. 3. and Ed. 2. theſe precedents have been diſallowed; and the Duke of Bedford, who in the reign of King Edw. 4. was degraded for poverty, and want of poſſeſſions to ſupport his title, loſt not his peerage by ſurrender, but by the authority of parliament: and as dignities may not be ſurrendered or transferred without authority of parliament; ſo it hath been holden, that honour and peerage cannot be extinguiſhed but by act of parliament, the King and kingdom having an intereſt in the peerage of every Lord. Lex Conſtit, 85, 86, 87.

An Earldom conſiſts in office, for defence of the kingdom; and of rents and poſſeſſions, &c. and may be intailed as any other office may, and as it concerns land: but the dignity of peerage cannot be transferred by fine, becauſe it is a quality affixed to the blood, and ſo merely perſonal, that a fine cannot touch it. 2 Salk. 509. 3 Salk. 244.

A perſonal honour or dignity may be forfeited, on committing treaſon, &c. for it is implied by a condition in law, that the perſon dignified ſhall be loyal; and the office of an Earl, &c. is ad conſulendum Regem tempore pacis & defendendum tempore belli, therefore he forfeits it when he takes counſel or arms againſt the King. 7 Rep. 33. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 934.

All peers of the realm are looked upon as the King's hereditary counſellors, and may be called together by the King to impart their advice in all matters of importance to the realm, either in time of parliament, or, which hath been their principal uſe, when there is no parliament in being. Co. Lit. 110.

Inſtances of conventions of the peers, to adviſe the King, have been in former times very frequent, tho' now fallen into diſuſe, by reaſon of the more regular meetings of parliament. Many inſtances of this kind of meeting are to be found under our ancient Kings: tho' the former method of convoking them had been ſo long left off, that when Charles I. in 1640, iſſued out writs under the Great Seal to call a great council of all the peers of England to meet and attend his Majeſty at York, previous to the meeting of the long parliament, the Earl of Clarendon mentions it as a new invention, not before heard of; that is, as he explains himſelf, ſo old, that it had not been practiſed in ſome hundreds of years. But, tho' there had not ſo long before been an inſtance, nor has there been any ſince, of aſſembling them in ſo ſolemn a manner, yet, in caſes of emergency, our Princes have at ſeveral times thought proper to call for and conſult as many of the nobility as could eaſily be got together; as was particularly the caſe with King James the Second, after the landing of the Prince of Orange; and with the Prince of Orange himſelf, before he called that convention parliament, which afterwards called him to the throne.

Beſides this general meeting, it is uſually looked upon to be the RIGHT of each particular peer of the realm, to demand an audience of the King, and to lay before him, with decency and reſpect, ſuch matters as he ſhall judge of importance to the public. And therefore, in the reign of Edward II. it was made an article of impeachment in parliament againſt the two Hugh Spencers, (father and ſon) for which they were baniſhed the kingdom, “that they by their evil covin WOULD NOT SUFFER “THE GREAT MEN OF THE REALM, THE KING'S GOOD “COUNSELLORS, TO SPEAK WITH THE KING, OR TO “COME NEAR HIM; but only in the preſence and “hearing of the ſaid Hugh the father and Hugh the ſon, “or one of them, and at their will, and according to “ſuch things as pleaſed them.” 4 Inſt. 53. See Black. Com. 2 V. 227, 8, 9.

As to the privileges belonging to the peerage, they are very great. At Common law, it was lawful for any peer to retain as many chaplains as he would; but by Stat. 21 H. 8. their number is limited, viz. a Duke to have ſix, Marquis or Earl five, Viſcount four, Baron three, &c. In many caſes, the proteſtation of honour ſhall be ſufficient for a peer; as in trial of peers, they proceed upon their honour, not upon oath; and if a peer is defendant in a court of equity, he ſhall put in his anſwer upon his honour; (tho' formerly it was to be on oath:) and in action of debt upon account the plaintiff being a peer, it ſhall ſuffice to examine his attorney, and not himſelf on oath: but where a peer is to anſwer interrogatories, or make an affidavit, or to be examined as a witneſs, he muſt be upon his oath. Bract. lib. 5. c. 9. 9 Rep. 49. 3 Inſt. 29. W. Jones 152. 2 Salk. 512. A ſubpœna ſhall not be awarded againſt a peer out of the Chancery, in a cauſe; but a letter from the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper, in lieu thereof. In any trial where a peer is plaintiff or defendant, there muſt be two or more Knights on the jury. 2 Mod. 182. Tho' it is ſaid, if a Knight is returned on a jury where a nobleman is concerned, it is not material whether he appear and give his verdict or not. 1 Mod. 226. A peer may not be impannelled upon any inqueſt, tho' the cauſe hath relation to two peers; and if a peer be returned on a jury, a ſpecial writ ſhall iſſue for his diſcharge from ſervice. No peer can be aſſeſſed towards the militia, but by an aſſeſſment made by ſix or more peers; and the Houſes of peers ſhall not be ſearched for conventicles, but by warrant under the ſign manual, or in the preſence of the Lord Lieutenant, or one Deputy Lieutenant, and two juſtices of the peace. 13 & 14 Car. 2. and 22 Car. 2.

A peer of the realm being ſent for by the King, in coming and returning may kill a deer or two in a foreſt thro' which he paſſes; being done by the view of the foreſter, or on blowing a horn, if the foreſter be abſent, that he may not ſeem to take the King's veniſon by ſtealth. See Black. Com. 1 V. 168. and 9 H. 3.

The peers have a right to be attended, and conſtantly are, by the judges, and ſuch of the Barons of the Exchequer as are of the degree of the coif, or have been made Serjeants at Law; as likewiſe by the Maſters of the court of Chancery; for their advice in point of law, and for the greater dignity of their proceedings. The Secretaries of State, the Attorney and Solicitor General, and the reſt of the King's learned Council being Serjeants, were alſo uſed to attend the Houſe of Peers, and have to this day their regular writs of ſummons iſſued out at the beginning of every parliament; but, as many of them have of late years been members of the Houſe of Commons, their attendance is fallen into diſuſe.

Every peer, by licence obtained from the King, may make another Lord of Parliament his proxy, to vote for him in his abſence.

Each peer has alſo a right by leave of the Houſe, when a vote paſſes contrary to his ſentiments, to enter his diſſent on the Journals of the Houſe, with the reaſons for ſuch diſſent; which is uſually ſtiled his proteſt.

All bills likewiſe, that may in their conſequences any way affect the rights of the peerage, are by the cuſtom of parliament to have their firſt riſe and beginning in the Houſe of Peers, and to ſuffer no changes or amendments in the Houſe of Commons. See Black. Com. 1 V. 168.

If any perſon ſhall divulge falſe tales of any of the Lords of Parliament by which diſſenſion may happen, or any ſlander ariſe, the offender ſhall be impriſoned, &c. Stat. Weſtm. 1. c. 34.

A nobleman menacing another perſon, whereby ſuch other perſon fears his life is in danger, no writ of ſupplicavit ſhall iſſue, but a ſubpœna; and when the Lord appears, inſtead of ſurety, he ſhall only promiſe to keep the peace. 35 H. 6. No capias or outlawry can be ſued out againſt peers of the realm, in civil caſes; and no eſſoign lies againſt them. 9 Rep. 49.

The perſon of a peer, as well out, as in parliament-time, is privileged from all arreſts; unleſs for treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace, &c. Peers are not to be arreſted upon meſne proceſs, or on execution for debt or treſpaſs, becauſe they are preſumed not only to attend the King and the public affairs, but the law doth intend that they have ſufficient lands wherein they may be diſtrained: but they may be arreſted or apprehended in criminal caſes. 6 Rep. 52, 53. And tho' a peer may not be arreſted by his body; yet his eſtate may be ſequeſtred for debt, &c. upon a proſecution after a diſſolution and prorogation of parliament, or adjournment for above the ſpace of fourteen days, when he refuſes to appear and anſwer. 12 W. 3. See the 11 Geo. 2. c. 24. And of late years, on non-appearance, &c. the coaches and horſes of ſeveral peers of this kingdom, have out of the time of privilege been diſtrained, and cattle ſeized upon their lands, to compel them to appear; but the privilege of a peer is ſo great in reſpect of his perſon, that the King may not reſtrain him of his liberty, without order of the Houſe of Lords, except it be in caſes of treaſon, &c. A memorable caſe wherein was that of the Earl of Arundel impriſoned by the King in the reign of K. Charles I.

Every Lord of Parliament is allowed his clergy in all caſes, where others are excluded by the Stat. 1 Ed. 6. c. 12. except wilful murder; and cannot be denied clergy for any other felony wherein it was grantable at Common law, if it be not ouſted by ſome ſtatute made ſince the firſt of King Ed. 6. S. P. C. 130. Lord Morley, who was tried by his peers for murder, and found guilty of manſlaughter, was diſcharged without clergy. Sid. 277. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1181.

Peers of the realm are to be tried by their peers in parliament. Magna Charta, c. 29. and 15 Ed. 3. c. 2. But noblemen, who are not Lords of parliament, ſhall not be permitted to have this trial. 2 Inſt. 50. A peer ſhall be tried by his peers on indictment for treaſon, murder or felony, tho' in appeal of felony, he ſhall be tried by freeholders: and indictments of peers for treaſon or felony, are to be found by freeholders of the county, and then they plead before the Lord High Steward, &c. 1 Inſt. 156. 3 Inſt. 28.

Peers are created for two reaſons;

1. Ad conſulendum.
2. Ad defendendum regem.

For which reaſons the law gives them certain great and high privileges, ſuch as freedom from arreſts, &c. even when no parliament is ſitting; becauſe the law intends, that they are always aſſiſting the King with their counſel for the commonwealth; or keeping the realm in ſafety by their prowеſs and valour. Black. Com. 1 V. 227.

A bill of Middleſex was iſſued out of B. R. by an attorney of the court, againſt the Counteſs of H. which was diſcharged by ſuperſedeas without pleading; becauſe it appeared by the record, that ſhe was a peereſs, and the attorney was committed for ſuing out the proceſs. Vent. 298.

Widows of peers are to have the privilege of peers not to be arreſted; but as to privilege of parliament, it was determined both ways in 1676. See 2 Chan. Caſes 224.

In ejectment a ſpecial verdict was found on a trial at bar, and judgment for defendant, and coſts taxed; and after affidavit of the demand of coſts, a motion was made for an attachment againſt the Dutcheſs, (the Duke being dead) ſhe being oue of the leſſors, for non-payment of coſts; and it was alledged, that if the court did not grant it, the defendant would be remedileſs; for tho' in other caſes a diſtringas iſſues againſt peers, yet in this caſe no proceſs can go but an attachment. The court refuſed to grant an attachment againſt the perſon of the Dutcheſs, but ordered her to ſhew cauſe why an attachment, as to her goods and chattels, ſhould not be iſſued; which rule was afterwards made abſolute. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 7, 8.

A peer, or lord of parliament, cannot be an approver; for it is againſt Magna Charta for him to pray a coroner. 3 Inſt. 129. cap. 56. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 205. cap. 24. ſect. 3.

If a bill in Chancery be exhibited againſt a peer, the courſe is firſt for the Lord Keeper to write a letter to him; and if he doth not anſwer, then a ſubpœna; then an order to ſhew cauſe why a ſequeſtration ſhould not go; and if he ſtill ſtands out, then a ſequeſtration. Becauſe there can be no proceſs of contempt againſt his perſon. 2 Vent. 342.

It is ſaid, if a truſtee be made defendant in Chancery he ſhall not have privilege, though he be a member of parliament. Quære. Curſ. Canc. 499. cap. 18.

Diſtringas is the firſt proceſs againſt a peer on an information for an intruſion on the King's lands, or for a converſion of the King's goods. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 284. cap. 27. ſect. 12. cites Co. Ent. 387.

Now by a new act, ſaid to be planned and procured by Lord Manſfield, viz. 10 Geo. 3. c. 50. Suits may be proſecuted againſt peers, and members of the Houſe of Commons and their ſervants, &c. DURING TIME OF PRIVILEGE, but the perſons of members of the Houſe of Commons not to be arreſted or impriſoned. Iſſues returned on writs of diſtringas may be ſold, and the coſts of applying, &c. for and relative to thoſe writs, paid to plaintiff. Vide the act.

2. In what caſes peers are to be ſworn; and for what degraded.

In the pleas of parliament, 18 Ed. 1. between the Earl of Glouceſter and Earl of Hereford, on long debate whether John de Haſting, a baron, ought to be ſworn, becauſe he was a peer of the realm, it was reſolved that he ought to lay his hand on the book. The like was reſolved, 10 Car. in B. R. by the court where the Lord Dorſet's teſtimony was requiſite. See D. 314. b. marg. pl. 98.

A bill was againſt a peereſs to diſcover deeds, ſhe anſwers on her honour and confeſſes deeds. She ſhall produce them only upon her honour, and not on oath. Ch. Prec. 92.

Where a peer is to anſwer a bill, his anſwer put in on his honour is ſufficient; but where a peer is to anſwer interrogatories, to make an affidavit, or be examined as a witneſs, he muſt be on his oath; per Harcourt Lord Keeper. 2 Salk. 513.

George Nevil, Duke of Bedford was degraded by act of parliament, 16 June 17 Ed. 4. reciting that as the ſaid George hath not, nor may have any livelihood to ſupport his name, eſtate and dignity, or any name of eſtate; and often when a lord is called to high eſtate, and hath not convenient livelihood to ſupport the dignity, it induceth great poverty, and often cauſeth great extortion, embracery and maintenance. Wherefore the King by advice of his Lords and commons ordaineth, eſtabliſheth and enacteth, That from henceforth the ſame creation and making of the ſaid Duke, and all the names of dignity given to the ſaid George, or to John Nevil his father, be from henceforth void and of none effect, &c.

In which act theſe things are to be obſerved: Firſt, That altho' the Duke had not any poſſeſſions to ſupport his dignity; yet his dignity cannot be taken from him without an act of parliament. Secondly, The inconveniencies appear, where a great ſtate and dignity is, and no livelihood to maintain it. Thirdly, It is a good reaſon to take away ſuch dignity by act of parliament, therefore the ſtatute de abſentees made at a parliament holden at Dublin in Ireland, the 10th of May 28 H. 8. by reaſon of the long abſence of George Earl of Shrewſbury out of that realm, ſhall be expounded, according to the general words of the writ, to take away ſuch inconvenience. 12 Rep. 106, 107. Earl of Shrewſbury's caſe.

3. Of the trial of peers, and the order and proceſs of trial.

All the barons of parliament ſhall be tried for treaſon, felony, miſpriſion, or as acceſſary, at the ſuit of the King by their peers. So by the Common law, which is now affirmed by the ſtat. 20 H. 6. cap. 9. All dutcheſſes, counteſſes and baroneſſes, who are noble by deſcent, creation or marriage. 2 Inſt. 50. And marchioneſſes and viſcounteſſes, &c. tho' not named by the ſtat. 20 H. 6. 9. 2 Inſt. 50. So the queen conſort, or dowager. 2 Inſt. 50. And a peer cannot waive the trial by his peers. Kel. 56. in marg. 621. 1 Tr. 265. 2 Ruſh. 94.

But nobles who are not barons of parliament, ſhall not be tried by the peers of parliament. By ſtat. 7 W. 3. cap. 3. ſ. 11. it is enacted, That upon the trial of any peers or peereſſes, all the peers who have a right to ſit and vote in parliament, ſhall be duly ſummoned twenty days at leaſt before the trial, and every peer ſo ſummoned and appearing ſhall vote in the trial, firſt taking the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy required by 1 *W. &. Not to extend to impeachments or other proceedings in parliament. Nor to the treaſons of counterfeiting the coin, the Great ſeal, Privy ſeal, Sign manual or Privy ſignet.

By the 6 Ann. cap. 23. ſ. 12. Peers ſhall be indicted in Scotland as in England.

If a peer be impleaded by a commoner, yet ſuch cauſe ſhall not be tried by peers, but by a jury of the country; for tho' the peers are the proper pares to a lord of parliament in capital matters, where the life and nobility of a peer is concerned; yet in matter of property the trial of fact is not by them, but by the inhabitants of thoſe counties where the facts ariſe, ſince ſuch peers living thro' the whole kingdom could not be generally cognizant of facts ariſing in ſeveral counties, as the inhabitants themſelves where they are done; but this want of having noblemen for their jury was compenſated as much as poſſible, by returning perſons of the beſt quality; therefore a knight is neceſſary to be ſummoned in any cauſe where a peer is party. G. Hiſt. C. B. 78, 79.

It has been adjudged, that if a peer on arraignment before the lords, refuſe to put himſelf on his peers, he ſhall be dealt with as one who ſtands mute; for it is as much the law of the land, that a peer be tried by his peers, as a commoner by commoners; yet if one who has a title to peerage, be indicted and arraigned as a commoner, and plead Not guilty, and put himſelf upon his country, it hath been adjudged, that he cannot afterwards ſuggeſt that he is a peer, and pray trial by his peers. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 425.

The order and proceſs of this trial.

On the trials of peers in criminal matters, all the peers who have a right to ſit and vote in parliament are to be duly ſummoned twenty days at leaſt before the trial, to appear and vote at the ſame; every ſuch peer firſt taking the oaths required by the 1 W. & M. ſſ. 1. c. 8. The peer being indicted for the treaſon or felony, before commiſſioners of oyer and terminer, or in the King's Bench, if the treaſon, &c. be committed in the county of Mid- dleſex; then the King by commiſſion under the Great Seal, conſtitutes ſome peer (generally the Lord Chancellor) Lord High Steward, who is judge in theſe caſes; and the commiſſion commands the peers of the realm to be attendant on him, alſo the Lieutenant of the Tower, with the priſoner, &c. A certiorari is awarded out of Chancery, to remove the indictment before the Lord High Steward: and another writ iſſues for bringing the priſoner; and the Lord High Steward makes his precepts for that purpoſe, aſſigning a day and place, as in Weſtminſter-Hall incloſed with ſcaffolds, &c. and for ſummoning the peers, which are to be twelve and above at leaſt preſent: At the day, the Lord High Steward takes place under a cloth of ſtate; his commiſſion is read by the clerk of the crown, and he has a white rod delivered him by the Uſher, which being returned proclamation is made, and command given for certifying of indictments, &c. and the Lieutenant of the Tower to return his writ, and bring the priſoner to the bar; after this, the ſerjeant at arms returns his precept with the names of the peers ſummoned, and they are called over, and anſwering to their names are recorded, when they take their places: the ceremony thus adjuſted, the High Steward declares to the priſoner at the bar, the cauſe of their aſſembly, aſſures him of juſtice, and encourages him to anſwer without fear; then the clerk of the crown reads the indictment, and arraigns the priſoner, and the High Steward gives his charge to the peers; this being over, the King's counſel produce their evidence for the King; and if the priſoner hath ANY MATTER OF LAW to plead, he SHALL be aſſigned counſel; but if he pleads Not guilty, and has nothing farther, he ſhall be allowed no counſel; for the court are inſtead of it; after evidence given for the King, and the priſoner's anſwer heard, the priſoner is withdrawn from the bar, and the Lords who are triers go to ſome place to conſider of their evidence: but the Lords can admit no evidence, but in the hearing of the priſoner; they cannot have conference with the judges, or demand it, (who attend on the Lord High Steward, and are not to deliver their opinions before hand) but in the priſoner's hearing; nor can they ſend for the opinion of the judges, or demand it, but in open court: and the Lord Steward cannot collect the evidence, or confer with the Lords, but in the preſence of the priſoner; who is at firſt to require juſtice of the Lords, and that no queſtion or conference be had, but in his preſence: Nothing is done in the abſence of the priſoner, until the Lords come to agree on their verdict; and then they are to be together as juries until they are agreed, when they come again into court and take their places; and the Lord High Steward, publicly in open court, demands of the Lords, beginning with the puiſne Lord, whether the priſoner, calling him by his name, be guilty of the treaſon, &c. whereof he is arraigned, who all give in their verdict, and he being found guilty by a majority of votes more than twelve, is brought to the bar again, and the Lord Steward acquainting the priſoner with the verdict of his peers, paſſes ſentence and judgment accordingly: After which, an O Yes is made for diſſolving the commiſſion, and the white rod is broken by the Lord High Steward; whereupon this grand aſſembly breaks up, which is eſteemed the moſt ſolemn and auguſt court of juſtice upon earth. 2 Hawk. P. C. 421, 422, &c. See Black. Com. 4 V. 256-7, 342.

The Lord High Steward gives no vote himſelf on a trial by commiſſion; but only on a trial by the Houſe of Peers, while the parliament is ſitting: Where a Peer is tried by the Houſe of Lords in full parliament, the houſe may be adjourned as often as there is occaſion, and the evidence taken by parcels; and it hath been adjudged, that where the trial is by commiſſion, the Lord Steward, after a verdict given, may take time to adviſe upon it, and his office continues till he gives judgment. But the triers may not ſeparate upon a trial by commiſſion, after evidence given for the King; and it hath been reſolved, that the peers in ſuch caſe muſt continue together, till they agree, to give a verdict. State Trials, Vol. 2. 702. Vol. 3. 657. 2 Hawk. 425.

It is ſaid a writ of error lies in the King's Bench of an attainder of a peer before the Lord High Steward. 2 Hawk. P. C. 462. If a peer be attainted of treaſon or felony, he may be brought before the court of B. R. and demanded, what he has to ſay why execution ſhould not be awarded againſt him? And if he plead any matter to ſuch demand, his plea ſhall be heard, and execution ordered by the court, upon its being adjudged againſt him. 1 H. 7. 22. pl. 15. Bro. Coro. 129. Fitz. Coro. 49. Likewiſe the court of King's Bench may allow a pardon pleaded by a peer to an indictment in that court. But that court cannot receive his plea of Not guilty, &c. but only the Lord Steward on arraignment before the Lords. 2 Inſt. 49.

The ſentence againſt a peer for treaſon, is the ſame as againſt a common ſubject; tho' the King forgives all but beheading, which is a part of the judgment: for other capital crimes, beheading is alſo the general puniſhment of a peer; but 33 H. 8. the Lord Dacres was attainted of murder, and had judgment to be hanged; and anno 3 & 4 P. & M. the Lord Stourton being attainted of murder, had judgment againſt him to be hanged, which ſentences were executed.

If execution be not done; the Lord Steward may by precept command it to be done according to the judgment. 3 Inſt. 31.

Trial by peers is very ancient: In the reign of Will. 1. the Earl of Hereford for conſpiring to receive the Danes into England, and depoſe the conqueror, was tried by his peers, and found guilty of treaſon, per judicium parium ſuorum. 2 Inſt. 50. The Duke of Suffolk, 28 H. 6. being accuſed of high treaſon by the Commons, put himſelf upon the King's grace, and not upon his peers, and the King alone adjudged him to baniſhment; but he ſent for the Lord Chancellor, and the Lords who were in town, to his palace at Weſtminſter, and alſo the Duke, and commanded him to quit the kingdom in their preſence: The Lords nevertheleſs entered a proteſt to ſave the privilege of their peerage; and this was deemed no legal baniſhment, for the King's judging in that manner was no judgment; he was extrajudicially bid to abſent himſelf out of the realm, and in doing it he was taken on the ſea and ſlain. The caſe of the Lord Cromwell, in the reign of K. Hen. 8. was very extraordinary; this Lord was attainted in parliament, and condemned and executed for high treaſon, without being allowed to make any defence. It need only be obſerved that this attainder was by a Parliament under the power and influence of Henry the Eighth, a ſcandal and diſgrace to the hiſtory of our country. See Parliament Hiſt. 3 V. 163. And ſeveral great perſons during this reign were brought to trial before Lords Commiſſioners. Anno 32 Car. 2. the Lord Stafford was tried for treaſon; and after evidence given for the King, and the priſoner had made his objections to the King's evidence, he inſiſted upon ſeveral points of law, viz. That no overt act was alledged in his impeachment; that they were not competent witneſſes who ſwore againſt him, but that they ſwore for money; and whether a man could be condemned for treaſon by one witneſs, there not being two witneſſes to any one point, &c. But the points inſiſted upon being over-ruled, he was found Guilty by a majority of twenty-four votes; fifty five againſt, thirty one for him. St. Tr. 3 V. 211. See his Lordſhip's ſpeech, Id. 215. We have only to obſerve that in 1685 the attainder was reverſed by an act of Parliament which expreſsly alledged that he was innocent of the treaſon laid to his charge, and that the teſtimony whereon he was found guilty was falſe. He was executed on Tower Hill.

Now by Stat. 7 W. 3. c. 3. No perſon ſhall be indicted, tried, or attainted of High Treaſon, but on the oath of two witneſſes; nor, ſhall one witneſs to one treaſon and another witneſs to another treaſon, be deemed two witneſſes. But this ſtatute is not to extend to any impeachment in parliament, nor to counterfeiting the coin, great or privy ſeal, &c. vide the Stat. and titles Baron, Deſcent of Dignities, Lords, &c.

Peereſs. As we have noblemen, ſo we have noble women, and theſe may be by Creation, Deſcent, or Marriage.

And firſt, Hen. 8. made Anne Bullen, Marchioneſs of Pembroke: James 1. created Lady Compton, wife to Sir

Tho. Compton, Counteſs of Buckingham in the liſe-time of her huſband, without any addition of honour to him; and alſo made Lady Finch Viſcounteſs of Maidſtone, and afterwards Counteſs of Winchelſea, to her and the heirs of her body. Geo. 1. made Lady Sculingburgh, Ducheſs of Kendal. A woman noble by creation or deſcent marrying one under the degree of nobility, ſtill remaineth noble; but if ſhe be noble by marriage only, ſhe loſeth her dignity if ſhe afterwards marry a Commoner; though not if the ſecond huſband is noble, and inferior in dignity to the firſt. And by the courteſy of England, women noble by marriage always retain their nobility. 1 Inſt. 16, 50. 6 Rep. 53. But ſee poſt. If any Engliſh woman takes to huſband a French nobleman, ſhe ſhall not bear the title of dignity; and if a German woman, &c. marry a nobleman of England, unleſs ſhe be made denizen, ſhe cannot claim the title of her huſband, no more than her dower, &c. Lex Conſtitution 80.

If a duke, marquis, earl, &c. marries, the wife ſhall be noble for her life And if a woman marries a duke, who dies, and afterwards ſhe marries a baron; yet ſhe continues a ducheſs. Co. Lit. 16. b. 2 Inſt. 50. If a duke, earl, &c. who has the dignity in fee, has not a ſon, but ſeveral daughters; the King may confer the dignity on him who marries any of the daughters, as he pleaſes. 12 Co. 111. But if a woman, noble by marriage, afterwards takes a huſband under the degree of nobility, ſhe ſhall loſe her nobility. Co. Lit. 16. b. 2 Inſt. 50. Dyer 79. b. Ow. 81. Otherwiſe if a woman, noble by deſcent, takes a huſband not noble. Co. Lit. 16 b. 2 Inſt. 50. per Brook, Ow. 82. Or if a Queen Dowager takes a huſband, noble or not noble; for ſhe by her ſubſequent marriage ſhall not loſe her dignity. 2 Inſt. 50. Yet if a woman, noble by deſcent, marries to an inferior degree of nobility, as, if the daughter of a duke marries a baron, ſhe ſhall have precedence only as a baroneſs. Ow. 82.

A counteſs or baroneſs may not be arreſted for debt or treſpaſs; for though in reſpect of their ſex, they cannot ſit in parliament, yet they are peers of the realm, and ſhall be tried by their peers, &c. But a capias being awarded againſt the Counteſs of Rutland, it was held that ſhe might be taken by the ſheriff; becauſe he ought not to diſpute the authority of the court from whence the writ iſſued, but muſt execute it, for he is bound by oath ſo to do; and although by the writ itſelf it appeared, that the party was a counteſs, againſt whom a capias would not generally lie, for that in ſome caſes it may lie, as for a contempt, &c. therefore the ſheriff ought not to examine the judicial acts of the court. 6 Rep. 52.

By 20 H. 6. cap. 9. a ducheſs, counteſs, or baroneſs, married or ſole, ſhall be put to anſwer, and judged upon indictments of treaſon and felony, before ſuch judges and peers as the peers of the realm ſhall be: And it hath been agreed, that a Queen Conſort, and Queen Dowager, whether ſhe continue ſole after the King's death, or take a ſecond huſband, and he be a peer or commoner; and alſo all peereſſes by birth, whether ſole or married to peers or commoners; and all marchioneſſes and viſcounteſſes are intitled to a trial by the peers, though not expreſly mentioned in the act. 2 Inſt. 50. Cromp. Jariſd. 33. 2 Hawk. P. C. 423. See Black. Com. 1 V. 402.

A ducheſs, marchioneſs, counteſs or baroneſs, may retain two chaplains, by 21 Hen. 8. cap. 13. But it is ſaid that a baroneſs, &c. may not retain chaplains during coverture. Wood's Inſt. 44. 4 Rep. 89. Sed qu. if they are peereſſes by deſcent, or by creation, and not by marriage merely? Penal Laws, Are of three kinds, viz. Pœna pecuniaria, pœna corporalis, and pœna exilii. Cro. Jac. 415. And penal ſtatutes are made on various occaſions, to puniſh and deter offenders; and they ought to be conſtrued ſtrictly, and not extended by equity; but the words may be interpreted beneficially, according to the intent of the legiſlators. 1 Inſt. 54, 268. Where a thing is prohibited by ſtatute under a penalty, if the penalty, or part of it be not given to him who will ſue for the ſame; it goes and belongs to the King. Raſt. Entr. 433. 2 Hawk. 265. But the King cannot grant to any perſon, any penalty or forfeiture, &c, due by any ſtatute, before judgment thereupon had. 21 Jac. 1. c. 3. Though after plea pleaded, juſtices of aſſiſe, &c. having power to hear and determine offences done againſt any penal ſtatute, may compound the penalties with the defendant, by virtue of the King's warrant or Privy Seal.

The courts at Weſtminſter (particularly the court of King's Bench) frequently give leave on motion, and an affidavit of circumſtances, &c. to compound penal actions. Compounding without ſuch leave, is puniſhable by indictment.

There are penalties ordained by ſeveral penal acts of parliament to be recovered in any court of record; but this is to be underſtood only of the courts at Weſtminſter, and not of the courts of record of inferior corporations. Jenk. Cent. 228. The ſpiritual court may hold plea of a thing forbidden by ſtatute upon a penalty; but they may not proceed on the penalty. 2 Lev. 222. See Information, and Black. Com. 1 V. 88. 4 V. 422.

Penalty of Bonds, &c. If a man brings an action of debt upon a bond for performance of covenants, the plaintiff ſhall recover the whole penalty of his bond; becauſe in debt, the judgment muſt be according to the demand, and the demand is to be for the whole penalty; but on defendant's bringing a bill in equity, and praying an injunction to the ſuit at Common law, the court of equity uſually grants it till the hearing of the cauſe; and upon hearing cauſe, they will continue the injunction farther, and order a trial at law on a quantum damnificatus, for the jury to find what damage the plaintiff received by reaſon of the breach of covenant, &c. And they farther order, that after ſuch verdict given at Common law, both parties ſhall reſort back for the decree of that court: ſo that here muſt be ſeveral actions and ſuits at law and equity; whereas a bare action of covenant, without ſuing for the penalty of the bond, will make an end of the buſineſs in leſs time, and for a much leſs charge. 2 Lil. Abr. 288, 289.

By virtue of the Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. ſ. 8. In actions on bonds for performance of covenants, the plaintiff may aſſign as many breaches as he pleaſes, and jury may aſſeſs damages. Defendant paying the damages, execution may be ſtayed, but the judgment to remain, to anſwer any further breach, and plaintiff may have Sci Fac. againſt the defendant.

A perſon being intitled to the penalty by law, a court of equity will not relieve againſt it, without paying principal, intereſt and coſts; and where a penalty is recovered at law and paid, Chancery may decree the party to refund all, except the principal and intereſt, &c. Chan. Rep. 437. This court will not generally carry the debt, beyond the penalty of a bond: Yet where a plaintiff came to be relieved againſt ſuch penalty, though it was decreed, it was on the payment of the principal money, intereſt, and coſts; and notwithſtanding they exceeded the penalty, this was affirmed. 1 Vern. 350. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 92. See 16 Vin. Abr. tit. Penalty, and Black. Com. 3 V. 435.

Penance, Is an eccleſiaſtical puniſhment, which affects the body of the penitent; by which he is obliged to give a public ſatisfaction to the church, for the ſcandal he hath given by his evil example. So in the primitive times, they were to give teſtimonies of their reformation, before they were re-admitted to partake of the myſteries of the church. In the caſe of inceſt, or incontinency, the ſinner is uſually injoined to do a public penance in the cathedral or pariſh church, or public market, bare legged and bare headed in a white ſheet, and to make an open confeſſion of his crime in a preſcribed form of words; which is augmented or moderated according to the quality of the fault, and the diſcretion of the judge.

So in ſmaller faults, a public ſatisfaction or penance, as the judge ſhall decree, is to be made before the miniſter, churchwardens, or ſome of the pariſhioners, reſpect being had to the quality of the offence, as in the caſe of defamation. or laying violent hands on a miniſter, or the like. God. Append. 18. Wood's Inſt. 507. Penance may be changed into a ſum of money, to be applied to pious uſes called commuting. 3 Inſt. 150. 4 Inſt 336. See Prohibition, and Black. Perſons having penſions from the crown are declared incapable of being elected members of parliament, &c. by ſtatute 1 Geo. 1. c. 56. See Parliament.

Penſion of Churches, Are certain ſums of money paid to clergymen in lieu of tithes. And ſome churches have ſettled on them annuities, penſions, &c. payable by other churches which penſions are due by virtue of ſome decree made by an eccleſiaſtical judge on a controverſy for tithes, by which the tithes have been decreed to be enjoyed by one, and a penſion inſtead thereof to be paid to another; or they have ariſen by virtue of a deed made by conſent of the parſon, patron and ordinary; and if ſuch penſion hath been uſually paid for twenty years, then it may be claimed by preſcription, and be recovered in the ſpiritual court, or a parſon may proſecute his ſuit for a penſion by preſcription, either in that court or at Common law, by writ of annuity; but if he takes his remedy at law, he ſhall never afterwards ſue in the ſpiritual court: If the preſcription be denied, that muſt be tried by the Common law. F. N. B. 51. Hardr. 230. Ventr. 120. A ſpiritual perſon may ſue in the ſpiritual court, for a penſion originally granted and confirmed by the ordinary; but where it is granted by a temporal perſon to a clerk, he cannot; as if one grant an annuity to a parſon, he muſt ſue for it in the temporal courts. Cro. Eliz. 675. If a parſon or vicar have a penſion out of another church, and it is not paid, they may bring a writ of annuity; becauſe a penſion iſſuing out of a rectory is the ſame thing as a rent; for it may be demanded in a writ of entry, and a common recovery may be ſuffered of it. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1243.

Upon a bill in the Exchequer for a penſion, iſſuing out of a vicarage, it has been held, that though there is no glebe nor tithes, but only offerings, &c. yet the vicar is chargeable; and a ſuit may be brought in this court as well as at Common law, &c. for a penſion by preſcription, Hardr. 230. A penſion out of an appropriation by preſcription is ſuable in the ſpiritual court; and if the duty is traverſed, it may be tried there. 1 Salk. 58. A libel was had in the ſpiritual court for a penſion, to which the plaintiff made a title by preſcription: and a prohibition was prayed, for that the court had no cogniſance of preſcriptions; but adjudged, that they having cogniſance of the principal, it ſhall draw the acceſſary. 1 Vent. 3. The curate of a chapel of eaſe libelled againſt the vicar of the pariſh for the arrears of a penſion, which he claimed by preſcription; though a prohibition was granted, becauſe the curate is removeable at the will of the parſon, therefore cannot preſcribe; he muſt bring a quantum meruit. 2 Salk. 506. The ſtatute 13 Ed. 1. ſt. 4. appoints a remedy for penſions in the eccleſiaſtical court. And the 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 19. gives damages to the value and coſts, &c. See Eccleſiaſtical Courts, and Black. Com. 1 V. 281. 4 V. 40.

Penſions of the Inns of Courts, Are annual payments of each member to the houſes. And alſo that which in the two Temples is called a parliament, and in Lincoln's Inn a council, in Gray's Inn is termed a penſion, being uſually an aſſembly of the members to conſult of the affairs of the ſociety.

Penſioner, from penſion, one who is ſupported by an allowance at the will of another; a dependant. Johnſon cites Collier.

A ſlave of ſtate hired by a ſtipend to obey his maſter. Johnſon cites Pope.

Penſioners, (Penſionarii) Are a band of gentlemen ſo called, who attend as a guard on the King's perſon: They were inſtituted anno 1539, and have an allowance of fifty pounds a year, to maintain themſelves and two horſes for the King's ſervice. See Stow's Annals 973.

Penſion-writ. When a penſion writ is once iſſued, none ſued thereby in any inns of court, ſhall be diſcharged or permitted to come into commons, till all duties be paid. Order in Gray's Inn, wherein it ſeems to be a peremptory order againſt ſuch of the ſociety as are in arrear for penſions and other duties. Cowell.

Pentecoſtals, (Pentecoſtalia) Were certain pious oblations made at the feaſt of Pentecoſt, by pariſhioners to their prieſt, and ſometimes by inferior churches or pariſhes, to the principal mother church. Which oblations were alſo called Whitſon farthings, and were divided into four parts, one to the pariſh-prieſt, a ſecond to the poor, a third for repair of the church, and a fourth to the biſhop. Stephens of Procurations and Pentecoſtals. See Kennet's Gloſſary in Pentecoſtalia.

Peny, (Saxon Penig) Was our ancient current ſilver. 2 Inſt. 575. The Saxons had no other ſort of ſilver coin. It was equal in weight to our three-pence: Five made one ſhilling Saxon, and thirty made a mark, which they called mancuſe, and weighed as much as three of our half-crowns. The Engliſh penny called ſterling, is round, without clipping, and weighs 32 grana frumenti in medio ſpicæ; twenty pence make an ounce, and twelve ounces make a pound. Stat. Ed. 1. It was made with a croſs in the middle, and broke into half-pence and farthings. Cowell. Vide Mat. Paris 1279. And ſee Denarius.

Perambulation, (Perambulatio) Signifies a travelling through, or over: As perambulation of the foreſt is the ſurveying or walking about the foreſt, and the utmoſt limits of it; by juſtices, or other officers thereto aſſigned, to ſet down and preſerve the metes and bounds thereof. 17 Car. c. 16. 20 Car. 2. c. 3. 4 Inſt. 30.

Perambulation of pariſhes is to be made by the miniſter, church-wardens and pariſhioners, by going round the ſame once a year, in or about Aſcenſion week: And the pariſhioners may well juſtify going over any man's land in their perambulation, according to uſage; and it is ſaid may abate all nuſances in their way. Cro. Eliz. 441.

There is alſo a perambulation of manors; and a writ perambulatione facienda, which lies where any incroachments have been made by a neighbouring lord, &c. then, by the aſſent of the lords, the ſheriff ſhall take with him the parties and neighbours, and make a perambulation, and ſettle the bounds: Alſo a commiſſion may be granted to other perſons to make perambulation, and to certify the ſame in the Chancery, or the Common Pleas, &c. And this commiſſion is iſſued to make perambulation of towns, counties, &c. New Nat. Br. 206.

If tenant for life of a lordſhip, and one who is tenant in fee-ſimple of another lordſhip adjoining, ſue forth this writ or commiſſion, and by virtue thereof a perambulation is made, the ſame ſhall not bind him in reverſion: Nor ſhall the perambulation made with the aſſent of tenant in tail, bind his heir. Ibid. And it is ſaid this aſſent of the parties to the perambulation ought to be acknowledged and made perſonally in Chancery, or by dedimus poteſtatem; and being certified, the writ or commiſſion iſſues, &c. The writ begins thus: The King to the ſheriff, &c. We command you, that taking with you twelve diſcreet lawful men of your county, in your proper perſon you go to the land of A. B. of, &c. And the land of C. D. of, &c. And upon their oaths you cauſe to be made preambulation betwixt the lands of the ſaid A. in, &c. and of the ſaid C. in, &c. So that it be made by certain metes, or bounds and diviſions, &c. And make known to our juſtices at Weſtminſter, &c.

If perambulation be refuſed to be made by a lord, the other lord who is grieved thereby ſhall have a writ againſt him, called de Rationabilibus Diviſis. See F. N. B. 133. Reg. Orig. 157. and Rationabilibus Diviſis.

Queſtions as to boundaries, limits, &c. are now in general determined, by actions of treſpaſs, ejectment, &c.

Perch, Is a rod or pole of ſixteen feet and a half in length, whereof forty in length and four in breadth, make an acre of ground. Cromp. Juriſd. 222. But by the cuſtoms of ſeveral counties, there is a difference in this meaſure: In Staffordſhire it is twenty-four feet; and in the foreſt of Sherwood twenty five feet, the foot there being eighteen inches long: And in Herefordſhire, a perch of ditching is twenty one feet; the perch of walling ſixteen feet and a half; and a pole of denſhiered ground is twelve feet, *&c. Per my et per tout. Jointennants are ſaid to be ſeiſed per my et per tout, by the half or moiety, and by all that is, they each of them have the entire poſſeſſion, as well of every parcel as of the whole. They have not, one of them a ſeiſin of one half or moiety, and the other of the other moiety; neither can one be excluſively ſeiſed of one acre, and his companion of another; but each has an undivided moiety of the whole, and not the whole of an undivided moiety. *Black. Per quod, Are words made uſe of by a plaintiff in his declaration in the avering of particular damage to have happened, without which his action would not have been maintainable. As in ſlander, to ſay that ſuch a clergyman is a baſtard, he cannot for this bring any action againſt me, unleſs he can ſhew ſome ſpecial loſs by it: in which caſe he may bring his action againſt me, for ſaying he was a baſtard per quod he loſt the preſentation to ſuch a living. 4 Rep. 17. 1 Lev. 248. and ſee *Black. Peremptory, (Peremptorius, from the verb. perimere, to cut off,) Joined with a ſubſtantive, as action or exception, ſignifies a final and determinate act, without hope of renewing or altering. So Fitzherbert calleth a peremptory action. Nat. Brev. 35, 38, 104, 108. and nonſuit peremptory, Idem, 5. 11. A peremptory exception. Bracton, lib. 4. cap. 20. *Smith de Rep. If defendant in an action, tender an iſſue in abatement, and the plaintiff demurs, if on arguing the demurrer the iſſue is over-ruled as not good; the court will give defendant a day over to anſwer peremptorily, viz. to plead to the merits of the cauſe; the former plea which was overuled, being only in abatement of the writ: But it is otherwiſe where ſuch an iſſue and demurrer is in bar of the action; for there the merits of the cauſe are put on it. Trin. 24 Car. 1. B. R. 2 Lill. Abr. 190. A peremptory day is when buſineſs by rule of court is to be ſpoke to at a preciſe day; but if it cannot be ſpoken to then, the court at the prayer of the party concerned. will give a farther day without prejudice to him; and this is called the putting off a peremptory, and is moved for by counſel at the riſing of the court, when it is granted of courſe. 2 Lill. Ibid.

Peremptory Challenge. In criminal caſes, or at leaſt in capital ones, there is, in favorem vitæ, allowed to the priſoner an arbitrary and capricious ſpecies of challenge to a certain number of jurors, without ſhewing any cauſe; which is called a Peremptory Challenge: A proviſion full of that tenderneſs and humanity to priſoners, for which the laws of England are juſtly famous. See Black. Com. 4 V. 346, &c. 389.

Peremptory Mandamus. If the inferior judge or other perſon to whom a writ of mandamus is directed, returns or ſignifies an inſufficient reaſon, then there iſſues a peremptory mandamus, to do the thing abſolutely; to which no other return will be admitted, but a certificate of perfect obedience and due execution of the writ. Black. Com. 3 V. 111. 265.

Peremptory Writ, A ſpecies of original writs, called a ſi fecerit te ſecurum, from the words of the writ; which directs the ſheriff to cauſe the defendant to appear in court, without any option given him, provided the plaintiff gives the ſheriff ſecurity effectually to proſecute his claim. This writ is in uſe where nothing is ſpecifically demanded, but only a ſatisfaction in general: to obtain which and miniſter complete redreſs, the intervention of ſome judicature is neceſſary. Black. Com. 3 V. 274. and tit. Optional Writ.

Perfection of the King, Beſides the attribute of ſovereignty, the law alſo aſcribes to the king, in his political capacity, abſolute perfection. The King can do no wrong. Which ancient and fundamental maxim is not to be underſtood, as if every thing tranſacted by the government was of courſe juſt and lawful, but means only two things. Firſt, that whatever is exceptionable in the conduct of public affairs, is not to be imputed to the King, nor is he anſwerable for it perſonally to his people: for this doctrine would totally deſtroy that conſtitutional independence of the crown, which is neceſſary for the balance of power, in our free and active, and therefore compounded, conſtitution. And ſecondly, it means that the prerogative of the crown extends not to do any injury: it is created for the benefit of the people, and therefore cannot be exerted to their prejudice. Plowd. 487. and vide Black. Com. 1 V. 246.

Perinde valere, Is a term in the Eccleſiaſtical law, and ſignifies a diſpenſation granted to a clerk, who being defective in capacity for a benefice, or other eccleſiaſtical function, is de facto admitted to it; and it hath the appellation from the words, which make the faculty as effectual to the party diſpenſed with, as if he had been actually capable of the thing, for which he is diſpenſed with at the time of his admiſſion. 25 H. 8. cap. 21. it is called a writ.

Periphraſis, Circumlocution; uſe of many words to expreſs the ſenſe of one. Johnſ.

No periphraſis, or circumlocution, will ſupply words of art, which the law hath appropriated for the deſcription of offences in indictments: No periphraſis, intendment or concluſion ſhall make good an indictment, which doth not bring the fact within all the material words of a ſtatute: unleſs the ſtatute be recited, &c. Cro. Eliz. 535, 749. 2 Hawk. P. C. 224, 249.

Perjury and ſubornation. Perjury, (Perjurium eſt mendacium cum juramento firmatum,) Is a crime committed, when a lawful oath is adminiſtred by any who hath authority, to a perſon in any judicial proceeding, who ſwears abſolutely and falſely, in a matter material to the iſſue, or cauſe in queſtion, by their own act, or by the ſubornation of others. And if a man call me perjured man, I may have an action on the caſe, but it muſt be intended contrary to my oath in a JUDICIAL PROCEEDING: But for calling me a forſworn man, no action lies; becauſe the forſwearing may be extra judicial. 3 Inſt, 163.

Perjury by the Common law is defined a wilful falſe oath by one who, being lawfully required to depoſe the truth in any proceeding in a court of juſtice, ſwears abſolutely in a matter of ſome conſequence to the point in queſtion, whether he be believed or not. 2 Hawk. P. C. 272.

Subornation of perjury by the Common law is an offence in procuring a man to take a falſe oath amounting to perjury, who actually takes ſuch oath; but if the perſon, incited to take ſuch oath, do not actually take it, the perſon by whom he was ſo incited is not guilty of ſubornation; yet he is liable to be puniſhed, not only by fine, but alſo by infamous corporal puniſhment. 1 Rol. Abr. 41, 57. Yelv. 72. Cro. Jac. 158 2 Keb. 399. 3 Mod. 122. 1 Hawk. P. C. 177. See Black. Com. 4 V. 136, 138, 196.

1. What is perjury by the Common law, and how reſtrained and puniſhed.
2. How reſtrained and puniſhed by ſtatute.

1. What is perjury by the Common law, and how reſtained and puniſhed.

1ſt, It is neceſſary to conſtitute the offence perjury, that the falſe oath be taken wilfully, viz. with ſome degree of deliberation, not merely owing to ſurprize or inadvertency, or a miſtake of the true ſtate of the queſtion. 5 Mod. 350.

2dly, The oath muſt be taken either in a judicial proceeding, or in ſome other public proceeding of the like nature, wherein the King's honour or intereſt is concerned; or before commiſſioners appointed by the King to inquire of the forfeitures of his tenants, or of defective titles wanting the ſupply of the King's patents; but it is not material whether the court, in which a falſe oath is taken, be a court of record or not, or whether it be a court of Common law, or a court of equity or Civil law, &c. or whether the oath be taken in face of the court, or out of it, before perſons authorized to examine a matter depending in it; as before the ſheriff on a writ of inquiry, &c. or whether it be in relation to the merits of a cauſe, or in a collateral matter; as where one, who offers himſelf to be bail for another, ſwears that his ſubſtance is greater than it is, &c. but neither a falſe oath in a mere private matter, as in making a bargain, &c. nor the breach of a promiſſory oath, whether public or private, are puniſhable as perjury. 1 Hawk. P. C. 173.

3dly, The oath ought to be taken before perſons lawfully authorized to adminiſter it; for if it be taken before perſons acting merely in a private capacity, or before perſons pretending to a legal authority of adminiſtring ſuch oath, but having no ſuch authority, it is not puniſhable as perjury; yet a falſe oath taken before commiſſioners, whoſe commiſſion at the time is in ſtrictneſs determined by the demiſe of the King, is perjury; if taken before ſuch time as the commiſſioners had notice of ſuch demiſe; for it would be of the utmoſt ill conſequence, in ſuch caſe, to make their proceedings wholly void. 1 Hawk. P. C. 173-4.

4thly, The oath ought to be taken by a a perſon ſworn to depoſe the truth; therefore a falſe verdict comes not under the notion of perjury, becauſe the jurors ſwear not to depoſe the truth, but only to judge truly of the depoſitions of others; but a man may be as well perjured by an oath in his own cauſe, as in an anſwer in Chancery, or in an anſwer to interrogatories concerning a contempt, or in an affidavit, &c. as by an oath taken by him as witneſs in another's cauſe. 1 Hawk. P. C. 174.

5thly, It is not material, whether the thing ſworn be true or falſe, where the perſon who ſwears it in truth knows nothing of it. 1 Hawk. P. C. 175.

6thly, The oath muſt be taken abſolutely and directly; therefore if a man only ſwears as he thinks, remembers or believes, he cannot be guilty of perjury. 1 Hawk. P. C. 175.

7thly, The thing ſworn ought to be ſome way material; for if it be wholly foreign from the purpoſe, or immaterial, and neither pertinent to the matter in queſtion, or tending to aggravate or extenuate the damages, not likely to induce the jury to give credit to the ſubſtantial part of the evidence, it cannot amount to perjury, becauſe it is wholly inſignificant; as where a witneſs introduces his evidence, with an impertinent preamble of a ſtory concerning previous facts, no way relating to what is material, and is guilty of a falſity as to ſuch facts; but a witneſs may be guilty of perjury in reſpect to a falſe oath concerning a mere circumſtance, if ſuch oath have a plain tendency to corroborate the more material part of the evidence; as if in treſpaſs for ſpoiling the plaintiff's cloſe, with defendant's ſheep, a witneſs ſwears that he ſaw ſuch a number of defendant's ſheep in the cloſe, and being aſked how he knew them to be defendant's, ſwears that he knew them by ſuch a mark, which he knew to be the defendant's, where in truth defendant never uſed any ſuch mark. 1 Hawk. P. C. 175.

8thly, It is not material whether the falſe oath was credited, or not, or whether the party, in whoſe prejudice it was taken, was in the event damaged by it; for the proſecution is not grounded on the damage to the party, but on the abuſe of public juſtice. 1 Hawk. P. C. 177.

2. How reſtrained and puniſhed by ſtatute.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 9. it is enacted, "That whoever ſhall unlawfully and corruptly procure any witneſs, to commit any wilful and corrupt perjury, or ſhall unlawfully or corruptly procure or ſuborn any witneſs, who ſhall be ſworn to teſtify in perpetuam rei memoriam, ſhall for ſuch offence, being thereof lawfully convicted or attainted, forfeit the ſum of 40 l. And if ſuch offender ſo convicted or attainted, ſhall not have goods, &c. to the value of 40 l. then ſuch perſon ſhall ſuffer impriſonment by the ſpace of one half year, without bail, and ſtand upon the pillory the ſpace of one hour in ſome market town next adjoining to the place where the offence was committed, in open market there, or in the market town itſelf where the offence was committed."

And, That no perſon, ſo convicted or attainted, ſhall be received as a witneſs in any court of record, till ſuch judgment ſhall be reverſed, and that on ſuch reverſal the party grieved ſhall recover damages againſt the party who procured the judgment ſo reverſed to be firſt given.

And, That if any perſon ſhall either by the ſubornation, unlawful procurement, ſiniſter perſuaſion, or means of any other, or by their own act, conſent or agreement, wilfully and corruptly commit wilful perjury, that then every offender being duly convicted ſhall forfeit 20 l. and have impriſonment by the ſpace of ſix months, without bail, and the oath of ſuch offender ſhall not from thenceforth forth be received in any court of record, until ſuch judgment be reverſed, &c. on which reverſal the party grieved ſhall recover damages in the manner before-mentioned.

And, That if ſuch offender ſhall not have goods or chattels to the value of 20*l.* then he ſhall be ſet on the pillory, where he ſhall have both ears nailed.

One moiety of the forfeitures to the King, the other to the perſon grieved, who will ſue for the ſame, &c. and that as well the judge of every court where any ſuit ſhall be, and whereon any ſuch perjury ſhall be committed, as alſo the juſtices of aſſiſe and gaol-delivery, and juſtices of peace at their quarter-ſeſſions, may enquire of, hear and determine offences againſt the act.

The act ſhall no way extend to any ſpiritual or eccleſiaſtical court, but every offender ſhall be puniſhed by ſuch uſual laws as are uſed in the ſaid courts.

The ſtatute ſhall not reſtrain the authority of any judge having abſolute power to puniſh perjury before the making thereof, but every ſuch judge may proceed in the puniſhment of all offences puniſhable before making the ſtatute, as they might have done to all purpoſes, ſo that they ſet not on the offender leſs puniſhment than contained in the act.

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute, the following opinions have been holden:

That every indictment, or action, on this ſtatute muſt exactly purſue the words of it; therefore if it alledge, that the defendant depoſed ſuch a matter falſo & deceptive, or falſo & corrupte, or falſo & voluntarie, without ſaying, voluntarie & corrupte, it is not good, though it concluded, that ſic voluntarium & corruptum commiſit perjurium contra formam ſtatuti, &c. Alſo it is neceſſary expreſsly to ſhew, that defendant was ſworn; and it is not ſufficient to ſay, that tacto per ſe ſacro evangelio depoſuit. Cro. Eliz. 147. Hetl. 12. Savil 43. 2 Leon. 211. 1 Show. 198. Cro. Eliz. 105.

But there is no need to ſhew, whether the party took the falſe oath through the ſubornation of another, or of his own act, though the words of the ſtatute are, "If perſons by ſubornation, &c. or their own act, &c. ſhall commit wilful perjury;" for there being no medium between the branches of this diſtinction, they expreſs no more than the law would have implied, therefore operate nothing. 3 Bulſt. 147.

It hath been adjudged that a man cannot be guilty of perjury within this ſtatute, in any caſe wherein he may not poſſibly be guilty of ſubornation of perjury within it; for it is reaſonable to give the whole ſtatute the ſame conſtruction; neither can it be well intended, that the makers of the ſtatute meant to extend its purview farther as to perjury, which they ſeem to eſteem the leſſer crime, than to ſubornation of perjury, which they ſeem to eſteem the greater; therefore ſince the clauſe concerning ſubornation of perjury mentioning only matters depending by writ, bill, plaint, or information, concerning hereditaments, goods, debts, or damages, &c. extends not to perjury on an indictment or criminal information; the clauſe concerning perjury, though penned in more general words, hath been adjudged to come under the like reſtriction: Alſo ſince the clauſe concerning ſubornation of perjury relates only to perjury by witneſſes, that concerning perjury ſhall extend only to the like perjury; therefore not to perjury in an anſwer in Chancery; or in ſwearing the peace againſt a man; or in any preſentment by homage in a court baron; or in wager of law, or in ſwearing before commiſſioners of inquiry of the King's title to lands; and by the opinions of ſome, a falſe affidavit againſt a man in a court of juſtice is not within the ſtatute; but if ſuch affidavit be by a third perſon, and relate to a cauſe depending in ſuit before the court, and either of the parties in variance be grieved, in reſpect of ſuch cauſe, by reaſon of the perjury, it may ſtrongly be argued that it is within the purview of the ſtatute, alſo a falſe oath before the ſheriff, on a writ of inquiry, is within the ſtatute. 5 Co. 99. Cro. Jac. 120. 3 Inſt. 164. 2 Leon. 201. Yelv. 120. Cro. Eliz. 148. 2 Rol. Abr. 77.

It hath been collected from the clauſe which gives an action to the party grieved, that no falſe oath is within the ſtatute, which doth not give ſome perſon a juſt cauſe of complaint; therefore, if the thing ſworn be true, though it be not known by him who ſwears it to be ſo, the oath is not within the ſtatute, becauſe it gives no juſt cauſe of complaint to the other party, who would take advantage of another's want of evidence to prove the truth; from the ſame ground no falſe oath can be within the ſtatute, unleſs the party againſt whom it was ſworn ſuffered ſome diſadvantage by it; therefore in every proſecution on the ſtatute, you muſt ſet forth the record wherein you ſuppoſe the perjury to have been committed, and muſt prove at the trial, that there is ſuch a record, either by actually producing it, or an atteſted copy; alſo in the pleadings you muſt not only ſet forth the point wherein the falſe oath was taken, but muſt alſo ſhew how it conduced to the proof or diſproof of the matter in queſtion; and if an action on the ſtatute be brought by more than one, you muſt ſhew how the perjury was prejudicial to each of the plaintiffs; but it ſeems that a perjury, which tends only to aggravate or extenuate the damages, is as much within the ſtatute as a perjury which goes directly to the point in iſſue; and a perjury, in a cauſe wherein an erroneous judgment is given, is a good ground of proſecution upon the ſtatute till the judgment be reverſed. 1 Hawk. P. C. 181.

If perjury be committed, that is within this ſtatute, but concludes not contra formam ſtatuti; yet it is a good indictment at Common law, but not to bring him within the corporal puniſhment of the ſtatute. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 191-2.

By 2 Geo. 2. c. 25. ſ. 2. The more effectually to deter perſons from committing wilful and corrupt perjury, or ſubornation of perjury, it is enacted, "That beſides the puniſhment to be inflicted by law for ſo great crimes, it ſhall be lawful for the court or judge before whom any perſon ſhall be convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury, or ſubornation of perjury, to order ſuch perſon to be ſent to ſome houſe of correction, for a time not exceeding ſeven years, there to be kept to hard labour during the time; otherwiſe to be tranſported for a term not exceeding ſeven years, as the court ſhall think proper; therefore judgment ſhall be given, that the perſon convicted ſhall be committed or tranſported accordingly, beſides ſuch puniſhment as ſhall be adjudged to be inflicted on ſuch perſon agreeable to the laws in being; and if tranſportation be directed, the ſame ſhall be executed in ſuch manner as is provided by law for tranſportation of felons; and if any perſon ſo committed or tranſported ſhall voluntarily eſcape or break priſon, or return from tranſportation before the expiration of the time, ſuch perſon being lawfully convicted ſhall ſuffer death as a felon, and ſhall be tried for ſuch felony in the county where he ſo eſcaped, or where he ſhall be apprehended."

Stat. 23 Geo. 2. c. 11. ſ. 1. In every information or indictment for perjury, it ſhall be ſufficient to ſet forth the ſubſtance of the offence charged, and by what court, or before whom the oath was taken, (averring ſuch court or perſon to have authority to adminiſter the ſame) together with the proper averment to falſify the matter wherein the perjury is aſſigned, without ſetting forth the bill, anſwer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record or proceeding; and without ſetting forth the commiſſion or authority of the court or perſon before whom the perjury was committed.

Sect. 2. In every information or indictment for ſubornation of perjury, it ſhall be ſufficient to ſet forth the ſubſtance of the offence charged, without ſetting forth the bill, anſwer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record or proceeding, and without ſetting forth the commiſſion or authority of the court or perſon before whom the perjury was committed, or agreed to be committed.

Sect. 3. It ſhall be lawful for any juſtice (ſitting the court, or within twenty-four hours after) to direct any perſon examined as a witneſs before them, to be proſecuted for perjury, in caſe there appear a reaſonable cauſe; and to aſſign the party injured, or other perſon undertaking ſuch proſecution counſel, who ſhall do their duty without fee. And every proſecution ſo directed ſhall be carried on without payment of any tax, and without payment of any fees in court, or to any officer of the court. And the clerk of aſſiſe, or his aſſociate or prothonotary, or other officer of the court attending when ſuch proſecution is directed, ſhall without fee give the party injured, or other perſon undertaking ſuch proſecution, a certificate of the ſame being directed, with the names of the counſel aſſigned him; which certificate ſhall be deemed ſufficient proof of ſuch proſecution having been directed. Provided, that no ſuch direction or certificate ſhall be given in evidence upon any trial againſt any perſon upon a proſecution ſo directed.

Perjury and ſubornation excepted out of the general pardon, 20 Geo. 2. c. 52. ſ. 19, 21.

Permiſſive Waſte. Waſte is either voluntary, which is a crime of commiſſion, as by pulling down a houſe; or it is permiſſive, which is a matter of omiſſion only, as by ſuffering it to fall for want of neceſſary reparations. Black. Com. 2 V. 281.

Permit, (from permitto) Is a licence for perſons to paſs with and ſell goods, on having paid the cuſtom duties for the ſame. See Cuſtoms.

Permutatione archidiaconatus & eccleſiæ eidem annexae cum eccleſia & præbenda, Is a writ to an ordinary, commanding him to admit a clerk to a benefice, upon exchange made with another. Reg. Orig. 307.

Pernancy, (from the Fr. prendre) Signifies a taking or receiving; as tithes in pernancy, are tithes taken or that may be taken in kind.

Pernor of Profits, Is he who receives the profits of lands, &c. and is all one with ceſtui que uſe. Stat. 1 H 7. cap. 1. 1 Rep. 123. The King has the pernancy of the profits of the lands of an outlaw, in perſonal actions; and by ſeizure ſhall hold againſt the alienation of ſuch outlaw, &c. Raym. 17. See Co. Lit. 589. b. and 12 R. 2. c. 15. and Black. Com. 2 V. 163.

Perpars, A part of the inheritance.——Tanquam terram quæ ſibi deſcendit in perpartem de hæreditate, &c. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 54. par. 19.

Perpetuating the Teſtimony of Witneſſes. If witneſſes to a diſputable fact are old and infirm, it is uſual to file a bill to perpetuate the teſtimony of thoſe witneſſes, although no ſuit is depending; for, it may be, a man's antagoniſt only waits for the death of ſome of them to commence his ſuit. See Black. Com. 3 V. 450.

Perpetuity, As it is a legal term of art, is the limiting an eſtate either of inheritance or for years, ſo as to render it unalienable longer than for a life or lives in being at the ſame time, and ſome ſhort or reaſonable time after. 2 Wms. Rep. 688.

Perpetuities are abſolute or qualified. And eſtates-tail from the time of the ſtatute de donis, till common recoveries were found out, were looked upon as perpetuities. 12 Mod. 282.

A perpetuity is, where if all who have intereſt join, yet they cannot bar or paſs the eſtate. But if by concurrence of all having intereſt the eſtate-tail may be barred, it is no perpetuity. Ch. Caſes 213.

A perpetuity is a thing odious in law, and deſtructive to the commonwealth; it would put a ſtop to the commerce, and prevent the circulation of the property of the kingdom. Vern. 164.

Every executory deviſe is a perpetuity as far as it goes, i. e. an eſtate unalienable, though all mankind join in the conveyance. 1 Salk. 229.

A. ſeized in fee gives his lands after his death without iſſue male to B. in tail male, until he or they effectually go about to do any acts to alter or diſcontinue this eſtate-tail, and then to D. and the heirs male of his body, with ſeveral remainders over; the diviſor dies without iſſue; B. enters; D. dies leaving iſſue E. B. levies a fine; E. enters; and the queſtion was, if the entry was good? Reſolved, That this was a perpetuity and not allowable, being repugnant to law; for by ſuch a limitation an eſtate-tail cannot be determined and given to another; for by the fine the remainder is diſcontinued and deveſted, ſo as E. cannot enter; for it is no limitation to enter but after the effectual going about to do any acts, &c. and it is not effectual till the act done; and when it is done, the remainder is diſcontinued, and then he cannot enter. Cro. Jac. 696. See Vern. 161.

It is abſolutely againſt the conſtant courſe of Chancery to decree a perpetuity, or give any relief in that caſe. 1 Chan. Rep. 144.

Truſtees of a term limited over in tail, remainder in tail, were decreed in Chancery to convey the eſtate over; for otherwiſe there would be a perpetuity. Sid. 37.

The father ſettles land on his ſon in tail male, and takes bond from him, that he will not dock the entail; decreed the bond good. Had not the ſon agreed to give the bond, the father might have made him only tenant for life; and though the alienation is not made by the ſon, but by his iſſue, the bill was diſmiſſed with coſts. 2 Vern. 233.

An attempt to make a perpetual ſucceſſion of eſtates for life is vain and not practicable. 2 Vern. 738.

Perpetuity of the King. The law aſcribes to the King, in his POLITICAL CAPACITY, an abſolute immortality. THE KING NEVER DIES. Henry, Edward, or George, may die; but the King ſurvives them all. For immediately upon the deceaſe of the reigning Prince in his natural capacity, his Kingſhip or imperial dignity, by act of law, without any interregnum, or interval, is veſted at once in his heir; who is, eo inſtanti, King to all intents and purpoſes. And ſo tender is the law of ſuppoſing even a poſſibility of his death, that his natural diſſolution is generally called his demiſe; dimiſſio regis, vel coronæ: an expreſſion which ſignifies merely, a transfer of property; for, as is obſerved by Plowden, (177, 234.) when we ſay the demiſe of the crown, we mean only that in conſequence of the diſunion of the King's body natural, from his body politic, the kingdom is transferred or demiſed to his ſucceſſor; and ſo the royal dignity remains perpetual. Thus too, when Edward the Fourth, in the tenth year of his reign, was driven from his throne for a few months by the houſe of Lancaſter, this temporary transfer of his dignity was denominated his demiſe; and all proceſs was held to be diſcontinued, as upon a natural death of the King. Black. Com. 1 V. 249.

Per quae ſervitia, Is a judicial writ iſſuing from the note of a fine, and lieth for cogniſee of a manor, ſeigniory, chief rent, or other ſervices to compel him who is tenant of the land at the time of the note of the fine levied, to attorn unto him. Weſt. Symbol. part 2. tit. Fines, ſect. 126. Old Nat. Brev. 155. See 16 Abr. tit. Per quæ ſervitia.

Perquiſite, (Perquiſitum) Is any thing got by induſtry, or purchaſed with money, different from that which deſcends from a father or anceſtor; and ſo Bracton uſes it, when he ſays, Perquiſitum facere, lib. 2. cap. 30. num. 3. and lib. 4. c. 22.

Perquiſites of Courts, Are commonly thoſe profits which ariſe to lords of manors, from their court baron, above the yearly revenue of the land; as fines of copyholds, heriots, amerciaments, &c. Perk. 20, 21. Perquiſites of Offices. See Fees.

Per quod conſortium amiſit, And per quod ſervitium amiſit, are words neceſſary in declarations for treſpaſs, &c. where a man's wife or ſervant is beaten, or taken from him, by which means he loſes their ſervice, &c. 2 Lil. Abr. 595, 596.

Perſon, A man or woman; alſo the ſtate or condition, whereby one man differs from another.

Perſon, Injuries to, are ſuch as relate to life, limb, body, health, or reputation. See Black. Com. 3 V. 119, &c.

Perſonable, (perſonabilis) Signifies as much as enabled to maintain plea in court: as for example the defendant was judged perſonable to maintain this action. Old Nat. Brev. 142. and in Kitchen, 214. The tenant pleaded, that the wife was an alien, born in Portugal, and judgment was demanded whether ſhe ſhould be anſwered: the plaintiff ſaith, ſhe was made perſonable by parliament, i. e. as the Civilians would ſpeak it, Habere perſonam ſtandi in judicio. Perſonable is alſo as much as to be of capacity to take any thing granted or given. Plowd. 27.

Perſonal, (perſonalis) Being joined with the ſubſtantives, things, goods or chattels, as things perſonal, goods perſonal, chattels perſonal; ſignifies any moveable thing, quick or dead: ſo it is uſed in Weſt. Symbol. part. 2. ſect. 58. in theſe words: theft is an unlawful felonious taking away another man's moveable perſonal goods, ſo alſo 61. And Kitchen, 139. ſaith, Where perſonal things ſhall be given to a corporation, as a horſe, a cow, ſheep, or other goods, &c. And Staundſ. Pl. Cor. fol. 25. Contrectatio rei alienæ, is to be underſtood of things perſonal; for in things real it is not felony, as the cutting of a tree is not felony. Unleſs in caſes made felony by ſtatute. See Timber, Hedge, and Tab. to Stats. as to thoſe articles. See Chattels, and Black. Com. 2 V. 384, 387.

Perſonal Action, (actio perſonalis) Is that which one man may have by reaſon of a contract for money or goods againſt another: it is ſuch an action whereby a debt, goods and chattels are demanded, or damages for them; or damages for a wrong done to a man's perſon. Terms de Ley. In the Civil law, it is called actio in perſonam, and is brought againſt him who is bound by covenant, to grant or to do any thing, &c. And in our law, Actio perſonalis moritur cum perſona. 1 Inſt. 53.

Action of debt lieth not againſt executors, upon a contract for the eating and drinking of the teſtator; for that action in ſuch caſe dieth with him. 9 Rep. 87. But an action upon the caſe on promiſes will lie, againſt the executor or adminiſtrator, on the promiſes of the teſtator, or inteſtate. If a perſon commit a battery or treſpaſs, and he or the perſon beaten, &c. die; the action dieth, and is gone. Noy's Max. 5. An executor cannot bring an appeal for larceny, from the teſtator; for it is a meer perſonal action, veſted in the teſtator, and dies with him as all actions for torts do. H. P. C. 184. S. P. C. 50. And an appeal of death is a perſonal action given to the heir, in reſpect to his immediate relation to the perſon killed; and, like other perſonal actions, ſhall die with the perſon. 2 Hawk, P. C. 165. See Black. Com. 3 V. 117, 302.

Perſonal Security. The right of perſonal ſecurity conſiſts in a perſon's legal and uninterrupted enjoyment of his life, his limbs, his body, his health, and his reputation. Black. Com. 1 V. 129, &c.

Perſonal Tithes, Are tithes paid of ſuch profits as come by the labour of a man's perſon; as by buying and ſelling, gains of merchandiſe, and handicrafts, &c. Black. Com. 2 V. 24.

Perſonalty, (Perſonalitas) Is an abſtract of perſonal: the action is in the perſonalty, i. e. it is brought againſt the right perſon, or the perſon againſt whom in law it lies. Old Nat. Br. 92. Or it is to diſtinguiſh actions and things perſonal, from thoſe that are real.

Perſonate, To repreſent by a fictitious or aſſumed character, ſo as to paſs for the perſon repreſented. Johnſ.

If one of my name levies a fine of my land in my name, I may well confeſs and avoid this fine, by ſhewing the ſpecial matter. But if a ſtranger, who is not of my name, levies a fine of my land in my name, I ſhall not be received to aver that I did not levy the fine, but another in my name; for that is merely contrary to the record; and ſo it is of a recognizance, and other matters of record. But when the fraud appears to the court, they may enter a vacat on the roll, and ſo make it no fine, altho' the party cannot avoid it by averment, during the time it remains a record. Cro. Eliz. 531.

B. was taken in execution upon a recogniſance of bail, and he made it appear to the court, that he never acknowledged the recognizance, but was perſonated by another; and thereupon it was moved, that the bail might be vacated, and he diſcharged, as was done in Cotton's caſe. 2 Cro. 256 But the court ſaid ſince 21 Jac. cap. 26. by which this offence was made felony without clergy, it is not convenient to vacate it until the offender is convicted; and ſo it was done in Spicer's caſe, wherefore it was ordered, that B. ſhould bring the money into court, and be let at large to proſecute the offender. Twiſden ſaid it muſt be tried in Middleſex, tho' the bail was taken at a judge's chambers in London, becauſe filed here, and the entry is venit coram Domino Rege, &c. ſo it differs from a recognizance acknowledged before Lord Hobart, upon 23 H. 8. at his chambers, and recorded in Middleſex; there the ſcire facias may be either in London or Middleſex. Hob. 195, 196. Ven. 301. Mod. 46. S. P. Cockerel who perſonated Beeſley was hanged at Tyburn, but the rope was immediately cut; and afterwards Beeſley on motion had reſtitution of his goods in the hands of the ſheriff. 2 Jo. 64.

A commiſſion of rebellion was awarded againſt A. whereupon B. came before the commiſſioners and affirmed himſelf to be the perſon. The commiſſioners apprehended him by virtue of their commiſſion; but per Hale Ch. B. the commiſſioners have no warrant to take him by their commiſſion; his affirming himſelf to be the perſon will not excuſe them in falſe impriſonment, as has been held on executing a capias. Perſons, Are divided by law into either natural perſons, or artificial. And in St. Edward's Laws, num. 10, where we may read theſe words, Omnes qui habent 30. denariatus vivæ pecuniæ in domo ſua de ſuo proprio, Anglorum lege dabit denarium Sancti Petri, & lege Danorum dimidiam marcam; iſte vero debet ſummoniri in ſolennitate apoſtolorum Petri & Pauli & collegii ad feſtivitatem quæ dicitur ad Vincula, ita ut ultra illum diem non detineatur, &c. See alſo King Edgar's Laws, 78. c. 4. which contain a ſharp conſtitution touching this matter. Stow, in his Annals, p. 67. ſaith, that he who had twenty pennyworth of goods of one ſort in his houſe, was to give a penny at Lammas yearly. Petition, (Petitio) A ſupplication made by an inferior to a ſuperior, and eſpecially to one having juriſdiction. S. P. C. c. 15. It is uſed for that remedy, which the ſubject hath to help a wrong done by the King, who hath a prerogative not to be ſued by writ: in which ſenſe it is either general, That the King do him right, whereupon follows a general indorſement upon the ſame, Let right be done the party; or it is ſpecial, when the concluſion and indorſement are ſpecial, for this or that to be done, &c. Standf. Prærog. c. 22. See Black. Com. 3 V. 256.

By ſtatute, the ſoliciting, labouring or procuring the putting the hands or conſent of above twenty perſons to any petition, to the King, or either Houſe of Parliament, for alterations in church or ſtate; unleſs by aſſent of three or more juſtices of peace of the county, or a majority of the grand jury, at the aſſiſes or ſeſſions, &c. and repairing to the King or Parliament to deliver ſuch petition, with above the number of ten perſons, is ſubject to a fine of 100 l. and three months impriſonment, being proved by two witneſſes, within ſix months, in the court of B. R. or at the aſſiſes, &c. 13 Car. 2. ſt. 1. c. 5. And if what is required by this ſtatute be obſerved, care muſt be taken that petitions to the King contain nothing which may be interpreted to reflect on the adminiſtration; for if they do, it may come under the denomination of a libel: and it is remarkable, that the petition of the city of London, for the ſitting of a parliament was deemed libellous; becauſe it ſuggeſted that the King's diſſolving a late parliament was an obſtruction of juſtice. Read. Stat. Vol. 4, 353. To ſubſcribe a petition to the King, to frighten him into a change of his meaſures, intimating that, if it be denied, many thouſands of his ſubjects will be diſcontented, &c. is included among the contempts againſt the King's perſon and government, tending to weaken the ſame, and puniſhable by fine and impriſonment. 1 Hawk. P. C. 60.

If there ſhould happen any uncommon injury, or infringement of the rights of the ſubject, which the ordinary courſe of law is too defective to reach, there remains a right, appertaining to every individual, namely, the right of petitioning the King or either houſe of parliament for the redreſs of grievances. There are doubtleſs reſtrictions to this right, but, while they promote the ſpirit of peace, they are no check upon that of liberty. Care only muſt be taken, leſt, under the pretence of petitioning, the ſubject be guilty of any riot or tumult; to prevent which the Stat. 13 Car. 2. ſt. 1. c. 5. above mentioned was enacted.

But, under theſe regulations, it is declared by the Stat. 1 W. & M. ſt. 2. c. 2. that the ſubject hath a right to petition; and that all commitments and proſecutions for ſuch petitioning are illegal. See Black. Com. 1 V. 143. 4 V. 147. and tit. Liberty.

Petition in Chancery, Is a requeſt in writing, directed to the Lord Chancellor or Maſter of the Rolls, ſhewing ſome matter whereupon the petitioner prays ſomewhat to be granted him. P. R. C. 269.

Moſt things which may be moved for of courſe, may be petitioned for.

Sometimes it is upon a collateral matter only, as it has relation to ſome precedent ſuit, or to an officer of the court; as to have a clerk or ſolicitor's bill taxed, or to oblige him to deliver up papers. P. R. C. 270.

The Maſter of the Rolls is not to be petitioned for rehearings, but the Chancellor; alſo the Chancellor only is to be petitioned touching pleas, demurrers or exceptions, or touching decrees or ſpecial orders made before the Chancellor. In moſt caſes of petition, the Maſter of the Rolls may be applied to. P. R. C. 270. See 16 Vin. Abr. 337, 338.

Petition of Right. In the reign of Charles I. there was a famous petition of right: that none ſhould be compelled to make or yield any gift, loan, benevolence, tax, and ſuch like charge, without conſent by act of parliament; nor, upon refuſal ſo to do, be called to make anſwer, take any oath not warranted by law, give attendance, or be confined, or otherwiſe moleſted concerning the ſame, &c. And that the ſubject ſhould not be burdened by the quartering of ſoldiers or mariners; and all commiſſions for proceeding by martial law, to be annulled, and none of like nature to be iſſued, leſt the ſubject (by colour thereof) be deſtroyed or put to death, contrary to the laws of the land, &c. See Stat. 3 Car. 1. c. 1. and *Black. No perſon within London, or ſeven miles thereof, ſhall practiſe as a phyſician or ſurgeon, without licence from the biſhop of London, or dean of St. Paul's; who are to call to their aſſiſtance four doctors of phyſic, on examination of the perſons, before granted: and in the country, without licence from the biſhop of the dioceſe, on pain of forfeiting 5 l. a month. 3 Hen. 8. c. 11.

By 14 & 15 H. 8. c. 5. The charter for incorporating the college of phyſicians is confirmed; they have power to chooſe a preſident, and have perpetual ſucceſſion, a common ſeal, ability to purchaſe lands, &c. Eight of the chiefs of the college are to be called elects, who from among themſelves ſhall chooſe a preſident yearly: and if any practiſe phyſic in the ſaid city, or within ſeven miles of it, without licence of the college under their ſeal, he ſhall forfeit 5 l. Alſo perſons practiſing phyſic in other parts of England, are to have letters teſtimonial from the preſident and three elects, unleſs they be graduate phyſicians of Oxford or Cambridge, &c.

The 32 H. 8. c. 10. ordains, that four phyſicians (called cenſors) ſhall be yearly choſen by the college, to ſearch apothecaries wares, and have an oath given them for that purpoſe by the preſident; apothecaries denying them entrance into their houſes, &c. incur a forfeiture of 5 l. And phyſicians refuſing to make the ſearch are liable to a penalty of 40 s. And every member of the college of phyſicians is authorized to practiſe ſurgery. Popiſh recuſants are diſabled to practiſe phyſic, or to uſe the trade of an apothecary, &c. under penalties. 3 Jac 1. c. 5. The four perſons called cenſors, annually choſen by the preſident and college of phyſicians, calling to their aſſiſtance the wardens of the apothecaries company, or one of them, are empowered to enter into the houſes, ſhops, or warehouſes of apothecaries, &c. and examine medicines, and to deſtroy thoſe that are not fit for uſe; but ſubject to appeal to the college of phyſicians, &c. 10 Geo. 1. c. 20.

In the caſe of Dr. Bonham, 7 Jac. 1. is ſhewn the power of the college of phyſicians, in puniſhing perſons for practiſing phyſic without licence; they impriſoned the doctor for practiſing without licence; but it was adjudged, that they could not lawfully do it, for in ſuch caſe they had no power by the ſtatute to commit, but they ought to ſue for the penalty of 5 l. per month, qui tam, &c. But in caſe of male practice, the cenſors have power to commit, for they may in ſuch caſe fine and impriſon by their charter, and they are judges of record, and not liable to an action for what they do by virtue of their judicial power. 8 Rep. 107. Carth. 494.

Apothecaries taking upon them to adminiſter phyſic, without advice of a doctor, has been adjudged practiſing phyſic within the ſtatutes; the proper buſineſs of an apothecary being to prepare the preſcriptions of the doctor: the practice of phyſic was ſaid to conſiſt in judging of the diſeaſe and conſtitution of the patient; and of the proper remedy for the diſtemper; and in directing the application of the remedy. And ſo it was reſolved, though no fee was given the apothecary. 2 Salk. 451. But this judgment was afterwards reverſed in the Houſe of Lords. Mod. Caſ. 44.

It has been holden, that if a perſon not duly authoriſed to be a phyſician or ſurgeon, undertakes a cure, and the patient dies under his hands, he is guilty of felony; but it is ſaid not to be excluded the benefit of clergy. 1 Hawk. P.C. 87.

One who has taken his degree of doctor of phyſic in either of the univerſities, may not practice in London, and within ſeven miles of the ſame, without licence from the college of phyſicians; by reaſon of the charter of incorporation, confirmed by 14 & 15 Hen. 8. c. 5. penned in very ſtrong and negative words. As to the teſtimonials granted by the univerſities on a perſon's taking the doctor's degree, theſe may have the nature of a recommendation, and give a man a fair reputation, but confer no right; conſequently thoſe ſtatutes which have confirmed the privileges of the univerſities would revive or confirm nothing but the reputation that this teſtimonial might give ſuch graduates. And as to the laſt clauſe of this ſtatute, that "none ſhall practiſe in the country without "licence from the preſident and three elects, unleſs he "be a graduate of one of the univerſities;" all the inference from that would be, that poſſibly two licences may be neceſſary where a perſon is not a graduate. In the caſe of Dr. Levet, Lord Ch. J. Holt did not think this queſtion worth being found ſpecially. The college of phyſicians, without doubt, are more competent judges of the qualifications of a phyſician than the univerſities; and there may be many reaſons for taking particular care of thoſe who practice phyſic in London. 10 Mod. 353, 354.

Philoſopher's Stone. Henry VI. granted letters patent to certain perſons, who undertook to find out the philoſopher's ſtone, and to change other metals into gold, &c. to be free from the penalty of the Stat. 5 Hen. 4. made againſt the attempts of chymiſts of this nature. Pat. 34 Hen. 6. 3 Inſt. 74. Picards, A ſort of boats of fifteen tuns or upwards, uſed on the river Severn, mentioned 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 3. Alſo a fiſher-boat. 13 Eliz. 11.

Piccage, (piccagium, from the Fr. piquer, i. e. effodere) A conſideration, paid for the breaking up ground to ſet up booths, ſtalls or ſtandings, in fairs; payable to the Lord of the ſoil.

Picle, (pictellum) A ſmall parcel of land incloſed with a hedge; a little cloſe: this word ſeems to come from the Italian picciola, i. e. parvus; and in ſome parts of England it is called pightel.

Pie-powder Court, (curia pedis pulverizati) from the French pied, i. e. pes, and poudreux, i. e. pulverulentus; Is a court held (de hora in horam) in fairs, to adminiſter juſtice to buyers and ſellers, and for redreſs of diſorders committed in them; ſo called from the duſty feet of the ſuitors; or, according to Sir Edward Coke, (4 Inſt. 272.) becauſe juſtice there is done as ſpeedily as duſt can fall from the foot. Upon the ſame principle that juſtice among the Jews was adminiſtered in the gate of the city, that the proceedings might be the more ſpeedy, as well as public. Ruth, c. 4.

But the etymology given us by a learned modern writer is much more ingenious and ſatisfactory; it being derived, according to him, from pied puldreaux, a pedlar, in old French, and therefore ſignifying the court of ſuch petty chapmen as reſort to fairs or markets. Barring. Obſerv. on Stat. 337. Black. Com. 3 V. 32.

So Skene de verbor. ſignif. verbo Pede-pulveroſus ſays, the word ſignifies a vagabond; eſpecially a pedlar, who hath no dwelling, therefore muſt have juſtice ſummarily adminiſtered to him, viz. within three ebbings and three flowings of the ſea. Bract. lib. 5. tract. 1. c. 6. num. 6. calleth it Juſtitiam pepoudrous. Of this court, read the ſtat. 17 Ed. 3. c. 2. 4 Inſt. 272. and Cromp. Jur. 221. See Juſtices of the Pavilion. This, among our old Saxons, was called ceapung-gemot, i. e. a court for merchandize, or handling matters of buying and ſelling. It is mentioned in Doctor and Student, c. 5. which tells us, it is a court incident to fairs and markets, to be held only during the time that the fairs are kept. Cowell.

The fair of St. Giles, held on the hill of that name, near the city of Wincheſter, by virtue of letters patent of K. Edw. 4. hath a court of piepowder of a tranſcendent juriſdiction; the judges whereof are called juſtices of the pavilion, and have their power from the biſhop of Wincheſter. Prin. Pigeons. Every perſon who ſhall ſhoot at and kill a Pigeon, may be committed to the common gaol for three months, by two or more juſtices of the peace, or he ſhall pay 20 s. to the Poor of the Pariſh. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 27. By 2 Geo. 3. c. 29. Any perſon who ſhall wilfully ſhoot at, or deſtroy any houſe-doves or pigeons belonging to other perſons, ſhall forfeit on conviction 20 s. to the proſecutor; and if not forthwith paid, the offender may be committed and kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three months, nor leſs than one month, unleſs the forfeiture be ſooner paid. The owners of dove-cotes or other places built for the preſervation or breeding of pigeons, and thoſe appointed by them, excepted. Offender is liable only to one conviction for ſame offence; and proſecutions are to be commenced and carried on with effect, within two months after the offence; and where perſons ſuffer impriſonment, they are not liable afterwards to pay the penalty. And to ſteal wild Pigeons in a Pigeon-houſe, ſhut up ſo that the owner may take them, is felony. 1 Hawk. P. C. 94.

Pigeon-houſe, Is a place for ſafe keeping Pigeons. A lord of a manor may build a Pigeon-houſe or Dove-cote upon his land, parcel of the manor; but a tenant of the manor cannot, without the lord's licence. 3 Salk. 248. Formerly none but the lord of the manor, or the parſon, might erect a Pigeon-houſe; though it has been ſince held, than any freeholder may build a Pigeon-houſe, on his own ground. 5 Rep. 104. Cro. Eliz. 548. Cro. Jac. 382, 440. A perſon may have a Pigeon-houſe, or Dove-cote, by preſcription. Game-Law, 2 Pa. 133. See Nuſance.

Pila, Is that ſide of money which is called pile, becauſe it is the ſide on which there was an impreſſion of a church built on piles; and he who brings an appeal of robbery againſt another, muſt ſhew the certain quantity, quality, price, weight, &c. valorem & pilum, where pilum ſignifies figuram monetæ. Fleta, lib. 1. c. 39.

Pilettus, Was anciently uſed for an arrow, which had a round knob, a little above the head, to hinder it from going far into a mark; from the Lat. pila, which ſignifies generally any round thing like a ball.——Et quod foreſtarii non portabunt ſagittas barbatas, ſed piletos. Chart. 31 H. 3. Perſons might ſhoot without the bounds of a foreſt with ſharp or pointed arrows; but within the foreſt, for the preſervation of the deer, they were to ſhoot only with blunts, bolts, or Piles: and ſagitta pileta was oppoſed to ſagitta barbata; as blunts to ſharps, in rapiers. Mat. Paris.

Pilcus ſupportationis, A cap of maintenance. Pope Julius ſent ſuch a cap, with a ſword, to Hen. 8. anno 1514. Holling. 827. but there is mention made of ſuch a cap by Hovedon, p. 656. at the coronation of Richard the Firſt. Cowell.

Pillory, (colliſtrigium, collum ſtringens; pilloria from the Fr. pilleur, i. e. depeculator, or pelori derived from the Greek Πύλη, janua, a door, becauſe one ſtanding on the pillory, puts his head, as it were, through a door, and Οράω, video) Is an engine made of wood to puniſh offenders, by expoſing them to public view, and rendring them infamous. there is a ſtatute of the pillory, 51 H. 3. And by ſtatute, it is appointed for bakers, foreſtallers, and thoſe who uſe falſe weights, perjury, forgery, &c. 3 Inſt. 219 Lords of leets are to have a pillory and tumbrel, or it will be cauſe of forfeiture of the leet; and a vill may be bound by preſcription to provide a pillory, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 73.

Pilot, Is he who hath the government of a ſhip, under the maſter. Pilots of ſhips, taking on them to conduct any ſhip from Dover, &c. to any place up the river Thames, are to be firſt examined aud approved by the maſter and wardens of the ſociety of Trinity Houſe, &c, or ſhall forfeit 10*l.* for the firſt offence, 20*l.* for the ſecond, and 40*l.* for every other offence; one moiety to the informer, the other to the maſter and wardens; but any maſter or mate of a ſhip may pilot his own veſſel up the river: and if any ſhip be loſt, through the negligence of any pilot, he ſhall be for ever after diſabled to act as a pilot. 3 Geo. 1. c. 13. Alſo the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports may make rules for government of pilots, and order a ſufficient number to ply at ſea to conduct ſhips up the Thames. 7 Geo. 1. c. 21. No perſon ſhall act as a pilot on the Thames, &c. (except in collier ſhips) without licence from the maſter and wardens of Trinity-Houſe at Deptford, on pain of forfeiting 20 l. And pilots are to be ſubject to the government of that corporation; and pay ancient dues not exceeding 1 s. in the pound out of wages, for the uſe of the poor thereof. Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 20.

By the laws of France, no perſon ſhall be received as a pilot, till he has made ſeveral voyages, and paſſed a ſtrict examination; and after that, on his return in long voyages, he is to lodge a copy of his journal in the Admiralty: and if a pilot occaſion the loſs of a ſhip, he is to pay 100 livres fine, and be for ever deprived of the exerciſe of pilotage; and if he doth it deſignedly, be puniſhed with death. Lex Mercat. 70, 71.

The laws of Oleron ordain, That if any pilot deſignedly miſguide a ſhip, that it may be caſt away, he ſhall be put to a rigorous death, and hung in chains: And if the lord of the place where a ſhip be thus loſt, abet ſuch villains in order to have a ſhare in the wreck, he ſhall be apprehended, and all his goods forfeited for the ſatisfaction of the perſons ſuffering; and his perſon ſhall be faſtened to a ſtake in the midſt of his own manſion, which being fired on the four corners, ſhall be burnt to the ground, and he with it. Leg. Ol. c. 25. And if the fault of a pilot be ſo notorious, that the ſhip's crew ſee an apparent wreck, they may lead him to the hatches, and ſtrike off his head; but the Common law denies this haſty execution: An ignorant pilot is ſentenced to paſs thrice under the ſhip's keel, by the laws of Denmark. Lex Mercat. 70.

Maſters of ſhips ſhall not oblige pilots to paſs through dangerous places, or to ſteer courſes againſt their wills; but if there be a difference in opinions, the maſter may in ſuch caſe be governed by the advice of the moſt expert mariners. Ibid. Before the ſhip arrives at her place or bed, while ſhe is under the charge of the pilot, if ſhe or her goods periſh, or be ſpoiled, the pilot ſhall make good the ſame: But after the ſhip is brought to the harbour, then the maſter is to take charge of her, and anſwer all damages, except that of the act of God, &c. Leg. Ol. cap. 23.
